Mr. Barkworth's Campaign

Hon. Thomas E. Barkworth is making a vigorous and convincing campaign in Washtenaw. His meet ings are largely attended and whereever he has spoken he has gained friends. In Milan, Manchester, Saline and elsewhere in the county he has been met with audiences whom he interested at the outset and held with closest attention to the last. It is beginning to dawn on the people that in Thomas E. MAN MAY YET FLY.

Wonderful Birdlike Machine Constructed by Professor Lilienthal.

Can a man fly? Learned professors of the sciences of aeronautics agree that he cannot, and a formidable commission of experts appointed by the German government to investigate into the possibilities of aerial navigation have finally and decisively and officially said that it is impossible. Still an ingenious and observant German of the name of Otto Miss Hill, of Governeur, N., Y., is Lilienthal, after a long series of experiments and in the face of the decisions of the eminent scientists, has succeeded in proving that a clever man can fly, and fly for considerable distances too. Professor Lilienthal, like most men who have solved difficult problems, has gone clear away from the principles to which other men have found limitations. When he decided to fly, in other words, he left the possibilities afforded by the balloon entirely out of his calculations. Balloons, said he, are crude affairs, dangerous, not to be depended upon, nondirigible and clumsy. There is nothing in nature built upon the principle of the balloon, yet there are things in nature which can fly, and fly much better than the best balloons. Those things are birds. To the birds, then, I will go for the model of my flying machine. And to the birds he went.

From these same birds it was that Professor Lilienthal learned the true learned that it is the concave shape of the same right on all the other lines, exertion in the teeth of a high wind. bones are constructed similarly to those in a man's arm. Knowing these things, he built his flying machine, or, to be made for himself of light but impervinamental rudder or tail.

These wings and the tail, weighing in all only 25 pounds, are so constructed as to fold up like the wings of a bat. Having completed them, the professor adjusted them to his arms, took a run along a hilltop and calmly and confidently jumped over the side, spreading his wings as he did so. He soared some distance and alighted in safety and comfort. He repeated his experiment many, many times, learning how to control his apparatus, how to change direction, how to rise or descend at will. He improved his wings and tail and kept on practicing until now he can soar for several hundred yards, rise to a much greater height than he started from and fulfill most of the functions of a big bird, save only that of propelling himself in still air and starting his flight from level ground. These two things a man is not strong enough to do, the bird possessing much greater strength for its size and weight than the most muscular man. But what Professor Lilienthal lacks in strength he has made up in ingenuity, for he has now constructed a little motor, operated by carbonic acid gas, which, while it adds scarcely anything to the weight of his flying apparatus, is capable of developing continuously two horsepower, or more than enough energy to work the wings. Indeed in the first trial the little motor developed too much strength and broke the wings, putting a stop to further experiments for the time. If Professor Lilienthal succeeds in perfecting the great invention, the practicability of which he has already demonstrated, and in making aerial navigation on the simple principles favored by the birds safe for mankind, he will have achieved a notable triumph over the wonderful forces of nature as well as the world's greatest scientists. And he seems very likely to succeed, unless he should grow careless in handling his experimental wings and perchance fall victim to the awful fate which overtook the lamented and legendary Icarus, the first man who attempted to fly. -Chicago Times.

THE BALLOON CYCLE.

The Latest French Army Means of Carrying War Dispatches.

There fleated over the hamlet of Villeneuve la Garenne the other afternoon in midair a balloon. Suddenly it appeared to burst and fell rapidly toward the earth. Fearing that a disaster had occurred, the terrified folk ran to the spot at which they expected the aerostat would reach the ground, when to their amazement they saw a parachute detach itself from the car and descend gently. Immediately the earth was touched one of the passengers jumped upon a small bicycle which he had brought with him from the aerial regions, and he disappeared in the direction of Levallois, in the neighborhood of Paris, as rapidly as the machine could carry him. The explanation of this singular occurrence is simple. The balloon was the Caliban, and the ascent was made from Levallois by Captain Capazza and M. Hervieu, the latter being the cyclist. Their object was to test the possibility of a balloon being used for carrying war dispatches, and they assumed that an enemy succeeded in destroying it. Yet they proved that by means of the parachute they would be able to make good their escape and to outdistance their pursuers with the aid of the portable bicycle. - London Telegraph.

Boat Propelled by a Turbine Wheel.

Several trials have been made on the Elbe with a boat propelled not by the ordinary screw, which replaced the paddle wheel, but by means of a turbine wheel. The inventor, Herr Zenner, states that a much greater speed can be obtained than with the screw, because the friction is much less. Three boats have already been constructed on this pattern. - Westminster Gazette.

CRUCENCENTAL CONTROL OF THE CONTROL

DIED OF A BROKEN HEART.

The Remarkable Case of Mrs. Mary Agnes Wolf of New York.

A remarkable instance where death followed a "broken heart" was recorded at the coroner's office Thursday. Mrs. Mary Agnes Wolf, 32 years old, died at her home on Wednesday evening. Dr. J. A. Sanders, who had last attended her, wrote a certificate that death was due to inanition and heart trouble and excessive grief. The board of health rejected the certificate, and it came to the coroner's office.

At the home of the dead woman it was said that she lived with her husband, George Wolf, an employee of the Metropolitan Traction company. Mary Melvin, the aged mother of the dead woman, had shared their humble apartments since the time of their marriage, five years ago. The mother and daughter had been constant companions all their lives. Melvin, who was an Englishman, died when Mrs. Wolf was an

Last October Mrs. Melvin was stricken with a slow but fatal disease. Day and night the daughter waited upon her till her death, in June last.

For a few days Mrs. Wolf wept incessantly. Then a strange melancholy came over her. She ceased speaking of her dead parent, yet there was evidence of terrible inward grief. Her pining soon began to tell upon her health. Her husband talked with her about the folly of keeping the memory of her dead mother in mind, but she would not be consoled. She stopped going out and gradually ceased to partake of food. After a time she became so weak that she was obliged to take to her bed.

The husband returned nightly from his labor and sat by her bedside, imploring her to cheer up and live for his sake. Although she was sound of mind, she refused to pay any attention to her husband's importunities. Dr. Sanders found the woman suffering from no organic troubles and said that she would recover if properly nourished. He recommended that she be removed to a hospital, where she could better regain her strength. His suggestion was not heeded, because Mrs. Wolf declared she wished to die in the bed in which her mother had died. The doctor told her that he could do nothing more for her unless she took sustenance. She did not answer him, but shook her head. On Wednesday she died. Mrs. Wolf will be buried in Calvary cemetery today. Dr. Cuff of the coroner's office said Mrs. Wolf's death was due to a broken heart. He said this was an instance where the woman's failure to pour out her grief in tears had brought on the disorders that caused her death. -New York Tribune.

INGRATITUDE OF NATIONS.

An Instance of It Toward a Hero of the Franco-German War.

