ANNUAL MEETING OF THE ASSOCIATION OF AGRICULTURAL SOCIETIES OF MICHIGAN.

Proceedings Opened by an Address from President Charles H. Richmond.

The twenty-seventh annual convention of the Association of Agricultural Societies of Michigan began its session at the court house on Tuesday evening.

Organization Hon. Charles H. Richmond, President of the association delivered the following address:

GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION:— It is the privilege and honor of me to be permitted to open the seventh annual convention of the Association of Agricultural Societies of Michigan.

I have to congratulate you upon the increasing interest in the objects of the association, manifested by the attendance of so many kindred societies of the state, in sending so large a number of delegates to this convention.

I have to congratulate you upon the very general success that has attended the efforts of the managers of Fairs, Institutes, Societies and Clubs for the promotion of the special objects for which they are created.

I have to congratulate you as citizens upon the returning prosperity that is now so generally seen throughout the state in all branches of industry.

I have to congratulate you as agriculturists upon the fact that the year 1879 has been a successful one for you, and that you have secured a fair and profitable season.

I have to congratulate you as farmers upon the fact that you have secured a fair and profitable season, and that you have secured a fair and profitable season.

I have to congratulate you as citizens upon the fact that you have secured a fair and profitable season, and that you have secured a fair and profitable season.

from any cause, for it has too great recuperative powers. Its productive resources are too great; its people too intelligent and enterprising; its industry too general and diversified; its muscular and mental activities too strong and far-sighted to fear any external or foreign competition.

It is not the theory of our government, neither is it wise to ask or expect it to show special favor or aid to the industries of any one class of its citizens.

The theory that our government is a paternal one in any sense, I do not acknowledge. Such a government would destroy all independence in the individual and teach him dependence on government, and to look for the favor which may be extended or withheld at the caprice or whim of those who are in place and power.

Such a theory is favorable to communism, which would be a deadly enemy here as it has been in other countries.

It is not inconsistent with the theory that our government is not paternal in its character to claim the administrative policy shall be such as not to interfere, blight or destroy the vital interests or legitimate enterprises of any of its citizens.

We can rightly and justly claim a policy that shall give to every citizen the largest liberty for developing the material resources of the land, and secure the freedom of an open field, and a fair contest for a full share of the commerce of the world.

Donnaud a policy in state, and national affairs that shall, in spirit and practice, receive the willing and hearty approval of the citizen as well as statesman, and promote the stability and perpetuity of the Republic.

There can be no rational theory without the empire of law.

While we may be justly proud of our state for the variety, perfection and abundance of its agricultural productions, especially of the cereals, yet I think it must be apparent to any one who has reflected upon the subject, that in the near future we are to have strong competition in the states of the west.

With their cheap lands, rich and productive soils, yielding largely and at such light expense for cultivation, together with the cheap transportation afforded them by railroads, must enable them to rival our own state.

Can you successfully meet this competition—aided as it is by consolidated transportation companies and railroad corporations, who give them lower proportionate rates for transporting their products to the markets of the east—than the question presented to you, farmers of Michigan for solution.

I am firmly convinced, that a fair and full examination of this subject will force the conclusion, that all the right remedies against the unjust exercise of any corporate powers or privileges, as well as equalizing the natural advantages, so far as possible, lie within the limits of state autonomy, and individual exertion.

Indignity may exhaust its resources in increasing the labor-saving machinery and implements for cultivating the soil; it must be remembered the same machinery can be employed and to greater advantage on the wide prairies of the west.

Our farmers must adopt such methods in their farm management, as shall produce larger returns for their labor; a higher degree of cultivation; raise more and a better class of animals; a greater variety of grain, fruits, and dairy products; and in general, to maintain the highest rank of the state among the other productive and wealthy states.

I may mention one of the many advantages to accrue to the farmer by adopting a system of mixed farming, and making a judicious selection of the profitable employment of hired labor for the entire year and at lower wages. In this manner can be raised the 'tramps' of today to the position of a respectable laborer, by giving him the opportunity of earning a home and a home of comfort. This system generally adopted will do much towards settling the 'waxed labor question' in this country.

