THE COMPANY'S HEALTH

An Interesting Letter from Capt. Ross Grsnger of Company A, Thirty-First Michigan Volunteers Now in

Headquarters U. S. Focres, Placetas, Cuba, March 23, 1899. Editor Daily Argus,

Dear Sir:—The men of Co. A are in excellent condition, we average less sickness a day here than at any other camp we have been in since leaving home. The men realize that they are in the army, not as some dissatisfied ones thought, on a picnic excursion, Roll call, drills, etc., being attended to promptly and cheerfully. We drill but one half hour per day and of course have the usual roll calls. Also Satur-Cubans employed, rebuilding and repairing the Spanish barracks here, of U. S. Infantry as soon as finished. Dealing with them is peculiar and quite interesting. I am obliged to pay them every evening, which requires six laborers 80 cents. Freight is payable in Spanish gold. I have all U. S. I have in procuring change for each procured the names of all Cuban soldiers in my jurisdiction which extends about 15 miles out and around Placetas. There were 324 Cuban soliders. I sent the names to General Bates by telegraph, which together with explanation made quite a long telegram. As to the armory at Ann Arbor, I can say but little. The men worked hard in putting the building in shape. It was a fine place for an armory, being on the ground floor, we could also rent it and use it to great advantage for parties, circuses, etc. One circus would us at least $100 for general expenses. The men would rather have the old armory just as we left it, than any Mr. Cook naurally wished to get hold of the building soon after we repaired and remodeled it, and of course took the first opportunity offered. As captain of Co. A. 1st Infantry, M. N. G., I still hold a lease of the building for several years and ain also held under $5,000 bonds for care of property and will have to make a settlement before being discharged. The majority of us will not very likely wish to continue in the National Guard after our present army duty is over with, but some will. I am sorry that the armory is in the shape it is at present. It's too bad and that is all there is to it.

LOST GROUND FOUND. The

IS IT THE SCHOOL PLAY GROUND OF MANCHESTER?

The Ownership of a Piece of Ground Not Hitherto Claimed For Fifty-

Five Years. The fact of the ownership of a piece of land in Washtenaw county being forgotten by the real owners is unusual. Such a fact was recently discovered by Titus F. Hutzel, of the firm of Hutzel & Co. Last week Titus F. Hutzel was looking over some old papers belonging to his father August Hutzel. Among these was a deed that fixed his attention as it contained sometning that he had never heard of. His father August Hutzel had been in business with Emanuel Wildt. They dissolved their partnership Sept. 4, and in closing it up. Mr. Wildt transferred certain real estate to Mr. Hutzel. The second parcel described was what struck Titus Hutzel's eyes. It was as follows: "All that certain parcel of land, situate in township of Manchester, known, bounded and described as follows vizs: Being part of section 1, in town number 4 south of range 3 east; beginning at northwest corner of land owned by David Chadwick on Clinton road, thence northerly on the line of said road 31 feet thence easterly parallel with said Chadwick line 50 feet, thence southerly parallel with said road 31 feet to said Chadwick line, thence westerly on said line 50 feet of the place of beginning." Mr. Hutzel had never heard of his father owning this land. He asked his older brother and mother and they had never stract Co.'s and found that his father came so interesting that he called on Attorney E. B. For Justice of the Supreme Court-THOMAS E. BARKWORTH.

For Regents of the University-EDWIN F. LE GENDRE. STANLEY E. PARKHILL.

For Judge of the 22nd Judicial Circuit MARTIN J. CAVANAUGH.

For Commissioner of Schools-DORSEY R. HOPPE.

The democratic city ticket goes into the field this spring with excellent prospects of success. It is a good ticket. Gottlob Luick has a reputation as a honest, hard headed business man, with sound common sense ideas, which commend him to the voters of the city. He has had wide experience in municipal affairs and will make an excellent mayor. H. D. Merrithew is in every way competent to fill the office of city clerk and will devote his whole time to it. Herman Hutzel is a man of mature judgment and good knowledge of values, a good man at figures, and would make a good assessor. William G. Doty is a lawyer of ability who has all the qualijustice as he made a good mayor.