A pathetic story of national ingratitude has been going the rounds of the London papers, which is interesting enough to be repeated, especially as it concerns those days of intense interest during which Paris was last in siege. Publicity has been given it by the fact that the hero of the incident has just gone into a French hospital in poverty, there to die. The Pall Mall Gazette thus tells the tale:

"When the German lines in the autumn of 1870 were gradually closing their boa constrictor grasp round the doomed capital, Durnof was the hero of the hour. An experienced aeronaut, who had three times been dashed into the sea and had run many other narrow escapes, he proposed, with his balloon, Neptune, to carry a mail out of Paris and to run the gantlet of the beleaguering armies. At daybreak on Sept. 23 he set out on his adventurous journey, the director of the posts assuring him as he handed in the dispatches and the pigeons that his courage and devotion would meet with a splendid reward. Durnof succeeded in his task and landed safe and sound at Evreux, but the poor old Neptune was never fit for another ascent.

Twenty-two years elapsed, but the unhappy aeronaut never received a penny from successive governments. Even his claim for the value of his balloon, which had been used till it was destroyed by the military authorities, failed to obtain the slightest recognition. After a couple of decades he got the bronze medal accorded to all who carried dispatches by balloon, and last year a small monthly grant was made, which barely sufficed to keep him from starvation. Swindlers and impostors of all kinds laid the foundation of future fame and fortune in the siege of Paris, but the first man who opened up communications between the imprisoned inhabitants and the outer world seems likely to die in dishonor and despair.

"SASSIETY" AND VICE.

The Right and the Wrong Way of Keeping Scandals Out of the Newspapers. It would be hard indeed if we could not get a laugh out of all these horrid scandals that sear society's face, and it has come at last-broad, hearty and irrepressible. The good people of Newport-not the old Newporters, but the people who have followed in their train-are so incensed by the reports published about the misdoings of the Four Hundred that they have organized a Society For the Suppression of Newspaper Notoriety.

Dear, comical, old Elbridge T. Gerry is at the head of the new society, and it looks as if he would have time to attend to nothing else.

The purpose of the society is to prevent the publication in New York and Boston (other cities don't count) of matters that are purely personal to the Four Hundred and of no public interest.

If Mrs. Stevens' maid takes advantage of Mr. Tom Cushing's valet, that is legitimate news, and no objection will be me of to its publication, but if Mrs. Stevens herself should cast sheep's eyes at Mr. Cushing, or if Mr. A. should bility. compromise Mr. B. 's wife, or Mr. C. sue his wife for divorce, or Mrs. D. go wrong with a dude—these are matters that concern nobody but the culprits themselves and their most intimate

No wonder the laugh is loud and long at these good people's expense. Did it never occur to dear old Gerry and his younger friends on the social toboggan slide that a "Society For the Suppression of Vice In the Four Hun- tained by sending for a free book dred" would cut at the very root of the on malaria, published by The Peevil of which they complain, whereas the step they are taking now can only trim off some of the topmost boughs?

There is without doubt a certain amount of reckless newspaper writing going on which every one abominatesand every one reads.

This writing keeps pace with the doings of the day. It is often inaccurate, vulgar and malicious; but, on the other hand, there is so much social evil doing that never finds its way into print at all that the score is pretty even up to date.

I could mention the names of hundreds of prominent New York and Boston families who have never had cause to complain of a single line or word printed to their derogation.

And why? Simply because they have never given the opportunity.

While not making a pleafor the soci ety reporter or the scandal loving editor I am sufficiently familiar with their methods to know that they would just as lief print good news of prominent people as bad news.

Bad news sells better than good news, of course. In times of war, tempest, famine, fire and flood the demand for newspapers doubles and trebles.

So it does in times of great social dis-

The collapse of Duncan, Sherman & Co., the failure of Grant & Ward, the elopement of Herbert Pell and Mrs. Kate Kernochan, the divorce of Mr. and Mrs. Fernando Yznaga and the subsequent marriage of both, the Drayton scandal, the Vanderbilt imbroglio, the Gould fiasco-all these stirring incidents in social life, and thousands of others for which I haven't space, constitute the gossip of the day which is on every one's lips, and which can no more be kept out of the newspapers than a duck can be kept out of water or Ward McAllister out of print.

That is why I advise kind and his pretty playmates to begin to trim ship before they yell that they are overpowered by water.

I cannot predict any success for the new society with the object of suppressing bad news about fashionable people.

Murder will out-so will adultery, drunkenness, cheating at cards, dishonorable indebtedness and all the other vices to which flesh is heir.

As I said before, a society that condemns publicity has only to ponder for a moment upon all it does that is not printed and be grateful on its marrow bones that such matters are still personal and have not yet become of public interest. —Cholly Knickerbocker in New York Recorder.

AN INTERESTING SLAB.

It Marks the Boundary Between Mexico and the United States.

Under the direction of the boundary survey commission the old marble monument which since 1849 has marked the dividing line between the United States and Mexico at the coast has been brought to the city to be dressed up. For years that monument has been a point of interest and has been visited by thousands of citizens and strangers. Each has apparently felt that no one would believe he or she had been there if some portion of the slab were not carried away to be offered in evidence on all occasions. The result has been that the marble has been chipped and defaced until its original form is almost lost. It is because of all this that the slab was brought to the city. To work out the effacements the surface would have to be worked down two inches. When redressed, the stone will again be placed in position, but this time it will be protected by a fence of steel pickets. The that while it might be possible for an active person to climb in it would require a first class acrobat to climb out over those curving pickets. Besides this a new law makes it a penal offense to mutilate the monuments.

At Tia Juana a similar slab will be erected on the old brick foundation in National avenue, which has long been a landmark there. The Tia Juana monument will be of granite instead of marble, and it will be inclosed with steel pickets, like the one at the coast line.—San Diego Sun.

AGUE AND MALARIA

As Described by a Medical Writer.

The regular, old-fashioned fever and ague or chills and fever is, indeed, bad enough, but far worse to bear is that kindred disease known as chronic malaria. The old time chills and fever would produce a distinct chill, followed by fever and sweating, when the victim would have a respite of one, two or three days in which to recuperate and regain his courage and strength. But not so with chronic malaria. Every day-morning, noon and nightchronic malaria will plague and tease its victim with miserable. creeping rigors, nasty cold sweats, bitter taste, coated tongue, sallow skin, loss of appetite, confused mental faculties, heavy, stupid listlessness, and a host of similar symp toms as infernal as they are persist ent—not a day's intermission nor an hour's cessation. Work is a wearisome worry, study sickening and senseless, and play a prosy impossi-

The ordinary treatment for malaria is not of the least possible use in such cases. It only seems to aggra vate it. Unless a thorough course of Pe-ru-na is taken the patient will seek in vain for medical relief. The effect of Pe-ru-na is pleasant, posiive and permanent.

ROYALTY AND THE LAW.

The Queen of England and Her Son as Candidates For the Criminal Dock.

The bazaar in aid of the fund for rebuilding the Crathie church, near Balmoral, was held under the patronage of the queen, who also gave two plaited straw baskets made by her own royal hands. These precious presents were naturally made much of, and with the queen's approval were disposed of by a raffle, although the gaming laws distinctly specify raffling as illegal. The question arises, Has her majesty, by aiding and abetting it, made herself liable to prosecution before a magistrate? Lawyers have no doubt about it, but it does not follow that the law will be set in motion. The British constitution would scarcely survive the shock of the epectacle of the empress-queen in a criminal dock and possibly fined 40 shillings or a month at hard labor. But while nobody is disposed to take action against the queen for conniving at a mild form of gambling plenty of people would not be sorry to see her son, lieutenant general, his royal highness the Duke of Connaught, tried by court martial for risking the lives of the men under his command. The duke is commander in chief of the Aldershot district. On Wednesday he and his wife went to the military balloon ground in order to christen a new balloon to be named after the duchess. The weather had been threatening thunderstorms, and the atmosphere was heavily charged with electricity. Nevertheless it would never do to disappoint the duchess. So, just as the storm was about to break, the balloon was sent up 300 feet and anchored by a steel rope held by three sappers. The result, as might have been expected, was that the lightning struck the balloon, rushed down the steel conductor and horribly mangled the unfortunate sappers. The question every one asked is why the ceremony was not postponed, seeing that danger was palpable to the meanest understanding. The demand for a court martial is very general and will probably be acceded to, but it may be safely predicted that the prisoner will not be the general commanding, but some inferior officer.-London Cor. New York Sun.

