

A DETENTION HOSPITAL AN IMPERATIVE NECESSITY

On Monday Health Officer Hinsdale mailed the following postal to each of the physicians of the city:

Ann Arbor, Mich., July 6, 1903.
Dear Doctor:

Will you attend a conference with the other physicians and the Board of Health of the city to consult with reference to the prevalence of Scarlet Fever? Time, Wednesday evening next, 7:30 o'clock. Place, Council Chamber, Court House.

Very truly,
W. B. Hinsdale,
Health Officer.

Tuesday, pursuant to the notice, some twenty or more of the physicians of the city and members of the health board assembled in the council chamber to discuss the subject. H. J. Brown was called to the chair and Dr. Ronneberger was elected secretary. A general discussion of the question relative to which the conference was called was then indulged, nearly every physician present taking part. As germane to the subject the questions of a city garbage plant and an isolation hospital were discussed at some length. Health Officer Hinsdale related his troubles in keeping persons at homes where there was scarlet fever from running at large. The more ignorant would not obey orders any longer than there was an officer to watch them. Dr. Weisinger told how certain families having scarlet fever were given to dumping filth from the home on a dump heap, where children are in the habit of playing. He believed a few prosecutions under the law would aid the physicians in preventing the spread of the disease. Another aid in the prevention of the spread of contagious disease was the connection of homes with sewers wherever possible. Dr. Hinsdale declared there was no enforcement at all of the ordinance relative to this matter.

It was the consensus of opinion of the physicians that the laws of sanitation and isolation were largely impossible of enforcement until a city garbage plant and an isolation hospital were provided. Garbage could not be properly disposed of in a city the size of Ann Arbor without some system thereof. Neither can patients with communicable disease be isolated effectively without a hospital. People will not send children to a "pest house" worse as a place of detention pending recovery than the homes. Before people can be induced to willingly let members of their families go from the home they must understand that the place to which they are to be removed is properly arranged for care and nursing.

Alderman Coon who was present, stated that the common council had the matter of a garbage plant under consideration now. He likewise thought the council was disposed to consider seriously the matter of a detention hospital, but his talk did not indicate any probability of the council doing anything with the $20,000 detention hospital project at this time. It was also stated in this connection that there was no chance of the university doing so either. It was thought that the university might give $1,500 possibly for this purpose and Alderman Coon was of the opinion the city would do as much. However it was the opinion of the physicians that this would create no advantages over the present situation. The university already has a pest house with as good facilities as could be created for $3,000. Alderman Coon thought the appointment of a committee to again bring the threatening conditions now existing in the city to the attention of the council might be a good thing to do. A resolution to that effect was passed and the chair appointed a committee composed of Drs. Vaughan, Dock, Weisinger, Breakey and George such committee and a meeting of the committee was called for the council chamber this evening at 8 o'clock.

Health Officer Hinsdale suggested also that this important question of preventing the spread of contagious diseases might possibly be taken up in the union church services and he strongly advised the seeking of an invitation from the churches to have the subject thus discussed. Dr. Herdman of the University strongly indorsed this idea and if the churches will consent, men thoroughly qualified to handle the subject from a scientific standpoint will be selected from the medical profession of the city and university to present different phases of the subject in the different churches.

The medical profession of the city as represented in the meeting last night was strongly in favor of doing its full duty in the matter of placing this important subject fully before the laity.

WILL THERE BE A LEGAL SCRAP

Over New Board of County Auditors

WHITAKER'S ACCEPTANCE

Not On Record—What Will Be the Effect of the Mix-up

Messrs. Whitaker, Reimenschneider and McGregor, the newly elected members of the new board of county auditors under the new county auditor law were in the city Tuesday and took the oath of office, which was administered by Register of Deeds Huston.

Later a meeting was held for the purpose of organization. It appears that County Clerk Blum, who under the provisions of the statute is made ex-officio a member of the board and secretary of the same, did not attend this meeting, at least his name is not attached to the official minutes which are as follows:

Ann Arbor, Mich., July 7, 1903.

Meeting of the Board of County Auditors held at the Court House, Tuesday afternoon of the above date, present Auditors Whitaker, Reimenschneider and McGregor.

Meeting called to order by senior member Whitaker.
Motion by Auditor Reimenschneider that Auditor McGregor be elected chairman of this board.

Motion supported. Roll called. Ayes—Whitaker and Reimenschneider—2; nays—none. Auditor McGregor not voting. Carried. Auditor McGregor declared elected chairman.

On motion board adjourned to meet the first Monday in August for the transaction of such business as may come before the board.

J. E. MCGREGOR,
Chairman.

The county clerk by the terms of the statute is ex-officio a member of the board and secretary.

The Argus inquired of Mr. Whitaker as to his views as to the constitutional question involved in his case and he replied that after consultation over the matter he had determined to qualify and await developments. If any one proceeded against him by mandamus or otherwise and he became satisfied he could not lawfully hold the place he would resign or withdraw, when the other two members could fill the vacancy. The inference from his statement was that he was inclined to the belief that the constitutional provision does not exclude him from holding the office.

The law provides that the board shall receive five dollars a day for time put in and limits the time so paid for to three days a month. An examination of the records in the county clerk's office revealed the fact that the oath and acceptance of Messrs. Reimenschneider and McGregor were properly filed, but there was nothing on record as to Mr. Whitaker. The inference is therefore that there is something in the air and that there is likely to be a mix-up over Whitaker's right to hold the office. There seems at least to be a good chance for it.

Suppose, for instance, the county clerk, who is also clerk of the board of auditors, refuses to act as clerk of the board of auditors as constituted. Suppose bills against the county are held up and not presented to the board of auditors. Or, again, suppose these bills are presented to the board of auditors and certain bills are allowed by a divided vote, the allowance of the bills depending upon Whitaker's vote. Then suppose the county treasurer refuses to allow the bill. Or suppose the clerk refuses to draw the proper order on the county treasurer. Suppose the disputed question is not settled until the board of supervisors meets and that all bills are then presented to that board, could that board act?

Of course a case can easily be made up and taken into court and thus the right of Mr. Whitaker to sit be determined, but the interesting speculation is as to what will actually happen. The county clerk refuses to talk, but the record shows that Whitaker's oath and acceptance have been treated differently from the others. The minutes are not signed by the clerk and the inference from this is that he may not be disposed to attend the meetings of the board until the legal organization of the same is determined.

There seems to be a fine chance, therefore, for a mix-up before the board of auditors is launched upon its duties. It is unfortunate to say the least that such an issue should be made possible just at the time this new law from the operation of which so much was expected goes into effect.

BUILDING THE LINE TO CHELSEA

Car Will Be Running in Forty-five Days

Boland People Anxious to Get Line Through to Ann Arbor—Work to be Pushed

In forty-five days electric cars will be running to Chelsea over the Jackson & Suburban Traction company's tracks, the system to become part of the Jackson & Ann Arbor electric road, which will be built in the near future. Cars will then connect with the Jackson & Battle Creek line, and through service may be given. The work on the road will commence the first of next week, at the latest. This the latest information given out.

The company is preparing to transfer men who are employed west of the city to Grass Lake, and work will be commenced as soon as they arrive. Material has been ordered and should be on the ground in a short time. The work of rebalancing the track west from Grass Lake will be commenced at once. A portion of the Chelsea line is constructed at the present time, but it will be necessary to make several repairs, as well as install a third rail, the power for the road to be conveyed by this system, the trolley to be used only in the corporations, and along the stretch of track between this city and Grass Lake.

The Michigan Central switch engine, now resting at Albion, used by the Jackson & Battle Creek Traction Co., will be employed on this construction work, as soon as it has been fitted with a new pair of drive wheel tires. The work east will be expedited, as the company desires to have a through service to Ann Arbor just as soon as possible. The Ann Arbor road will connect with the eastern line owned and controlled by the Jackson & Suburban Traction company.—Jackson Press.

"DOC" ROSE KNOCKED OUT

Can Not Have Saloon in Barred District

ORDINANCE IS VALID

Supreme Court So Decides—Charter Provisions Were Sufficient Without Amending

"Doc" Rose is knocked out and his saloon will have to remain closed.

The common council have authority to limit, by ordinance, the territory in which saloons may be conducted in the city.

These two facts were fully established in an opinion handed down by the supreme court at Lansing Wednesday.

The facts in the case at issue were: Prior to May 1, "Doc" Rose presented his bonds to the common council for approval preparatory to taking out a license for the sale of liquor at his place on the corner of State and Fuller streets. The council failed to approve the bonds, the matter being laid upon the table, presumably because of the ordinance defining the saloon limits of the city and the fact that Rose's place is in the proscribed territory.

