WAS HE DRUGGED?

A Mysterious Stranger Dies Here Last Tuesday.

NOT LEAVING A TRACE OF HIS IDENTITY.

A Mysterious Disappearance, Probably Chronicled Somewhere. He was not a Tramp and had Evidently Paid His Debts.

"Residence nowhere," such is the entry on the jail records of this city after the name, Frank Clancy. It describes all that is known of a young man who died at the Washtenaw county house last Tuesday morning. He was not a tramp, not a pauper, but alone and penniless, unable to give any account of himself, with clouded brain and fluttering heart, he had been set down in our midst, suspected of being drunk, when not a trace of liquor could be found, taken to jail and then to the county house, there to die, without medical assistance and without being able to give any clue to his identity or relatives. He was one of the human flotsam and jetsam of life, who quietly sank out of sight, leaving no trace for his friends—in fact another mysterious disappearance.

Last Monday afternoon, the sheriff's office was notified that there was a man at the depot of the Ann Arbor road who had been trying to board a freight train and who was badly intoxicated. Deputy Sheriff Jay Wood got him and brought him to the jail. Mr Wood says he saw at once that the man was not intoxicated, as there was absolutely no smell of liquor about him. He had tried to board a freight train but had been physically unable to do so. He could give no account of himself and seemed incapable of understanding questions. It was clearly not a case for imprisonment in the jail and Superintendent of the Poor Mason was sent for and at once drove him down to the county house. Here he died the next morning. He never rallied. It had not been thought necessary to summon medical assistance and the ailment or injury of which he died was not apparent. Just before he died both matter and substance came away from his mouth.

No particular steps were taken to establish his identity. He was treated as "Only a pauper whom nobody owns." So little ado was made over the affair that the daily papers have not even chronicled the death which occurred as long ago as Tuesday morning.

In all human probability, the unknown's name was Frank Clancy. A number of receipts were found on his person running like this: "Received of Frank Clancy one dollar," "Received of Frank Clancy fifty cents," etc., but these receipts are not dated and no name of any city or village is on them. There was also an empty envelope addressed to some woman in Chicago, but her name or address the Argus was unable to learn but was informed that the addressee had not been communicated with, "as it would be of no use." He had a common jack knife and a gold tipped fountain pen, but no money. He was cleanly dressed in common but substantial working clothes and shoes and had a small handbag which contained a clean, freshly laundered shirt. He was about five feet nine inches high, weighing about 160 pounds, with blue eyes and light complexion and apparently about thirty years of age. He wore small chin whiskers and mustache.

He can be traced from here to Toledo, through the conductor on the Ann Arbor road by which he came to this city. He was picked up on the streets of Toledo by the police and lodged in the station house over night and on Monday was taken to the depot in the patrol wagon, a ticket purchased for him and he was put on board the cars. He was a stranger in Toledo. The police there claimed that he said he wanted to go to Ann Arbor. Whether this is the exact truth is not known. It is known that the officers of different cities have a way of sending helpless or indigent persons from one town to another as the cheapest means of avoiding the expense of caring for them. He was dazed and unable to give any account of himself in Toledo, as he was here. His history or from whence he came is entirely unknown.

The mystery is from whence he came, who he is, how he came in the condition in which he was found and what was the trouble with him. Had he been foully dealt with and was his dazed condition due to drugs? Had he wandered from home in a dazed condition? Are his friends awaiting his return in an agony of suspense? Will they ever be able to get trace of him? No steps have been taken to determine any of these questions. It is simply a mysterious death of an unknown. In some loving circle there may have been simply a mysterious disappearance, never to be cleared up until the last trump sounds. Alas, the pity of it.

The Fair for 1895.

We are glad to say to our readers that the indications point to another successful fair for the Washtenaw County Agricultural and Horticultural Society for September 24, 25, 26 and 27. There are no reasons why the reputation the fair has gained in the past shall not be maintained in the future. Washtenaw county still stands first in everything, according to the report of the secretary of state.

The society pays liberal premiums and pays them promptly. They have the support of the best farmers and business men of the county. The success of any enterprise depends almost entirely on the support of its friends. The liberality and confidence shown by the people of Ann Arbor, not only guarantee the financial part of the fair, but the exhibit also. The leading business men of Ann Arbor are offering liberal special premiums to the value of hundreds of dollars, besides what is offered by the society. Last year school day was considered the day of the fair; this year it looks as though it would be the crowning glory of the big days. The schools of the county, the school board, teachers and pupils are determined to make it a success and of lasting benefit. The society is forming the nucleus for libraries in the country schools, several hundred dollars are to be given in prizes for school exhibits; premiums are so arranged that all of the different schools in the county can compete without conflicting with the large schools. Thursday, September 26, is woman's day, they having the entire charge of the day. The women of Washtenaw are noted for making a success of anything they undertake. They will both instruct and entertain you. Every man in the county will want to be there. There will be fine track entertainment every day, trotting, pacing, running, bicycle races, etc.

Concerning Violations of the Fish Laws.

There seems to have been a little misunderstanding about the law relating to fishing with nets, owing to frequent changes in the law. Deputy Game Warden Charles H. Bell wrote Game Warden Chase S. Osborn, of Sault Ste. Marie, regarding the matter and in his reply under date of July 30 Mr. Osborn says: "It is against the law to use a net of any kind for any purpose in the inland waters of the state of Michigan. Consequently it is a violation to use a dip net for the purpose of catching minnows. You will find the law in section 19 of the new compilation."

The law is now very stringent and really prohibits everything but hook and line fishing in the inland lakes. And as the fish and game warden says in another letter to Mr. Bell, "It is just as much a violation to attempt to spear as it is to actually do the spearing. The law has been tested and, as it applies to lakes, decided constitutional."

The deputy game warden proposes to see that the law is strictly enforced in the county and has received high commendations from his chief for his zeal and efficiency. He should be aided by every fisherman, as in this way only will the sport of fishing in old Washtenaw again attain its old time place, and our lakes again become good fishing grounds.

Death of Harvey Bannister.

Harvey Bannister, for over forty years a respected resident of this city, died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. George H. Winslow, on West Sixth street, Monday night, of typhoid fever, aged nearly seventy-eight years. He was a plasterer and mason by trade and was one of the most expert of his calling. He was foreman of the men who built the Presbyterian church. He kept at his work in spite of advancing years, until a few years ago. He was one of the original abolitionists, then a strong republican and afterwards had a strong leaning towards the prohibitionist party. He leaves a widow, two sons and two daughters. His two sons are in the drug business in East Saginaw, one daughter resides in this city and the other in Lake Odessa. The funeral services will be held at the house at three o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Wednesday Night's Board Meeting.

The regular meeting of the board of public works on Wednesday evening was very quiet, only Messrs. Clark and Schuh being present. The many orders for new work made by the council were turned over to Street Commissioner Bassett, Pres. Clark expressing himself as perfectly satisfied with Mr. Bassett's competency. In reference to fixing up West Huron street torn up by the lateral sewer work, Mr. Bassett did not seem to know how it looked. He had told his foreman to look after it. Certificates of competency as plumbers were granted to William Hochrein and Theodore Backhaus. The application of John C. Carroll, of Ypsilani, was laid on the table for more information. Inspector Ward reported that Carroll did good work.

Honors for the University.

The University of Michigan this year carries off two of the four prize scholarships offered by the American Archeological society. Two of these scholarships are for study at Rome and two for study in Athens. They are much sought after and are granted purely for meritorious work. It is a remarkable fact that two of the four college graduates, out of the many from all over the country competing, who have secured the scholarships this year are graduates of our own university. Another coincidence is that both of the successful scholars had held the Elisha Jones scholarship here. Herber F. DeCon gets a scholarship at Athens and Walter Denison gets a scholarship at Rome.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

A Breezy Sketch of a Well Known Ann Arbor Resident.

HIS WAR CAREER AND EARLY ASSOCIATES.

An Argus Correspondent Takes a Country Ride.—The Ann Arbor Council in Doubt as to Electric Lighting. Fast Bicycle Riding.

An Ann Arbor Boy's Fast Time.

Harvey Stofflet won the ninth prize in the Hilsendegen road race in Detroit Saturday. This great bicycle race had 161 contestants. Stofflet came in eight seconds after the first man who had a minute and a half's start of Stofflet. He made the twenty-five miles in one hour, six minutes and three seconds. The time prize was won by T. R. Eddy in just forty-eight seconds less time than Stofflet made his twenty-five miles. Stofflet's fast racing may be judged by the fact that the world's record up to Saturday was five seconds faster than Stofflet's time. And five seconds on twenty-five miles is a very brief fraction of time. The prize that Stofflet carried off was a $50 silver water set.

A Ride Through the Country.

Monday last we hitched up for a ride through the country. We passed the farm of Colonel Fenn, of Bridgewater. The berry crop has been very fine, the vines are thrifty and the ground well cultivated. The fruit trees are well loaded with fruit. The corn fields we passed are looking fine. The locality about Manchester was favored with a nice rain a few weeks ago which greatly improved the corn and potato crop. We dined at Manchester. The business men seemed rejoiced over the improved condition of the farms. Our journey through Sharon and Freedom was a fine trip. Fred Williams had as fine a field of corn as any we saw. The farm of C. M. Fellows is looking well. Mr. Wacker, the present renter, is a good farmer; he cut 37 large loads of hay from the last year's seeding, and the meadows show a good growth of clover now. His 33 acres of corn shows the effect of good tillage and good soil.

About one thousand bushels of wheat and rye are threshed; oats not yet drawn. Albert Dresselhouse and his brother Lambert have exceedingly fine young orchards. If the prices of fruit should be maintained for a few years the boys will have a competency for old age. David G. Rose and John J. Robinson, old time residents of Sharon, are both on the sick list. It is doubtful if Mr. Rose will ever get well. We did not talk politics much, but heard the expressions that we could use much more silver if we had it, and if all the silver mined in this country was coined at our mints it would give more employment to labor and more money to the producer. More anon.