It is in the balancing of the scales, in equalizing the returns of labor, the encouragement as well as general employment of the idle, and a practical recognition of the principle, that capital and labor are mutually dependent upon each other, that is to say, the antagonism sought to be raised by this country by unprincipled demagogues and levelers.

In a country like ours it is the duty of the farmer, as much as that of any profession, to add something to the benefit of the community. The time has arrived when the improved condition of the farm, and the wealth of its possessor, makes it necessary that the log house of the pioneer shall give way to a better farm dwelling.

It is commendable in the farmer to exercise frugality and economy in all the details of farm management. But when that frugality is the outgrowth of parsimony, and descends to the low plane of stinginess, in order to save money, at the same time depriving himself and family of the comforts of a respectable home, it is as despicable in him as in any one else.

His comparatively isolated situation renders a just one of his claims, in order to enjoy the physical comforts, but to minister to the intellectual enjoyments of his family. In no way can a farmer better influence his children to become farmers than to provide a cheerful and attractive home. Let the new house be not only more commodious, but possess more of the comforts of modern life.

The plain and substantial at once impresses the mind with the idea of stability and permanency, as does the convenient, useful and tasteful, inspire a love for the home that possesses them.

Young and susceptible minds take in these impressions with an accuracy and persistency, that give character to their future homes, and shape to a large extent their choice of a profession, or occupation for life.

Presumably true is it, that the young see in other professions and trades easier roads, and pleasant paths to eminence, distinction and power.

I do not advocate mansion or palatial residences for farmers, but buildings substantial, convenient and comfortable, in keeping with good taste in their design and architectural proportions, exhibiting sense and judgment in the selection of the location, with surrounding shades that shall create in the beholder a sensation of sympathy with the pleasing attributes of grace, and beauty in nature. It is with pleasure I notice the fact that in the older and longer settled portions of our state, the spirit of useful improvement is strikingly manifested in many of the residences and buildings of the farmers.

For the purpose of encouraging his spirit, it is hoped that this subject will receive from the managers of Fairs, proper consideration in the way of offering premiums for plans of farm buildings.

I do not intend to discuss the great and varied resources of our state in agricultural productions; in its mines of copper, silver, iron and coal; in its forests of timber and various manufactures; together with herds and flocks, we may rely to some extent, the magnitude of the productive interests which it is the principal object of your association to promote.

When we extend the thought to the vast territory of the Union, embracing about five hundred millions of acres; nearly two hundred millions of which is now subdued to the hand of man, and constitutes the farms and homes of our over-crowded and busy country. Yielding in agricultural products annually, in value exceeding three thousand millions of dollars, upon an invested capital of over nine hundred millions of dollars, and the employment of about six millions of its people, it is strange if we are filled with amazement at the possibilities of the future of our country.

Gentlemen—what a stimulus is found in the thought, that in the United States, the prosperity of the whole nation rests more certainly upon the success of the agriculturist, than upon that of any other class or profession.

Let the farmer then feel the responsibilities that rest upon him as a citizen; and let him realize the importance of his calling in a national point of view, if no other motive induce him, to persevere in efforts to increase the nation's wealth, power and true independence.

At the same time remembering, that he is one of a class by whose industry, economy and enterprise, our country has been advanced, from an unproductive wilderness to unexampled prosperity and power.

Let us then, gentlemen, look at the past only, that we may see what is good and avoid what is evil, that we may from its expiring sparks catch the inspiration of a wise progress, and school our hearts with lessons of truth and moderation.

That wisdom may guide our course in the halcyon future, with spirit at once hopeful and humble, that we shall, at all times, and in all vicissitudes, realize the fulfillment of the promise: "While the earth remaineth, seed time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease."

TUESDAY A. M. The following questions were brought forward for discussion: Shall horse-racing be made a leading feature of our fairs? The President, Mr. Wing and others having spoken at length upon this subject, the following motion was made:

Resolved, That it shall not. Carried. It seemed to be the feeling of those present that racing for the sake of betting or of making money in any way, should be discouraged and not allowed, but that premiums might be offered for fast horses in order to encourage the breeding of such stock.

Resolved, That this association does not recommend that the societies rent booths for the sale of cider or beer, on the grounds.