Rose afterwards applied to the circuit court for a mandamus compelling the council to convene and approve his bonds. This mandamus was granted by Judge Kinne, he saying:

"Under the charter, as it now stands, this ordinance has no validity, and it follows that there exists no apparent reason why the common council should not approve the bond of the relator. It is assumed that the common council will now at its early convenience approve the bond in question. If not a mandamus will issue."

The case was at once removed to the supreme court, by certiorari, by City Attorney Kearney and Wednesday the court reversed the ruling of the lower court and remanded the case. This means that Judge Kinne will, upon application, grant an order dismissing the mandamus proceedings.

A THOUSAND DOLLARS THROWN AWAY.

Mr. W. W. Baker of Plainview, Neb., writes: "My wife had lung trouble for over fifteen years. We tried a number of doctors and spent over a thousand dollars without any relief. She was very low and I lost all hope, when a friend suggested trying Foley's Honey and Tar, which I did; and thanks be to this great remedy, it saved her life. She is stronger and enjoys better health than she has ever known in ten years. We shall never be without Foley's Honey and Tar and would ask those afflicted to try it."

THE MARRIAGE OF MISS WETMORE

BEAUTIFUL CEREMONY THAT UNITED HER TO T. W. HAUGHT

Performed by Father of the Bride—Happy Couple Will Reside in Virginia

A quiet but beautiful wedding took place Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wetmore, 302 W. Huron street, when Helen G., their daughter, was united in marriage to Thomas W. Haught, of Buckhannon, W. Va.

To the music of Mendelssohn's Wedding March the bridal party took their places under a bower of ferns and palms. Tiny Gertrude Bullis, niece of the bride, was ring-bearer. She was dressed in pure white and bore the ring on a white satin cushion. She was followed by Florence K. Wetmore, maid of honor and sister of the bride, who was gowned in a Dresden figured green and carried a shower bouquet of sweet peas.

The bride followed with her father, Rev. W. W. Wetmore. They were met at the altar by the groom and groomsmen, William M. Wetmore, brother of the bride.

The wedding ceremony was performed by the bride's father, Rev. W. W. Wetmore, the Rev. Mr. Gelsont of the Presbyterian church assisting. It was the ring service, simple and impressive, during which the Traummerel was softly played.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white silk grenadine over white taffeta, trimmed with Brussels lace. She carried a bouquet of bridal roses and a fairer or more gracious bride was never looked upon.

The rooms were heavy with the perfume of many flowers. The mantels were banked with them, the hall and parlor was a mass of white and green, and the dining room a dazzle of red. Red carnations were chosen in honor of the Pi Beta Phi sorority of which it is the accepted flower and of which sorority Miss Wetmore is a member.

Ten girls of the Pi Beta Phi of Detroit, were present among the fifty relatives and immediate friends that witnessed the ceremony and wished Mr. and Mrs. Haught great joy and life-long happiness.

The out-of-town guests were: Mr.

and Mrs. F. C. Wetmore, Cadillac, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Wetmore, Jonesville, Miss Anna M. Bursleson, Niagara Falls, Miss Margaret Gilbert, Ypsilanti, Miss Nellie Parsons, Ypsilanti, Miss Philippine Seyler, Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clark, Mrs. James Chenoweth, Oklahoma City.

After the ceremony the bride and groom left for a lake trip of a week. Then they will go to Alwood, West Va., returning about August 1, to Buckhannon, West Va.

Mr. Haught is a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity and a professor of science in Buckhannon College. So it is there Mr. and Mrs. Haught will make their future home.

GERMAN LANDWEHR CHANGES AGE LIMIT

The German Landwehr held the annual convention of the state-body at Jackson this week, and transacted considerable business. Probably the most important change in the by-laws by the convention was to change the age limit from 45 years to 50 years. Until the age of 45 the rates are the same, but after 45 they are a dollar a year for each year of additional age up to 50 years to applicants for membership and insurance in the Landwehr.

The officers elected for the ensuing year are:

Colonel—Herman Sternhagen, Detroit.

First Lieutenant—George Setzer, Cornma.

Adjutant—August Proefke, Detroit.

Financier—Frank Bayling, Detroit.

Trustees—Jacob Gutekunst, Grand Rapids; William Beck, Detroit; John J. Schantz, Ann Arbor.

The next convention of the Landwehr will be held at Port Huron the first week of next July.

NIGHT WAS HER TERROR.

"I would cough nearly all night long," writes Mrs. Charles Applegate, of Alexandria, Ind., "and could hardly get any sleep. I had consumption so bad that if I walked a block I would cough frightfully and spit blood but, when all other medicines failed, three $1.00 bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery wholly cured me and I gained 58 pounds." It's absolutely guaranteed to cure Coughs, Colds, La Grippe, Bronchitis and All Throat and Lung Troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at H. F. Miller's and A. M. Mummy's drug stores.

CHANGE IN FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATIONS.

As one reads the returns of the Fourth of July celebrations held throughout the country, how little of the old-time Americanism appears in any of the programs. In many places no reference appears in any way to the great Declaration or to those principles of liberty which were formerly so prominent a part of all such occasions. Noise and riotous conduct in many of these celebrations replaced entirely these old-time ideals. As a matter of fact the principles of the Declaration of Independence have been so impaired and constitutional guarantees so twisted by the colonial system which we have grafted upon our democracy that the old-time kind of celebration would not be in keeping with much of the tendency of the times.

Ex-Senator Chas. A. Towne, speaking in Tammany hall on the Fourth voiced something of the causes of this change. Among other things he said:

"This new policy of colonization is trying to masquerade in the borrowed garments of democracy. It has labeled itself 'expansion,' but the disguise is transparent. The new policy is not expansion. Expansion is the natural and healthful growth of an organism. The imperialistic process of enlargement is by the extraneous grafting of alien and unsympathetic tissue between which and the parent life there can never be any organic relation.

"The tendencies that, under the party in power, have led to a repudiation of the Declaration of Independence and to a partial imperialism of the constitution of the United States, have naturally produced a corresponding revolution in the traditions and maxims of the government. The corruption discovered in our colonial administration, bad as it was, has been completely overshadowed by the recent revelations of systematized and confederated fraud in the postoffice department, which has astounded the country and arraigned the administration at the bar of public opinion. It is the natural result of long-continued irresponsible power.

"We are at the parting of the ways. The American people must choose and choose soon, whether to abandon the traditions of a century and a quarter to enter upon the road trodden to their doom by so many nations that have gone before us, or to make a re-dedication of this government to the sublime principles of its founders."

CARNEGIE'S GIFTS.

Ann Arbor is to be numbered among the cities destined to aid Andrew Carnegie in escaping the ignominy of dying rich. At Monday's council meeting it was voted to accept his offer of $20,000 for a public library building. Of course the amount he has offered to give Ann Arbor is but a drop in the bucket of his princely benefactions, but it is a considerable sum for Ann Arbor. The amount of Mr. Carnegie's known gifts to the present time is $90,912,223, and his silent donations will undoubtedly swell this sum to at least $100,000,000. If this enormous sum were reduced to one-dollar bills and placed end to end they would make a ribbon extending from Chicago to Manila by way of the Suez canal. If pasted into a square they would cover 335 acres of ground. If all his benefactions were converted into silver dollars and piled one upon another, counting ten to the inch, they would make a pile 160 miles high. In a cube formation, each dollar at the base touching rims with the others, they would make a pile about fourteen feet square at the base and one hundred feet high.

AN EXCELLENT LAW.

The recent session of the Illinois legislature passed a first class child labor law and it has just become operative. It is a law which if properly enforced will improve the future citizenship of the state in no small degree. The law, while stringent, is none too much so and the authorities should see that it is enforced in letter and spirit. The Chicago Evening Post say of it editorially:

The child-labor law passed at the last session of the legislature is now in effect. It is one of the most stringent measures of the kind in existence, and if it is rigidly enforced it cannot fail to bring about a most gratifying improvement. Already it is estimated that 2,500 children have been discharged because the conditions of their employment did not comply with the law.

The vital features of the new law are these:

No children under 14 years of age shall be employed.
Children between 14 and 16 years of age must possess an age and school certificate containing an affidavit of age and of ability to read and write from the child's teacher, an affidavit from its parents as to age, the certificate to be issued by the board of education.

Children under 16 years of age are not to be employed in dangerous occupations, and the law defines what occupations are dangerous, so that the matter cannot be left for opinion and expert testimony.

