the taxes in this city are to be paid in July, and the state, county and school taxes in December. The object is to make it easier for the smaller taxpayers, and especially those of the laboring classes, to pay their taxes. The city taxes will come due at a time work. It is not the design of those framing the amendment that the payment of taxes in July shall be compulsory, taxes not paid then being carried over into the December tax roll with the addition of a small per cent. From the expressions of taxpayers the new plan will meet with general favor. It is already in operation in most of the cities and villages of the state.

Saline's New Railroads.

Saline is getting rather more than her share of railroad excitement this winter, and is now living in hopes of having two competing lines. The Lake Shore have completed their survey between Saline and Belleville with the evident intention of putting in the track between these points, which would make the Lake Shore the shortest route from Detroit to Chicago and would enable the Lake Shore the better to handle the great traffic to the World's Fair. For a week or so everything has been quiet. The Lake Shore officials are mum and nothing can be learned of their intentions. But if they act at all they must do so quickly or the World's Fair will be over.

There is a sort of uncertainty overreal estate boomers don't relish. If both projects go through, Saline would be on two trunk lines between Detroit and Chicago. Ypsilanti would be practically side-tracked by the Lake Shore, in spite of the heavy bonded indebtedness it incurred in securing the building of the Hillsdale branch. And some enthusiasts even go so far as to predict that Saline might be built up to rival Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor. But here's wishing all good luck to Saline, and to Manchester, which would also profit by the building of the two

The rural towns of such a county ought not show a decline in population. We do not believe they would if it were not for the blighting of the year when the laborers have effect of bad economic legislation and the withering curse of excessive taxation. But, comparing the census of 1880 with 1890, we find:

Rural towns and small villages, with rare exceptions, feel the injurious effect of this policy. We are protecting the wrong men. Our policy depends upon agriculture. Under the operations of laws heavily taxing trade to restrict or prevent it, for the benefit of manufacturing centers, agriculture and commerce are seriously injured. Rural towns are losing, not only in population, but in the value of their products. This is denied by those whose political fortunes and party prejudices tie them to the cause of protective taxation, still the economic lesson of the figures presented cannot be successfully controverted. The people of Washtenaw county have found this out, and so they give about 1,500 majority for tariff reform. The influence of education and independent thought is apparent in the way its people vote. > Ex-secretary Blaine's magnificent constitution, or rather recuperative powers, have prolonged his life for the past few weeks. For days the newspaper correspondents have kept close watch upon his house in hourly expectancy of being obliged to telegraph the sad news of his demise. Surrounded by his family and attended by skillful physicians he has so far baffled the dread disease which seems to hold him so securely in its grasp. He is eminently a magnetic man, with warmer friends and more bitter enemies than any other man in the Republican party. Yet of recent years his friends have seemed to rally more closely around him and his enemies to have abated a little of their hatred.

The senatorial contests are dragging along and it is not yet determined whether the Democrats will control the next United States senate. On Tuesday the following Republican senators were elected: Senator Francis B. Stockbridge in Michigan; Henry Cabot Lodge, in for lighting the hospitals. Massachusetts, to succeed Senator Davis; Senator Joseph P. Hawley in in Maine, Senator Matthew Quay in Pennsylvania. On the same day the following Democratic senators were elected: Senator David Turpie, of Indiana; Edward Murphy, of New York, to succeed Senator Frank Hiscock, Republican; Senator Wm. B. Bate, of Tennesee; Senator George Gray, of Delaware, and Senator F. B. Cockrell, of Missouri. In West Virginia the senatorial contest was determining to re-elect Senator C. J. Seventy-five thousand dollars is asked for an addition to University Hall to be used for administration and recitation room. Such an addition is an imparitive necessity, as the literary department is considerably cramped for want of room.

The two hospitals will require $22,000 for their support during the next two years.

While the Regents do not ask the legislature directly for assistance in the completion of the gymnasium, they make a statement showing how the money for it has been raised, amicably settled by the Democrats and invoke their sympathetic attention to it. Instances of Unlooked For Ignorance-Learn of Everyone. - Municipal Club Touched Up.-Etc.