Mr. Wing offered the following in sense, as a substitute for the above resolution. That no form of gambling or that the sale of any intoxicating drinks be allowed upon the grounds during fair time. Carried, with only one dissenting voice.

The President, Parker, Wing, Durand of Genesee, and others, spoke at length upon this resolution.

In Genesee they charge 25 cents every time a person comes into the gate; but, if a man leaves the grounds in order to obtain a glass of beer at the booths around and comes back, his drink costs 30 cents. At their fairs they were not troubled with intoxication.

The regular order of business was then dropped, in order that the convention might listen to a paper by W. J. Beal of the Agricultural College at Lansing. Mr. Beal was then introduced by the President and spoke at length upon "How can we make our county fairs better."

Visits to other societies and fairs than your own should be encouraged. The degree of success of fairs depends on the amount of information conveyed to the people. They are for their instruction. The object on exhibition should be placed so as to look neatly and show well, especially should it have plenty of light.

Mr. Beal laid great stress on the subject of labels. Too much care cannot be taken in the printing of the labels. Let them be large and plain. In case of stock the labels should be large, weight printed thereon the size, weight, breed, owner's name, etc.

Offer awards for the best kept front yards for farms. Mr. Beal said that he would recommend that a committee pass through the state for this purpose.

Offer awards for the best position of farm buildings in reference to convenience.

Offer awards for the best decorated grounds around a country school house. Mr. B. said further that if the people go to a county fair and learn something they will go again and take their friends with them.

At the close of the paper a resolution of thanks was tendered Mr. Beal for his able, instructive and practicable address. A resolution was then presented, but after some discussion it was referred back to the committee on resolutions to be put in form of a motion.

Adjourned to half-past one. AFTERNOON. The afternoon was mostly spent in a visit to the University. In the evening an address by President Angell was eagerly listened to by not only agriculturists but a considerable number of townsmen. Thanks of the society were tendered the gentleman for it. Regular order being election of officers for ensuing year, the following was the result: President—L. B. Potter, Lansing. Vice-President—C. H. Rockwood, Flint.

Secretary and Treasurer—Frank Little, Kalamazoo. Executive Committee—J. H. Butterfield, Port Huron; William H. Cobb, Kalamazoo; J. C. Dayton, Flint.

JURISDICTION. The following resolution together with fertilizing wheel and other gains through the seed, and abolition of fences comprised the subjects for discussion:

Resolved, That we have great faith in the aims and efforts of the Michigan State Agricultural Society, and desire by our constant influence and effort to further and encourage it, considering the crown of our cumulative work, stimulating to the best development of the natural resources of our state.

Adopted unanimously. The convention adjourned at noon sine die.