Children under 16 years of age are not to be employed more than eight hours a day or forty-eight hours a week they are forbidden to work except between the hours of 7 a. m. and 7 p. m.

It is not likely that any employer in the state is ignorant of the provisions of this law, and so there can be no good reason why its enforcement to the very letter should not begin with today. For no matter how strong or desirable a law may be, its whole effectiveness lies in its proper enforcement.

THE SLIMY POOL NOT TO BE STIRRED TO ITS DEPTHS.

As developments continue in the postoffice department scandal, the surprising thing is that these steals, and jobs and 40 per cent rake-offs could have been continued so long. The blackest sheep that has been exposed yet is, of course, the man Machen, but he has threatened to involve men higher up in the scandal, and is there any one who doubts that more or less of his superiors are involved? The New York World puts the matter clearly as follows:

"Behind Beavers and Machen it seems to be clearly established that there were men 'higher up,' leaders in the senate and house, who were using them as tools to exploit the postal service for their own political ends. The fact that the total annual expenditure for rural free delivery service was less than $50,000 in 1897, is now $12,000,000, and will be, it is estimated, $24,000,000 a year when it is fully expanded, indicates what a magnificent field for loot and blackmail it offers to corrupt officials working in collusion with self-seeking senators and congressmen. The public have a right to know the whole truth. The statesmen now dimly discerned in the background, working the rural free delivery system as a patronage mill and incidentally as a political bureau, must be brought to the front. Mr. Roosevelt's plain duty to the country is to force Mr. Payne, no matter how powerful the influences may be that seek to smother this manifestly far-reaching scandal, to live up to the historic mandate, 'Let no guilty man escape.'"

It would be a great satisfaction to the people were there convincing proof of a disposition by those in authority to "let no guilty man escape," but there is no such determination and there will not be no matter how much bluster is made. There are undoubtedly men concerned in this postoffice department scandal too powerful to be brought to book. Before the matter is ended a convenient scape-goat will be found and the principal load of thieving will be saddled upon him and his going will be pointed to as an illustration of the disposition high up in authority to purge the public service of rascals. But everybody will clearly understand that there are others higher up who will not be disposed of according to justice.

It has not been forgotten what powerful friends were discovered who aided and befriended the scoundrels in the Cuban postal thievery, Neely and Rathbone, and how revelations as to crookedness in the Philippine service were pigeonholed and denounced as "attacks on the army" and how the public prosecutor in Porto Rico was instructed not to proceed against even navy and other officers for smuggling. Political friends in powerful places are not to be alienated by pursuing too earnestly the scoundrels in the public service in which they may be interested.

A mammoth watch built for the occasion, on such a large scale that people may walk around in it, among the moving wheels, will be on exhibition at the World's Fair. Visitors will thus be able to study the mechanism of a watch without the aid of a glass.

NO PITY SHOWN.

BOSTON SCHOOLS AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Boston will make an interesting display of the work of her public schools at the World's Fair. An appropriation of $3,000 will be made for this purpose. The exhibit will be a practical illustration of the school system. Upon the exhibit sent to Paris in 1900, Boston received two grand prizes and a gold medal. The bulk of the exhibit to be sent to St. Louis will consist of numerous bound volumes comprising the actual work of the school children from lesson to lesson for a continuous period of time. The display will embrace the work from the lowest grades of the grammar schools through the high schools and the normal school. In the grammar grades, bound volumes containing language exercises just as written by the pupils, even with the corrections of the teachers, will illustrate teaching methods. High school work will be represented by bound volumes of papers written by pupils who have studied French, German, Latin, Greek, French history, physics, chemistry, algebra and geometry. The Boston Normal School will also be represented by specimens of the work done there. An interesting feature of the display will be specimens of work from the Mechanic Arts School where weaving, dressmaking and cooking are taught the girls, and wood turning, forging and mechanical drawing, the boys.

TO REORGANIZE NAVY DEPARTMENT.

A movement is now on foot to reorganize the entire naval administration. Mr. Moody, the Secretary of the Navy, now has a plan in his hands providing for the creation of a naval general staff. If this plan is adopted, the department institutions, such as the war college, or the bureau of navigation, will be merged with the general staff, whose chief will exercise the same supervision over the military divisions as the Assistant Secretary over the bureaus, and in the absence of both Secretary and Assistant Secretary, the Chief of Staff will be Acting Secretary. The present functions and authority of the Secretary will be maintained.

This reorganization plan should, and undoubtedly will, be adopted. Ever since the outbreak of the Spanish-American war it has been apparent that the Bureau of Navigation is in need of a thorough overhauling. It has been a hotbed of political intrigue and chicanery. The impertinent role that some of the officials played in the Sampson-Schley controversy is well remembered. Anything that is calculated to remove the navy and army departments beyond the sphere of politics and offensive intrigue will have the nation's approval.

FOLLOWING BRITISH EXAMPLE.

Although Secretary Root, of the War Department, has temporarily side-tracked the opium business in the Philippines in order to get the people to quit thinking about it, it undoubtedly is the intention of the American administration to establish an opium monopoly in those islands. When it does it will receive a rake-off amounting to one hundred and fifty thousand dollars per annum. This sort of monopoly should work wonders in the archipelago. The merits of opium as a Christianizing and civilizing agency are well established. Perhaps the government obtained valuable pointers from Downing street in regard to the advantages of an opium monopoly.

The British have done a lucrative and flourishing business in opium ever since they introduced it in China. Considering the splendid effects which the dope has produced in the Celestial regions, Taft's Government has every reason to be exuberantly optimistic about the consequences to follow the setting up of an opium monopoly in the Philippine Islands. The dope should prove more efficacious than Bibles and guns.

Carrying One's Own Outfit.

Before the revolution in France it was customary when a gentleman had been invited out to dinner to send his servant in advance with his knife, fork and spoon. If he had no servant he carried them with him in his pocket.

Wrought Iron.

The British museum possesses what is probably the oldest known piece of wrought iron. It was found in the pyramid of Cheops and must be 4,900 years old.

Speed of Ducks.

Ducks fly at an average rate of ninety miles an hour. With a fair wind it is believed that they can make 150 miles in the same time.

Outlaws In Ambush

An American's Fight For Life With Thirty
Filipino Bandits.

Severely Wounded, He Slew
Five of the Ruffians Single Handed--A Desperate Battle.

Lieutenant Harrison O. Fletcher of the Philippine constabulary has had his share of exciting adventures in the islands, the last of which, when he fought, single handed, a band of thirty native outlaws, killing five, is unparalleled in the annals of Uncle Sam's Asiatic Isles.

Lieutenant Fletcher's first notable exploit was when he went to the rescue of a Spanish ship lying in the harbor at Albay whose crew had mutinied and were carrying things with a high hand. He jumped into a boat with two of his assistants and pulled for the vessel.

The mutinous crew had already murdered the chief engineer and the steward, had wounded the captain, the mate, the second engineer and one passenger, was in full control of the vessel and was running her out to sea when Inspector Fletcher arrived. He and his men, fighting their way, gained the deck of the boat by climbing up the side, and, engaging the mutineers hand to hand, succeeded in killing three, wounding five and driving all the others either below or into the sea. Thirty-five of the mutineers were captured, and the only two who escaped are supposed to have been shot and drowned in the bay.

Recently the name of Lieutenant Harrison Fletcher has again come to this country in connection with another tale of unusual bravery. Alone he fought a band of thirty Filipino outlaws, killing five and wounding others. Here is the story as told by himself:

At the time it happened I was on duty in the province of Albay, which is infested by some 500 or 600 native outlaws, insurgents, as they call themselves. My station was in Ligao.

I had just returned from a fifteen days' hike in the mountains and had received orders to proceed to the town of Tobaco to take station.

Not having the advantage of trolleys or trains, I accepted the best alternative--my bicycle--as I wanted to get to my station as soon as possible, and late in the afternoon I reached my first "stop off," the little town of Guinobatan, with my two hombies bringing up the rear with my baggage.

I concluded to stay for supper and ride on down the main road by moonlight to the next town, about three miles distant, where I could spend the night.

When I went to the mess I found it composed of four of my countrymen, two very charming schoolteachers, a telegraph operator and a fellow officer of the constabulary.

When a man is hungry and has not seen American faces nor heard the familiar tongue for a long while the time is apt to slip along with remarkable rapidity when both desires are fulfilled at once.

While we were at supper a bull cart came along on its way to Albay, in which were riding the presidente of Ligao and several prominent natives with a guard of municipal police.