BLASTING THE PALISADES.

Contractors Destroying Their Beauty to Get Out Granite Blocks.

Until comparatively recently the Palisades escaped the ruthless hands of contractors and quarrymen, despite the fact that there are few spots in the country where richer deposits of granite are to be found. A few quarries within the last five years have sprung up at Fort Lee, but they have all been located away back from the Palisades, and the front of these beautiful hills have been unmolested. Now, however, a firm of contractors, by exploding dynamite, 3,000 pounds at a time, is gradually making huge excavations in front of the Palisades, which will in the course of a very few months transform the historic Palisades from things of beauty to ordinary stone quarries.

Nothing that the lovers of natural scenery can do will in any way stop the destructive work from going on. The Palisades are private property, and that part of them which is at present being torn open by high explosives has been leased by the owners to contractors, whose love of the beautiful pales into insignificance beside their business in-

Aside from the destruction of the Palisades, the work going on in the quarries at Fort Lee is of moment on account of the enormous amount of dynamite which is being exploded there. People marveled at the explosion of 500 pounds of dynamite in a projectile thrown by a pneumatic gun at Sandy Hook some weeks ago. Six times that much was exploded at Fort Lee on Thursday at noon and again on Friday at the same hour, and although it was not thrown from a gun neither did it explode in the water, but in a solid bed of granite. The terrific force of these two explosions cannot be imagined by anybody who was not in Fort Lee to hear them, or who has not since visited the quarries to see their effect. The little village of Fort Lee shook as though an earthquake had visited it, and strangers in the place who were unaware that blasting was going on in the vicinity were firmly convinced that some convulsion of nature had occurred. -New York Sup.

CEREMONIAL MANNERS IN JAPAN.

Etiquette Has Become Second Nature In the Land of the Mikado.

Given a highly imitative race like the Japanese, and let one undo iating standard be set before them. Then generation co after generation will no change be witnessed. The standard will act like that of the French academy on the language of France. Now, at home, in America, we have 50 standards of manners—the reserved and reticent New England manners, the slap you on the back far western manners, the demagogue's manners, the drummer's manners, the cut and dried business man's mannersthese and dozens of others might be specified. And it must be admitted by even the most patriotic that the man who should try to model his deportment on all these schools at once would come to a somewhat mixed result

Nothing of this bewildering complexity has ever existed in Japan. From mikado at the top to cooly at the bottom of the social scale one undeviating standard has always prevailed. Originally an importation from China, it has been elaborated through centuries of study of the most elaborate ceremonial etiquette till at last through constant practice it has become second nature. No one ever saw anything else, ever dreamed of anything else.

There was one way of saluting a superior, one of saluting an equal, one of saluting an inferior, and one's head would have been cut off had he departed from it. No Japanese child ever saw saluting samurai, samurai saluting daimios, daimios saluting shoguns. The whole ceremonial became organized into them as much as their instinctive habits into our setters and pointers, perhaps the best mannered of our population.

Little girls of 10 will one see here whose finish of breeding would have awakened the envy of a duchess at the court of Louis XIV at Versailles. Female servants one will encounter at a dinner in the house of a Japanese gentleman whose grace, charm and dignity are the quintessence of ladylike refinement. "Trifles make perfection, but perfection is no trifle." The simple fact is that the young woman of 20 has been doing the thing for a thousand years. -Christian Register.

WILL AGAIN BE GOVERNOR.

New York will this fall prove the the scene of one of the most interesting political struggles of many years. The nomination of ex-Vice-President Levi P. Morton for governor, by the republicans, gave the campaign on that side an interesting ion. Now comes the nomination nomination means his election. No sins. other man that could have been named is so strongly intrenched in the favor of the democrats of the that the republicans expended half a Empire state as Senator Hill. That million dollars more in a single year Senator Hill should have preferred than did the Winans administration, re-election as governor to a continuance in the United States senatorship, seems remarkable. But he is the choice of the democratic convention and will be elected. Senator Hill has not always been found in line with a majority of his party, But a week ago the republicans but in his differences he has had the win it.

A DESPERADO.

A company of gentlemen sat in the office of the Hotel Palomares in Pomona the other evening waiting for a late train to Los Angeles. Each one of the party knew every one else, cigars were freely passed around, and all were enjoying a talk about early experiences on the frontier, and especially in southern California, before railroads were built in this region. The best story of the evening was told by Colonel John Williamson, one of the most important orange growers in southern California.

"From 1873 until 1878," he said, "I was engaged by a Chicago lumber company to travel through the country from Denver to St. Louis to look up openings for lumber yards. It was my business to visit new towns and settlements, and when I found men of capital in them to induce them to go into the lumber business and buy of the Chicago concern. At that time Ogalalla, on the Union Pacific railroad, was famous throughout the country as the toughest place in the west. Then Dodge City, Kan., came into prominence for its cowboy episodes and the rough, tough and desperate character of a large portion of its residents. I passed a night in Dodge City in October, 1876, and I had avowed to hang. As they approachassure you that I came quickly to the conclusion that life in any other town would be tame and without excitement in comparison with the pleasures that place could afford.

"On one side of the railroad track stood a big barnlike building called the Americo-Mexican hotel, and on the other a row of 20 or 30 one story frame houses, almost every one of which was a barroom, with a gambling house attached. Over the doors hung such signs as 'Cowboys' Retreat,' 'The Divan' and side alive. All the horsemen drew up 'The Frontiersman's Delight.' Behind along the bank and waited in readiness the town, on top of the hill, was the city | to shoot Martin should he by any chance graveyard. An immense cross stood at the top of the hill and served as a landmark for travelers for miles and miles across the barren prairies. That graveyard was the pride of every man who lived in Dodge City. The inhabitants watched it grow and pointed with pleasure to the fact that there was hardly a man taking his final rest there who had not come to his death by violence.

'It was toward afternoon when I halted my horse in front of the Americo-Mexican hotel after a 40 mile ride. Heavily armed men stood about in groups. The looks thrown at me were far from reassuring, but I pretended not to see them and hastened into the hotel. Hardly had I taken my seat in the dining room when four men, evidently forming a delegation, approached me. me to Dodge City in a way which left me no alternative but to answer. My answers seemed satisfactory, and one of them informed me the reason of their curiosity. They had some idea that I me that if I had been I should have informed me that there was to be one of the prettiest lynching bees in town that night that had ever taken place.