The Council Meeting.

The regular meeting of the council on Monday evening might be termed "resolution night," as resolutions were offered up to the last moment, which was eleven o'clock. Business of great importance to the tax payers was transacted and it behooves the dear people to examine the proceedings of the council very closely and to hold the aldermen responsible for the good and evil done by their votes.

A petition by Contractor Herman Hutzler was read, in which he asked for a balance on his sewer contract of $3,257.91. He claimed that the board of public works decided that the weather on East Washington street had differed from East Liberty street. Pres. Clark had stopped his work on account of the inclemency of the weather, but allowed the contractor on East Liberty street to proceed. The bill is interesting reading.

Bills to the amount of $10,922.79 were allowed. The friends of the steam road roller and stone crusher were fearful that some tax payers might really get up enough back bone to carry out their threat of an injunction to restrain the mayor from signing the warrants. As the accounts were over drawn, on motion of Ald. Brown, money was transferred to make the over drawn accounts good. The electric lighting committee reported four bids, on all night lighting, 265 days, 365 days, 265 days to midnight and 365 days. They were as follows: Michigan Electric Co., $80, $90, $95, $64.75 and $74.50; Ann Arbor Gas Co., $84, $96, $96.10 and $76; Ann Arbor Thomson Electric Co., $86.50, $89, $70, $80. The committee recommended that the bid of the Michigan Electric Co. be accepted and it be given the contract. When Ald. Allmendinger finished reading there was a silence in the council chamber as if funeral services were about being opened. Few ventured to discuss the question. Ald. Brown said it was such a momentous one that he was not prepared to vote that evening. On his motion the report was laid on the table for two weeks. The committee was directed to employ an electrical expert and investigate the responsibility of the Michigan Electrical Co. and report on all matters pertaining thereto at the next meeting of the council.

Ald. Maynard introduced a resolution to purchase a bicycle for the use of the marshal and police. Ald. Butterfield said that like the lighting question it was so momentous that he was not prepared to vote upon it at that meeting. It was laid on the table for two weeks.

Ald. Prettyman, of the ordinance committee, read for the first and second time ordinances allowing the electric street railway to extend its line from North Main and Kingsley streets along Kingsley street to State street, then to Michigan Central depot, and a new fire limit ordinance. This latter is very complete and comprises all of the former ordinances in force with the addition of some very important features, such as abolishing all fires on streets, etc., doing away with the burning leaves nuisance.

Jefferson Davis' Career.

Saturday was the birthday of Jefferson Davis, of this city. The following interesting account of his career appeared in the Detroit Evening News:

Jefferson Davis, a hale and hearty old colored man of this city, will be seventy-five years old tomorrow. He will have special cause for rejoicing on that anniversary, because by that time he will have received nearly a thousand dollars of back pay due him from Uncle Sam for services rendered during the war, and will also begin to enjoy a pension of $12 a month, the first installment of which was due July 1.

Jefferson Davis is a character and a man of many and varied experiences. He first saw the light of day down in "Old Kentucky," on the plantation of Judge Henry Davis, brother of the late president of the confederacy. Here he rolled and tumbled through boyhood up to young manhood under as indulgent a master as a slave could ever expect to have. He was a favorite body servant after he was big enough and remained always in the same family until after the death of Judge Davis. Then he was sold to a man named Birch in the settling up of the estate, but was bought back by an heir for 75 acres of land.

The younger Davis ran into hard luck and found it necessary to mortgage Jefferson and two others of his slaves, and in due course of time the mortgagee foreclosed. The Davis heirs learned that Jefferson was destined for Mississippi, and, to save him from what they all regarded as a terrible fate, assisted him to run away, taking him across the Ohio. Jefferson didn't stop running until he reached Michigan, first locating in Marshall. He soon removed to Ann Arbor, which has been his home ever since.

While the slave of Judge Davis, Jeff was hired out to Henry Clay and to Tom Marshall, the latter gentleman being a great lawyer of that state, residing in Lexington, and a warm personal friend of Henry Clay. Jefferson's relations with these men enabled him to tell many a tale of fun, fighting and hard drinking, which have never found their way into biographies. He describes how the three slept together one night while on a hunting excursion, all in the same shakedown bed; and he also relates how he has carefully put the eminent statesman and his only less eminent friend to bed when both of those gentlemen were too overcome with the favorite beverage of their state to be able to get through a double door without hitting both sides. Davis drove Henry Clay across from Lexington 40 miles to the railroad station upon the last trip that great man ever made to Washington, and it is a fond memory of his that Clay shook his hand in a very cordial way at parting.

Davis also knew Kentucky's other Clay, Cassius M. Clay liberated all his own slaves, but his wife owned one with whom she refused to part, so they always had one in the family. Clay started the Lexington Free Press. One night a crowd of enemies broke into the building, loaded all his printing materials into wagons and started it for the Ohio river. It was five days' drive to Louisville and Jeff drove one of the wagons. They were overtaken at Louisville before any part of the loads had been destroyed, by a messenger from the governor of the state, ordering the return of the stuff. So next day they started back again, and Jeff assisted in the labor of returning the plant to its original position.

Jeff was present at that savage encounter between C. M. Clay and Sam Brown at a public gathering near Lexington. Clay was making a stirring speech, he says, when Brown arose and shouted, "If you dare to repeat that statement I'll shoot you." Clay repeated and Brown shot, but Clay, it is related by Jeff, was wearing a "chest protector," and received no injury. He fell as though wounded, however, and when Brown worked his way up to him through the now struggling mob, swearing, shooting and slashing, Clay suddenly arose and struck Brown with a bowie knife so ferociously in the face that he gouged out his eye and splintered the cheek bone, from which wound Brown soon after died. Jeff was watching the combat from the top of the carriage seat where he was sitting as driver. It was a wild day. Horses, many hitched to carriages, ran wildly through the woods, women screamed and fainted, and men fought like tigers. Clay, thanks to his defensive armor and personal courage, escaped unharmed.

Another narrow escape occurred here Tuesday. A man with his son, a lad of about fourteen, from Plymouth, stopped at the Harmon house for dinner. While there the boy slipped away and down to the depot where the work train was in operation. The train of flats was nearly loaded with dirt, the boy stood a little past the rear car when the engineer was told to back down to the bridge to unload. As the train started the boy jumped and caught the hand rail of the last car, but missed the step, and as the train was then under good speed he dared not jump, and could not get on; thus he hung. Before the trestle was reached one hand became numb and loosed, with the other he clung tight until about the center of the bridge, when just as he was about to drop one of the trainmen saw and caught him, saving his life as the fall would certainly have been fatal.—Saline Observer.

Last Saturday the Napoleons came over and played a game of base ball with the Grass Lakes. The game wasn't won by either club. Owing to the bumpkin who acted as umpire the score at the close stood 12 for the Grass Lakes, 9 for the Napoleons and 6 for the umpire. He prevaricates about the game won by our boys at the time they ploughed up the ground with the Brooklyn club, then offers to bet a hundred dollars his club can beat the Grass Lakes. Our advice to him is, if he can get any part of a hundred dollars to pay up his washer woman and get his linen cleansed again, he would look better for it and the odor in his vicinity would be less objectionable.—Grass Lake News.

A Lodi horse waded into Base lake, evidently intending suicide. Out in deep water, its nose went under and it struggled and made for the shore. The Argus says: "The moment it touched solid ground it gave out an unearthly neigh and with head and tail up started out at its topmost speed to put all possible distance between itself and the water." How very like some of the men over the Lenawee border. He said "neigh" to water, between which and himself he put all possible distance.

Is at hand and is gladly welcomed by all, especially those whose duties in life have caused them to greatly run down their system to meet the requirements, physical and mental, forced upon them. With these and others, it is important, whether at home, at the sea-shore, or in the country, that some thought be given to diet, and as further assistance to Nature, a good building-up medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla had best be resorted to. If the digestion is poor, liver deranged, and frequent headaches seem to be the rule, Hood's will change all this and enable everyone to return to their home and business in a refreshed state of mind and bodily health.

Power of the Human Jaws.

Dr. G. V. Black, a dentist of Jacksonville, Fla., has made some interesting experiments upon the force exerted by the human jaws in the ordinary mastication of food, and also the greatest force which the jaws are capable of exerting. By means of a spring instrument provided with a registering device he took records of about 150 "bites" of different persons. Of these 50 have been preserved as characteristic of the ordinary man, woman and child. The smallest pressure recorded was 30 pounds, by a little girl 7 years old. This was with the incisors. Using her molars, the same child exerted a force of 65 pounds. The highest record was made by a physician of 35. The instrument used only registered 270 pounds, and he closed it together without apparent effort. There was no method of determining how far above 270 pounds he could have gone. This test was made with the molars. Several persons exceeded a force of 100 pounds with the incisors and 200 with the molars. The physical condition of the persons experimented upon seemed to have little bearing upon the result. Dr. Black is of the opinion that the condition of the peridental membranes is the controlling factor, rather than muscular strength. Dr. Black found that in the habitual chewing of food much more force is exerted than is necessary.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except in prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and is made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists, price 75c per bottle.

Dean Hole and the Oxford Snob.

Dean Hole, the distinguished English churchman, dearly loves a good joke. One day a somewhat snobbish Oxford friend of his, wishing to impress upon the dean the high social character of his familiar acquaintances, wrote him a letter, beginning: "My dear countess," and then scratching out "countess" substituted "Hole." Whereupon the dean, not to be outdone, began his reply, "My dear queen," and then drew his pen through "queen" and substituted "Dick." Yes, 'Tis So. that Foley's Colic and Diarrhoea Cure gives quick and positive relief in all bowel complaints. 25c and 50c. A. E. Mummary, Druggist.

Labored With the Cigar Store Dummy.