Record of Ann Arbor's Business for 1879. In a late issue of the Detroit Free Press considerable space was devoted to a review of the business of several interior towns this city being among the number. The following is the report pertaining to Ann Arbor: The past year seems to have been a prosperous one with all classes of business. As matters stand this is a small university city with few manufacturing interests, there are certain classes of trade which rely largely upon the students and their expenditure of money. The University of Michigan, with its 1,400 students, makes a large demand for such dealers to supply, and they all agree in saying business has been better during the past year. Money has been spent more freely and collections have been easier. The unusually large amount of BUILDING DONE IN ANN ARBOR. During the past summer has furnished work to all mechanics who desired it and a considerable number from other places have found remunerative labor here. Probably at least $200,000 has been spent for building purposes in the city during the past year. Of this amount the legislative appropriations for the University forms a large part. The buildings which have been erected on the college campus, the past summer some of which are still unfinished, are the museum building, $40,000; the central boiler house, cost, $20,000; homeopathic hospital, $6,000, and several other minor buildings, aggregating in cost $4,000 or $5,000. A large number of dwelling houses have also been erected. THE MANUFACTURING INTERESTS. Are chiefly the Ann Arbor Agricultural Works, the Keck Furniture Company and Henry Krause's boot and shoe manufactory. The Ann Arbor Agricultural Company was incorporated a stock company about a year ago, and its business extended. Their business during the past six months was fully $15,000 larger than during the corresponding time last year. They employ about thirty men, which will, next month, be increased to sixty. They manufacture a variety of agricultural implements and do a large business, especially in this state, but also in adjacent and other states. To one house alone in Philadelphia, with which they have a five years' contract, they furnished last year 1,300 plows. Their report business as much improved and collections much easier. The Keck Manufacturing Company was organized but a few months since, when a branch store was opened in Detroit. Before the business had been opened by J. Keck exclusively. The capital stock, all paid in, is $25,000, and will be further increased. The business of the new store in Detroit, which is fully equal to their expectations. Their trade is largely in this state, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Wisconsin and New York. They employ fifty men, and have all the work they can do. They have a capacity of 300 pairs of boots and shoes a week, keeping on hand fifty or sixty men employed the year around. HENRY KRAUSE HAS A LARGE TANNERY where he tans the leather he uses in the manufactory of boots and shoes. During the past year he has opened a retail store, and he finds business good. He tanned 7,000 or 8,000 pieces of leather last year, a considerable increase over the previous year, and his manufactory has a capacity of 300 pairs of boots and shoes a week, keeping on hand fifty or sixty men employed the year around. GENERAL TRADE. In clothing the dealers all report an advance in sales varying from ten to twenty per cent. The bad weather caused some depression. In drugs no material change is reported. The business of some druggists has been extended and enlarged. In dry goods a considerable increase is reported. The general estimate being that the business is fifteen or twenty per cent. better than in 1878. In books the dealers report a very large increase, one dealer placing his business as double that of 1877, and all agreeing in reporting an improved trade. The same is true of hardware, where the dealers generally report a more extended business, with good prices. In jewelry the same improvement is noted. In the past six months one firm has sold $1,200 more than in the same period last year. Another firm reports twenty to twenty-five per cent. increase in their business. The grocery dealers, of whom there are a very large number in business here, have been very busy. The business is, and some of them report an increase. Prices have been up. Collections have been easier. In hats, caps and furs the sales have been increased ten or fifteen per cent. It is stated, by some of the dealers, that one reports double the amount of 1878. In the past year and a half the business in wheat has been increased very largely. In the ten months prior to July 475,000 bushels were brought here, and in the preceding year but 135,000 bushels were purchased. The wheat business has been about the same in extent as the previous year, the prices, of course, being higher. In coal there has been the same increase which is found in nearly every class of business. The dealers have extended their trade into neighboring towns and have sold 1,000 to 1,500 tons more than the previous year. In wool and dried apples the business has been good, owing to the use in prices, wool going from 30 to 40 cents, and dried apples from 4 to 8 cents. The vicinity of Ann Arbor is becoming a great fruit growing country. The peach crop for the past two years has been very large, and last year several new orchards began to bear, showing a considerable advancement in the sale of peaches. The freight receipts in pounds have been considerably larger in the past few months than for the same period in 1878. The Toledo & Ann Arbor railroad has not been running two years yet, and as a fair comparative criterion, the following statement for November, 1878, and November, 1879, may be taken: Freight received, 1878, 84,364 3,097 74; 1879, 101,016 2,272 87; Total, 185,380 5,370 61. Tickets sold, 1878, 285,485; 1879, 298,284; Total, 583,769. The freight receipts in pounds at the Michigan Central depot show a large increase of business, especially in August, September, October and November. The statement in detail is as follows: Michigan Central Railroad. Total, 30,254,381 32,777,189. One of New York's prominent chemists, Mr. Albert C. Dugan, 61 Bowery says: St. Jacobs Oil cured a well-known aneurism, and many other prominent citizens of Rheumatism. It is a reliable remedy.