Our Lounger promised last week to say something concerning the class of people who have what is termed the "better than thou" feeling. But since then a week has passed and Our Lounger approaches the subject with a feeling of hesitation, for the people he intends to hit will never recognize their own portraits, while those sensitive mortals, who have none of the feeling portrayed, will be the very ones to imagine that they themselves were intended to be classed in the category of the "better than thou's."

It was a prominent professional man whose ballot was thrown out at a recent election in this city. It was a prominent University professor, who, when he paid his taxes, inquired how much of the taxes he paid to the city tax collector went to the support of the United States government.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves.

The Argus has dug up an old American almanac, date of 1833, and discovers that the population of that time was composed of 18,168 males and 13,178 females, an excess of 4,990 males over females. Ah, what grabbing times those must have been among the boys to secure the fillies of the flock! It affords us pain to remark that this is today not so. The scramble is upon the other hand. Some day, from an unassail able crag on the neighboring top of some far distant mountain, we mean to write several colums for the Social Blatter, explaining why this

Anything like that horrifies classic Ann Arbor, where they always add the second "t" in spelling "durt" and it is not good phonetic ethics, either. With the same snuffy literary estheticism, they urge that l-a-u-g-h-t-e-r should be pronounced "lafter," and then commit assault with intent to kill, by prefixing an Capital security. The Ann Arbor Courier names Col. H. S. Dean for Regent of the University, and sums up its editorial comment as follows:

He would make a winner. He would be elected."

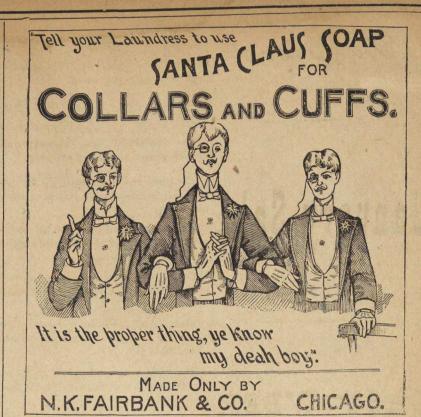

This ought to be a moving consideration with the Republican party. Fitness must be sacrificed to "winning" attainments. That was what prevailed in the choice for senator. That's why Stockbridge won. Dean is a Stockbridge man, and hence a "winner." Well, the Democrats and Populists will not object. They will hitch up their teams for a union drive, we trust, next spring, and place Judge Newton on the supreme bench and elect some competent educator as a regent of the Univer-

The city will do well to look the matter over thoroughly with business spectacles. The site for the proposed building is 22x35, just large enough for a medium hen coop. To pay $2,500 or $3,000 per year rental, would build and pay for a comfortable building in ten years time, and have "rooms to rent," too. Come over and see Adrian's city hall, with the school board and public library having the best of the rooms, and the city dads, and other officials in commodious quarters. The architecture isn't strikingly handsome, we will admit, but there is room and everything commodious.

It is strange, yet true, that a person who has been knocked face downward by an untutored bicycle and rises with a mouth full of dust, always displays a spirit of unreasoning intolerance. SILAGE.

When to Cut the Corn and How to Fill and Cover the Silo.

When to cut the corn is now pretty well determined. The agricultural experiment stations east and west have agreed that when the corn is in the for the silo. Professor Roberts, of Cornell, found that between the development of the tassel and the glazing of the ance. The lecturer said: ear the gain in feeding value was nearly 200 per cent.

The methods of cutting the corn in stage are undergoing improvement. The corn knife in the hands of an active man is yet the chief implement relied upon to cut the corn and lay in gavels in the field. Numerous machines have been devised but all failed until the past that promise well. They may be so improved that they will take the place of hand labor in the field. Many devices are contrived on which to draw the long bundles of fodder from field to silo, but the vehicle most used is a farm wagon with the usual flat hayrack upon it, floored over. The gavels are picked up from the ground by a man and handed up to the driver of the wagon, who deposits them on the rack, the tops all one way. The load of 2,000 pounds is quickly put on, and the load is driven to the silo. Others use a low swung platform, hung between the widely separated fore loader lays the gavels upon the platform without assistance.