There are people who, when they get an idea in their heads, keep it there forever. An old Portland lady has been talking against the tobacco habit for years and never loses an opportunity to impress upon unfortunates the folly of the habit. She is a bit nearsighted, and she nearly convulsed lookers on yesterday when she stopped in front of the odd little figure at the door of Fish's cigar store and began to argue with it about the harmfulness of smoking. The explosion came when, in her zeal, she reached out and tried to take the mock cigar away from him that she might throw it into the street. Perhaps she is right, but she certainly is overzealous.—Portland Express.

MINERS MEET AT SPRING VALLEY.

And Resolve That the Declaration of Independence Is About Correct—Everybody Satisfied with the Result Except the "Man Up a Tree," Who Says That the Late Rioters Were Conspicuous for Their Absence from the Gathering.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—The police yesterday afternoon received information which leads them to believe that the colored men of this city have perfected an organization and are arming with the intention of attacking the Italian miners at Spring Valley. The information came from a number of pawnbrokers, who stated that they had been approached during the day by colored men who were anxious to purchase numbers of Winchester rifles.

SPRING VALLEY, Aug. 8.—State troops, for the present at least, will not be ordered to this turbulent town, notorious for riots and bloodshed. Peace has been declared. All this was brought about through the efforts of Colonel Hugh E. Bayle, sent here under instructions by Governor John P. Altgeld to diagnose the trouble and restore peace, if possible. He was successful, and the miners of Spring Valley have adopted resolutions declaring that all men a free and equal and that the negroes could return. Colonel Bayle was met at the hotel by Sheriff Clark, Judge Trimble and other officials and prominent citizens. A short conference was held in which Colonel Bayle outlined the policy of Governor Altgeld regarding the present trouble. "Governor Altgeld sent me here," said Colonel Bayle, "to investigate the trouble and ascertain where the blame lies. He also instructed me to bring about a settlement, if possible, without the aid of state troops. Governor Altgeld told me that all American citizens, regardless of color or race, were to be protected. If upon investigation I find that the local authorities are unable to maintain law and order then state troops will be sent here. Law and order is to be enforced at any cost."

General Statement of the Facts.

To all this the officers and citizens agreed, and a meeting was arranged between Colonel Bayle, Sheriff Clark, Superintendent Dalzell (representing the coal mining company), and the leaders of the strikers, to take place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Colonel Bayle was informed by Sheriff Clark, Superintendent Dalzell, and other citizens, miners, and public officers, that no one had as yet been killed. All admitted, however, that 100 citizens, all colored, had been driven from their homes by a mob composed of Italian, Polish, Bavarian, and Hungarian miners. Many shots were fired, and some of the colored miners were wounded and brutally beaten in the melee. These negroes—men, women, and children—had been assailed and ruthlessly driven from their homes and forced to go to Seatonville. As to this outrage all were agreed, but that any one had been killed or fatally wounded the coal company officials, miners, and officers of the law denied.

THE PROPOSED RESOLUTION.

This Is the Land of the Free and the Chicago Press Is a Liar.

Colonel Bayle was then informed that the miners were to hold a mass meeting on the public square at 3 o'clock at which the following resolutions were to be presented for adoption:

- "Whereas, A race conflict has taken place in this city within the last few days, resulting in no loss of life but in serious hardship and inconvenience to a considerable section of this community; "Resolved, That we, the miners of Spring Valley in mass meeting assembled, declare to be our belief that all men, regardless of race, color or creed, are born with the same equal rights and should enjoy the same opportunities in the pursuit of life and happiness. "Resolved, That we denounce any attempt at the suppression of these rights as unjust and barbarous, and pledge ourselves to maintain law and order so far as lies in our power. "Resolved, That we are ready now to resume work, providing the Spring Valley Coal company is ready to start their mines. "Resolved, That we denounce the lying reports, misrepresenting this city, sent to the Chicago papers by one Bailey, of Princeton. These dispatches in the main are 'infamous, distorted and exaggerated beyond human reasoning. In denouncing these atrocious misrepresentations we hold as accountable the publishers of the Chicago press, who could easily have informed themselves as to the actual truth of the situation. "Population is Rather Heterogeneous. At the appointed hour about 600 miners assembled in the public square at the mass meeting. James Haney presided, and W. H. Jones acted as secretary. It was a curious gathering. Every nation in eastern and southern Europe was represented. Every motion that was made and every speech had to be repeated at least six times, and each time in a different language. All appeared to be determined upon one thing, and that was that no man with African blood in his veins should become a resident workman of this community. Spring Valley is a queer town. It is like a hornet's nest. Casual observers would say in passing through it that it is one of the most peaceful hamlets in America. But let the casual observer stir it up and enraged men and women will pour forth like hornets disturbed to wreak vengeance on whoever may dare to oppose them. When aroused they have about as much regard for law and order as a disturbed nest of hornets. Meeting Seems to Have Been a Failure. It was explained to the meeting that the representative of Altgeld had come to town to determine if the militia should be called. When the resolutions had been read in the various languages Chairman Haney asked if any one desired to speak. In response to this came numerous inquiries as to whether the negroes would come back if the resolutions were adopted. To these inquiries Chairman Haney, through various interpreters, replied that the law must take its course and peace be preserved. This did not seem to meet with general approval, and many left the meeting and retired to the saloons and grogeries to discuss what should be done. At length the chairman put the question as to the adoption or rejection of the resolutions. The vote was about a tie, but the chairman declared it carried. The meeting then adjourned.

LIKELY TO BE MORE TURBULENCE.

Another Meeting That Only Emphasized the Failure of the First.

After the meeting adjourned those who had been instrumental in calling it met at the Spring Valley hotel with Colonel Bayle, the county officials, and representatives of the coal company. Those present were Mayor Martin Delmargo, S. M. Dalzell (representing the coal company), Sheriff Clark, City Clerk G. L. Hoffman, E. K. Mercer (editor of the Bureau County Tribune), States Attorney W. A. Johnson, C. P. Lovojay, A. J. Sweeney, Alderman Patrick Gavin, General Thomas J. Henderson, W. H. Mesenkopf, J. J. Hicks, James O'Connor (state president of the Mine Workers' union), Alderman James Scanlon, and John Mitchell (president of the school board). The meeting developed into a cross-questioning of Dalzell as to what he intended to do regarding the resolutions. Most of the questions were proposed by O'Connor, representing the miners. Dalzell said he would willingly take back all the miners who had quit work save those who had committed crimes.

"When work is resumed," said Dalzell "the company will recognize neither race nor color." "The miners will agree to that," responded O'Connor. Then Dalzell explained that colored men who had been driven from the mine were anxious to come back. They had sent word to that effect. "I replied," he continued, "that if they wanted to come back they could do so. Under this resolution was not that right?"

"It was," said O'Connor, "only you must not hold us all responsible if some of them should be stabbed in the back." Dalzell then said that he was in favor of having the persons who had led the mob in the outrages punished. O'Connor requested Dalzell to wait two or three days after the mines started before he asked the colored miners to return. He replied that he would ask no one to come to work, but that if colored miners asked for work he would take them at once.

He then turned to Mayor Delmargo and said: "The miners have presented me with resolutions declaring all the miners to be free and equal regardless of color. They are as follows." He then read the resolutions adopted at the mass meeting and continued: "I take this to mean that the miners have withdrawn the resolution to the effect that only white miners should be employed in the mines. I am inclined to accept it. The colored people who were driven out of Spring Valley have told me they are ready to come back. Are you ready to protect them?"

The mayor replied indirectly that he would do the best he could. This was satisfactory to Dalzell and he concluded by informing all present that he was satisfied with the resolutions and conference, and that he would advise colored people who had been driven out that they could come back.

The representatives of the miners said they were satisfied, and Colonel Bayle said he was pleased to see an amicable settlement. The meeting then adjourned. Notwithstanding that the miners adopted resolutions to the contrary, it is generally believed that if the negroes return to work there will be trouble. About the only Italian represented was Mayor Delmargo. None of the other natives of eastern or southern Europe were represented. They are the people who have created all the disturbance. They still adhere to the conviction that the negroes should not be tolerated in this region, and declare they won't permit it. Should the negroes return those well acquainted with the make-up of Spring Valley say there will be trouble.

Brutal Outrage Committed on a Kansas By Unknown Brutes.

SALINA, Kan., Aug. 8.—B. F. Coswell, a farmer living seven miles northwest of here, was decoyed from his home about midnight by a stranger who said he had a sick horse and wanted assistance. When half a mile from home the pair were met by two pals of the stranger, who covered Coswell with rifles. He tried to escape, when one of the men fired, the bullet striking him in the head, and the other man struck him twice over the head with his rifle, partially stunning him. The three then bound Coswell's hands, gagged him and forced him to walk a mile and a half, though he was nearly fainting from loss of blood. After terrorizing the farmer for some time they finally let him go, first threatening him with death if he told of the occurrence. Coswell's condition is critical. There is no clew to his assailants and no cause for the assault is known.

Urfa, the Ancient Edessa.

Built half way up the Jebli Nimrud, on a hill above a rushing torrent, it never lacks water or the sound of the perpetual fountain that gained for it in the old days the name Callirrhoe. Water in basins, in drinking places, in small mills; water in the torrents, in the springs and down the sides of streets; everywhere is heard the same bubbling sound so dear to oriental ears. And with it are trees innumerable, great forest trees in the gardens, with walnuts and pomegranates, and fruit of all sorts; gardens everywhere, within and without the town, and a thing seldom to be seen in an eastern town, the large courtyard of the Serai grass grown, with seats and spreading trees on either side.

The bazaars, too, and the streets seem all to share in the charm that water lends. Nowhere else are there such vaulted corridors, tall and airy, for the market, such splendid caravansaries, built by some magnificent old Turk, of an order since passed away, and where, above all, can be matched the exquisite mosque of Ibrahim-el-Khalil—Abraham, the friend of God—with its stately minaret and marble courtyards reflected in the silent shady pool—"Six Months in a Syrian Monastery," O. H. Parry.