The people now have before them the candidates of the two parties for the various city offices. Both tickets are composed of good citizens, men who will serve the city well in the respective offices no matter which ticket is elected. Ann Arbor is essentially a well governed city and will compare more than favorably with other cities of its class. The diversity of elements in our population causes some apparently irreconcilable differences of opinionsas to what our city government should be, but in its practical operation it is undoubtedly a good average of the public opinion of the city: A government by majority can not be expected to be what the most enlightened public opinion demands or what the lowest sentiment might wish. It will necessarily be a sort Ann Arbor city is well governed.

Why are the express and telegraph companies allowed to continue to defy the law in the matter recommendation of the house commitof the war stamp tax? Why is not the law enforced against them in the same as it is against private individuals and business concerns? What influence has the corporations with the courts which individuals and private business concerns have not? Our courts are too near to the great purposes. corporations and trusts and much too far away from the people. CASTORIA. The Kind You Have Always Bought Bears the

ONIONS AT CHELSEA.

Over $8,360 a Year Paid Out For That Vegetable.

Unless one stops to give it a thought he does not realize what, the growing and shipping of that high smelling vegetable, the onion, means to Chelsea and the towns of Sylvan and Lima. Lots of marsh land in this immediate vicinity is only fit for growing two things, onions and celery, and this has been turned to good account by those who have gene into the business of onion farming. Forty-three cars of onions, or over 22,000 bushels, have been bought by R. A. Snyder the past year, and every car of which is sold and 40 of them have been already shipped. His trade extends from New York to the Gulf of Mexico.

The onion lands will grow from 300 to 800 bushels to the acre according to favorable or unfavorable conditions. Last year the average was about 400 bushels.

The pioneer onion grower of this section is John H. Waltrons, and the infant in the business is R. A. Snyder who is, however, the largest grower of them all

Two-thirds of the crop were the yel low onions, the other one-third red. The price paid ranged from 28 cents to 40 cents per bushel. Averaging the price at 34 cents per bushel, it means that the price paid for onions marketed at this point was $8,360, a snug sum.

Last year Mr. Snyder put in 12 acress of onions, but so great is his faith in the "strength" of the onion market that he will increase the amount of his acreage to 32 this season.

Another large grower of onions is M. Schanz, of Lima, who raised about 1,500 bushels last year. - Chelsea Hearld.

Once more returning to the room where the corpse lay he noticed a trunk from which protruded a part of a garment. Raising the lid he found everything within in a promiscuous pile. Evidently it had been hastily searched and carelessly repacked. Mr. Barnes took each article out and examined it closely. Everything upon which a name might have been written showed a place where a piece had been cut out. "There must be some good reason for hiding this woman's identity, or the scoundrel would not have been so thorough in his work,' thought Mr. Barnes. Just then, in replacing the clothing, he heard a crinkling sound which indicated that a bit of paper was in the pocket of the garment. Hastily he withdrew it, and was delighted to observe writing. "A clew at last," he murmured, hurrying to the front room window to read it. This was what he found:

One diamond, 1514 carats	. $15,000
One emerald, 151 g carats	. 15,000
One ruby, 15% carats	. 20,000
One sapphire, 10 carats	. 5,000
One peart, pear shape white	. 15,000

the pear same aloo the egg pear s. The conary diamond is oblong and the topaz unexcelled.

The lot are contained in a r. 6. which eather case 4 by 6 inches in size, line c. v. a track satin. Each jewel fits in a special concernment and is held in place by a gold wire clasp.

The case has the name "MITCLILL" in gold letters across the band which straps around it. This was all, no name being signed. Mr. Barnes regretted this last fact, but felt that he held a most important paper in his hand, since it seemed to be corroborative of the woman's statement that she had lost a lot of unset jewels.

It was of great value to have so minute a description of the stolen gems. Folding the paper carefully, he placed it in his wallet, and then returned to the vicinity of the corpse.

Looking closely at the cut in the neck, the detective determined that the assassin had used an ordinary pocketknife, for the wound was neither deep nor long. It severed the jugular vein, which seemed to have been the aim of the murderer. It was from this circumstance that the detective decided that the woman had been attacked as she slept. This aroused the question, "Did the murderer have the means of entering the house without attracting attention?" Either he must have had a nightkey, or else some one must have admitted him. Mr. Barnes started as the thought recurred to him that Wilson had seen Mr. Mitchel enter the house some time before the scream was heard and depart some time after. Was this the woman who had accompanied him to the theater? If so, how could she have retired and fallen asleep so quickly? Evidently further light must be thrown upon this aspect of the case.