At the silo the process is substantially now everywhere alike. The silage cutter is run by a steam engine of 8-horse power. The cutter has a carrier that elevates the cut silage up over the walls of the silo. The fodder is unloaded from the wagon directly upon the table of the cutter without rehandling. The silage is kept leveled in the pits, but only now and then does a farmer attach any importance to the tramping that was once considered so essential. John Gould, from whom we quote the foregoing, tells as follows in The American Agriculturist how he fills a silo:

"The writer has a platform 31/2 feet square hung just below the upper end of the carrier. The silage as it is thrown out falls upon this platform, quickly forming a pyramid of the fine fodder. The cut silage, as it slides down the slant of this pyramid, is given a 'shoot' to or more is thrown all over the surface of the pit. It accomplishes by its own gravdo with forks. As the silage will naturally be the highest at the walls, the grain is equally distributed through the mass pit has resulted better than when a man was constantly employed, for now I have no moldy or spoiled silage in the corners and along the sides of the pit, which did is the transcendent question. happen to some extent when tramping was indulged in."

In regard to covering, Mr. Gould says the old way of close covering and heavy ficance. We learn in it accuracy, weighting have proved more damaging to the top layer of silage than no cover ing at all. Still, cover as one may, there will be a loss of about two inches of silage on the surface in any event.

Tobacco Curing.

A tobacco barn should be weather proof and so ventilated that a free circulation of air can be secured where desired. Attention is called in a Connecticuring of tobacco is not so much a process of drying as of fermentation, and that it is therefore desirable to establish conditions which will promote stablish conditions which will be stablish conditions which will be stablish conditions which will be stablished by the stablish conditions where the stablished by the stablished by the stablished by the stablished by the stablishe tablish conditions which will promote those chemical changes which produce the best quality of cured tobacco. The merits of the use of artificial heat in curing tobacco are discussed, with the conclusion: "To aid the process of fermentation when other conditions are unfavorable, and to establish within the barn at critical periods conditions which shall prevent the occurrence of 'pole burn,' are the only uses for artificial heat in this connection." The stem rot, which often injures tobacco in the later stages of curing, is caused by a fungus. The thorough cleansing of the curing barn and the destruction of all refuse are the best and simplest precautions. Fumigation with sulphur is recommended as an effectual means of destroying

The constant tendency of man is to idolatry. It is not the pagan alone who puts the image in place of a god. The tendency of mathematics is to put a chalk mark on the board and call it a line. What is education? Is it to grind out Greek and Latin? Or is there some goal to be reached, some end in view? The young man goes from his college education to that of business—the practical learning. VENGEANCE OF THE WOLVES.

During one of my hunting and fishing excursions in Louisiana, says a writer one-quarter to one-half mile wide. On one side the hill land came down near the lake, leaving about one-quarter mile of sand beach, and while there I saw a deer running at the top of its speed toward the lake, and a moment later a wolf appeared in hot pursuit. Expecting them to plunge into the lake, when I could overtake and kill them both in the water, I kept my place. Just before the deer reached the water it was caught by the wolf, which pulled it down and killed it. Then the wolf stalked around, looked about, trotted off some distance and set up a howl, went further and again howled and then into the woods, when I heard more howling. The wolf being out of sight, I rowed my boat to the place and got the deer and then went back to my fishhooks. Shortly there appeared on the scene a pack of ten or twelve wolves. They sniffed and moved all around where the deer had been killed. These movements occupied considerable time. They would huddle together, change about and trot in all directions, keep ing close together. Finally they go into a fight; the whole pack attacked one wolf and killed it. It was literally bitten and chewed to pieces. Now, what was the wolf killed for? The probability is, and I am almost positive, that the dead wolf was the one that killed the deer. I have talked to many hunters upon the subject, and have come across but two who had seen any thing similar, and they thought the wolf had been killed for lying. If it was done in the case I saw for lying it was the only time I ever knew a wolf to be killed wrongfully.

SHOOTING AT ICEBERGS.

An Expensive Amusement Proposed for the New American Navy.