Fidelity and Affection of a Horse.

In the "Memoirs of General Count de Segur," an aid-de-camp of Napoleon, recently published, the following affecting incident is related:

I have said that during the nocturnal attack of the Ukra, on Dec. 23, I was unhorsed. My animal had been wounded by a bullet in his chest, from which the blood was streaming, and as he could no longer carry me I had been forced to leave him, loading his equipment on my shoulders. When I had reached our first outpost, about 300 paces off, I sat down to rest before the fire, in some grief at the loss of my mount, when a plaintive sound and an unexpected contact caused me to turn my head. It was the poor beast, which had revived and had dragged itself in the wake of my footsteps. In spite of the distance and the darkness, it had succeeded in finding me, and recognizing me by the light of the campfire had come up groaning to lay its head on my shoulder. My eyes filled with tears at this last proof of attachment, and I was gently stroking it, when, exhausted from the blood it had lost, and its efforts to follow me, in the midst of the men, who were as surprised and touched as myself, it fell down, struggled for a moment and expired.

Bogus Leather in Shoes.

"For years," said a Maine manufacturer, "shoes of a cheap grade have been made of what is known as leather board. It is a compressed paste. There is a factory in my state which turns out tons of it every month. Many of these shoes are sent to Central and South America, and as a matter of fact, thousands are sold here.

"As long as the weather is dry they wear first rate, but when you strike a rain you're gone almost surely. Two wettings, and you want to look out. When you invest in shoes, be sure they are what you want. Leather is expensive, and you can't cover your feet with it for a trifle."—New York World.

A Wire Walking Rat.

At the corner of Market and Broad streets, Newark, N. J., there is a thick network of telegraph wires and telephone cables. Late one afternoon the loiterers about the corner witnessed a curious incident. From the roof of the Firemen's insurance building a cable wire extends across Market street to the Postal Telegraph office. A rat was seen on the wire over the insurance building. He moved slowly along the wire, and by the time he had reached the middle of the street he had a crowd below him that would have delighted the heart of Blondin. He paid no attention to the upturned faces, but continued slowly but surely on his way until he reached the Postal Telegraph building. He lightly leaped from the roof and disappeared.—Philadelphia Record.

DO WORKINGMEN WANT CHEAP MONEY?

There has been much written on the silver question from various standpoints. But from the standpoint of the workingmen there would seem to be only one side to the question.

This question is asked in all seriousness, do you want cheap money? Before you answer, ask what is cheap money.

A party has been formed for the purpose of securing the free coinage of silver. This party proposes to so change the laws that any one possessing silver can take it to the mint, and have it coined at the expense of the United States into "dollars" of 412 1/2 grains of standard silver each.

If these steps are taken they will make cheap money. You will be able to get a dollar of it for less than fifty cents gold value. Whom will that benefit? Will it improve your condition? Let us examine.

The present market value of 412 1/2 grains standard silver is less than fifty cents (forty-six cents actual quotation). To give to these half-price dollars the debt-paying power of gold dollars would certainly be to the profit of any one who should at the time be in the possession of silver; or who had gold to buy silver.

This possibility seems to have great attractions for many persons. The theory seems to be that it is quite right to rob a "creditor," if it can be done according to law. He is regarded as a hard man, who fattens on the poor; to despoil him is almost a duty.

It is true there are unfeeling creditors who insist on their full rights, regardless of the suffering of their debtors. But this class of creditors know well how to protect themselves. They might sustain some loss at first, but they would soon recover by increased profits on all new bargains.

If it were otherwise it is manifestly unfair to attempt to punish all creditors for the faults of a few. The great bulk of creditors have loaned money to borrower, in aid of some business out of which the borrowers have made money.

But there is another class of creditors which is differently situated. Looked at in another light it will be seen that the whole body of workers is a creditor class. Ask any workingman, does your employer owe you for unpaid wages? The almost invariable answer must be, "yes. It is very rare for a man working at any continuous work to be paid up in full. While the time is being handed in, and the accounts made up to a given settling date, a new period has begun for which the employer is a debtor, and the laborer a creditor.

The general method of employment fixes a scale of wages which continues for considerable periods of time without change. Payment is made not oftener than weekly, and sometimes the laborer gives credit to his employer for a month's time or longer. Salaries are often paid quarterly. Leaving out these longer times of credit it is certain that every Saturday night there is due to the laborers of the United States a week's wages. There are in round numbers 13,000,000 workers. A dollar and a half a day would seem a low estimate of average earnings. In all trades the rate is much higher. Large bodies of men earn $3 to $5 per day. But take this low average of $1.50 per day or $9 per week, and we have the 13,000,000 workers formed into a class of creditors to whom is due $117,000,000 every Saturday night. Observe that as soon as one week's debt to these 13,000,000 creditors is paid, another debt of the same amount is accumulated. So if we take in round numbers the total weekly wages at only $100,000,000, we shall have the enormous sum of five thousand two hundred million dollars as the sum which this creditor class of laborers has been creditor for, during a single year. This sum is more than three times the present national debt. Its importance, and the importance of the creditor class to which it must be paid, cannot be overestimated. Observe that as the debt is paid it continually grows in advance of payment so that the laborer is a creditor all the time. The employer is continually in debt to him for wages.

Now, the proposition of this cheap money party is to allow debtors to pay their creditors in money worth less than half the gold value. This creditor class of workingmen to whom this $100,000,000 a week is falling due in gold will be paid off in silver worth less than fifty cents in the dollar.

Can you see any possibility of gain to you as a workman in this operation? You are a creditor. Do you want the debt to you for wages paid in cheap money? You will be told that the silver dollar will buy as much as the gold dollar. Can you believe this? Is it common sense? Will the holders of gold, which today will buy two dollars of silver for one gold, be willing to exchange it tomorrow (after the legal tender act is passed) on equal terms? The holders of gold are not idiots.

This is no new experiment. The greenbacks were made legal tender. Did that keep them on a par with gold? We all know it did not. Many of you can remember how fast the price of provisions rose and how slow wages advanced. Can you see any use in trying that experiment over again with a fifty cent dollar? But to return to this "creditor class," which this "Cheap Money Party" hopes to injure by paying off debts in silver. It is clear that the largest "creditor class" is composed of the thirteen millions of workers. As we have seen, the sum continually falling due for wages to this creditor class is enormous; and besides wages, the deposits in savings banks, and the investments of our great life insurance companies, come largely from the savings of workers.

Will this great creditor class, which also furnishes such a large proportion of votes, consents to aid in defrauding itself? If there is any property which should be guarded from depreciation it is these hard earned accumulations, saved to provide against the necessities of sickness or old age. But it is these very investments, owing to workingmen which this new party proposes to change so they may be paid off in "cheap money," at fifty cents, or less, on the dollar.

The question, then, comes home to each workingman. You belong to the great creditor class, you are yourself a creditor; do you want the debts due you for wages, for savings in banks, and for life insurance paid off in cheap money?

The democratic state convention of Iowa placed the democracy of that state squarely on record in favor of sound money last Wednesday. And that too after just as square a defeat for the free silverites. The party in Iowa stands upon the democratic national platform of 1892 and hence is in harmony with the democratic administration elected on that platform. The democrats of Iowa stand therefore with an undoubted majority of the American people in favor of real bimetallism as opposed to silver monometallism, or, what is the same thing, the free coinage of silver on the 16 to 1 ratio. They have faith in the national democracy and are unwilling to anticipate the action of the national convention. It is sufficient at this time to know that their voice is for a safe, sound and stable currency, a money as good to buy with as to pay debts with.

FREE SILVER ADVOCATES BEATEN.

Money Plank of the National Convention of 1892 Reaffirmed—Mule Law Condemned and High License, Local Option and Manufacture of Liquors in the State Favored—Babb Nominated for Governor, with Bestow for His Running Mate.

MARSHALLTOWN, I., Aug. 8.—One of the most notable state conventions in the history of the Iowa Democracy closed in this city last evening. Since Monday there had been a bitter strife between two opposing elements of the party—one contending for a ticket and platform on a "sound money" basis, the other clamoring for free coinage without waiting for an international agreement. From start to finish the white metal contingent did nearly all the talking—on the street, in the hotel lobbies, at the various headquarters, in the committee rooms and caucuses, and finally on the floor of the convention. By an apparently fortuitous incident the silver men had a fine chance to exploit their views in the convention hall during the afternoon, from the fact that the resolutions committee got into a wrangle on the financial plank that kept them in the committee room till nearly 4 o'clock, the currency resolution being overhauled and reconstructed a time or two before an agreement was reached, and the majority making a persistent effort to avert the introduction of a minority report.

Listened to Free Silver Speeches. During the interval the convention did nothing but listen to free silver speeches by Senator Bolter, John Shea, Judge Carr, Fred White, Sam Evans and Colonel Mackay, all radical white metal champions. The "sound money" men preserved silence, except that Cato Sells made a short talk of a conciliatory character. The controversy grew warm and bitter when a minority report favoring free coinage was introduced and another prolonged silver discussion was precipitated and for awhile the proceedings were tumultuous. The final roll call on the resolutions showed the white metal men defeated by a vote of 65 1/2 to 42 1/2. A mighty shout, mingled with groans, hisses and anathemas, followed the announcement of the result. A large number of free silver delegates immediately left the hall, not waiting for the nominations.

Incidents of the Organization. There were 1,079 delegates present, every county in the state being fully represented. The opening prayer was by Rev. Father Linehan, a Roman Catholic priest of this city, and an address of welcome was made by Mayor Piree, who is a Republican, but who obtained applause by saying that the Democratic party was greater than any one sentiment in the party. Judge French, of Davenport, was temporary chairman and made a long speech, in which he gave most prominence to the prohibition question and held that prohibition must go. On the financial question he favored bimetallism, but only at a ratio to be determined by an international agreement. After temporary organization a recess was taken and on reassembling ex-Senator Shields, of Dubuque, was made permanent chairman.