I asked the presidente to take my baggage down to Albay, as I had no transportation, and he readily consented, inviting me to accompany them instead of riding my wheel. But I preferred a few hours with my congenial countrymen and a lonely bicycle ride afterward to a perfectly safe and uneventful drive in a bull cart. So I replied that I would overtake him on my wheel before he got out of town. He left me with the parting advice not to try to come alone.

All this time some of the natives were idly listening to the brief and audible conversation and eyed me curiously as I returned to my interrupted supper.

When they proposed that I prolong my stay and call on my two countrywomen I was easily persuaded. As a result it was 9:30 at night when I started on my lonely ride, with small hope of overtaking the presidente of Ligao and his escort, who had had several hours' start of me.

I rode hard to try to make up for lost time and derived some comfort from the fact that I had carried in my belt a fully loaded 38 caliber Colt's revolver and across my back my Krag carbine.

About half a mile from the town the road runs through a thick cocoanut grove, with small native houses on both sides. When I entered the grove the moonlight was shut out, but my acetylene lamp stood me in good stead. I had passed several houses and was spinning along the road at a splendid rate, with a prospect of reaching my destination in time.

Suddenly the broad beam of my lamp revealed to me the outlaws lying in the ditch on either side of the road. The lamp probably saved my life, for without it I would have been in their midst before seeing them.

Almost before I had time to stop and hop off my wheel they were on me, and before I could get my revolver in action I was cut in four places--on the left jaw, left forearm, shoulder and in the center of my breast--not so badly, however, that I could not defend myself, which I proceeded to do with a right good will.

I shot the four men nearest me in the stomach and chest, and the others started to run. My revolver had been emptied, but in my excitement I incautiously snapped it twice. I had had no chance to unsling my carbine in the beginning of the fracas, so I was almost defenseless.

The leader of the band saw my plight and ordered his men to return. They, however, thought me a sort of "white devil," with unseen resources, for they hesitated, and I was saved. Before they had time to decide my carbine was unsung and barking furiously. Five more men went down before they had time to run, and more of them were wounded, but they got away.

All this time I was yelling and giving orders as though I had a whole regiment of soldiers behind me, telling them in Spanish to hurry up. The men were getting away as fast as they could when I heard a voice calling out in English to know what was the matter. I had been swearing like a trooper in my own tongue, and that and my voice revealed my nationality to the man who had answered me and whom I found to be an American negro in the Ninth cavalry. He lost no time in getting to my side, and just in time, for I was terribly weak from loss of blood.

As we were leaving the scene of my brief and exciting fight I, half held and half carried by my companion, a man I had shot through the right lung came whimpering up to me, begging me not to kill him, as he was already dying. I took his bolo as a precaution and decided to take him along for the information I might glean from him concerning the band.

I left behind me five dead and several dying men as a warning to the rest of the insurgents. I learned from my captive all the information I sought and more.

That night my wounds were dressed, and the next day, very weak and sore and with a sufficient escort, I proceeded to Albay. On examining into the state of affairs as regarded my own condition I found that my carbine had saved my life in the fight. A treacherous blow from behind had almost severed its stock, but had not touched me.

In Jail For Love.

Out on lonely Alcatraz island, off Oakland, Cal., in the government penitentiary is a man wearing a butternut prison suit, with the letters G. P. branded on the back of the coat, who went to a prison cell all because of love. He was an enlisted man in the army who deserted to marry a captain's daughter. He married the girl, but Uncle Sam caught him when he started on his honeymoon, and now he is a general prisoner, sentenced to two years at hard labor at Alcatraz, and his bride is busy circulating a petition for his pardon.

MOTHER WANTS
$3,000 DAMAGES

Sues Two Saloon Keepers For Selling Liquor

TO HER MINOR SON

Saloonists Also Have Criminal
Charge Against Them--
Several Boys Involved
In the Matter.

Mrs. Ella Schroeder, through her attorney, Frank A. Stivers, has commenced action against Edmund Clancy and Ernest Paul and their bondsmen for civil damages, charging them with selling intoxicating liquors to her minor son, Charles Schroeder, a lad some twelve years of age. The damage is laid at $3,000 in each case.

Charles Schroeder is one of several young boys who while attending a party some time ago are alleged to have gone out and got liquor on which they got into a most unsatisfactory condition. Criminal charges were preferred against the before-mentioned saloon keepers and when brought before Justice Doty they were bound over to the circuit court for trial. This case is now pending.

Mrs. Schroeder now brings action against them for civil damages under the act known as the Civil Damages Act which involves the bondsmen as well as the principals. The bondsmen are, for Paul, Gottlieb Andres and John Berger, for Clancy, Jacob Dupper and Martin Seabolt.

Mrs. Schroeder is the only one of the parents who has thus far commenced civil proceedings against the saloon keepers.

VICIOUS DOG
BITES YOUNG LADY

OWNER ARRESTED & BROUGHT BEFORE JUSTICE DOTY

Last Friday night a vicious dog belonging to Mrs. Julia Sharpe, of 220 N. First street, bit Miss Mary Larmee. She had the owner of the dog arrested on the charge of harboring a vicious dog. The case was up before Justice Doty Monday. It transpired that Mrs. Sharpe had paid Miss Larmee what she claimed in the way of damage and accordingly the judge permitted this to stand in lieu of a fine, and taxed the costs to Mrs. Sharpe amounting to $3.20, making in all $6.20, which she paid on account of the dog. Besides, Justice Doty decreed that the vicious animal should be killed within six hours of the time of service of notice. The proper papers were placed in the hands of Marshal Kelsey to serve.

MRS. MARY TENNANT
GRANTED A DIVORCE

Judge Kinne granted another divorce Friday morning. The case was that of Mrs. Mary Tennant against her husband Albridge Tennant. She swore that seven years ago her husband sent her home to her mother and while she was away he disposed of all the furniture and departed. She heard nothing from him from that time until sometime last year when he wrote her from Chicago. During all these years he had contributed nothing to her support. She had supported herself by working by the week in the home of a farmer. She asked for a divorce on the ground of desertion and non-support. The case was not contested and the divorce was granted.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a Home of Swamp-Root pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

OUR GERMAN CRITICS

Impressions of the Kaiser's Agricultural Party.

AMERICAN HOSPITALITY PRAISED.

Distinguished Visitors Who Have Been Touring the United States Say We Have a Wonderful Country, but Seem Skeptical as to the Profit to Their Land From Their Observations.

Seemingly skeptical as to whether they have gained sufficient knowledge to repay them for their seven weeks' tour through the United States, the delegation of forty-seven Germans sent to this country by the Kaiser to study American agricultural methods recently left for their native land, says the New York Times. Before they left they gathered at the Hotel Belvedere in New York the other day at an informal luncheon tendered to John Schulte of the United States department of agriculture, who accompanied them officially.

After the luncheon Erich Speck von Fluegge, imperial counselor on economy and the Kaiser's personal representative, was interviewed.

"This is a big country, a great country, a wonderful country," he said. "We admire it very, very much. But most of all do we admire the people. They have been so kind, so hospitable, to us. You have magnificent schools, and the men in charge of them appear to me to be very, very clever men. We marveled at the means you have for supporting your institutions of learning. The agricultural experimental farms especially interested us, for, you know, we came here to learn about your methods of agriculture."

"May I say that you are leaving this country with impressions that will improve your knowledge of agricultural things in general?" the reporter asked.

"No, no; don't say anything about that. Don't say anything about that at all," quickly answered Von Fluegge, shaking his head energetically and holding up his hands. "But you can print in big letters how much we appreciate the hospitality—the splendid hospitality—of the Americans."

Rittmeister Lemcke, who, besides being a captain of cavalry, is the owner of a feudal estate comprising 6,000 acres, was indignant over sleeping car accommodations on American railroads. In a loud tone he declared:

"The Pullman accommodations were dirty and filthy—too bad for utterance. We didn't want first class Pullmans, but we wanted at least comfortable accommodations. And then those dirty negro servants who made up our beds, they were something vile."

He was not satisfied with the meals either. "With tremendous sums of money we could purchase meals that were not at all adequate or satisfactory," he said. "At other times the meals we got for less money were very good."

On Rittmeister Lemcke's estate are large forests, and he was especially interested in American woodlands.

"American farmers," he said, "are doing away with wood in their big forests entirely without thought of the future. In the west we found big piles of wood decaying and not used because it had been cut down without necessity. So long as the American farmer makes money today he does not think of the future. Within ten years they will have to be importing their building wood from Germany. Our forests will never give out. The cutting is regulated by the government."