"Three men had come to Dodge City 10 weeks before and had taken the town by storm. They had made their headquarters at a tavern almost opposite the hotel and had levied a tax on every one who entered. Anybody who objected to paying or standing treat was beaten, and when resistance was shown pistols were used. Ten men had received death wounds from these three men, and the town had determined to set an example to all such characters by hanging the three without ceremony. It was not easy, however, to accomplish this, as the men were intrenched in the barroom and refused to come out or allow any one to enter. It had been determined to dislodge them that night in spite of all resistance, and I was invited to take part in the affair. The men were named Hank Martin, Jack Willis and Wat Simmons and were desperate outlaws, with large sums upon their heads.

"Just at dark the citizens of Dodge City prepared for battle. The attacking parties were divided into two forces. One approached the point of attack from the rear, while the larger number marched up to the front. All the citizens wore handkerchiefs over their faces. I was in the main body of attackers, or rather behind it. We were brought to a sudden halt by a rifle shot from one of the windows of the besieged house, and one of our leaders fell. Various means were tried to dislodge the three men, but to no purpose. Every time the slightest advance was made their rifles rang out, and some one on our side dropped. At last a small man slipped up in the shadow of the adjacent building and threw a lighted can of kerosene under the building. Soon it began to burn. At last it was enveloped in flames, and the three men were obliged to rush for their lives. They were half blinded by the heat and smoke of the tools. One of the blocks of native iron burning building, so they were quickly captured.

"Then all the citizens of Dodge City, not excepting the women and children, formed in line and marched down to the cattle pens, where an old tree stood that had served several times as a gallows. A rope had been brought along, and it was quickly thrown over a branch, and everything was ready for the hanging. It was at first intended to Lamb, referring to the days of his Unidispose of all three at the same time, but there was not enough rope, so it

Willis was the first to be strung up. His end was hastened by a dozen bullets, which were fired into the body while it was still writhing. Wat Simmons was then disposed of "Next came the turn of Hank Martin, and all held their breath when the boldest desperado known on the plains in those days was brought out. Just as the big, powerful fellow was led under the tree he made a sign that he wanted to say something. The gag was removed from Martin's mouth, and he said: "'If you will take this rope from round my neck and slightly loosen these bonds, I will tell you men something that will interest you all.

"There seemed no danger, with so many on guard, so his request was complied with. When his fetters were loosened, he rose, stretched himself and began his speech:

'You are a set of villains,' he yelled, 'and you can all go to hell!' "He knocked down the two men nearest to him and made a dash for the sagebrush on the open prairie. All the horses were left outside the barroom when the desperadoes were captured. A few men dashed into the sage after Martin, which made it impossible for the men under the tree to use their guns, lest they hit some of the pursuers. After an hour's useless chase the hunt was given up for the night.

"At daylight the next morning a ranchman rode into Dodge City and electrified the town by saying he had seen Martin near Fort Leary, 16 miles below He said he had just finished his breakfast when a hatless man, whom he recognized as Martin, came in and demanded shelter. The ranchman suspected something was wrong from the man's manner and at once started for Dodge City and gave the alarm. Thirty men immediately saddled their horses and started in pursuit of the man they ed the hut a man appeared in the door with a winchester rifle in his hand. Without a word he opened fire on the advancing party. Two men dropped from their saddles, and as the rest of the party put spurs to their horses and dashed toward the hut Martin, who had done the shooting, rushed down the hill and plunged into the Fox river. There had been heavy rains, and the river was a torrent, which made it seem impossible that a man could reach the other get across. They waited half an hour, and as there was no sight of him they returned to Dodge City. That afternoon the other two desperadoes were buried in what is known as 'Murderers' row, and beside the graves was placed a board, 'To the memory of Hank Martin, drowned in the Fox river while escaping

"Two years after leaving Dodge City I chanced to be in a little Texas town that I don't want to mention here. A man passed me on the street one day whose face was strikingly familiar. I turned to my companion and asked who

" 'That,' said he, 'is Henry Martin, one of our most respected citizens.

'Suddenly the scene of the lynching at Dodge City came back to me, and I They demanded to know what brought knew that the last time I had seen that man he was standing under a tree with a rope around his neck. I told my friend the story, and he evidently doubted my sanity, if not my veracity. He told me that Martin came to the town early in was a deputy sheriff and frankly told 1879, when it was first started. That night I was at my MacKenneth's—Ronald that die hotel when a tall man, with a slouched hat, walked in. He looked round and then came straight to me. 'Are you the man,' he said, 'who has been telling a yarn about Hank Martin being lynched?' "I acknowledged that I was.

" 'Well,' he replied, 'Henry told me to tell you that he would shoot you on sight if you were in town tomorrow.

"Two hours later I was taking a night ride across the prairies. '-Kansas City

Extraordinary Longevity In Chile.

The last census of Chile furnishes some interesting statistics relative to longevity of certain representatives of the human race, who live in that far away corner of "Latin" or "Spanish" America. According to the figures in question, in the 23 provinces of Chile the enumerators found 211 men and 273 women who had passed the century milestone. One man, Rafael Munoz of Colchaqua, was returned as being 150 years of age. The oldest woman was 138. Of the other "old timers" they found one man 135 and two women 132. one man 130, one over 127, one woman 125 and three men and four women 123, one man 122 and three women 121; 20 women and eight men gave in their ages as 120, and two women acknowledged to being past 119; five women and three men were at the 118 mark. Of all the others over 100, 240 were women and 195 were men. The most remarkable exhibit in the whole array is the one which shows that 53 women and 38 men gave in their ages as 110. - St. Louis Republic.

"Yes," retorted Lamb. "I-I-never was decided to hang one at a time. Jack heard you do anything else."

THE WITCH OF YELL.

The witch sat placidly sewing in her doorway when I saw her first, looking turned to the witch, but the next minlike nothing in the world but a soncie Zetlander of some 40 odd years, with a fresh color and a thick coil of raven black hair half hidden by her headgear, a bright blue handkerchief spotted with white. I gave her good morning and against her ear. asked her if she would give me a glass of water and a bannock of oatcake, as I her neat cottage. She had been gatherhad been walking for some hours and was both hungry and thirsty.

"And welcome," she said, with the pretty Shetland courtesy, "if you be from Ireland, mistress.

"I am Irish," I said, "but wouldn't you give an oatcake to an English woman, my friend? No?" as she shook her head resolutely. "And how is that?" "No food of my baking will pass Scots or Southron lips," she said harsh-"Sit ye down." pointing to her own stool. "Ye're fair tired out, mistress. I laughed faintly as I accepted the seat. "I have been trying to walk away from myself," I said, "and though I've tramped through a whole forenoon I haven't done it yet.

'Ah!" she said, smiling a little-only with her lips, for her eyes kept their steady sadness. "It's a far way you have to go, mistress, and you must walk by night 'stead o' day. You're married," glancing down at my ungloved hands. "Have ye ever borne a child?" I looked down at my black dress and nodded silently. The woman drew in her breath sharply as if she were hurt at heart. "Aye," she said, "so have I, and lost it too. Poor lass!" And to my intense astonishment she stopped and kissed me once and again. 'How old was he?" she went on gravely, taking no heed at the wonder in my face. 'Mine was a man grown, but yours must ha' been but a bairn. Ye have the look of a bairn yourself."

"Have I?" I said, with a dreary laugh. "An old bairn, I'm afraid. My boy was 7 years old."