Ticket That Was Nominated. The nomination of a state ticket was the first matter to come up when the organization was completed, and it resulted as follows: For governor, Judge W. I. Babb, of Mt. Pleasant; lieutenant governor, ex-Lieut.-Gov. Bestow, of Chariton; superintendent of public instruction, Lyman B. Parrish, of Maquoketa; railroad commissioner, Colonel George James, of Dubuque; supreme judge, Senator Thomas G. Harper, of Des Moines. Judge Babb made a brief speech of acceptance, in which he said that the differences existing in the party were in regard to details rather than to great principles. All present were honestly bimetallists at heart.

It is understood that Bestow will not accept the lieutenant governorship nomination. He is a strong free coinage man, and says he cannot consistently run on so strong a "sound money" platform.

DECLARATIONS IN THE PLATFORM.

National Convention Plank on Money Reaffirmed—Other Points. The platform has this to say on the silver question: We reaffirm the following portion of the seventh plank of the national Democratic convention: 'We hold to the use of both gold and silver as the standard money of the country, and to the coinage of both gold and silver, without discrimination against either metal or charge for mintage; but the dollar unit of coinage of both metals must be of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value, or be adjusted by international agreement, or by such safeguards of legislation as shall insure the maintenance of the parity of the two metals, and the equal power of every dollar at all times in the market and payment of debts; and we demand that the paper currency shall be kept at par with and redeemable in such coin.'

The minority report was an out-and-out free-coinage-at-16-to-1 plank, "without any frills." On other points the platform endorses the tariff legislation of the last congress; favors the popular election of United States senators; favors just and liberal pensions to veterans of the civil war; opposes trusts and monopolies; demands non-partisan control of state institutions, and denounces the mule tax, declaring it unfair, hard on property owners, and that it compromises the honor of the state in declaring the sale of liquors a crime and condoning the crime for a money consideration; demands a local option high license law and a law permitting the manufacture of liquors in the state.

The new state central committee was chosen as follows: First district, George S. Smith, Vanderburg; second, C. S. Ranck, Johnson; third, Robert O'Day, Bremer; fourth, John Foley, New Hampton; fifth, M. R. Jackson, Cedar; sixth, C. A. Walsh, Wapello; seventh, Henry Reigelman, Polk; eighth, Ed. Curry, Leon; ninth, John E. McGuire, Audubon; tenth, J. McCarthy, Greene; eleventh, T. D. Higgs, Buena Vista.

WROTE MANY POPULAR SONGS.

George F. Root, Whose Ballads Were Sung by Everybody, Passes Away.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—George F. Root, whose death on Bailey's Island, off Portland, Me., is announced, has a name that is a household word in the United States. Perhaps no man in this country has written so many songs that became—and for that matter are now—popular as George F. Root. He was 75 years old and his residence had been in this city since 1860, and it was here that his war songs were written. His first song was "Hazel Dell" and all men of middle age know how popular that was. Then there was "Rosalie, the Prairie Flower," "The Old Folks at Home," and many other sentimental songs. Of war songs the best known and most sung—certainly so during and just after the war—was "The Battle Cry of Freedom." Other war songs were "Just Before the Battle, Mother," and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching." By his compositions and his long life as a teacher he did perhaps more than any other man in America toward elevating the standard of popular music in this country.

George Frederick Root was a native of Berkshire county, Mass., where he was born Aug. 30, 1820. From childhood his love of music was intense. While working as a boy on his father's farm he learned unaided to play several musical instruments, and in his 18th year he went to Boston and soon found employment there as a teacher of music. From that day he had never ceased to exercise a marked influence on the musical history of the United States.

NEWSPAPER PRIZE SCHEMES.

Chicago Times-Herald Obtains a Ruling From the Postoffice.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The assistant attorney general for the postoffice department has rendered a decision in regard to the puzzle devices employed by some newspapers to increase circulation. The Chicago Times-Herald has been awarding bicycles to boys and girls who should cut out and paste together and name correctly disarranged fragments of portraits of people notable in politics, art, the drama, or war. To this Chicago's postmaster objected on the ground that the scheme was a lottery.

Mr. Kohlsaat, owner of The Times-Herald, called at the department and asked for a ruling. Judge Thomas decided that if the awards went by merit and not by chance the idea was not a lottery, but on a par with the award of prizes in a school or college.

STRIKERS QUIET AT ISHPERING.

Many of Them Going West to Work in Mines in Montana.

ISHPEMING, Mich., Aug. 8.—The strike situation has simmered down to a dead calm. There was the customary parade from Negaunee and Ishpeming to Union park. There is a constant lessening of the number of strikers, many of whom are going to the west. The mines at Butte, Mont., Ironwood and the copper regions are drawing the men, and the effect may be seen in the lessening numbers in the parade.

The exodus of miners is no indication of the weakening of the union. The men seem firm enough, as shown by the fact that one mining company offered the $1.50 and $2.00 a day scale demanded by the men, but the latter would not go to work.

Parade of Union Veterans.

LIMA, O., Aug. 8.—The annual parade of the Union Veterans' union, which is holding its annual meeting here, although an imposing spectacle showed many faltering steps in the ranks. Governor Morrill, of Kansas, and General E. H. Hobson, of Kentucky, were the speakers of the day. Governor Morrill said that while the government had been generous in some particulars in many others it had been niggardly and dishonest in dealing with the old soldiers. Hon. W. B. Ritchie, supreme chancellor of the Knights of Pythias, said that his order contained 40,000 citizen soldiers trained in the regular army drill, and ready to respond to their country's needs.

Go to Hunt Howard Pitzel Again.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8.—Detective Geyer, who was called from Chicago to confer with District Attorney Graham in reference to the Holmes case, has left for Chicago again to continue his search for Howard Pitzel.

Willis.

Our Epworth League picnic was a success so far as having plenty of provisions and a good time. Our exercises were brief, for we had relied upon our brothers who failed to be with us from Detroit.

Tuesday morning before the break of day, we heard "the patter of the rain falling down" and how gently it came not flooding the earth, but giving new vigor to the crops needing it. The pastures still green from the drought breaking shower, but not growing for the want of more rain, has received the blessing from Heaven.

John Greenman and Ralph Breining have returned from their recent trip to Oil City, Penn.

The ladies aid society of Willis held their annual meeting Wednesday afternoon at the church.

A new doctor is the latest arrival at Willis. He is Dr. Foote, of Ann Arbor. If the new doctor is a good physician, we are surely pleased. We hope a prosperous and successful business will be his portion.

After filling a ten days' engagement of special lectures he will again go north to finish his vacation. A large majority of the workmen in Columbus six months ago favored free silver, now not one in five. They have realized the inevitable rule that wages are the last to go up in response to a rise in prices of goods, and the first to drop when there is a decline. The workmen must pay an increased price for their necessities long before they receive any benefit.

Over Thirty Years Without Sickness.

Mr. H. WETTSTEIN, a well-known, enterprising citizen of Byron, Ill., writes: "Before I paid much attention to regulating the bowels, I hardly knew a well day; but since I learned the evil results of constipation, and the efficacy of AYER'S PILLS, I have not had one day's sickness for over thirty years— not one attack that did not readily yield to this remedy. My wife had been, previous to our marriage, an invalid for years. She had a prejudice against cathartics, but as soon as she began to use Ayer's Pills her health was restored."

THE REVIEW is the mouthpiece of the men and women who know most about the great topics on which Americans require and desire to be informed from month to month. Its list of contributors forms a roll of the representative men and women of the age.

Subjects that concern the interest of AMERICAN WOMEN receive constant and special attention. Among topics recently discussed are:

"Women Suffrage in Practice"; "The Renaissance of Woman"; "Woman in Politics"; "The New Aspect of the Woman Question"; "The Modern Girl"; by the author of "The Heavenly Twins"; "The Future of Marriage"; "Evils of Early Marriages"; "The Servant Girl of the Future"; "The Financial Dependence of Women"; "Trades-Unions for Women"; "The Lack of Good Servants"; "American Life and Physical Deterioration"; "Good and Bad Mothers"; "The Tyranny of the Kitchen"; "The Amateur Nurse"; Mark Twain's Defense of Harriet Shelly, etc., etc.

A NEW FEATURE FOR 1895.

The Review will publish in 12 chapters, beginning with the January number, the Personal History of the Second Empire.

a historical work of unsurpassed importance, which will throw a flood of new light upon the chequered career of Napoleon III., and the influences which led to the collapse of his Empire in the gigantic struggle with unified Germany, under Wilhelm I. and his Iron Chancellor. It is as fascinating as a romance, being richly anecdotal and full of information drawn from sources hitherto inaccessible, presented in the graphic and vivacious style which "The Englishman in Paris," by the same author, has made familiar to thousands of readers.

Some Everyday Mistakes.

Current natural history is sometimes very amusing. An observant country boy can give you more reliable information in half an hour than many of the writers who are accepted as authority. Two examples of the fallacies of the latter have been going the rounds. One was an article on the cricket, which was described as a very dainty insect with a delicate appetite. There is in reality but one that is more voracious, and that is the cockroach. The cricket has a robust taste for almost anything, especially farinaceous matter, and it is very destructive to clothing. A house-keeper had her lace curtains eaten up, and the writer remembers once visiting in a house where the walls had been ceiled and papered. The paper hung loose here and there, due to the crickets that gnawed through to get at the paste that had been used by the paper hangers.