It has been suggested that the men of war of the great havies should be employed in the destruction of the icebergs of the north Atlantic. According to this plan the bergs are to be bombarded with great shells, which, penetrating deep into the great ice and ex ploding there, will shatter them to pieces. There is no doubt that this would be a far more profitable ex penditure of ammunition than the uses for which it is designed, says Scrib ner's Magazine, for any target is better than the dear bought frame of man or the products of his skill of hand and mind, but it is more than doubtful if the end could be obtained in this way In the first place, to accomplish the desired result it would be necessary for the men of war to watch the exit o Baffin's bay in the springtime, and break up the bergs into relatively small bits, so that they would no longer float with their bases in the deep southward setting current, but, would drift with the floe ice. To do this with several hundred great masses averaging probably at least one thousand feet in cube, would require an enormous expenditure of money. Including the wear and tear of guns, the shells from the great modern ordnance cannot be fired at a less cost than five hundred dollars for each shell, and it would probably require many hundred rounds of ammunition to break up a single berg. It would not at all serve the purpose to rend the ice to pieces in the midatlantic district, for there the fragments would float about and multiply the dangers of navigation. Such work, if done, would make that region nearly impassable for a portion of the year, though from the readier melting of the ice the trouble would not endure so long. On the whole this interesting project does not seem prac-

ORIGIN OF "WHITE CAPS." How This Noted Band of Outlaws Gained Its Name.

"I suppose there are fewer people in this country who know the origin of the term 'white caps' than there are those who have fallen under the ban of the scoundrels in Indiana and other western states," said Hiram Berry, of New York, in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. 'The term did not originate in this country, but its origin dates back nearly a century to County Kerry, Ireland. Nearly one hundred years ago, when Ireland was more populous than at present, and when the people were not so harassed by British misrule, there lived in County Kerry a large and influential family named Whitecap, who, whenever any of their neighbors became too obstreperous or immoral, waited on them in the night, took them from their houses and gave them a sound thrashing with a cat-o'-nine-tails as a warning to desist from their wrong doing and evil practices. Similar clans were formed in other sections of Ireland, all of whom were called whitecaps, not white caps, two words, as they are written in this country. The popular impression is that the appellation comes from the form and color of the headdress that the Indiana regulators wear when perpetrating one of their outrages, but this is a mistake, as the history of the movement proves. The Whitecaps in Ireland were a terror to evil-doers and were of value to the good order of the society of their day, but I don't know that there is need for them in any part of America."

Noble People in Lowly Callings. It is not in America only that members of noble European families adopt lowly callings to earn their daily bread. According to the Paris Figaro, a Princess Galitzen, a member of one of the oldest aristocratic families of Russia, and a relative of Father Galitzen, who came to Pennsylvania about a century ago to do missionary work, is now a stablemaid in a French circus. A Prince Krapotkin, whose family once exercised great influence and power, is now a cab driver in Moscow where his relatives have often been the honored guests of the czar. HORSE MEAT.

It Is Not Very Palatable Even to a Hun. gry Soldier.

"You never ate horse flesh, I suppose?" said Lieut. Russell, of the Seventh United States cavalry, to a St. Louis Globe-Democrat man. "I have seen the time when I ate it with genuine relish, and that, too, without any salt. It was in 1877, during Gen. Miles' Nez Perces campaign. We had followed the renegades up the Missouri to its confluence with the Yellowstone, and the chase was so fast and exciting that we didn't realize how low our larder was getting until it was drained, and we were getting too far away from the base of supplies to replenish it. The game had all been driven out of the country ahead of us by the fleeing Indians, and when we finally caught up with the redskins and forced them to fight we had almost nothing to eat for several days. We captured about seven hundred ponies from the Indians, some of them so round and sleek and fat as to appear to us the finest meat in the Our butchers killed the youngest and fattest of the ponies that night after the battle, and as soon as they were skinned and dressed we had a feast that would have made Lucullus turn green with envy. We lived on this pony meat several days. It was cooked without salt and roasted over a spit, like a barbecued beef. The meat had a peculiar sweet taste, not at all palatable when I think of it now, and it was so fibrous that we could pull it apart in great strings. But it kept us from starving, and I therefore can heartily recommend pony meat to people in dire straits." AUSTRIAN MARRIAGES.

The Queer Ceremony Attendant Upon a Foreign Alliance.