"Aye, and your man's alive? Do I know your man, and what for does he let you come here to dree your weird

"My man knows it's the kindest thing he could do," I said. "And I think perhaps you know him," I added, a little proudly. "Nearly every one in the islands knows Hector MacKenneth.' "Av. do they. He's a man!" the witch said emphatically, as she came out of the cottage with a plate of bannocks and a big cup of milk. "And there's never a soul in the islands but he has done a kind turn or spoken a kind word to-even to me. "

"Why 'even to you?" I asked. "My husband has a great respect for you. He told me you were the wisest woman in the islands, Lief.'

"Did he, now? And I his brother's MacKenneth's-Ronald that died in England?" 'That same Ronald,'' she said quietly. 'He died in the south, I know, and some Southron brought the news to MacKenneth himself. But he lies buried away in the south, I heard say. Do ye know where, Mistress MacKenneth?" "No; I wish I could tell you, poor soul," I said pitifully. "I wish I could help you." "My bonny Ronald," she said, looking out to the blue, tumbling waves of the sound, her eyes grave and sad and her voice very low. "It's little ye thought of me, but on the day we were handfasted and the day ye lay a-dying." Then she bent down a little and looked sharply into my face. "Did ever any one in the islands say to ye that we two were not man and wife? Did ever MacKenneth himself?" "Never MacKenneth," I said honest-

"Others have, though." She looked sharply at me again, then caught my hand in hers and dragged me up from my seat. "Come wi' me, you wife of the MacKenneth, and I'll show you what handfasting means to a woman.

I drew my cloak round me with my free hand, and we went slowly together over the scattered rocks and sand and down a little grassy slope, till we stood in front of an upright stone with a round hole in its center. "There," said the witch, still holding my hand fast in hers, "there's where we were married-my man and I. See ye here, Eleanor MacKenneth, do you love your man, or liked ye your first lad best?" I cried in my heart to the dead and gone Oscar to forgive me, and then I looked the woman fairly in the eyes and that in the writings of Avicenna there answered her, "I love MacKenneth

"Where were ye married? In kirk, of course?"

"In kirk, yes. We were married in a London church," I said; "the Church of St. Stephen. "Kirk Stephen, aye? Well, this is Kirk Odin, where thousands have been made man and wife in their day. Go you nearer to the stone, wife of Mac-Kenneth, and you shall be married there too, if you're no' afraid."

"Do I look afraid?" I said, with a smile, and she smiled back at me. "Put your hand-closed so-through the hole in the stone." I obeyed with some difficulty, for the hole was unevenly cut, and its edges were jagged. hand and hold it so, and now say after

I hesitated a moment and then repeated after her. "In the name of the One Eyed, the name of Odin, I hold thee and have thee through this life, and that life, and all lives to follow. I call thee and keep thee, my hand for the witness, my lips for thy kissing, my strength for thy weakness, my tears for thy sorrow, my breast for thy head when thou boune thee to sleeping, my life for thy calling"- Then she stopped and looked vaguely at me and beyond me, and I finished the oath with words that rose in my mind, though I had never heard them before:

"My life for thy calling, my death for thy living. Hear, Thor and hear Odin and Hector MacKenneth." Then I drew my hand out from the hole and nte I saw that her thoughts were not with me or with this material world at all, and I went softly away, leaving her standing with her back to the sea and her eyes fixed on the great stone, listening intently and vainly, with her hand

So I saw her the next time I passed ing some herbs, and now she stood listening again, with the herbs held tightly to her breast. This time I stopped to speak to her. "Lief MacKenneth," I said quietly, "are you not going to give your sister the morn's greeting?'

She gave me a quick, wild, wondering look, and her eyes filled with sudden sunshine. "God bless you for the MacKenneth," she said earnestly, "and for the sisterhood. But you must not stop with me today.'

"We are not going "Why?" I said. to have a storm, Lief."

"Are we no?" she laughed. "Woman, dear, you're no Zetlander. There'll be a storm on us inside of an hour, and a black wind strong enough to blow the heart out o' your breast, or"-

"Or the dead out of their graves," I said, with meaning, and her face lighted up again.
"Maybe," she muttered, "maybe.

Now go home, you wife of MacKenneth and dream o' your man and the bairns to be. Oh, aye, "as I drew back, flushing hotly. "I'm not a witch for nothing, and I can see their shadows round you, Eleanor MacKenneth, two, three and four. Now"-she turned and caught my hands in hers and kissed me on lips and cheek and forehead with eager, close kisses. "There, now, go home, Eleanor woman, and shut the storm out. When do you go to your own home, soon? "Next week," I answered. "I told Hector to expect me on Thursday.'

"Aye, and a fine, calm journey to you, dear heart. But I'll see you again. Go now, and goodby, woman dear."

I heard very little of the storm that night, for I slept as soundly as a child, and when, toward morning, I began to dream my dreams were pleasant enough, though they were all of Lief. The last dream of all was the one which made the deepest impression on me. It was of Lief again, but as I had never seen her. Young and with a wonderful shy gladness in her eyes, she stood at the door of her cottage in the driving rain, with her hand fast in the hands of a man with fair hair and bold blue eyes, a younger edition of my own husband. I saw them kiss each other, and then I woke.

"Ronald has come back to her," I said to myself as I rubbed my drowsy eyes, and somehow I was not in the least surprised or grieved when mine hostess came in later on in the morning to tell me that the storm had wrecked half a score of houses and had blown the witch's cabin out to sea. Nothing was ever heard of the witch herself, but after a little while my husband and I had a pine wood cross put up close to the stone of Odin, and on it we wrote the two names, Lief and Ronald. And in the small church of Kirk Harold. where Lief was christened, we put up a tablet to the glory of God and in loving memory of Ronald MacKenneth and Lief, his wife.—Macmillan's Magazine.

Destiny of the South.

As things are now in the southern states the man does not live that can make money in farming there. The price of cotton has dropped for a quarter of a century with a regularity that eliminates the element of chance and points to some law of markets that is out of the reach of fertilizers or any uevice of agriculture. It is this law that the planters are looking for.

There is a fine spirit of scientific discovery abroad in the southern states. If it does not amount to a great intellectual awakening, then the signs that have always attended popular movements do not apply in this instance.

It is the manifest destiny of the south to proclaim some cardinal principles of political economy in the near future. It might seem extravagant to say that the hope of the nation rests with the south, but in these days of political and commercial consternation much more extravagant things are affoat in the prints. In working out the destiny of the south the problem of the nation itself may indeed be solved. There are qualities in the character of the south that will inevitably bring these people to the front. -Donahoe's Magazine.

M. Grevy Was Tender Hearted. Some one has taken the trouble to draw up a list of condemnations to death in France and their results since 1865 in order to show the different ways in which successive rulers have exercised the prerogative of mercy. Under the second empire, from 1865 to 1870, there were 193 condemnations and 85 commutations, or 44 per cent; under MacMahon, from 1873 to 1878, 179 condemnations and 112 commutations, or 62 per cent; under M. Grevy, from 1878 to 1886, 211 condemnations and 168 commutations, or 85 per cent. M. Grevy, it will be seen, was most merciful and next to him Marshal Mac-Mahon, who, although an old soldier, had great difficulty, it is said, in turning a deaf ear to the appeals of the relatives "Now," said the witch, "open your of condemned men. - London News.