Another story was of the marvelous self control of a man who discovered that a black snake had concealed itself in the pocket of his coat, which he had thrown aside in the field and donned again, very stupidly, without discovering the reptile. This of itself was surprising, as it is generally from four to five feet in length and weighs several pounds. The black snake of the northern middle states is as harmless as the toad, and, moreover, is extremely cowardly. Its greatest fault is its destructiveness of young birds—the broods of those species which nest in low shrubs or upon the ground. But a man might carry one in each pocket and come to no harm, if his pockets were large enough and if he did not have the inherent animosity of mankind toward reptiles.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSOOND, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHLOE, Conway, Ark.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

A SALVATION LASS.

SHE MUST OBEY ORDERS EVEN TO FACING MURDER IN THE SLUMS.

This Comes Harder to the American Than to the English Soldier—The Romance of the Stolen Angel Which Is Expected to Come Back With a Story.

"Americans take less kindly to discipline of the Army than the English do," said Captain Elma Vickery of the Salvation Army. Captain Vickery is a Bostonian and has been confidential secretary to Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth since Mrs. Booth first came to America.

"Just what does 'discipline of the Army' mean?" was asked of her.

"Doing as one is told—obedience without question, which is the duty of every soldier in the armies of the world. This discipline is a wonderful training, as one realizes watching its effect upon Salvationists. Of course obedience is a habit, like faith, that grows more and more by exercising it. Now, in the case of Americans we find always much disposition to question. They always want to know why before they do as they are told. It becomes needful to explain all the reasons very fully to them, while English people accept directions without cavil. Indeed they seem positively to like it. I think the Americans' attitude in this respect is due to the propensity of all my country people to seek to impress themselves individually upon their environment, whatever and wherever it may happen to be. Did I feel in this way myself? No, but I will tell you why not. I had the greatest admiration for and faith in Mrs. Booth, and as I was entirely under her direction the influence of her personality subjected me completely. I felt she must always be right, and so I was ready unhesitatingly to carry out all her commands. When a Salvationist is not sustained by this strong personal feeling for the officer whose orders must be obeyed, it is sometimes not easy to submit—when one is told to go out and call War Crys, for instance. That is what I have to do this afternoon down in the slums. You see, I have on my slum clothes," an old calico frock and a dejected looking straw bonnet.

"The slum work," continued Captain Vickery, "is our great stronghold and safeguard. It keeps us down to the level where we feel there is most need to do God's work. Mrs. Booth says the great danger in this country for the Army lies in its tendency to work upward among the higher classes. We are sent to the lost sheep. To reach them the methods often condemned and generally misunderstood are the most efficacious."

In support of these methods Captain Vickery produced "Orders and Regulations For Field Officers," the handbook of tactics which is provided for the guidance of all Salvationists in command. It is a rather ponderous volume, bound in scarlet. The contents are carefully indexed, and there seem to be instructions set down for every possible contingency.

Page 258 treats of "Roughs—How to Reach Them." This is part of the counsel given:

"Be friendly with them. Make them feel that you care for them. Make every meeting, as far as may be, interesting to them. Let the precise people, who want things to be conducted without noise or excitement, go elsewhere for their sermons, psalms and prophecies. Never let them (the roughs) go away without some kind word from you. Never mind if they are bad people. The Samaritan woman at the well was a very doubtful kind of character. I am afraid many of our field officers would have been ashamed to be seen speaking to her in public, but the Master was not above noticing her."

The possibility of violence at the hands of the rough element is noted in these words:

"But what if they kill you?" "Well, you must die. You have often sung and said that you would—now here's a chance. Make up your mind to the worst; then perhaps he that would lose his life shall save it."

Captain Vickery is a rather delicate looking young woman, with big, earnest eyes, a lovely smile and low, sweet voice. As she spoke of selling War Crys in the slums it was impossible not to associate her with the picture on the wall above where she was sitting. It represented a Salvation lassie coming down a dismal, narrow street in the darkness, with the bundle of papers which betoken her errand.

Every line of the slender figure and delicate face expresses the brave constancy of the maiden. Behind her, with hands extended in protecting and blessing, follows an angel, the source of light in the gloom.

Captain Vickery explained that the original of this was done in black and white by a well known magazine illustrator, Miss G. A. Davis, who presented it to Mrs. Booth. A plate was made from the picture to be used for the eastern supplement of the War Cry. As the picture was on its way back to Mrs. Booth's office to be restored to its place above her desk it was stolen off the express wagon. A reward is now offered for its restoration, and the slum visitors are instructed to search the pawnshops.

"I am convinced that our angel will come back to us with a story," said Captain Vickery. "Even a stolen angel may save souls."—New York Sun.

Positively No Credit. "I trust," began the seedy customer argumentatively.

"I don't," responded the grocer decisively. Somehow the conversation languished after that.—Albany Argus.

A Mesalliance. She—So the count's relatives consider it a mesalliance?

THE POET AND HIS HEIR.

He stood upon the bridge of sighs, Fast by the vale of tears, And with prophetic vision scanned The swift approaching years.

Then up the heights of fame he climbed, And from that corpse strewn place He—with the light of other days— Looked full in nature's face.

Upon the sands of time he walked, With footsteps quick and light, And with a wreath of glory crowned The moody brow of night.

From dizzy heights in fancy's land The poet was called down, His wife with him had left the heir, For she had gone to town.

The infant yelled. The poet mourned As he paced through the room, And like a Spartan, welcomed he The dreaded crack of doom.

—James C. Alagum in Detroit Free Press.

WHERE IS HADES?

Different Ideas as to the Location of the Infernal Regions.

The ancient philosophers were of the opinion that the infernal regions were located at an equal distance from all parts of the earth's surface, which may be the foundation for the modern idea which locates hell at the center of our planet. This belief in a centrally located place of torment or utter annihilation appears to have existed among the Jews at a very early date also. According to their belief, there were three passages leading to it—the wilderness, by which route Dathan, Korah and Abiram descended; the sea, because it is written that Jonah cried to God out of the belly of hell, and a third passage, which last was at Jerusalem.

This third and last idea of the mouth of hell being located in the capital of Palestine is founded upon the Biblical passage which says, "The fire of the Lord is in Zion, and his furnace is in Jerusalem." The Mohammedans, who are noted for their superstitious regard for the number seven, declare that hell is provided with seven gates, each intended for the followers of the different religions. The first is for recreant Muslims; the second, very wide and with shutter always standing invitingly ajar, is for Christians only; the third, located near the second and almost as wide and roomy, is reserved for Jews; the fourth gate is the one through which the spirits of the Sabeans will enter the land of torment. Like the last two, it is wide enough to do a wholesale business without crowding. The fifth is a small loophole of a gate intended for the sect of the Maji, a sect so insignificant that the Mohammedans' hell idea apparently grudgingly allowed a separate opening for their spirits when on the way to eternal punishment. The sixth gate, the only circular opening in the walls of hell, is the gate by which the pagans will enter. Why the pagan gate is believed to be circular I have never seen explained. The seventh gate in the walls of the Mohammedan hell is reserved for the hypocrites of all religions. Strange to say, it is one of the smallest of the gates.

Whiston, the English astronomer, believed hell to be located on a comet, and that one moment the damned were suffering in the blistering rays of the sun and the next in cold hundreds of degrees below zero.

The Christian idea of hell, old as it is, gives but a very dim outline of the probable location of the "lake which burneth forever and ever;" also there is a controversy as to whether it really burns "forever and ever" or only has effects which are everlasting in their nature.—St. Louis Republic.

Amusing Answer.

The following anecdote is from "Glances at Great and Little Men," by Paladin:

A lady of the court told me a funny anecdote of one of the numerous Americans who were presented at the Tuileries. He was a young man, and the emperor had known his father in America, so the latter, wishing to be gracious, said:

"Et, monsieur, votre pere, vit-il encore?" (Does your father yet live?) "Pas encore, sire." (Not yet, sire.) The emperor had much ado to refrain from laughing and put his next question in English.

Senator Teller's Mother's Butter.

Senator Teller is one of that numerous class of men who are peculiarly fond of "mother's cooking." It happens that the senator's mother lives with him on his Colorado ranch and always superintends the butter making. The senator's wife is an excellent housekeeper, but sometimes things will go wrong in the kitchen, and on such occasions, it is said, Mrs. Teller passes the yellow dairy product to her husband and says brightly:

"I'm sorry the dinner is not very good today, Henry, but here at least is some of your mother's butter."—New York Journal.

"I was completely covered with sores. Every muscle in my body ached. Had been sick for five years. Doctors could do me no good. Most of my time was spent in bed; was a complete wreck. Burdock Blood Bitters have completely cured me in three months." Mrs. Annie Zoepen, Crookstown, Minn.

A GREAT EXPENSE

To Carry on an Almost Helpless Fight

—At Last the Fight is Over.

(From the Battle Creek Moon.)

Our representative called at 26 Battle Creek Avenue, the residence of S. I. Robbins, and in an interview with him brought out the following facts: Mr. Robbins tells of his wife's experience in a manner that carries conviction with his words. He says: "I am sorry my wife is not at home this P. M., but no one knows better than I how she has suffered during past years. For twenty years she has been afflicted with the various forms of kidney complaint and an enlargement of the liver. She was often confined to her bed for more than two weeks at a time suffering untold agony. She has doctored constantly, and I have paid out in doctors' bills for her alone as much as $900.00, and then her relief was only such that she would be able to be around for a spell. Some time ago she felt the symptoms of another attack coming on, such as a pain in through the kidneys and back. I hardly know what induced me to get a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, instead of sending for the family physician; however, I got some and she commenced their use. It was a surprise to us both to see their action; the attack was warded off, and she continued taking them with marked improvement each day of their use. She is better now than she has been in years, the pain in the back and others in the kidneys have entirely gone. Hardly a day goes by that we do not mention the great good Doan's Kidney Pills have done her. I was always opposed to patent medicines, but confess that my wife's experience with Doan's Kidney Pills has done much to change my opinions. If it were not for those pills she would not have been able to be out this afternoon.