Mr. Gain, also a large feudal estate holder, said he was going to come back in two years and buy up a lot of land in the west and cultivate it.

"I will have to use fertilizers though," he said. "The farmers in this country are exploiting the soil without discrimination, and in six years it will be much less productive than it is now. Then they will have to send to Germany for fertilizers."

What impressed itself deepest on the mind of Karl Fuhrmann, a student at Berlin university, was the lack of beer drinking in the American colleges and universities.

"I liked your American universities very much," he said. "They are very well put together. But there is one thing that they miss, and that is beer. The students here can't have the enthusiasm we have in our German schools by drinking water. It is beer that inspired them."

"The beer they have here is bad. Even what is called imported beer isn't like what we have here. You can't drink three glasses of the beer here without feeling the effects. That is because there is more alcohol in it. The imported beer has a lot of alcohol put in it so that it will stand the passage. And the cigars you have here! You can't buy a cigar that is any good for less than 25 cents, and I wouldn't give a twenty cent cigar to my coachman."

The luncheon was a happy affair with much humorous talking and some singing. The Germans evidently think a great deal of Mr. Schulte. They gave him a handsome silver tea set and many compliments. Then they stood up, and amid a babel of "Hochs!" and clinking glasses, they drank his health.

The Protestants of Boston are making contributions to a fund of $60,000 to convert Spanish women. Headquarters will be opened in Madrid, and it will be known as the Gulick Institute. THE COOKBOOK.

All meats intended for soups should be put over the fire in cold water, as the object is to extract the juice of the meat.

If a sugary crust is desired on meringue, sift powdered sugar over it before it is placed in the oven and have the latter cool.

A very good substitute for cream can be found in milk brought to the scalding point, but not boiled. It imparts a rich, golden color to coffee.

Salmon is as satisfying as a beefsteak, though not as digestible. It may be cooked in various ways, but is especially good baked with cream sauce.

Many vegetables are served alone—that is, as a separate course following the meat course. Among these are cauliflower in some fancy form, globe artichokes, asparagus, spinach or stuffed eggplant, tomatoes or bell peppers.

HISTORICAL RESEARCH.

Plan For Collecting Records of the Philippines.

MISSION OF SCHOLARLY FILIPINO.

Professor C. J. Zulueta, Appointed to the Office by the American Government, Will Work Principally in the Archives of Seville and Other Spanish Cities—Inducements For Scientific Investigation.

Thus early in its history the American government in the Philippines has started to do something for the world's scholars, says the New York Post. The historical records of the islands and their people, in large part still buried in the archives, are to be collected at government expense and made available for reference in more convenient form.

For the work of collection a well equipped Filipino has recently been named to an office specially created for the purpose and is now about to begin the work in Spain. He will spend a year at least there, working principally in the archives of Seville, which are much the richest in Philippine, and also in those of Madrid, Barcelona and Simancas. Then he will visit France and perhaps other countries on the continent in search of material yet unpublished from which to make copies, and, of course, the British museum. He will then come to the United States by way of Mexico, where there are now reputed to be buried in various archives, both in the City of Mexico and in several outside towns, many more data bearing on Philippine history than it had formerly been supposed Mexico contained.

This work of collecting copies of documentary sources will occupy the Filipino in question, Professor C. J. Zulueta, at least three years. He receives $3,500 in gold per year and, of course, necessary expenses in traveling and procuring the copies desired. It is understood that the library of congress at Washington is also to receive one copy of each document, the other being sent to Manila for the new Philippine government library. Librarian Putnam, who was recently on a tour of the orient gathering material and making arrangements for reciprocal exchanges, etc., was in Manila in search of material for the Congressional library, and is said to have made an arrangement whereby the latter library shares in this work with the Philippine government.

Philippine history has been left mainly to the friars, who have published a number of chronicles, beginning with the earlier years of Spanish occupation. Recently several Spanish laymen have worked in this line. But the impress of controversy left on almost everything previously written in Philippine history, due to the fact that the friar chronicler of one order not willfully, but inevitably, magnified the deeds of his own brethren at the expense of the other orders, has not been removed by these lay writers. The more, therefore, that a man reads in Philippine history as written to date the more puzzled he will become unless he covers practically the whole field and can balance the statements of one writer against another and glean the truth by a thoroughgoing comparison. The reader needs, too, some knowledge of the Filipinos as they are today and some actual contact with the "friar question" as it stands at this moment.

In other words, Philippine history has never been written, in the modern sense of that word. Considering the sources of what has been published hitherto, the careful reader will be constantly on his guard as to accepting commonly published estimates of the state of culture of the Filipinos when they were discovered by the Spaniards, the share of the friars in the work of internal improvement as compared with the share of Spanish civilians, the educational question and the teaching of Spanish, the merits of the continual controversies between the friars and the civil authorities, the causes of the various uprisings and the character of the participants, the composition and size of the anti-friar party on the islands and the capacity of the natives in general. Professor Zulueta, named for the mission above described, is one of the little handful of Filipinos who have really made an honest study of their people's past. Like Jose Rizal, he is to a certain extent a partisan. He is, however, a scholar in touch with modern methods and the modern spirit of research. He has been professor of history in the Manila lyceum, a secondary school for boys inaugurated by the Philippines in 1900.

The Philippine government will try to build up in connection with the historical library a scientific library of research and reference. This library will be connected with the Philippine museum, which was started in a modest way two years ago, under the bureau of non-Christian tribes. The securing of ethnological, botanical, mineralogical and other collections for the St. Louis exposition is being made to coincide with the needs of this establishment, and where duplicate collections cannot be made they will be returned to Manila for this museum. Similarly the bureau of government laboratories, which consolidates in one institution all the scientific laboratory work of the government and which is under the management of Dr. P. C. Freer, the well known chemist of the University of Michigan, is seeking to stimulate research by offering their expenses and opportunities for exploration and laboratory investigation to all scientists in the United States who wish to spend a period in the Philippines, furthering their own and the general knowledge.

VANBLARCUM IS HAPPY AGAIN

Stoney Creek Bachelor Finds His Lady Love

SHE WANTS TO COME HOME

Promises to Return July 12—If She Does Not He Will Have Her Prosecuted

George Vanblarcum was in the city Monday.

This, in itself, is as innocent looking a person as ever appeared in print, but there is that about the man that makes the item pregnant with interest to many of his friends in the southwestern portion of the county. For he is known that George is a well known character and he and his affairs are always of interest to those who claim his acquaintance.

The chief interest in the man, to his friends and neighbors, just now comes from the fact that he is a lover. Not one of your cold, calculating swains, but one in whose heart, despite his 46 years, the fires kindled by Cupid burn as fiercely as do those of Vesuvius. But alas for him the usual fate of true love seems to be in store and as yet he has had no opportunity of seeing fruition of his desires.

The object of this fervid passion is Mrs. Anna Bell Bates Throop, a coy grasswidow of 24, who has woven her spell well and strong to enmesh her stalwart lover. Mrs. Throop has had her experience, too, and while she may pine for the peace that will come with wedlock's joys, fate has seemed to keep her from enjoying them.

George Vanblarcum met Mrs. Anna Bell Throop about a year and a half ago, while she was visiting a friend at Stoney Creek, near where Vanblarcum lives. He was at a party and became so impressed with her that they struck up a very strong acquaintance. She was living at that time with her sister, a Mrs. Smith, at Wyandotte. She promised to marry Vanblarcum, and he went to work at different places. Once he worked on the Northwestern Electric railway at Farmington, again at Sibley's quarry at Trenton, and all the time was giving and sending her money, in amounts of $5 and $10 on her promise to marry him.

Last fall they were to have been married and he came to Ann Arbor and secured a license on November 18 last, but the wedding did not come off then, as Vanblarcum had expected.

During this time Anna Bell had a divorce suit pending in the Washtenaw circuit, the funds to carry on which were evidently furnished by her lover. Later this case was thrown out of court because she failed to look after it and she applied for a divorce in the Wayne circuit.

Different dates were set for the wedding, but the bride-elect always failed to turn up at the proper time and George was disconsolate. Meanwhile he was furnishing her with cash until, he claims, it totaled about $400, when he appeared to feel that perhaps he was an "easy" and began to consult attorneys to see if he couldn't realize on the investment or recover some of the coin. At one time, he says, she got $50 from him on the plea of going to Lupton, Mich., to see her father, who she claimed, was dangerously ill.

Some time ago Vanblarcum lost track of his lady love and was sick at heart and would not be comforted, but he is happy again as will appear from the following from our Milan correspondent:

Milan, July 1.—Your correspondent has had an interview with George Vanblarcum, regarding the Vanblarcum-Throop case, which came out along early in the spring.