After that interview with Felix I re- Merrick calmly. turned forthwith to London. I had accomplished the object of my journey and did not care about staying longer in Paris. My mind was much perturbed, as I was quite unable to come to any conclusion respecting the episode at the Fen inn. Beyond all doubt I had proved that Francis was at Marshminster, Felix in Paris. Who, then, was the man I had met at the inn? It was impossible that I could be mistaken in the identity of my college friend, yet in the face of such evidence as I had gathered it was ridiculous to cling to my first impressions. There could not be three brothers exactly alike in personal appearances, and yet I had beheld three men-at the Fen inn, at Marshminster and in Paris -who resembled each other in every respect. The more I pondered over the the movements of Felix Briarfield on that night, and I'll lay anything you'll mystery, the deeper did it become, and find he went to the Fen inn." the more confused grew my brain.

I began to think that I was the victim of some hallucination, as I could son he was so ready to go there next explain the matter in no other way. morning with me." With this idea, which was the only feasible one left to me, I took the ad- his forethought, that there was no evivice of Felix and on my return to town dence there to convict him of a crime, went to see Dr. Merrick. So far all was in his favor, but my story with great attention and questioned me closely on all points.

"There is some trickery about this, Mr. Denham," he said after considera-

"You do not, then, think my meeting with Francis Briarfield was a hallucination?" I asked eagerly.

"There is no hallucination about you, sir," was the comforting response. "You time," said Merrick, "for Felix took seem to me as sane and matter of fact a person as I ever met."

'Then, if it is not hallucination, how do you account for my having met three ster as Francis and reappeared in Paris men all exactly alike when I know there are only two with that special appearance in existence?"

"I think it is trickery," repeated Merrick, nursing his chin. "This is more a case for a detective than for a doctor. Were I you, Mr. Denham, I would employ a good detective and probe the mystery thoroughly. The matter Marshminster." seems miraculous to you now, but I feel sure when you learn the solution you will be surprised at its simplicity."

"If I am sane, as you say and as I believe myself to be, I will thrash out you'll find Felix back again in his old the matter myself."

"Better get a trained man, Mr. Denham. From what you have told me I see you have to deal with a criminal of no ordinary intelligence. It is an extraordinary case," mused the doctor, "and I do not wonder at the fascination it seems to exercise over you. Were I in your place"-

"Were you in my place?" seeing he

'Good! I'll be the sleeping partner,' he said in an amused tone, "but I warn you, Mr. Denham, that from what I see of this case it will be one of great difficulty and may take months to work

"I don't mind that. It is nothing to an idle man like myself, but I am afraid, Dr. Merrick, I take up your valuable time."

"Oh, I can spare a few minutes," said the doctor quickly. "I work hard enough, so it is permitted to even a professional man to indulge occasionally in some amusement. This case is so to

"Well, and your idea?" "In the first place, I am inclined to agree with your ideas of Felix passing himself off as Francis."

"I have abandoned that idea," said I dolefully. "I saw Felix in Paris." "Wait a moment," replied Merrick.

"We'll come to that later on. Furthermore. I believe it was Felix you met at Marshminster-Felix, who called himself Francis and posed as the lover of Miss Bellin."

"But I saw him in Paris," said I, again clinging to that undeniable fact. 'I know you did, but the pretended Francis of Marshminster and the real Felix of Paris are one and the same per-

'But why should he do that?"

"Can't you see?" said Merrick impatiently. "Felix wants to put a stop to your following up this case. From your story it is quite probable that he killed his brother through Strent. The whole Marshminster. This business having circumstances of that lone inn are very suspicious. Your unforeseen arrival on city and saw a merchant of my acthat night complicated matters. the month there was not much diffi-

I copied this down in my notebook, refused Chambers' hospitable invitation to luncheon and went off at once to Devereux lane. Here I had no difficulty in seeing the passenger list of the Copiapo, and one of the first names I set my eyes on was Francis Briarfield.

'This puts the matter beyond all doubt," said I, making a note of this. 'If Francis Briarfield did not arrive in London till the 6th of this month, he cannot be the man now bearing his name at Bellin Hall."

I was now perfectly satisfied that Merrick's idea was correct. In order to confuse and throw me off the scent, Felix had followed me to Paris and appeared in propria persona. But for the doctor's suggestion of the shipping list I should not have been able to prove this, but now I held incontrovertible evidence in my hands to prove that Felix was trading on the marvelous resemblance between his brother and himself. Francis had arrived in England on the 6th of June, he had met me at the Fen inn on the 10th and had there been foully done to death by his brother through a third party. But I was now on the trail and hoped to run to earth both the unnatural brother and his vile tool. felt like the hero of some wild romance

On returning to my rooms in Duke street I wrote off at once to Merrick, telling him of my success in proving the identity of Francis with the man who had been slain at the lone inn. It now remained for me to go down to Marshminster and there make inquiries as to the movements of Felix on the lieved Olivia Bellin's lover was in night in question.

> I felt confident that I could pursue such a search without hindrance, as he would be quite satisfied that I would now rest after the Paris episode. No man in his senses would search for a dead man when that man had been conclusively proved to be alive. So Felix doubtless thought and rejoiced in his cleverness in thus putting an end to my inquiries. But mark how ironical is fate. Felix advised me to consult a doctor about my hallucination, as he chose to call it. I took that advice and saw Merrick. Merrick had nullified all his plans by solving the riddle with which Felix was trying to baffle me.

"Here am I setting up for a lawyer," said Merrick quaintly. "To tell you the honest truth, Mr. Denham, you have "Of course not. I believe he arranged all these matters to baffle your prying and then calmly returned to Marshmin-destruction. But then fate is so ironical.

"No," said I, on reading these telegrams, "Felix Briarfield did not leave Paris for Italy, but for Marshminster, and Francis Briarfield, poor soul, is not at Bellin Hall, but lying in the Essex marshes."

The Fires Will Make Work For Many. "What is the probable loss from the fire on pine stumpage throughout the was asked of a leading logger. state?"

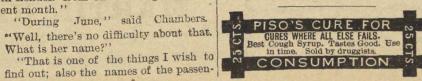

"The loss is in one sense nominal," replied he. "You understand, fire does not burn the body of a pine tree. It only burns off the bark and foliage. The trunk of the burned tree is as good as ever it was, with this exception-the tree, after it is burned, must be cut the succeeding winter, else it will become worm eaten and worthless.

"This fire is a blessing in disguise to labor. Every owner of burned pine stumpage must go to work this coming winter and cut every foot of it, and many of these owners are forced to cut perhaps hundreds of millions of feet of stumpage they would not otherwise have cut for years to come. They are, you see, forced to employ immense crews of men they would not otherwise have had use for."-St. Paul Globe.

STRANGELY SAVED FROM DEATH.

> Shaffer, who, it seems, had followed this trade before going west, looked surprised, but answered that he did.

"Well, you know, it's a very easy thing forgotten. Now, I will bet you can't tell me what I am going to tick out here on this table."

The eastern man then took a pencil from his pocket and began to tick off a message which, as he finished, caused Shaffer to spring hastily from his seat, drawing, as he did so, a revolver from his pocket, which he thrust almost in the face of a man who had been standing in the door of the saloon, and who had just covered him with his pistol. The two men glared at each other, and then Shaffer said calmly:

"Better put up your weapon, Smith, unless you want to shoot it out with me here. I have got the drop on you as much as you on me."