The quaint old Austrian custom of a bride being cast off, as it were, by her countrymen when she takes to herself a foreign husband, was an interesting feature at the recent marriage of Archduchess Louise of Tuscany. In describing the ceremony the Brooklyn Citizen says: "The archduchess entered the church followed by a long train of royal and noble Austrian ladies. They stood in a semi-circle around her until the moment the bridegroom placed the ring upon her finger; then they turned and left her, for she was no longer a countrywoman of theirs. For a moment the princess stood alone-unattended; then a number of Saxon ladies ranged themselves behind her-she had become a Saxon. At the marriage of Marie Antoinette this custom, which in her case was observed only on the French frontier, had a pathetic denouement. When the Austrian ladies attempted to leave the Austrian ladies attempted to leave the new dauphiness of France she refused to be left and, as if foreseeing what her fate would be in her adopted country, clung to them and entreated them to take her back to Austria again. Actual force had to be used to separate her from her attendants."

AGRICULTURE IN RUSSIA.

The Farmers Are Not in Love With Their

Calling. The predominating trait of rulers from Cæsar downward is an invincible hypogrisy. People of education and exhypocrisy. People of education and experience are invited to occupy themselves with agriculture, but they are well aware that no sooner have they arrived and settled down than they will be unmercifully expelled again. The Jews are blamed for avoiding agriculture, and are accused of not wishing to live by the sweat of 'their brow; yet they are forbidden to colonize without the pale or to own property. The Jews might round on his persecutors and say to them: "You condemn me for taking kindly to farming, while you yourselves, Pharisees that you are, have reduced your farms to the last stage of impoverishment. God be praised, we Jews have had no part in it; but to envy you or to wish to be in your position is more than can be expected of us." All this talk of agriculture, says the Contemporary Review, is mere clumsy hypocrisy. The peasants fly from the land, happy, indeed, to find some other occupation. Others are not permitted to take their places; those who have the right are too ignorant to do anything, and the result is-chaos.

A HUNGRY MAN'S DREAMS.

The Banquet Always Vanished Just as He Began to Eat.

One of the worst evils attending penal servitude is said to be the hunger which assails a man with a healthy appetite during the first few months or years of his imprisonment, says the Boston Globe. A man who has just done a long term for forgery says:

"I used to go to bed every night pinched by hunger. I began dreaming of banquets, and would have thought nothing strange about it had not the same dream come to me every night. The banquet was always the same, in the same place, and I always had the same place at the table. "The exasperating thing about it was that just as the first course was offered I always awoke, so that even in my dreams I was not permitted to taste of the munificent spread which was nightly presented to me in my sleep. "I dreaded to go to bed, because the dream tortured me. It only made me the hungrier, and I then understood the agony of Tantalus, the fable hero who was tortured with thirst and to whose lips the waters were ever coming and receding just as he was in the act of taking a drink."

The River Nile.

Egypt has been rightly called the "gift of the Nile," which not only irrigates the soil, but manures it at the same time with the deposit of fertilizing mud which it leaves behind, and without which Egypt would be as barren as the Sahara. For the Nile mud rests on a bed of sea sand, the whole valley between the first cataract and the sea having been in prehistoric times a narrow estuary. The soil thus formed by the Nile is chemically unique. It contains sixty-three per cent. of water and sand, eighteen per cent. of carbonate of lime, nine per cent. of quartz, silica, felspar, of a name which often figures in Rushornblende and epidote, six per cent. of oxide of iron and four per cent. of carbonate of magnesia.

In 1842 Maria II. da Gloria won it, and she was the first queen of Portugal to get it after a lapse of three hundred years. This golden rose, says the New York Sun, is the premium of the popes of Rome for the best, the most religious, and most virtuous among the queens of Europe; but, unfortunately, there has lately grown up a wicked suspicion that it brings hard luck, because a great many royal ladies who gained it lost their thrones shortly afterward. It surely is not to be inferred that Leo XIII. sent it to the innocent queen with the diabolical intention to dethrone her and establish a republic in Portugal. It is a beautiful present, thus described in a leading Paris paper; "Upon a tall, triangular socle there stands a sort of chalice with the pontifical arms engraved upon it, and from this there emerges a cluster of golden roses, one of which, larger and in fuller bloom than the others, sparkles with dewdrops all of diamonds. In the heart of this rose there is a little cachette, a valve into which the balm and perfumes are introduced at the moment of the benediction." It is needless to say that this splendid rose has made the queen as happy as a big sunflower. God save her majesty Queen Amelia! ANECDOTE OF JAMES WATT.