Ever since the article appeared in a Detroit paper in April, Vanblarcum has been looking for her in Detroit, Trenton and Wyandotte, and last Saturday morning he located her and called at 261 Grand River avenue, Detroit, where she with her sister, Blanche Bates of Lupton, Mich., is keeping house for a man.

When Vanblarcum opened the door she said, "George, how did you find me?" and he said "Anna, it is an easy mark to find you."

She nearly fainted when he came into the room, and when she revived somewhat, she asked him if he had had any dinner and said she would get him some if he had not.

George stayed there until three in the afternoon.

Vanblarcum says that she looks thin and worn from eating morphine, to which habit she is addicted.

He says she now goes by the name of Mabel Stone, instead of Anna Bell Throop—or Bates, which was her maiden name.

She is 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 115 pounds and is 22 inches around the waist. She wore a blue suit and a large white brimmed hat with a blue ribbon band.

She had been going with another fellow by the name of Miller, of Trenton, and when the article appeared in the Detroit paper in April, a friend cut it out and sent it to his mother, which caused their breaking up and prevented their intended marriage.

Vanblarcum told her she must come home with him and she said she would as soon as her health would permit it.

She said to him, "George, what are you going to give me for a present?" and he answered by saying, "Anna, what are you going to give me as a present," and she said, "I will give you the best kiss you ever had," and she did so then and there.

Then she said to him that the dress she was wearing was the only one she had and that it would not be nice enough to wear out to see him, and asked him to give her $5 to get another one with, but he did not give her the money as he had done before.

Vanblarcum told her that she must not marry any other man, and she said that she would not.

She was in Ypsilanti about three weeks ago, and Mrs. Albright, of Stoney Creek, saw her to talk with her, and was requested not to let Vanblarcum know she was there. However, Vanblarcum found it out somehow and went to Ypsilanti, but could not locate her.

She asked him to write to her in the name of Anna Bates, General Delivery, Detroit. He told her that with all her misdeeds he loved her still and will never give her up.

Vanblarcum says that if she does not meet him in Ypsilanti by July 12 he will have her prosecuted.

Vanblarcum called at Prosecuting Attorney Hunt's office, and was told the suit could not be tried in Wayne county, as she had gotten in the money from him elsewhere.

George Vanblarcum lives at Stoney Creek, a bachelor.

WILL USE THE TELEGRAPHONE

Michigan Central Putting in the Latest Invention

Will Be Able to Both Telegraph and Telephone Over Same Wire

The telegraphone, which enables the use of telegraph wires simultaneously for telegraphing and telephoning, has been adopted by the Michigan Central road, says the Detroit Tribune. The system is already in operation between Detroit and St. Thomas, 111 miles, and between Chicago and Michigan City. The entire system will be equipped with the instruments as soon as possible, the Michigan Central being the first road in the country to take this course.

The apparatus used at both the sending and receiving points is very much like a telephone. For each set of instruments the company that controls the patents and supplies the instruments is paid $12 a year. For the operating department of a railroad the service is said to be of inestimable advantage. If, for instance, an operating official at Detroit wants to communicate quickly with an operating official in another city he simply touches a button in his office and the bell rings in the distant office of the other official, which is the signal that somebody wants to speak to him. The conversation then begins over the telegraph wire, while the telegraph operator on the same wire is entirely oblivious of it.

HUMANE SOCIETY ASKS YOUR AID

The Humane Society of this city make the very human request of the people that they will patronize only those merchants who treat their horses kindly. A man who overloads his horse is in danger of underloading his measure. It is sometimes his way of balancing accounts.

These things ought not so to be, and can only be adjusted by the individual insisting upon the rights of the dumb animal. Educating out of an evil is better than punishment for it, and so some men and women burdened with love for the cause, have written "Black Beauty," "The Beautiful Joe," "A Dog of Flanders," and "The Kentucky Cardinal," all of which show the human side of this dumb creation which man often treats with greatest inhumanity.

The law is strong in Ann Arbor against this evil and if the people will co-operate with the law, investigations will be made, and satisfaction given.

Judge Cheever is president of the society and Mr. J. J. Goodyear, who formerly held this office and resigned from active work, is still as active as ever in his ardor for doing good.

OSTRICH PLUMES FROM ARABIA

Miss Lorraine Milly of Geddes avenue, received Wednesday four magnificent white ostrich plumes, each two feet long. They were sent from Arabia by her brother, Harry Miller, who has shopped the U. of M. yells in so many foreign ports. Mr. Miller says that the ostrich boa which costs $15 in America, can be bought for 12 shillings of our money in Arabia.

It is hot on the Red Sea, he writes, so hot that while sailing through, great precaution is taken to prevent prostration from heat. There is no vegetation on the shores, only high red sandstone cliffs, baked and barren.

CARRIER PIGEON DEPOTS.

Germany's New Plan For Using the Birds as Messengers.

A result of experiments with carrier pigeons, made of late by the German naval authorities, is that permanent stations for the birds are to be established at Helgoland and Wilhelmshaven in the North sea and Friedrichshort in the Baltic, says the London Globe. Sixty-one carrier pigeon clubs have placed their birds at the service of the German admiralty. The trials made prove that birds can fly home over a distance of 300 kilometers. To insure the delivery of a dispatch for distances of eighty kilometers from land two birds will carry the same message, and for the greater distances up to 300 kilometers from three to five birds will be released, each bearing a copy of the same message. A minimum speed of one kilometer (about two-thirds of a mile) a minute is reckoned upon.

The general practice of sending the message in a quill attached to the tail feather will be abandoned. Instead it will be written on thin vegetable paper, slipped into an india rubber case and secured to the bird's foot by means of an india rubber ring. As the birds arrive at their homes on land the messages will be forwarded to the proper quarter. At the pigeon stations on the North sea coast are wireless telegraphs that will retransmit the message to the head office. In future every war ship, excepting torpedo boats, will be required to carry pigeons to be released at varying distances from the land stations.

TROLLEY OMNIBUSES.

A Novelty in City Street Vehicles to Be Tried in England.

A bill is before the English parliament authorizing the introduction of trolley omnibuses in Gloucestershire. The trolley omnibus, while free to maneuver over the road like an ordinary bus, derives its current from overhead wires like a tram car, though, unlike the latter, it has no special track. Services are to be found between Samois and Fontainebleau, in France; between Koenigsstein and Koenigsbrunn, in the valley of the Biela, and in other places, but it has never been tried in the United Kingdom. Mr. A. A. Campbell Swinton, the engineer of the company, says in the London Chronicle:

"What we propose to do is to put up poles carrying two trolley wires similar to those used for tramway purposes. The cost of the overhead equipment will be the same as in the case of tramways. What will be saved will be the cost of the permanent way, which is always a very large item."

While an ordinary electric tramway costs about $35,000 a mile to lay, an overhead trolley motor car system would cost something like $5,000 a mile. Where a vast amount of traffic has to be dealt with an electric tramway or light railway would have to be laid, but in country districts and among scattered populations the electric trolley bus should find a wide sphere of usefulness.

BATTLES OF THE FUTURE.

To Be Fought With Shrapnel, Not Small Arms, Says an Officer.

In a recent issue of Harper's Weekly Mr. George E. Summers, M. E., writes of the new field artillery used in the United States army. The article has been examined and its publication authorized by the secretary of war, so that it may be considered in effect official. The new field guns described by Mr. Summers will carry effectively about three miles, and the extreme rapidity of fire will permit of a shot once in two seconds, or about as fast as an ordinary Winchester repeating rifle.

As it takes about seventeen seconds for a shell to go three miles, it will be possible to keep eight fifteen pound shrapnel in the air at once, and Mr. Summers points out as a possibility that "the enemy might then receive seven shots after it had surrendered." He believes that, as the distance necessary for effective warfare between combatants is increasing yearly, the battles of the future will be fought not with small arms, but with shrapnel, at a distance of from two to three miles.

Wished Lipton Good Luck.

Before the train which conveyed Sir Thomas Lipton to Washington on his recent visit to President Roosevelt left Jersey City an Irish woman who cleans out the cars in the Pennsylvania yards learned from a train hand that Sir Thomas was on board.

"Hooroo!" she cried. "Divil a bit more work will I do until I see Sir Tommy."

She threw aside her broom and duster and made a rush for the drawing room car, says the New York World.

"Where's Sir Tommy?" she demanded as she ran up and down the platform. Sir Thomas obligingly appeared at a window.