Smith hesitated and then replied that he would put up his pistol if Shaffer would and consented to leave the question between them to the arbitration of mutual friends. Shaffer agreed to the arbitration plan, as it seems both men had their reasons for not letting the cause of the bad blood between them be known to the public. Smith then left, and Shaffer thanked his quick witted friend for the services he had rendered him. The message the eastern man had rapped out was as follows:

"If your enemy is a dark complexioned man, with a hooked nose and a scar on the left cheek, he has just entered the saloon and has his hand on his pistol pocket. If you fear treachery from him, move quickly, or he'll have the drop on you. I am unarmed, so that I cannot draw for you. Draw now, as he has his pistol out, and unless you are as quick as lightning he will have you."

Shaffer's keen ear caught the words, and he acted at once on them, as has been shown. His wheeling so suddenly about on Smith took that gentleman so by surprise that he was compelled to back down. - Hastings (Neb.) Cor. Philadelphia Times.

COST HIM A HAND.

A Philadelphia Man's Invention Blew Up, and He Is Maimed For Life.

For a long time Pierson M. Stackhouse, a conveyancer, has been experimenting with a fire extinguishing chemical. It is probable that he will give up his idea of revolutionizing such compounds, if not altogether, for a time at least, because disaster overtook him with one terrific swoop yesterday after-

Stackhouse believed that he solved the problem he had so long studied over, and yesterday afternoon he started out from his house, 2446 North Tenth street, to make a test. He strapped the cylinder to his back and carried the section of rubber hose in his left hand. His family stood at the door, and a friend, who had aided him in his experiments, walked close beside him. The inventor intended to see how far the chemical would be thrown, and he fearlessly reached up with his right hand to turn on the stopcock at the top of the cylinder in order to set the chemical to work.

At that instant there came a terrific explosion, which scared the wits nearly out of residents of the whole neighborhood. Windows rattled ominously, and crockeryware was demolished in some of the closets of nearby houses. Women and children, with blanched faces, rushed from their homes in terror, thinking that an earthquake or worse had come.

Stackhouse was thrown violently to the sidewalk. The top of the cylinder had blown off, and his right hand hung by a few shreds from his wrist. He lay unconscious on the sidewalk as his wife ran shrieking out to him, and a crowd quickly collected to see what the explosion meant. The inventor was taken to the Episcopal hospital, where it was necessary to amputate the shattered hand at the wrist.—Philadelphia Rec-

Piety and Politics.

No one who has visited the south can escape the impression that a deep revolution in opinion is at work there. For several years it has been their habit to hold modest, unheralded meetings, mainly in the rural districts, sometimes weekly, sometimes monthly. They are usually opened with prayer, and it is not unusual after harvest time for the planters to maintain camp meetings a week together. Speaking begins between 9 and 10 in the morning, and the slow declining sun is still a spectator to these intense congregations. There is even a fine illumining vein of religious fervor in it all. The opening prayer, the political song set to church music, the $70 hour harangue at a stretch, the patriotic cheers, like strains from a new anthem-these are not the committee bought demonstrations of common campaigns. It is a rising of the people, and in due time the newspapers will make a discovery, for they will hear these people sing, and after that the ballot .-Donahoe's Magazine.

Hill will say aye." That was what Representative Cockran shouted at the Democratic state convention, as he jumped upon a table directly in front of the presiding officer-David B. Hill himself-and waved his arms for order.

There was a perfect roar from 500 throats.

"Contrary no," shouted Cochran, and there was not a voice. Turning to Senator Hill, he said: "Now, senator, we summon you to your duty."

Again the delegates went wild with excitement, and for five minutes there was great disorder. Hill insisted that order should be preserved and the roll call

State Senator Cantor jumped to his feet and said: "All in favor of Senator Hill's nomination by acclamation will say aye." Insists on a Roll Call.

Another shout and more disorder follows. Hill kept insisting upon order and little, promising to make a statement the roll call of assembly districts was begun. Hitt, on behalf of the Albany county delegation, withdrew Thacher's name and there was pandemonium once more. The leaders then restored quiet and the roll call proceeded. Each county named David B. Hill and Clerk de Freest a nid great confusion said: "David B.

Delegates rushed for the stage and shouted for recess, so as to forbid Hill remsing. The leaders, however opposed adjournment on the very same grounds an finally the convention went on with Rest of the Business Settled.

L eutenant Governor Sheehan then arose and in a brief eulogium nominated Dan. L. Lockwood, of Buffalo, for the office of lieutenant governor. The nomination was made by acclamation, amid great applause. James D. Bell, of Brooklyn, named Judge Gaynor for judge of the court of appeals and the convention named him by acclamation. The usual resolutions were adopted. The move to adjourn was carried, Hill saying: "The convention that is running itself wants to adjourn-I declare it adjourned," and the convention adjourned sine die at 3:39.

Whitney Couldn't Be Persuaded. This was the end of a scene that began almost as soon as the convention met. At t time it was known that William C. Whitney had arrived at New York from Europe and very emphatically refused to consider the question, even, of being a candidate; he had announced before he went to Europe, he said, that he would He was decided in his view that not run. David B. Hill was the right man. Later J. W. Hinckley received the following: "I find on my arrival this morning that my name is the subject of some consideration by the delegates to Saratoga, and have received many friendly messages. As I cannot reply to these in detail, will you do me the kirdness to say for me in answer to any inquiries that for reasons entirely personal I cannot be a candidate or accept the nomination. I concur heartily in the opinion so admirably expressed by Senator Hill in his address that harmonious and aggressive action on the part of the Democrats of the state ought surely to be crowned by success."

The Platform Summarized.

It took but a short time after the convention was called to order to settle the questions of credentials, permanent organization and platform, the temporary organization being continued. The platform is a vigorous declaration of Democratic principles, is quite long, without a squint in the direction of anything Populistic or free silver. It congratulates the people of the state on the repeal of the Sherman purchasing law and the Mc-Kinley law, indorses the Wilson law so far as it makes raw materials cheaper, and urges the further modification of the tariff by the enactment of special schedules; it demands the rigid enforcement of the law against trusts, and compliments the administrations of President Cleve-land and Governor Flower.

WHEN THE BREAK DEVELOPED.

A Regular Stampede to the Senator, Who Promises a Statement.

Then the nomination of candidates for governor began. George R. Hitt nominated John Boyd Thacher, and was followed by Reynolds, of Allegheny county, who proved to have a scheme that effectually shut off all other nominations for the head of the ticket. In a short-very short-speech he named David Bennett Hill. He couldn't have made a long one, unless he had reserved the name to the last. For as soon as it was uttered his voice was drowned in the shout of approval that went up.

The convention literally went wild. Hill tried to stem the storm by declining— when he could get a chance to make himself heard, but it was no use. The shout "Hill" "Hill" went up in waves of sound that made the rafters creak. "I cannot accept the office you offer to me," shouted the chairman. But he might as well have talked to the wind. The band played, but could not be heard. Then it was, after Hill had nearly pounded the gavel to pieces that Bourke Cockran | cabinet now in Washington. Few cared jumped on the table and settled the mat- to comment on them for publication.