The Inventor Gives a Steamboat Engineer a Valuable Lesson.

James Watt, who did so much to make the steam engine of practical use, did not, so far as can be learned, take any deep interest in the subject of steam navigation. Yet incidentally he did a good deal to advance it. In his old age he paid a visit to his native town of Greenock. On the 15th of August, 1812, a small steamboat had begun making regular trips between that place and Glasgow, and gradually the service was extended to other points, several boats being put into commission. The old engineer went on one of the new vessels to Rothesay and back, the trip then occupying the whole day. Mr. Williamson, in his "Memories of James Watt," tells this story of the voyage: "Mr. Watt entered into conversation with the engineer of the boat, pointing out to him the method of backing the engine. With a foot-rule he demonstrated to him what he meant. Not succeeding, however, he at last, under the impulse of the ruling passion, threw off his overcoat, and, putting his hand to the engine himself, showed the practical application of his lecture. Previously to this the back-stroke of the steamboat engine was either unknown or not generally acted on. The practice was to stop the engine entirely a considerable time before the vessel reached the point of mooring in order to allow the gradual and natural diminution of her speed."

A PECULIAR INDUSTRY.

The Raising of Dogs in Northern China for Their Beautiful Skins.

The price paid for this fur is ridiculously small. A large mantle measuring about one hundred and twenty inches is sold for three dollars and a half. About eight skins are needed to make such a mantle. The skins must not only be assorted and matched in color and quality but the mantle be made as well, certainly a curious industry that deals with profits which seem to us abnormally small. It would certainly be a novelty in America to see a parlor rug of dogskins-for instance, a centerpiece of "big yaller stray dog," surrounded by patterns shading off in gray, black-and-tan and spitz, the whole finished with a variegated border of assorted puppies.

The Woman and the Umbrella.

A woman ought to have sense enough to carry an umbrella without endangering other people's lives, remarks an irascible man, but in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred she hasn't. The woman with an umbrella is dreaded by everybody. You come down town with her, and she lets it snuggle against your petticoats and drip its cold shower into your boots. Then, when you leave the car, she manages to have that umbrella just at such an angle that, unless your guardian angel has a firm hold on your collar, you're sure to fall over it. rake your eyes. Of course she never sees you, but you learn to hate her with a deep green hatred, which is intensified if she happens to walk upstairs in front of you.

Music by Women.

An industrious searcher after recondite facts has prepared a list of musical compositions by women, extended from 1675 to 1885. It includes fifty-five serious operas, fifty-three comic operas and two oratorios, besides a few cantatas, ballad operas, etc. Songs and detached pieces for piano are not included; yet the best-known musical compositions by women, Frau Schumann's contributions to her husband's song collections and Fanny Mendelssohn's assistance to her brother in his "Songs Without Words," are comprised in these two averted by a union of this kind.

BITTEN BY AN ADDER.

a Pleasant Experience. As cases of poisoning from the bite of venomous reptiles are happily rare in this country it may prove interesting to some of your readers if I relate my experience on this matter, writes A.

Rudee, in London Nature. About a month ago I caught two snakes at Bickleigh, near Plymouth, and while examining one it "hit" or rather struck me on the lower part of the right thumb. I immediately sucked the puncture (it could not be called a wound), which bled a little, and tried to make light of the matter. A livid patch soon formed around the point, and the hand and arm commenced to swell. In a quarter of an hour I was unable to hold anything and almost in a fainting condition. The first symptom (apart from the swelling) was a peculiar taste and a sensation of swelling in the teeth; then the tongue commenced to swell and became so large that I could hardly move it, and my eyes seemed ready to start from their sockets.