While meditating the detective's eye roamed about the room, and finally rested upon a shining object which lay on the floor near the trunk. A ray of light from the front window just reached it and made it glitter. Mr. Barnes looked at it for some moments mechanically, stooping presently to pick it up, with little thought of what he did. He had scarcely examined it, however, before a gleam of triumph glistened in his eye. He held in his hand a button, which was cut a cameo, npon which was carved the profile head of a woman, beneath which appeared the name "Juliet."

CHAPTER IV.

DIAMOND CUT DIAMOND. Mr. Barnes, after discovering the cameo button, immediately left the apartment. With little loss of time he reached the Fifth Avenue hotel. He found Wilson sitting in the lobby and learned from him that Mr. Mitchel had not yet come down stairs. He made his subordinate happy by complimenting him upon his work and exonerating him from blame because of his having lost his man for a few hours the day before. With the button in his pocket Mr. Barnes found it easy to be good natured. If the truth were known, he was chuckling to himself.

The thought which proved such a fund of merriment was the idea that his man up stairs had proved himself just as human as ordinary criminals, since he had left behind him the very telltale mark which he had boasted would not be found after he had committed his crime. Externally, however, there was no sign to show that Mr. Barnes was in any way excited. He calmly asked at the desk for Mr. Mitchel, and sent up his card just as any ordinary visitor might have done. In a few minutes the hallboy returned with the curt message, "Come up."

Mr. Barnes was shown up one flight of stairs into a suit of two rooms and a bath overlooking Twenty-third street. The room which he passed into from the hall was fitted up like a bachelor's parlor. Comfortable stuffed chairs and two sofas, a folding reading chair, an upright piano in mahogany case with handsome piano lamp beside it, a carved center table on which stood a reading lamp, cigar case in bronze, photo albams, handsome pictures on the walls in gold frames, elegant vases on the mantel, an onyx clock, a full sized figure of a Moor carved in wood serving as a card receiver-in fact, everything about the place was significant of wealth, luxury and refinement. Could this be the den of a murderer? It seemed not, unless there might be some powerful hidden motive, which would make a man who was evidently a gentleman stoop to such a crime. According to Mr. Barnes' experience such a motive must involve liet and three of Romeo. Still he was a woman. As yet there was no woman in this case, save the corpse which he had just left. All this flashed through the detective's mind as he noted his surroundings in a few swift glances. Then he heard a voice from the next room

"Come in, Mr. Barnes. We must not stand upon ceremony with one another." Mr. Barnes, in answer to the invitation, crossed into the adjoining room and noticed at once that the sleeping apartment was as luxurious as the parlor. Mr. Mitchel was standing in front of a mirror shaving himself, being robed in a silk morning wrapper.

"Pardon this intrusion," began Mr. Barnes. "But you told me I might call at any time, and"-

'No excuses necessary, except from me. But I must finish shaving, you know. A man can't talk with lather on one side of his face."

'Certainly not. Don't hurry. I can wait.'

'Thank you! Take a seat. You will find that armchair by the bed comfortable. This is an odd hour to be making one's toilet; but, the fact is, I was out late last night.'

'At the club, I suppose," said Mr. Barnes, wishing to see if Mr. Mitchel would lie to him. In this he was disappointed, for the reply was:

"No; I went to the Casino. Lillian Russell, you know, has returned. I had promised a friend to go, so we went."

"Are you not getting inquisitive? No; not a gentleman, but a lady. In fact, that is her picture on that easel."

'A gentleman?"

Mr. Barnes looked and saw an oil painting representing a marvelously beautiful head—a brunette of strong emotions and great will power, if her portrait were truthful. Here was a significant fact. Mr. Mitchel said that he had been to the Casino with this wom-Wilson claimed that they had gone to the house where the murdered woman lay. It would seem that Mr. Mitchel's friend must live there, and thus he had gained access the night before. Did he know that the other also lived there and did he go into her apartment after leaving his companion? As this passed through Mr. Barnes' mind his eyes wandered across the bed. He saw a waistcoat, upon which he observed two buttons similar to the one which he had secreted in his pocket. Stealthily he reached his hand toward the bed, but his fingers had scarcely touched the waistcoat when Mr. Mitchel said without turning from his shaving:

"There is no money in that waistcoat, Mr. Barnes.'