"Good luck to ye!" she shouted, "The Shamrock 'il win sure this time."

Sir Thomas raised his hat and smiled, and she went away happy.

A Record Breaking Trout.

The biggest trout ever caught in Pennsylvania was taken from the waters of Spring creek, within Bellefonte borough limits, by Al Hoffman, a local fisherman, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. The trout was of the rainbow variety and measured 25 inches in length, was 5 1/2 inches deep across the side, 3 1/4 inches across the back and weighed 6 1/2 pounds. Its mouth was caught on an eel set line. In its mouth were found six fishhooks and pieces of troll line, showing that the trout had been a good biter, but just as good in breaking up from the angler, even at the expense of taking hook and line. The fish is to be mounted and sent to State Fish Commissioner Meehan.

SILVER JUBILEE OF THE POPE

Ann Arbor Boy Attended the Ceremonies of

HIS 25TH ANNIVERSARY

Had a Long Wait But Was Repaid by the Beautiful Music and Seeing the Venerable Pontiff

Mrs. Armstrong of Washtenaw avenue, received word Monday from her son in Rome, that Thursday, June 25, he attended the audience of the Pope. It is probably the last audience the Pope ever held.

Mr. Henry H. Armstrong is well known to Ann Arbor students as holder of the Fellowship given by the National Archaeological Society, which gave him a year's study in Rome.

March 8, Mr. Armstrong writes from Rome of the Pope's Jubilee.

People came from all over the world to attend this and would have been glad to purchase with large sums of money the necessary ticket of admission, which he sent to his mother in little Ann Arbor, as a souvenir of the great event. On it is printed the requirement that the laity must dress in black suits. Seventy thousand tickets were issued.

In his letter, Mr. Armstrong writes, after describing his way to the Vatican: "The doors of the basilica had already been opened, so there was no crowding, and we passed between the files of 'government' troops drawn up in front of the steps, in the gate and door to the left, where our tickets were looked at and a handsome tear made in each to show it was used—then into the great church.

The walls were covered with the usual red and gold hangings. Back of the altar was a space curtained off in front of the tribune, while the first three chapels nearest the door, on the right, were also curtained off, since the Pope entered here and proceeded from the back to the front of the church. In the front of the church at either side, were tribunes reserved for dignitaries, for which special tickets were necessary; of course, we weren't there. The whole length of the church from the front door to the high altar, was a passageway perhaps 20 feet wide, reserved for the procession, lined with wooden barriers, on each of which, covering the nave and overflowing into the aisles, stood the bulk of the crowd, some 30,000 people, where we were.

"We took up the best place available, less than half way up the church, on the left side, four rows deep from the central passage and stood and stood for the next five hours. We had something to entertain us, for up the middle aisle kept passing and repassing the high dignitaries of the church and others, a most picturesque sight. There were bishops and archbishops in purple robes and ermine capes, officials of the Papal court in their medieval costumes of embroidered velvet with Elizabethan ruffs, soldiers of the Swiss Guard magnificent in their state dress of bear skin shakoes, red coats and skin-tight white breeches, monks and nuns of the different orders, choir boys and finally, ordinary people, the men in evening dress, the women in black and veiled.

"Our crowd was quite different. On the right side of the passage way all pilgrims of many nationalities, on our side a great mixture of theological students in their many colored gowns, the great Italian masses of many stages of cleanliness, and the tourists of all nationalities.

"Van Buren and I whiled the time away by repeating all the poetry we knew in any language we knew, but that was not sufficient to fill up the three hours before the Pope arrived.

"A few preliminary arrangements took place at intervals. For example, the Palatine Guards formed a line on each side of the passageway inside the barriers; after awhile also, the electric lights in the panels of the great vaulted ceilings were turned on, a thing entirely useless as St. Peter's does not possess that dim religious light. Finally, about eleven, the trumpeters took up their position in the loggia over the door and the Swiss Guards came trooping up the aisle. A pause followed, when suddenly the trumpets blared, a choir began to sing and, with thundering applause, the great procession issued from the chapel by the door.

First came a number of halberdiers in full armor, then the chiefs of the different monastic orders, then bishops, archbishops and cardinals, among them Rampolla. But at the last named no one looked, for, carried high in his chair of state, his fan-bearers on each side, came the Pope. He was dressed in the white robe only he can wear, with gold and white over it; on his head was the triple tiara. The first sight of him was the occasion for increasing cheering, the waving of handkerchiefs, and cries of "Viva il Papa," with an occasional "Viva il Papa Re." His old face was gray and seamed with lines, and his slight form looked feeble and worn out; still he kept stretching out his hand in benediction, and rose to his feet several times for a few seconds, though with great effort.

"What happened when he had passed out of our range and exactly where he stayed, I cannot say, except that the newspaper reports say his throne was in front of the choir of St. Peter. All I know is we stood for two hours listening to the beautiful music and the chanting until the crowd grew so oppressive, we had to get out of the press.

"One thing was different from the ordinary mass. When the Host was elevated, the soldiers of the Palatine Guard grounded arms and knelt, while the trumpets played softly from the gallery of the dome.

"After getting out of the jam, we walked up and down one of the aisles a few minutes, but then got into the crowd near the door, and listened to the rest of the service. The responses in the miserere were chanted by all the congregation who knew it, and made thunderous music. When the Pope got up to give the benediction, the cheering began again, and only stopped when he reached the front of the confessional, where he gave it. He was so low down we could not see him, but the church was so still that we then heard his voice over all.

"We had finally, at half past one, the procession came down the aisle, the cheering broke out again, and as the back of the chair disappeared in the chapel, we rushed for the door, caught a car, and reached home at two o'clock. We had seen the second 25th anniversary in the history of the church since Peter. Plus, the IX, and Leo the XIII, being the only Popes who ever exceeded the traditional 25 years of Peter, that prophecy once said would never be exceeded, and had seen the Pope in the greatest church in the world, and were satisfied—but oh, so tired and hungry."

UNDER FERNS AND MARGUERITES

Herbert C. Gore and Miss Milla Taylor Made One

Beautiful Home Wedding—Happy Couple Will Make Their Home in Washington

One of the prettiest weddings of the season took place Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Martha Taylor, of Church street, when her daughter, Ida Pamela, was united in marriage to Herbert Charles Gore.

At half past seven the bridal party led by the bridesmaid, Miss Nellie Wood, cousin of the bride, took their places in the back parlor. The bride leaning on the arm of her brother Edward Taylor, came down the stair which was beautifully festooned with trailing wood-bine. Under an arch of ferns and marguerites the groom was awaiting her. While the bridal party was being formed Miss Wood of Ypsilanti, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Townsend of Washington, sister of the bride, sang Handel's exquisite bridal hymn, "Where Ere You Walk." Beneath a beautiful bouquet of marguerites and ferns tied with white ribbon, Rev. C. S. Patton of the Congregational church performed the marriage ceremony.

The bride looked unusually lovely in her gown of white silk lawn. In her hand she carried a bouquet of white sweet peas and maiden hair ferns. Miss Wood, the bridesmaid, was also gowned in white and carried maiden hair ferns and pink sweet peas.

A dainty lunch was served in the dining room which was decorated in ferns and clovers. The table decorations were particularly beautiful and original. Heads of pink clovers were strung and arranged in figures upon the table. On one side the initial of the bride and on the other that of the groom were formed with clovers.

Only the relatives of the bride and groom and the closest friends of the bride were present. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Gore of Chicago, parents of the groom.

Amid a shower of rice and the singing of the bridal chorus the happy couple took the 9:30 train for an eastern trip. They will make their future home in Washington, D. C.

THE CARNEGIE LIBRARY IS NOW AN ASSURED FACT

Last Steps Necessary to Secure the Gift Have Been Taken By the Council.

City Binds Itself to Raise $2,000 Per Year For Its Support. Another Long Step Forward in Educational Progress of the Community.

Ann Arbor is to have a part in the benefactions of Andrew Carnegie. The matter was finally determined at Monday's meeting of the common council. It is expected now that the necessary official action has been taken that the project will be pushed rapidly to completion.

In his efforts to avoid the disgrace of dying rich Andrew Carnegie made Ann Arbor a proposition for a $20,000 library building. It was accompanied, of course, by the usual requirement that the payment of 10 per cent of the gift be provided by the municipality accepting same each year for the purpose of keeping up the library. And the only guarantee to this end required is that the city council pass such a resolution, have it signed by the city clerk and the official seal of the municipality affixed.