In half an hour a terrible vomiting commenced, preceded by excruciating pains in the stomach and heart, and continued with the pains altogether for nine hours, every drop of liquid being ejected almost as soon as swallowed. There was also violent purging and complete suppression of urine.

There was practically no pain in the arm. Altogether the painful symptoms lasted for about nine hours.

I did not lose consciousness at any time. The arm continued to swell for two days, and then it was nearly as large as my leg. After this the swelling subsided, but the arm did not return to its normal size until twelve days after the accident. After the swelling had gone I suffered very much from rheumatical pains, and, in fact, do so now, and the digestion was also very much impaired. The viper is a male, a little more than two feet long and one inch in diameter at the largest part. Color, a dull, vellowish brown on the upper side, with a zigzag black line running down the whole length. On the under side it is nearly black, except at the head, where it is pale vellow. I have kept the reptile now for nearly five weeks, and, although well supplied with small frogs, etc., it has not eaten anything and seems as lively as ever. Cases of this kind, where the sufferer is able to record the symptoms, being rather unusual, is my excuse in occupying the space of Nature.

ANIMALS' VIEW OF MEN.

They Fear the Savage More Than the Civilized Being.

Savage man, who has generally been first in contact with animals, is usually a hunter, and therefore an object of dislike to the other hunting animals, and of dread to the hunted. But civilized man, with his supply of bread and beef, is not necessarily a hunter, and it is just conceivable that he might be content to leave the animal in a newly discovered country unmolested, and condescend, when not better employed, to watch their attitude toward himself, says the Popular Science Monthly.

The impossible island in "The Swiss Family Robinson," in which half the animals of the two hemispheres were collected, would be an ideal place for such an experiment. But, unfortunately, uninhabited islands seldom contain more than a few species, and those generally birds or sea beasts; and in newly discovered game regions savage man has generally been before us with his arrow, spears and pitfalls. Some instances of the first con animals with man have, however, been preserved in the accounts of the early voyages collected by Hakluyt and others, though the hungry navigators were generally more intent on victualing their ships with the unsuspecting beasts and birds, or on noting those which would be useful commodities for "trafficke," than in cultivating friendly relations with the animal inhabitants of the newly discovered islands.

How Gold Is Shipped.

Shipments of gold from New York to Europe are ordinarily made in very strong hardwood kegs, each keg containing fifty thousand dollars. At each end of the keg four holes are bored through the projecting ends of the staves, and through these holes pieces of red tape are drawn, meeting in the center, where a large wax seal is applied, bearing the stamp of the house which makes the shipment. A material cause of loss in this handling of specie is the rubbing of the coin or bars one upon another; and for this reason twenty dollar gold pieces are preferred to ten or five dollar pieces, the surface exposed to abrasion being less. Each keg contains ten canvas bags, and in each bag is five thousand dollars. In the United States assay office the rubbing of the gold bars upon each other is prevented by packing them in saw-

Coffee in Guatemala.

Guatemalans believe that there is no better coffee in the world than that raised on their own plantations, and Central American coffee has of late years acquired a high reputation in the markets of the world. It is usual for wealthy Guatemalans to make sure of good coffee in traveling by taking along a store of their own. A long glass tube, several inches in diameter, but tapering to a tunnel at one end, is filled with ground coffee and through the mass is poured cold water. A strong solution of coffee slowly drips from the narrow end of the tube and this liquid is carefully put up in air-tight vessels to be warmed in small quantities and drank on the journey.

A Strange Custom. A curious marriage custom is recorded by Dr. Post as existing in southern India among some of the more primitive non-Aryan tribes. This consists of wedding a girl to a plant, a tree, an animal, or even to an inanimate object, the may follow an actual marriage may be

NEW KIND OF DIVORCE.

According to This Description It Is Not A Young and Guileless Bride Wanted to Get It.

She was a shy young thing, apparently not long severed from her mother's apron strings, and, as she edged her way into the Denver police headquarters, with furtive glances and suppressed voice, the Times says she was a picture worth gazing at. It required considerable clearing of the throat and bracing of the nerves before she could muster up sufficient courage to spin her

"Do you know anything about divorces?

