this work has required the examination of about 37,000 different papers. The old system, which obtained in the gift which secures for the county the letter, worked well enough in the infancy of the county when there were compariclock which adorns our court-house tower. and the gradual increase of business in the office, the number of cases beginning with the same letter had become so numerous that it had become a matter of great inconvenience to find required papers-it becoming necessary sometimes to hunt through twenty boxes to find the papers

This dificulty was continually increasng. Boxes labeled with the same letters were continually multiplying. In a few years more the system would have become practically unmanageable. It must have been with a full realization of the neceshis bond, and place the same to the credit adopted the foregoing resolution.

All of the calendar indexes were imperfect, and by long and constant use had ecome worn and almost illegible.

A new and complete index has been made of all the papers in the office. I have had this index bound in three volumes The First -Is an index of the estates of all deceased persons leaving wills, containing the number of the case, the number and page of the calendar where the entries in the case were made, and the volume and page where the will is recorded. 1,100 00 part of the index is very valuable in tracng out the title to land that has passed by will, as previous to 1877, no wills were recorded in the Register's office.

The Second-Is an index of the estates of all deceased persons leaving no wills, the volume and page of the calendar where all the entries in the case may be found, and which shows the various steps in the progress of the administration of the estates and their dates.

The Third-Is au index of the estates minors, insane and incompeten ons. Containing the number of the case and the volume of the calendar and page where the entries in the case are made.

The advantages of binding the index in aree volumes are: that they are lighter, Sheriff, was invited to address the Board nore easily handled and three times more durable, as each volume will be handled about one-third as much as would a single olume containing the whole index. ave caused these indexes to be very horoughly made and covered with chnvass, and as we have a petty index for daily use in the office, I believe this great session of the Board, were received and dex which we have made will answer purpose for fifty years to come, and as already contains the index to the busi ness of the court for the last fifty years complete index of the Probate business of he county for a full century of its exis-

A Pica for Bacon. I WANT to urge upon farmer readers the idea of curing their pork into ba con, and keeping some of it for their own tables and making a home market for such as they can spare. If they will have it on their own tables, people unused to it may find out its value as a staple article of meat, and a little sold in a town will prepare the way for more demand another year. The truth is demand another year. The truth is, the public, as a body in the North, do not knew anything about bacon, and fi is time they did. Pork has started in our local market at six dollars per hundred, and will probably run down within two months to four dollars. What noncense it is for farmers to The old system, which obtained in the office, of placing all cases beginning with a certain letter in a box labeled with that letter, worked well enough in the infancy of them will do it and get rid of their pigs, and because their families do not like pork (pickled pork) they will buy beef fattened in Texas or Colorado. tively few cases beginning with that letter, but from the growth of the county largely practiced in this vicinity. If the pigs should be killed when they weigh about one hundred pounds, and the entire sides, with all of the lean left on, be made into bacon, the farmer can have in store as nice meat and as palatable as any beef he may buy, and for the surplus he may realize a price which will compensate him for his grain and trouble. With the sides made into hacon a pig can be turned into good account. The hams and shoulders make the best of food, and cost the possessor no extra profits which he has to pay over and above the cost of the beef, besides the freight. In other words, when a farmer buys beef he pays more than twice the cost of the meat to the producer, and when he cures his own pigs into hams, shoulders, bacon and lard, and sells them to the consumer direct, he makes the profit others make out of him when he sells his pigs at the pork price, four dollars per hundred weight. When he sells his pork and buys beef, he loses both ways, and if the extra price he pays for his beef over his pork was subtracted from the price of his pork, he would really get nothing for it; but when he fits it for food so that it takes the place of the beef and he does not buy it, he really doubles its value and trebles it, as beef retails at an average of more than twelve cents a pound. Pigs must not be extra fat to make the of all deceased persons leaving no wills, and contains the number of the case, and must be left on the ribs, the bone must be cut out, and the sides cut square and smooth; the trimmings can be made into sausage or go with the fat into lard. The first six months is the most growing age for a pig, and at this age they are suitable for the purpose. After Bacon may be cured the same a Lame and shoulders, only it does not require so long salting. Usually the salt is rubbed on the pieces, and they are piled up for a few days to let it strike through.

Three rubbings are enough. It should never be allowed to freeze during the curing, and if frozen it must be thawed out by soaking in water. Bacon will take in salt enough, unless the sides are very thick, in three weeks, when it is ready to be smoked. After smoking is may be hung in a dry, cool place or packed in dry salt or in tight boxes. It is always ready for use, and a rasher of good bacon is a treat for breakfast or any meal. As a side dish it has no superior. It may be broiled in dainty bits or fried in more generous slices. It is excellent to flavor chickens or stews, and for a staple meat is far preferable to pork. The black and red Berkshire pigs make the best bacon, as they have more lean meat mixed with the fat, the red being the best of the two, as they retain more than the others the characteristics of the Berkshire breed, not having been made so fine and thick in the body by the so-called improvements.—Cor. ST. NICHOLAS. Scribner's Illustrated Magazine FOR GIRLS AND BOYS.

SCRIBNER & CO., 743 Br'dway, N. Y.

John Greenleaf Whittier writes of Sr. Nicholas:

"It is little to say of this magazine that it is the best child's periodical in the world." That it is calculated to delight the little folk everywhere is indicated by the fact that it is to be issued in French by Delagrave of Paris, and that even the far-away little Moslems are now to have a volume made up of translations from Sr. Nicholas into Arabic.

Beginning with the November number, this monthly magazine for children is printed on heaver paper with wider margins, and it is so much enlarged that each number contains eighty or more pages, with stories, poems, Illustrated articles of travel and description, pictures, rhymes, jingles, etc.; pages of large type for the very little ones, and a riddle box for the amusement of the whole family. For the coming year the publishers announce many brilliant novelties, including

A New Serial by Miss Louisa M. Alcott, A New Serial by Miss Louisa M. Alcott, entitled "Jack and Jill." It is written in this favorite author's best vein, and will begin in the Christmas (December) issue. There will be a series of Open-Air Papers, by various authors, devoted to descriptions of out-door life and incidents in many lands; and a new department, "The Treasure-Box of English Literature," in which will be given gens from standard authors.