A SWEET YOUNG FACE.

Along the noisy city ways
 And in this rattling city car,
 On this the dreariest of days,
 Perplexed with business fret and jar,
 When suddenly a young, sweet face
 Looked on my petulance and pain
 And lent it something of its grace
 And charmed it into peace again.
 The day was just as bleak without,
 My neighbors just as cold within,
 And truth was just as full of doubt,
 The world was just as full of sin.
 But in the light of that young smile
 The world grew pure, the heart grew warm,
 And sunshine gleamed a little while
 Across the darkness of the storm.
 I did not care to seek her name,
 I only said, "God bless thy life,
 Thy sweet young grace be still the same,
 Or happy maid or happy wife."

THE EARTHQUAKE.

Surely no building of its size ever contained more food for the imagination than my friend Norman's riverside bungalow. It was fairly crammed with curiosities from many lands.

Jack Norman had not only "been everywhere and seen everything," as the saying is—he had brought home a shipload of mite but convincing witnesses.

Capital yarns he would spin about his treasures too, but of one object neither he nor his pretty Spanish-American wife could be induced to speak, except casually.

"The Liberator is sacred," he would say when asked where he got it, or "The Liberator has been in an earthquake," when its battered appearance was commented upon.

It was the figure of a satyr in bronze, about 3 feet high, with the legs and hoofs of a goat, short, blunted horns, huge pointed ears, grinning, lopsided mouth and a broken nose. Its left eye had also been in the wars—the metal was dented as if by a heavy blow, which had changed the figure's original roguish expression into a hideous leer.

Often have I seen Jack put his arm round its wry neck and talk to it with all the affection that a parent bestows on his offspring. But it was Mrs. Norman who gave me the clew to the secret.

Jack had been seriously ill—a return of jungle fever. His wife came to me in the drawing room.

"Oh, he is so much better," she said, with her dark eyes swimming. "He soon will be well. Ah, me! What would I do without my brave, true husband? I think no wife has ever been so happy as I. And"—turning to the hideous satyr—"you gave him to me, you dear old thing!"

She flung her arms round the twisted neck and kissed the grinning mouth. A dozen times she pressed her warm lips to the cold bronze.

I could not help smiling. "You laugh," she said, "but it is true. Some day Jack shall tell you, perhaps. We do not like to speak of it. There is a grave beyond the sea. A mother tends it who would grieve if the truth were known."

Soon afterward I had the good luck to do Norman a service.

"I must make you a present," he said. "Look round and tell me what you would like. I bar the Liberator, of course."

"I won't take anything," I answered. "If you'll tell me why you set such store by that old bronze, we shall be quits."

"I couldn't have done it a week ago for a certain reason. But the person concerned is dead." I had noticed that Mrs. Norman was in deep mourning.

He took a nude, guardless sword from the wall. "Do you know what this is?" he asked.

"Some sort of sword," I replied. "It is a Nicaraguan machete, carried by all the men and many of the women in that quiet country. Look along the edge."

I did so and perceived a dull stain near the square point. Jack drew his finger down a long white scar on his bronzed cheek.

"That stain is blood. It came from here—some of it. I got a worse cut on the head. Now I'll tell you the story."

He lit a cigar, flung himself into an easy chair and began.

"Some years ago I had an interest in a Segovian gold mine. Segovia, I should say, is in Nicaragua, between the Great lake and Honduras. Tiring of the wild life, I resolved to visit Granada. One night I passed in the hotel, and that was too long, for I was eaten alive. Next day I sought out a vacant house, found the owner and struck a bargain.

"The house I rented was an immense building, erected on three sides of a courtyard paved with marble. There was not a pane of glass in it, but plenty of iron bars. The courtyard had a broken fountain in the center, waterless, of course, and half hidden by rubbish and shrubs, run wild long since.

"The time hung pretty heavily upon my hands, so one morning I set to work to clear away the rubbish that choked the basin of the fountain. At the very bottom of the heap I found the Liberator.

"I cleaned the statue myself. Pepe dared not touch it at first. He said it was a Carib god. It wasn't in its present battered condition then, and I considered it a great find. We set it up on a shelf above my bed, and in 48 hours I had forgotten all about it.

"Of course I visited the cafes, where you may drink bad chocolate and gamble to your heart's content. Everybody does both there, and 'when one is in Rome'—you know the adage?

"At a gambling house I met Don Manuel Arguello. By way of return for the money he had won of me he took me home and introduced me to his mother and cousin. After that I loved every day, for I had fallen in with the Senora Isabel.

"The passion of my life was returned. But I was unaware that Don Manuel also loved her. I did not learn until too late that he had long looked forward to repairing his broken fortunes by marriage with his cousin. He enlightened me—I need not describe the scene—and I refused to stand aside. Then he threatened to take my life.

"As you know, my wife is a capital horsewoman, and it was our custom to ride daily on the Los Cocos road. One morning my darling failed to meet me at the trusting place. I dismounted to wait, leaving my horse with Pepe. Presently he called me, and I found him examining the tracks.

"'Senor,' said he in his grave fashion, 'here is the trail of the senora's mare. It is fresh. It was made this morning.' He moved on, bent double.

"Other horses have halted here, have plunged about and have gone. The senora's mare went with them. Again he moved on.

"'Ah!' he exclaimed presently, there is the print of a lasso ring which has missed the mark. There the senora's mare halted suddenly, like the wise animal she is. That lasso did not miss, and she has had a fall before maybe—"

"What on earth are you driving at?" I cried.

"The senora turned there and spurred the mare," he said. "The other horses followed in a great hurry. She did not gallop far, as we have seen. Afterward she went quietly."

"For the love of heaven tell me what you have learned!" I cried.

"A mile farther on, senor," answered the Indian stolidly, "there is a path which leads to Don Manuel's hacienda. If the senora's mare turns there, that is where the Senora Isabel will have gone—not willingly, senor."

"We galloped hard to the byway spoken of. Sure enough, all the tracks left the road there. The observant Indian was right.

"I had my pistols, he his machete. We pursued the abductors and caught them before they reached the hacienda—as ugly a quartet as I ever set eyes on. The prudent Don Manuel had directed the business from a safe distance.

"His fellows showed fight, of course, but I managed to wing one at the first fire, when they all turned tail. I took my darling back to her aunt, with whom she was quite safe. Don Manuel did not show up. He knew better."

Mrs. Norman came in just then, and Jack abruptly changed the subject. Half an hour later Jack resumed.

"My darling was very fond of her aunt and unwilling to hurt her, so we said nothing of her son's villainy. But when Pepe and I got back to our ruinous palace he advised me to barricade the door of my room. However, I didn't think it worth while. But at nightfall I stretched myself on the hide bed and fell asleep, with a revolver close to my hand.

"About midnight I was awakened by a cut on the head, which, luckily, did not stun me, or I shouldn't be spinning this yarn now. I started up with the blood streaming down my face.

"Don Manuel stood over me with my revolver in one hand and an uplifted machete in the other. There's the machete."

"Now you shall die, robber!" he hissed and aimed another blow at me, which I avoided. Shouting loudly for Pepe, I grappled with him and got hold of his wrists. I was the stronger, but loss of blood had weakened me. He wrenched his right hand free and cut me across the cheek. The blow dazed me; I staggered and fell on the bed.

"Before I could rise his knee was on my chest, the machete at my throat. I felt the edge. With a last effort I flung him from me. That instant the bed heaved and tossed, the stout walls shook, the sleeping city awoke with a scream of terror. Dazed as I was, I knew what had happened. So did my enemy.

"The earthquake shall not save you!" he yelled, and rushed at me over the quivering floor. But again the bed heaved beneath me. Something fell from above. There was a dull, sickening thud—a scream of agony—and Don Manuel rolled over and lay still, leaving the machete across my neck. Ah, that was a close shave!

"I staggered to my feet and groped my way through clouds of dust to the street, which was full of people, shrieking, wailing, praying to the saints. An hour the earthquake lasted, shock following shock.

"When all was quiet and the people had ceased to lay and pray, I returned to the palace. Pepe lay in his hammock, bound and gagged. Together we entered the room where I had so narrowly escaped death.

"The body of Don Manuel, with the skull crushed in, lay beside my bed. Close at hand lay the Liberator in the condition in which you see it. The statue had toppled over in the nick of time, killed the would-be murderer and set me free. On such chances do the lives of men hang.

"Don Manuel's mother never knew the truth respecting his death. It was attributed to the earthquake, as also were the cuts on my head and cheek. I left Granada as soon as I could, taking my bride with me.

"Now you know why we treasure the Liberator, and why we have not dared to talk about it."—Answers.

New Sort of Poker.

A new variation of poker has sprung up. It deals out the entire pack in equal numbers to all players. If five are playing, for example, each will get ten cards at the start. If seven are playing, each gets seven, the three cards left over being put aside. Then, instead of drawing, each player discards as he likes from his hand, so that he shall have five cards to play with, making the best hand possible out of those dealt him. Hands are apt to run high in this sort of game. It is called "peculiar."

A poker game in which five cards were dealt, discards and draws being so regulated that only five cards constituted the final hand, has been known for some time, but this is a further development of that idea. It is said to have originated along the shores of Long Island.—New York Sun.

NERVES OF SURGEONS

SUFFER STAGE FRIGHT WHEN FACING A DIFFICULT OPERATION.

Two Ways In Which It Affects Them—A Young Surgeon's First Amputation. Threaded a Needle to Steady His Nerves. Operating on a Friend.

"Is there such a thing as stage fright among surgeons?" a successful New York surgeon was asked. Though the term stage fright with reference to surgery was perhaps a misnomer, the surgeon understood the question.