"What do you mean to insinuate?" said Mr. Barnes angrily, withdrawing his hand quickly. Mr. Mitchel paused a 'Take care, Mr. Mitchel, you are speaking to a detective. If I did stretch my hand toward your clothing, it was with no wrong intent, and you know it."

"Certainly I do, and what is more I know just what you were wishing to do. You must not get angered so easily. I should not have used the words which I did, but to tell you the truth I was piqued."

"I don't understand."

"It hurt my feelings to have you treat me just like an ordinary criminal. That you should think I would let you come in here and make whatever examinations you have in your mind right before my very eyes wounded my pride. I never should have turned my back upon you except that I faced a mirror. I told you I know what you wished to do. It was to examine the buttons on my vest, was it not?"

Mr. Barnes was staggered, but did not show it. Calmly he said:

"As you know. I overheard your conversation on the train. You spoke of having a set of five curious buttons

"Pardon me, I said six, not five." Once more Mr. Barnes had failed to trap the man. He suggested five, hoping that Mr. Mitchel might claim that to have been the original number, thus eliminating the lost one.

"Of course you did say six, now I remember," he continued, "and I think you will admit it was not unnatural curiosity which led me to wish to see them, that-that-well, that I might recognize them again."

"A very laudable intent. But, my dear Mr. Barnes, I have told you that you may call upon me at any time and ask me any questions you please. Why did you not frankly ask me to show you the buttons?"

'I should have done so. I do so now. "They are in the vest. You may examine them if you desire it."

Mr. Barnes took up the vest, and was puzzled to find six buttons, three of Jusatisfied, for they were identical with the one in his pocket. It occurred to him that this man who was so careful in his precautions might have lied as to the number in the set, and have said six when in reality there were seven. A few questions about the buttons seemed opportune.

"These are very beautiful, Mr. Mitchel, and unique too. I have never heard of cameo buttons before. I think you said they were made expressly for you.' Mr. Mitchel dropped into a cushioned rocker before he replied:

"These buttons were made for me, and they are exquisite specimens of the graver's art. Cameo buttons, however, are not so uncommon as you suppose, though they are more usually worn by women, and, in fact, it was a woman's idea to have these cut. I should not

"By Jove!" said Mr. Barnes, "the Romeo buttons are copies from your likeness, and good portraits too."

You have noticed that, have

"Yes, and the Juliets are copies of that picture." Mr. Barnes was getting excited, for if these buttons were pertraits, and the one in his pocket was that of the woman whose likeness stood on the easel, it was evident that they were connected. Mr. Mitchel eyed him

"Mr. Barnes, you are disturbed. What buttons which has caused it. Now tell me your reason for coming here this morning.'

Mr. Barnes thought the time had come to strike a deciding blow.

"Mr. Mitchel, first answer one question, and think well before you reply. How many buttons were made for this

"Seven," answered Mr. Mitchel, so promptly that Mr. Barnes could only repeat, amazed:

"Seven? But you said six only a moment ago!"

"I know what I said. I never forget any statement that I make, and all my were overthrown, modern history may statements are accurate. I said that six be said to have fairly commenced, is the entire set. Now you ask me what was the original number, and I reply have begun with Mahomet (A. D. 622), seven. Is that clear?" "Then the other button has been lost?"

"Not at all. I know where it is." "Then what do you mean by saying that the set now is only six?"

"Excuse me, Mr. Barnes, if I decline to answer that question. I have replied now to several since I asked you why you came here this morning.'

"I will tell you," said the detective, playing his trump card, as he thought. 'I have been examining the place where your crime was committed, and I have found that seventh button!" If Mr. Barnes expected Mr. Mitchel to recoil with fear, or tremble, or do anything that an ordinary criminal does when brought face to face with evidence of his guilt, he must have been disappointed. But it is safe to assume that by this time so skillful a man as Mr. Barnes did not expect so consummate an actor as show some interest, however, for he arose from his chair, and walking up to Mr. Barnes he asked simply:

"Have you it with you? May I see it?" Mr. Barnes hesitated a moment, wondering if he risked losing the button by handing it to him. He decided to give it to him and did so.