It was a scene of disorder but of enthustasm that would probably not be witnessed in a decade. It was the strange situation of a presiding officer of a convention, evidently against his expressed desires, being forced to accept a unanimous WITH THE WILDEST ENTHUSIASM. nomination when another candidate had been presented. While the scene was a remarkable one it was not altogether an unexpected one. Hitt's speech nominating John Boyd Thacher had been received with enthusiasm. Delegates looked at one another and expected that the nomination would be made by acclamation. Even Senator Hill himself, with the gavel in hand, had ordered the roll to be called,

But a slight built man from Allegheny county, who had never been known in the councils of that party, threw a fire brand which created a sensation almost beyond belief. When the county was reached Delegate Reynolds arose and amid intense silence said: "The united delegation from Allegheny county desire to place in nomination for governor their first and only choice, David Bennett Hill."

Then occurred one of the wildest scenes that could be imagined. It lasted for many minutes, and when it subsided from pure exhaustion Hill rose and with husky voice said: "I am grateful to the Democracy of the Empire State for their courtesy and kindness and support in the past, but I must say to you that I cannot be your candidate again for governor." There were cries of "no, no," and "you're the only man," and the disorder beginning again did not cease until after the roll had been called.

Hill was undoubtedly angry at the action of the convention, but said very

HILL TALKS AT ALBANY.

His Words Indicate That He Will Accept the Nomination.

ALBANY, Sept. 27.-Senator Hill and Hon. Daniel N. Lockwood, the candidates for governor and lieutenant governor respectively, were serenaded last night at the Kenmore hotel, when they came from Saratoga, by the Albany Democratic Phalanx. Fully 5,000 persons quickly gathered in front of the hotel, which was brilliantly lighted up with electric lights. A mighty swell of voices went up when Hill was introduced. He said;

"For this gracious reception and the compliment of this serenade I tender you my sincere thanks. This demonstration is a part of unexpected events of a day which to me has been one of mingled surprise and embarrassment. The action of the Democratic convention, which is the occa-sion of this assemblage, and which was as unforeseen by you as by myself, imposes responsibilities and obligations of which I cannot speak tonight.

"Unwilling as I was to receive the honor which the convention, in spite of my protest, has sought to confer upon me, I am deeply touched by the unusual manifestation of confidence and esteem which accompanied the action of the convention, and tonight I can only express in feeble language a small part of the gratitude which I feel toward the Democracy of New York."

CASE OF BOLT IN NEBRASKA. Anti-Free Silver Democrats Refuse To Be

Led by Bryan. OMAHA, Sept. 27.-After two or three recesses the state Democratic convention got to work with the Bryan men in charge, the anti-silver men being a small minority. Bryan was nominated by acclamation for United States senator, and replied in a speech pledging himself to work for free silver and against mo-nopolies. After wrangling until midnight over the question of fusion the matter was postponed pending the report of the committee on platform. The minority report was similar to the majority with the exception of the clause relating to finances, which declared for a gold basis. It was wholly ignored by the victorious silverites, however, and the majority report carried with a rush.

The income tax is indorsed and the A. P. A. denounced. The money plank, after declaring for free silver at 16-to-1, says: "We regard the right to issue money as an attribute of sovereignty, and believe that all money needed to supplement the gold and silver coinage of the constitution and to make the dollar stable in purchasing power so that it will defraud neither debtor or creditor, should be issued by the general government, as the greenbacks were issued; that such money should be redeemable in coin, the government to exercise the option by redeeming in gold or silver, whichever is the more convenient for the government.

"We believe that all money issued by the government, whether gold, silver or paper, should be made a full legal tender for all debts, public or private, and that no citizen should be permitted to demonetize by contract that which the govern-ment makes moncy by law." After the adoption of the platform the leaders of the fusion and anti-fusion factions an nounced an agreement and Judge Holcomb, the Populist candidate for governor, was indorsed at midnight by a large

The following ticket was nominated, 104 anti-fusionists bolting during the process: Governor, Judge Holcomb; lieutenant governor, J. N. Gaffin; secretary of state, F. R. Ellick; treasurer, J. A. Linkhardt; attorney general, D. B. Carey; auditor, J.

C. Dahlman; commissioner of public lands and buildings, S. J. Kent; superintendent of public instruction, W. A. Jones. Holcomb, Gaffin, Carey, Kent, and Jones are Populist nominees. The regular convention then adjourned. The bolters then at once organized into a separate convention and began the work of selecting a straight Democratic ticket.

The following state ticket was nom-inated by the bolters: For governor, P. D. Sturdevant; lieutenant governor, R. E. Dunphy; secretary of state, D. T. Roli; Otto Bauman; treasurer, Luke Dridenthal; attorney general, John H. Ames; commissioner public lands and buildings, Jacob Bigler; superintendent public instruction, Milton Doolittle. The bolters adjourned after adopting a platform similar to the other, excepting that it favors a gold basis.

High Government Authority.

No authority of greater experience on food products exists than Dr. Henry A. Mott, of New York. Dr. Mott's wide experience as Government Chemist for the Indian Department, gave him exceptional opportunities to acquaint himself with the qualities and constituent parts of baking powders. He understands thoroughly the comparative value of every brand in the market, and has from time to time expressed his opinion thereof. On a recent careful re-examination and analysis he finds superior to all others in strength, purity, and efficiency. Dr. Mott writes :-

" New York, March 20th, 1894. I find Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder to be superior to all others, for the following reasons :-

ist. It liberates the greatest amount of leavening gas and is consequently more efficient.

and. The ingredients used in its preparation are of the purest character.

3rd. Its keeping qualities are excellent.

4th. On account of the purity of the materials and their relative proportions, Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder must be considered the acme of perfection as regards wholesomeness and efficiency, and I say this having in mind certificates I have given several years ago respecting two other baking powders.

The reasons for the change in my opinion are based on the above facts and the new method adopted to prevent your baking powder from caking and deteriorating in strength.

OAKLAND, Cala., Sept. 27.-T. J. Roberts, president of the American Railway Union, recently wrote Mrs. Leland Stanford in behalf of the strikers who had been reduced to destitution on account of their inability to secure work. He has received an autograph letter from Mrs. Stanford in reply, regretting that it is not in her power to relieve the distressed strikers. She expresses her "obligation" to the gentlemen who escorted her from the mountains to Oakland.

She says she sympathizes with the strikers, whom she knows were led away by excitement and did not expect to do the company wrong. Mrs. Stanford says she has made application to the railroad she has made application to the railroad officers to replace the men dismissed for conduct during the strike, but regrets and sanctioned by liberal divines, that her entreaties have been ignored. She hopes that in time the men will be restored to their places, and promises to continue her influence in their behalf.

Great State of Missouri. St. Louis, Sept. 27.—The great, all-powerful Tong society, whose members are commonly known as highbinders, has decreed that the law of the state of Missouri shall not be enforced in the case of the attempted murder of Lee Jong by Fung Lou. An agreement written in the language has been drawn up, the contract specifying that Fung Lou shall pay a stipulated sum to Lee Jong for a number of years, and that Lee Jong shall exorcise and permanently remove the devil which has not in Fung Lou. he put in Fung Lou.

The crime which Fung Lou committed is a felony by the code of this state, but the Tong society would rather settle the matter itself, and it seems that the police are perfectly willing for the society to do so. The agreement made between the two Chinamen resulted in revealing some interesting facts concerning the organization of Chinamen in St. Louis.