"Oh, yes, indeed, there is such a thing as stage fright among surgeons," he replied. "There are two kinds of stage fright, or, rather, there are two different temperaments among doctors, and the fright, although in itself perhaps the same, has a different seeming, affected as it is by the material through which it passes. The first is the surgeon who is anxious to perform the operation, sees no difficulties in the way and nothing but a successful termination. His rest is not disturbed by reflections upon complications which may arise. Everything is lovely until the patient is before him. Then his hand begins to shake if he meets with difficulties which he had not counted upon; his nervousness increases; he hurries, perhaps with a fatal result. In the case of this man he grows worse as he grows older, and in old age he goes all to pieces.

"There is another temperament of this order. From the time this surgeon recognizes that an operation is necessary there pass through his mind all the complications which could possibly come up, and he wonders if there are not more which he has not thought of. He is by no means sanguine of a happy result. He fears this and that and the other thing. As the hour approaches he dreads to commence his work more and more. But when he is before the subject his nervousness leaves him. He commences intelligently, reflecting upon what might arise. He does not hurry or get excited, but he is intensely interested, wholly absorbed by what he is doing. I remember witnessing an operation by one of the most celebrated surgeons I ever knew. It was a most difficult operation, and the amphitheater was filled with doctors who had come to see it performed. A few moments before the surgeon was to commence he was presented by a friend to two doctors who had come from a distance to see him operate. He bowed very politely and spoke a few words. Shortly after he commenced operating.

"The operation was of considerable length, and when it was finished the two gentlemen to whom the surgeon had been presented approached to speak a congratulatory word or two. As he did not appear to recognize them, his friend presented them again. He expressed his pleasure at meeting them without the slightest recollection that he had met them.

"Do you recall the first operation you ever performed yourself?"

"Indeed I remember it very well. I was in a hospital where there were 3,500 beds and 35 surgeons in charge. I was one of the young assistant surgeons. If an operation was necessary in any of the wards, it was our duty to report it to the surgeon in charge, who then performed the operation if he chose. I reported to my surgeon the necessity of an amputation of a great toe. The surgeon came and looked at the man and concurred with my opinion that an amputation was necessary. I was directed to get everything ready for the operation. 'Then,' said the surgeon, 'I will come and operate if I can. If not, you go on and perform the operation yourself.'

"I told my young associates of the order, and they said: 'Well, you go on and get ready, but he won't come. You will have to do the operation yourself.' And that was the way it turned out. The operation was to be at 2 o'clock. All the night before I was rehearsing what I intended to do in my mind and dreaming of it in my sleep. The next day I could not eat my luncheon. My hands and feet were cold. When it came time to commence the operation, I could only steady my nerves by threading needles. I said: 'Give me the needles to thread. I am very particular about my thread.' I took a needle and commenced poking at the eye. In a few seconds my hand obeyed my will and became as steady as I could wish. I performed the operation successfully. After that I went on performing a great many operations, but it was years before I could take a 2 o'clock luncheon if I had to operate at 2 o'clock.

"From the conscientious scientific man apprehension never departs, for he knows that it is impossible to foresee all things. And then, again, he takes in his hands a holy human life. If an actor accentuates the wrong word or halts in his lines, the worst that can come is a slight damage to his reputation. If a minister preaches heterodox doctrines, the worst that can happen to him is a trial for heresy. But if the surgeon in a dangerous operation makes but the slightest mistake it may result in death, for which there is no remedy. Many and many a time on the night previous to a serious operation I have awakened myself from an anxious, troubled sleep by performing the operation in my dreams. It is also very much more trying to a surgeon to operate on a friend than on a stranger. It is hard to tell in this case who is more to be pitied, the surgeon or the patient. I think the longer a man operates the less certain he is of the outcome of any operation. A frail little woman that one would almost say survive the most painful and dangerous operation where a rough, stocky and iron built peasant woman that one would think could survive almost any possible operation will die from something which is not, as a rule, considered dangerous."—New York Sun.

Old World and New.

Two common phrases, the old world and the new world, have gained an application which would hardly have been given them had men known in the past what they know now—that America is, geologically considered, probably the oldest of the continents and that man perhaps inhabited the western hemisphere as early as he did the eastern. In view of this fact it might not be amiss to suggest a different application of these phrases by giving to Asia the title of the old world and to Europe and America that of the new world, leaving the remaining sections of the earth to fit into the division to which they logically belong.

For Asia is the static realm of mankind; Europe and America are the dynamic. Asia is at rest with the dead past; Europe and America are pushing forward into the living future. Asia, in its political conditions, its religions, its learning and its literature, its science and industry, remains in close touch with the world of 3,000 years ago; Europe and America in all these conditions have left the old world ages behind them and are building for themselves a new world vitally distinct from that of ancient days.—Lippincott's.

An Indignant Mother.

"Look here," said a lodger to his landlady, "your daughter has been using my comb and brush again."

"I beg your pardon," said the landlady indignantly. "I never allow my children to meddle with my lodgers' belongings in any way."

"But I am sure she has been using them," said the lodger, "for there are long black hairs on them, and she is the only person with black hair in the house."

"Oh, now I remember! She did have them to comb and brush our dear old poodle," said the landlady, "but I am quite sure she did not use them for herself. She's too honest to be guilty of that sort of thing."—New York Mercury.

Jefferson Davis.

The war broke out a few years after Davis reached Michigan and in November, 1863, he enlisted, and was put on the duty of enlisting colored troops. He had been at work but a few weeks when his house, which stood where the Ann Arbor postoffice does now, burned up, destroying his papers. He was arrested next morning by mistake as a deserter and taken to Jackson. Here the mistake was corrected, and he was again supplied with proper credentials. But the mistake, while corrected in fact, was left on the records, and prevented Davis from drawing any pay for his services until now, when, after all these years, the matter has been straightened out.

Returning from arrest, Davis went to Cairo, Ill., and to St. Louis, Mo., to enlist colored men, and finally secured 809 men, who were organized into the One Hundred and Second United States infantry, and served at Hilton Head and seven other important engagements, with credit to themselves.

One exploit of Davis' is quite characteristic. He was sent to Toledo to arrest a celebrated colored bounty-jumper, named Young. Young had an ugly record, and had escaped from captors several times. Davis located Young asleep in a saloon, covered with fly netting, and handcuffed him without stopping to remove the covering, so that Young was obliged to wear his screen through the streets to jail. At the jail the officers saw fit to remove the handcuffs, but Davis feared some irregularity and came in soon after.

"They must be put back on him," said Davis. "You will have to do it yourself," said the officer in charge, and Davis, looking in, saw his man armed with an iron bar.

Davis remarked, "My orders were to shoot him if I could not bring him alive; I'll shoot him through the door." The officer objected, so Davis got assistance from the provost marshal and handcuffed his man again.

Next morning Davis put Young on a train for Detroit. He fastened his legs together with a strap, handcuffed him to the arm of the seat, and tied his legs with another strap to the seat behind. Young had $1,400 on his person, which he offered Davis for his liberty. Davis had only fairly tied down his prisoner when a number of colored men entered the car and demanded Young's release. Davis seized several sticks of stove wood lying handily in the woodbox and flung them violently into the crowd, then drawing his revolver, threatened to shoot his prisoner first and all who should attempt his rescue afterwards. The car was cleared and the train started. Davis and Young had the car to themselves and at Detroit a detail of eleven men met the train. Young was shot the next day.

Davis has importuned many congressmen from this district to aid him to get his record corrected. He cannot read or write, but has a most wonderful memory for numbers and can tell how much money he spent in a given trip, how many times he hired horses at a given livery stable, and other matters like that as well as though he had a memorandum. At last Rep. Gorman took up Davis' case, and through his efforts, Davis will receive his pay and pension.

Since the war Davis has visited Lexington and other places familiar to his youth. Among other things he did there was to permit old Gov. Breckenridge, who was unable to get out of his chair, to cane him lightly, "Because you've been too free, and high and mighty so long it will do you good, you rascal." He found his old master of a few weeks, Birch, who had once been rich, and who had been ruined in health and pocket by the war, in very reduced circumstances, and supplied his exhausted larder with enough to eat and drink to make his visit a notable one to the ex-confederate.

Davis has been three times married, once in slavery and twice since. He had two children by his second wife; the eldest boy dying at the age of twenty, and the second, a girl, married and living in comfortable circumstances in South Lyon. A grand daughter has developed considerable ability as an elocutionist, to her grandfather's great pride. The present Mrs. Davis has managed the household for fifteen years, and is considerably younger than her husband.

Davis lives above a Huron street store, opposite the court house and sits daily in an old chair on the sidewalk by the stairway leading to his rooms. He knows and speaks to everyone, and many people like to spend a leisure moment listening to his reminiscences of the war and of the great men with whom he was once on so familiar a footing.

Zoa Phora brings health and happiness.

To our amusement loving people we are pleased to announce that Pawnee Bill's Historical Wild West, Grand Mexican Hippodrome, Indian Village and Museum and Congress of Trained Animals, will exhibit in this city on Thursday, August 22. This is not the greatest show on earth; advertising more than it fulfills; neither is it a snide, run by drunken and bankrupt proprietors, and preceded by a lot of out throats and a horde of gamblers, but is a legitimate exhibition of stupendous and startling wonders, including bands of Indians, warriors, squaws, and paposes, brave scouts, roving cow boys, cunning Mexicans and vaqueros, a herd of buffaloes and long horned Texas steers, 40 spotted mustangs; Miss May Lillie, champion horseback rifle shot of the world; Don Joe Valasques, rider and driver of 35 wild mustangs at one time; also a band of Australian aborigines, genuine Cannibal Bushmen, Famous Black Trackers and Boomerang Throwers, a troupe of famous Japanese Lancers, Fencers and Fighters, and sword combats on horse back, a museum of rare and startling wonders; wonderful display of fire works; grand, glorious, novel free street parade at 10 a. m. This is an opportunity that should not be missed. Notwithstanding the consolidation of these great shows, a 25 cent ticket admits to all departments of this great show, making it the largest and best show on earth for the price.