Mr. Mitchel looked at it closely, as though an expert, and after several moments of silence he tossed it carelessly into the air, catching it as it came down, and then said:

"This would make a pretty situation in a play. Mr. Barnes. Follow me. Detective discovers crime and finds curious button. He finally began smoking admits that he has but six buttons out a pipe and used a cheap cut plug that of seven and asks to see the button he declared was the best thing he him. Then criminal smiles blandly and his taste returned, and he went back says: 'Mr. Detective, now I have seven to the cigars. At present the bare buttons, and my set is complete again. What are you going to do about it?'

"And the detective would reply," said Mr. Barnes, falling into the humor a week off every few months, and of the situation, "Mr. Criminal, I will never look at the weed until they rejust take that back by force."

"Exactly. You eatch the spirit of the stage picture. Then fight between two Democrat men, applause from the gallery, and victory for either party, as the author has decided. All seven were given to me by my friend, but as I could wear but six I returned to her this odd Shakespeare button, which I had made into a breastpin, and kept the others, thus reducing the set of buttons to six. The seventh is no longer a button, you see."

"But how do you account for the fact that this button which I have is plainly a portrait of your friend and a counterpart to those on your vest?"

'My dear Mr. Barnes, I don't account for it. I don't have to, you know. That sort of thing is your business.

"What if I should decide to arrest you at once and ask a jury to determine whether your original set included this button or not?" "That would be inconvenient to me of course. But it is one of those things that we risk every day-I mean arrest by some blundering detective. Pardon me, do not get angry again. I do not allude to yourself. I am quite sure that you are too shrewd to arrest me.' "And why so, pray?"

You will gain nothing by seeing it, for it will simply corroborate my word, which, I think, you believe now. To quote from the argument of Judge Grant, favoring the establishment of an intermediate court: "The population of the state in the politics of the state can be conhas largely increased and new and come up. The rapid increase in miles attack upon individual liberty, I have of railroads, electric railways, tele- sought to submit to the arbitrament of graph and telephone lines, has given greatly increased litigation." I think or industrial status of the citizen. If addition to this statement it can be truthfully said that great combinations of capital seeking to monopolize, in a manner heretofore unknown, nearly all the industrial resources of the land, are being rapidly formed. That these monopolistic trusts are created and must be controlled by the That new precedents must be established and rules laid down for their regulation. That whether they shall be used to promote the common prosperity or to unjustly divert the rewards of labor will be largely depend- spect. ent upon the courts. That to one class of our people these trusts present no menace but are an encouraging sign of real progress, to be fostered and aided as a great economy in industrial > ingly dangerous possibilities. It cannot be said that this divergence presents a wholly partisan question, for very many of those differing from us on other points are in entire accord with us in adherence to the latter idea, while doubtless members of our party are, on the other hand, desirous that tender consideration shall be used toward these institutions. But the party is to be congratulated on the positive declarations made by the convention on this subject. I have no hesitancy in placing myself unequivocally among those who look our industrial activities by a few individuals will in the end mean their luxurious existence while the producing masses sustain life under a humiliating patronage. Landed feudalism with its vassalage and semi-slavery will be practically re-produced in a like condition of industrial serfdom. If this shall be the end of corporate endeavor the people will be self-enslaved. The laws of trade are not superior to the laws of man in this connection. Every step in securing the advantage of capital has been by popular consent. The careless enactment, the easy construction, the loose enforcement of the law have made it possible. Will worn out issues and party traditions continue to aid op-processes. That to another class the development of these agencies pre-sents a problem pregnant with exceed-pression and foster inequality? may properly affect the interpretation of the law, we must admit its pertinency. And upon this point there can be no dispute. Judge Cooley, certainly an authority on the constitutional powers of the courts, says: "Those beneficial maxims of the common law which guard person and property have grown and expanded until they mean vastly more to us than they did to our ancestors, and are more minute, particular, and pervading in their protections; and we may confidently look forward in the future to still further modifications. Public sentiment and action effect such changes and the courts recognize them." The maxims alluded to by the eminent author are those unwritten provisions which are peculiarly within the keeping of the courts. Which direction shall the trend of authority take? Toward the protection of the individual, whose privileges and opportunities are being of the field of conquest in which the advance of corporate dominion is marked by depreciated manhood and diminishing opportunity? Let the test of free suffrage decide. The use of general, instead of special, laws for the creation of corporations has within the last fifty years increased the duties of the courts in connection with the powers of these artificial beings. The change corrected very great evils arising from improvident legislation, but the pressure for greater advantage was not lessened. Both courts and Both courts and legislatures are constantly urged in disregard of the spirit of the common organizations to those of natural persons. Indeed in some instances superior rights are claimed and yielded. The nature of corporations and the vastness of the power they sometimes exert justify the rule of strict construction as necessary to the protection of the public interest. It is distinctively a matter of state rather than national interest. While with some issues our state tribunals have no concern, the privileges and restrictions of corporations, both domestic and for eign, are almost entirely within state control. No matter where chartered no rights other than those of property and ordinary commerce exist save as conferred by the statutes and judicial Hon. Chas. A. Ward, secretary, decisions of the state where operations are sought to be conducted. Whether mindful of freedom or subservient to a subtle and aggressive foe, our status is within our power to fix. The source of our store of maxims is the common law of England. Does anyone ques tion that the sentiment which produced and applied these maxims there approved emphatically and persistently tioned? Is the sentiment obtaining in that plutocratic land the guiding star for Michigan interpretation? In like manner the relation between employer and employe might be discussed. century laws were in force prohibiting employers from paying more than an established wage to labor, and until 1867 violations of contract by employes were punished by imprisonment. Can maxims formulated amid such conditions furnish safe guidance in developing the industrial system of free America? Ought favor to be given to the soulless personality organized to GEORGE WALKER. wage an unequal combat or the pulsating heart of a man? REGENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY.