The officer in charge grasped the rail to steady himself. Though used to questions of a thousand hues, he was taken off his guard by that. Besides, he, in the method common to guardians of the peace, had already sized up the girl and jumped at a number of conjectures at her errand. But the crestfallen officer didn't come within several lengths of the bull's-eye. He had supposed that a parent or a brother loomed up in the background of her mission, or, by a chance shot, a lover; never a husband.

Nevertheless he proved equal to the emergency, pulled himself together in gallant style and made a show of knowledge on the divorce problem. The story in a nutshell is this: Married a fortnight or so. Tired of mat-rimony. Mutual. The spoony hubby of a few weeks' standing had failed to settle wifey's board bill. Moral: "Don't you think I could get a divorce be-cause he hasn't paid my board?"

"What good would that do?" persisted the officer, maintaining gravity of composure with great effort. "Then you would have to pay your own bill.'

"Oh, that isn't the idea at all," she exclaimed, with a look of pity for his obtuseness. "Why can't I get a divorce from him and compel him to support me until I get married again?"

The officer rushed to the tank for a glass of ice water to check a dizzy feeling that crept down his spinal col umn, and when he recovered he politely referred the foxy young bride to a divorce lawyer.

SEEING WITH ONE EYE.

Effect of Judgment Trained by Binocular Vision.

A person may see as far with one per fect eye as with two, but he cannot see as clearly; for the advantage that binocular, or double, vision possesses over monocular, or one-eyed, vision is that the former, by allowing the observer to catch sight of the object from two different points of view, gives him at once some idea of the proportions of its different parts.

But though this is true in theory. in practice the judgment interferes, and the judgment has been educated and in some measure rendered independent of the services of binocular vision by experience and the use of other senses, such as touch, says the Washington Post.

Thus a man with only one eye is never deceived as to the nature of an object with which he is well acquainted, for the report of it that he gets from his vision is corrected and supplemented by his experienced judgment and transmitted to his centers of consciousness in as perfect a form as that which reaches those of a man with two

The advantage of binocular vision may be thus further illustrated: In rapidly dipping a pen into an inkstand or putting a stopper into a decanter the one-eyed man cannot judge so accurately as the two-eyed man. Or, again, if we shut one eye and attempt to plunge Attorney at Law and Pension Claim Attorney the finger rapidly into the open mouth are apt to overreach or fall short of it.

HIS LIFE WAS SAVED.

A Young Man Became Angry Because He Worked Too Hard for It.

"I never hear of anyone being drowned that I don't think of an amusing accident which happened to me once," said Clerk Donal, of the coroner's office, while in one of his reminiscent moods the other day to a Philadelphia North American man. "It happened while I was working in the navy yard."

"Let's have it."

"I was working on the stern of a vessel, and I was walking along with a hatchet in one hand and a saw in the other, when I lost my balance and plunged into the river. I didn't want to lose my tools, so I struck out for the shore, and never worked so hard in my life as I did then, for I was working for my life. I plunged and spluttered and pushed until I was near the shore, when my breast struck something, and as I dropped my legs they struck something which I soon found to be mud." "Didn't anybody go to your assistance?"

"No. They stood on the shore laughing at me, and when I found I had run ashore they wanted to know if they should send for a tug to pull me off. When I made an investigation I found the water was not over four feet deep in the deepest part, and that I could have waded ashore with the greatest ease. I was mad, of course, but after I got on dry land I could see the ludicrous side of the affair, and I have a hearty chuckle to myself every time I think of it now, although it happened a good many years ago."

Fecundity of the White Ant. Some silk worms lay from 1,000 to 2,000 eggs, the wasp 3,000, the ant from 8,000 to 5,000. The number of eggs laid by the queen bee has long been in dispute. Burmeister says from 5,000 to 6,000, but Spence and Kirby both go him several better, each declaring that the queen of average fertility will lay no less than 40,000, and probably as high as 50,000 in one season. Termes fatalis, the white ant, is possessed of the most extraordinary egg-laying propensities of any known creature. She often produces 86,400 eggs in a single day. From the time when the white ant begins to lay until the egg-laying season is overusually reckoned by entomologists as an notion being that any ill luck which exact lunar month—she produces 2,500,-000 eggs. In point of fecundity the white ant exceeds all other creatures.