A GRAND EXHIBITION. Wonderful Assortment of Canines.—The Dog, Fox, Partridge, Partridge, Partridge, Rabbits, Hares, etc., etc. In the basement of the Chandler House, in the store vacated by Douglas & Co., and in McMahon's hall, there is on exhibition an assortment of canines from the big Newfoundland to the lap dog, comprising a variety rarely placed in one aggregation before the gaze of the public. Here, the lover of this sort of stock can feast his sight; if his favorite the pointer excellent specimens meet his vision; if the farrier fits his eye, he can but be pleased; if a setter is his love, there he is in all his beauty. There they are in colors and as many hues as the rainbow; speckled and streaked, smooth and shaggy, long and short eared, ambling to be observed and growing at confinement. Dogs of all prizes, a spitz with an outstretched, value $1,000, well rejoices in walking away with premiums at Detroit and Boston. One pointer enjoys the aristocratic cognomen of Marquis of Lorne; another Princes Louise. The exhibition is beyond the anticipation of its most sanguine projectors, and, to admirers if not lovers of this useless specie of animals, well worthy the time and small expense of visitation. We are able to announce the premium awards upon this section of the exhibition. ENGLISH SETTER DOGS. 1st. Rattler, owned by L. D. Whitman, Detroit. Premium $10. 2d. Saap, by Geo. The County. —Ypsilantians await the purchase of "that clock". —Mr. Gallop accepts a call from Saline's Baptist church people. —Mrs. T. J. Wood of Saline is recovering from a fourth shock of paralysis. —A large monument of Scotch granite has been erected in Saline to the memory of the late Hon. A. K. Clark. —The Ypsilantians host the next fair of the Eastern Michigan Agricultural and Mechanical society, to be held at that place, will be the best ever held there. —Mr. E. M. Watson will offer for sale through auctioneer Fred Kraus, on the farm known as the Lansing farm in Pitts field, on Tuesday, Jan. 27, at 10 A. M., a large assortment of personal farm property. —After a long illness, Hiram Arnold of Scio died Wednesday forenoon at the advanced age of 81. Mr. Arnold was born in Gorham, Ontario Co., N. Y. in 1799 and came to this county in 1824 and located land in Scio purchased of the government at ten shillings per acre. Returning to the east he remained until 1827 when he became a permanent resident of Scio, spending a long life upon one farm now comprising 280 acres. Deceased leaves one son, Eugene, and one daughter, Escalada Green, to whom will fall a valuable estate. Mr. A. has been many years a widower. —Young Riggs, who was implicated with M. V. Ely in the confidence conspiracy case, and escaped from Officer Murphy when taken to his home in Sylvan, Washtenaw county, to procure bail, was rearrested here Saturday night by the same officer. He had come over to Michigan to attend the funeral of his father, who fell dead at Franciscoa week ago last Saturday, and feeling sore, was passing through Jackson on a west-bound train, when Murphy recognized and secured him. He gave bonds and went home, but will have to appear here the present week for trial.—Jackson Citizen. Personalities. —G. E. M. —Prof. Easterbrook's wife died Sunday 9 A. M. The Normal school closed in consequence until Thursday. —J. C. Dupow will be more careful in the future how he drives colts on the street when they are full of teams, his experience resulting from the fact that last week his colt became unmanageable on Congress street and broke a wheel to a buggy. —The daily papers have given the facts in regard to the transfer of the D. H. & S. W. R. stock. Mr. Alley of Boston has purchased the controlling interest and also holds the controlling interest in the T. & A. R. B. But it does not necessarily follow that he will consolidate the two roads. Their interests will be more closely united, but as far as the sale is concerned it is merely a sale of E. Smith and other Boston capitalists to Mr. Alley who is also a Boston capitalist, consequently we predict that at the meeting of Directors the 22nd, there will be little or no change in the management. —A romance tinged with reality occurred Tuesday morning in Justice Forsyth's office. The occasion was the marriage of Peter Pool and Julia Thompson, (colored), the former being in the employ of Wm. Lewis and Fred Johnson in the capacity of taking care of their horses. # GREAT CLOSING OUT SALE

MEASURES SOLD

CALL ATTENTION TO THE

Tremendous Reductions they will make during the next thirty days in all departments.

Unparalleled Bargains!

IN DRESS GOODS, CASHMERE, SILKS AND VELVETS.

OUR CLOAKS Must be sold out at once, and will make anything sell. Our object is to prepare our stock for inventory and to carry a few goods over as possible. There are two ways for doing this—one to jockey with everybody and sell anything for what it will bring, one price to one and one price to another, that is the common way; the other is to mark everything low enough to sell it and to deal with equal liberality toward all, and in this way we intend to make our Clearing Sale of Great Advantage to all. When we decide to make a bargain we offer a real bargain to all.

Remnants at a reduction of 35 to 50 per cent.