Edward F. Le Gendre, of Calumet, and Stanley W. Parkill, of Owosso. Edward F. Le Gendre, the first of the Democratic nominees for regent of the State University, was born February 19, 1861, at Ludington, Mason county, and as his name indicates, is of French extraction. He first entered the State University at Ann Arbor in the fall of 1888, but owing to lack of means it was not until 1894 that he graduated from the law department. He first located at Scottville in Mason county for the practice of his profession, and three months after opening his office was made the nominee of the Democratic party of the county for usually 800 Republican, but Mr. Le Gendre was defeated only by 300 votes, In 1395 Mr. Le Gendre moved to Calumet and entered into a law partnership with Oscar J. Larson, the present prosecuting attorney of Houghton county. Mr. Le Gendre was the nominee of his party for prosecuting attorney of Houghton county at the election in 1896, and so highly did the electors esteem him as a citizen that he ran 1.000 ahead of his ticket. He is a staunch supporter of the party platform of 1896, a brilliant speaker, an exemplary citizen, and the alumni of Michigan's great seat of learning may rest assured the interests of that institution will be well served in the event of his election as regent.

Stanley E. Parkill, of Owosso, was born in Bennington township, Shiawassee county, and moved to Owosso when a lad. He attended the high school, later graduating from the University of Michigan in the pharmacy department. In 1882 he was engaged as traveling salesman for the old firm of Farrand, Williams & Co. Three years later he left the road, returned to Owesso and engaged in the drug business. He was for two years secretary of the State Pharmaceutical association, and afterwards its president, was appointed a member of the State Board of Pharmacy by Gov. Luce in 1887 and reappointed by Gov. Rich in 1893; was for two years the as its treasurer and president. He is aa present a member of the board of public works, of Owosso, Parkill was a Republican in politics, but refused to follow the party in its change of base on the currency question and voted for Mr. Bryan in 1896. He was a candidate for the regency of the University on the Union-Silver ticket two years ago and was secretary of the Silver Republican convention at Bay City in 1896, and chairman of the Silver Republican convention at Grand Rapids last year.

"Peace Hath Her Victories

No less renowned than war," said Milton, and now, in the Spring, is the time to get a peaceful victory over the impurities which have been accumulating in the blood during Winter's hearty eating. The banner of peace is borne aloft by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

It brings rest and comfort to the weary body racked by pains of all sorts and kinds. Its beneficial effects prove it to be the great specific to be relied upon for victory. Hood's never disappoints.

Scrofula — "Running scrofula sores made me shunned by neighbors. Medical treatment failed. A relative urged me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. Did so and in few months the sores completely healed." Mrs. J. M. HATCH, Etna, N. H.

Catarrh—"Disagreeable catarrhal droppings in my throat made me nervous and dizzy. My liver was torpid. Hood's Saraparilla corrected both troubles. My health is very good." Mrs. Elvira J. Smiley, 171 Main St., Auburn, Maine.

Tumors—"A tumor as big as a large marble came under my tongue and instead of letting my physician operate on it, I used my favorite spring tonic, Hood's Sarsaparilla. The bunch soon disappeared." Mrs. H. M. COBURN, & Union St., Lowell, Mass.

Hood's Pills cure liver ills, the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

pains, displacements and weaknesses pecu-liar to her sex, she ages fast. The wrinkles come early. The roses in the cheeks van ish, and an unwholesome pallor spreads over her features. She becomes nervous, over her features. She becomes hervous, petulant, fidgetty. She loses flesh, and drags about in a most miserable state of body and mind. Such a sick woman needs Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine will restore the looks of younger days by strengthening her in a womanly Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine will restore the looks of younger days by strengthening her in a womanly way. It will do what powders and paints and "beautifiers" can never do. It is a non-alcoholic and non-narcotic preparation. The stimulation and strength it imparts are permanent. It cures all the distressing ailments commonly called "female troubles." There is no other remedy so good for this purpose. When a medicine dealer urges upon you something else as a substitute for it, he is attempting a personal injury. Never take any substitute for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

"I have been in poor health more or less alt my life," writes Mrs. M. F. Long, of Le Long, Franklin Co., Kans. "A specialist said I had ulceration of the womb and that an operation would have to be performed. At last I wrote to Dr. Pierce asking advice. I received an answer advising me to try his medicines, his 'Favorite Prescription,' Golden Medical Discovery,' and also his 'Pleasant Pellets.' In one month gained eight pounds. After taking two bottles of each medicine, I began to look like a woman and not like a wasted skeleton. That weary, tired feeling has all left me."

The Truth About Catarrh.

Deputy U. S. Marshal William T. Harness of Ohio, writes to Dr. Hartman.

gusting disease gets hold and clings; it baffles all local treatment; it penetrates to every organ of the body. It is consumption! It is gastritis! Its names are legion. The man with catarrh of the stomach, commonly called indigestion, knows what suffering is. His enemy is always with him; it haunts him at the table; it follows him when he lies down

"Relief" is eagerly sought and paid for in suffering. William T. Harness, Deputy United States Marshal Southern District of Ohio, is completely cured of catarrh of the head and stomach by Dr. Hartman's treatment. Mr. Harness, whose picture is printed here, is one of the best known and most popular democrats in Southern Ohio, his popularity being fully demonstrated by his election for three successive terms to office in the republican county of Washington. He was appointed Deputy United States Marshal during the administration of President Cleveland, and his record in that office has been an enviable one.

Dr. Hartman, Pres. Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O. DEAR SIE:—It affords me much pleasure to bear testimony to the worth of your medicines, Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin. I have been troubled with catarrh of the head and stomach; I have used many of the best known and most widely advertised medicines but found no permanent relief. About one year ago I began to take your Pe-ru-na and I am pleased to say that I now consider myself completely cured of catarrh. I was also troubled with indigestion, and have other band of counterfeiters and secured a large quantity of bogus bills, which are so cleverly executed that the average person would never suspect them of being spurious. Things of great value are always selected by counterfeiters for imitation, notably the celebrated Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has many imitators but no equals for indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, nervonsness and general debility. The Bitters sets things right in the stomach, and when the stomach is in good order it makes good blood and plenty of it. In this manner the Bitters get at the seat of strength and vitality, and restore vigor to the weak and debilitated. Beware of counterfeiters when buying.

Still More Counterfeiting. The secret service has unearthed an-

Now is your time to place an order for monumental or other cemetery work to insure setting early in the spring before Decoration Day. Call and examine stock on hand and look over my lately received modern designs. JOHN BAUMGARDNER,