To the Ladies Library belongs the principal honor in securing this gift to our city. The steps taken by this organization have been hitherto narrated in these columns. They have been aided toward last night's consummation by the local board of education. Last night Mrs. Bach, for the Ladies Library, and Messrs. Mills and Beal of the board of education of the city, appeared before the council and made a definite proposition which made it very easy for the city to do what was asked of it in order to secure the library.

President Mills made a brief statement of the advantages of a good public library and the inspiration to be drawn from such an institution and how it was proposed to provide for its maintenance without much, if any, additional cost over what the school district and the Ladies Library are now annually putting into library books. Mrs. Bach made a statement for the Ladies Library in which she said that organization would turn over its property to the new Carnegie library.

Mr. Beal also made a statement as to the imperative need by the schools of the room in the high school building now occupied by the public library.

From the statements of Mr. Mills, Mrs. Bach and Mr. Beal the plan of maintenance of the library without any more cost than the people of the city are already paying for library purposes annually was made clear.

Mrs. Bach said the Ladies Library association was ready to turn in its property, consisting of the fine site and building on E. Huron street, together with its 4,000 or 5,000 volumes of books and their regular income. The only conditions they desired to make were that the deed of the property should specify that, when the property ceased to be used for library purposes it should revert to the Ladies Library association, which is to be continued as an organization, and that the books purchased with that part of the income coming from the endowment given by Mr. Henning in memory of his wife, Mrs. Julia Henning, should have a card inserted stating this fact. It was stated that the income from gifts made the organization amounts to 5 per cent on $4,300; Ex-Gov. Felch, $300; Mr. Palmer, $3,000.

From the statements made by Messrs. Mills and Beal it was learned that there are nearly 6,000 volumes in the present school district library and that these books will be made a part of the proposed Carnegie public library so that it will start with about 10,000 volumes of well selected books. The school district is now putting into its library each year nearly enough, taken with the Ladies Library income, to make up the $2,000 required under the Carnegie guarantee. Mr. Beal stated that unless the school district library was moved out of the high school building it would be necessary to build another addition to that building in the near future, and this would cost more than any sum required by the new library. But with the rooms now occupied by the district library vacated, this necessity would be avoided for some time to come.

The project seemed so very favorable entirely that various aldermen promptly announced themselves for it. Thereupon Alderman Goodyear offered the following resolution and certification which include all the guarantee required by Mr. Carnegie:

A RESOLUTION

To accept the donation of Andrew Carnegie: Whereas Carnegie has agreed to furnish $20,000 to the Board of Education of Ann Arbor, Mich., to erect a free public library building, on condition that said city shall pledge itself by resolution of council to support a free public library at a cost of not less than two thousand dollars a year and provide a suitable site for said building, now therefore

Be it resolved by the Council of the City of Ann Arbor that said city accept said donation and it does hereby pledge itself to comply with the requirement of said Andrew Carnegie.

Resolved, that it will furnish a suitable site for said building and will maintain a free public library in said building, when erected, at a cost of not less than $2,000 a year.

Resolved that an annual levy shall hereafter be made upon the taxable property of said City of Ann Arbor sufficient in amount to comply with the above requirements.

Clerk. Mayor. I, Clerk of the City of Ann Arbor, Mich., do hereby certify that the foregoing is a full and complete copy and transcript of a resolution passed by the Council of the said City of Ann Arbor, Mich., at their regular session on this day.

Witness my hand and the seal of said City of Ann Arbor, this day of July, 1903.

BARGAIN BABIES.

If babies were for sale the most inveterate bargain-hunting woman in the world would not look for a bargain baby. She would want the best baby that could be bought, regardless of price.

"My wife had been sick nearly all her life," says Mr. E. E. Fricke, of Petersburg, Menard Co., Illinois, Box 37, "and after trying everything I could think of I made up my mind to try 'Favorite Prescription.' I got six bottles, which my wife took, a tablespoonful three times a day, until the baby came. She felt better after taking the first bottle, and when baby was born he weighed nine and a half pounds. Today he is six months old and weighs twenty-two pounds. He is as good a child as any one could wish. The doctor says he is as healthy as any baby could be, and also says the use of your 'Favorite Prescription' was the cause of such a healthy baby."

IS COMPILING MUSICAL CATALOGUE

OF INSTRUMENTS IN STEARNS COLLECTION AT U. OF M.

Also Treat of Evolution of Musical Instruments—Will Be an Interesting and Valuable Work.

A very interesting book is being compiled this summer for Prof. Stanley's pupils. Philip Schenk is doing the work under Prof. Stanley's supervision. Mr. Schenk is a graduate of the 1902 library class and has also had quite a musical education. He is very capable of doing the work well and thoroughly.

The basis of the work is the cataloguing of the collection of musical instruments in the University Museum. But the book will contain far more than a mere catalogue. The evolution in musical instruments and logical manner.

Prof. Stanley has never been able to find a book he could use in his history of music classes, but this will meet the requirements of those courses. Mr. Schenk had hoped to finish his work on the book this fall, but there is much more research work than was anticipated, so that it will take a part of next year to do the work satisfactorily. Visitors to the museum have found the room, where the musical collection is kept, closed, but as the major part of the work is being done here it was necessary to exclude visitors.

Demon of The Sea

Terrifying Experience of Fishermen With a Devilfish.

Horrible Monster Threw Its Tentacles Around Their Boat and Tried to Drag It Down.

When the crew of the fishing smack Vivid got into St. John's, N. F., a few days ago they told of an encounter with a huge devilfish in which they needed all their courage and strength to save their lives.

The forty ton Vivid of Fortune Bay, Abram Moulton master, with a crew of five, was sailing down the coast to St. John's to lay in supplies for a month's fishing.

They were off Cape St. Mary's. The lookout thought he spied a giant lump of ambergris, one of the treasures so seldom given up by the sea. Talk of many lucky finds during the past fortnight and the sight of money freely spent by the lucky finders had excited the hardy crew of the Vivid.

"Stand by!" yelled Captain Moulton. Every man was in his place. Not a hundred yards ahead now lay the floating fortune. Moulton shifted his helm and bore down smartly upon the float-sam, a competence for everybody aboard. It seemed.

"Get out your hook!" cried Moulton. "Aye, aye, sir!" responded Joseph Ellis, the sturdy sailor man whose business it was to handle the boat hook.

Every eye was on the thing ahead. Ellis stood ready to nail the floating treasure that might make every man rich. It was dead ahead now, fifty yards away, twenty yards, ten, five.

"Strike!" shouted Moulton, ablaze with excitement. Up in the air went the keen hook. Down it came straight to its mark. The gaff struck home.

In the twinkling of an eye the still thing drifting idly on the waters became a demon furious with life, thrashing, grappling, squirming, feeling for everything within its reach.

Great clouds of inky stuff dyed the water. A monstrous beak pecked at the Vivid's onken sides. Two giant eyes focused on the deck, seeking something to seize. Something like the hissing of a multitude of men boiled up out of the sea.

Instead of ambergris Ellis had struck a devilfish.

Out of the depths arose a bewildering array of tentacles, twisting and crawling all over the smack. They fastened on the bulwarks and squirmed inboard. They felt their way around the masts and up the flattened sails. All the while the ponderous beak of this demon thing of the deep was pounding at the yell, eager to sink it.

"Hard aport!" yelled Moulton, trying to free his boat and get away on the freshening breeze. But he was too late. The giant devil fish had the Vivid safely inboard in its half a hundred tentacles. It would not be budged. The Vivid lay on the tumbling seas like a dead thing, with the octopus madly trying to drag it down into the depths.

"Knives and axes, there!" fairly screamed Moulton to the men, who stood stupefied on deck.

As if to meet the coming battle to the death, the devilfish seized the masts in a firm grip with two of its stoutest tentacles. Then it tried to sink to the bottom of the sea, bent on dragging the schooner with it. Round and round it wrapped its feelers about the spars, sending up fresh ones to aid those that had already taken hold.

Slowly the sturdy Vivid gave to the mighty arms that reached up out of the waves. Over and over she bent. The big body that thrashed in the water fought more and more madly to tilt over the boat till she capsized.

"If you don't do something we're done for!" Moulton shouted, throwing over the spokes of his wheel in one last struggle for life.

There was one sailor man who dared then—William Ellis—for just as Moulton shouted a big arm shot out of the sea and gripped him tight. Another seized Joseph Ellis, William's brother, the man who had thrown the gaff into the maddened monster's side. Just as Ellis seized the only ax on board a third tentacle caught Samuel Jeans. He clung to the mast, but his strength was like a pygmy's to the monster's. His grip was all but gone.

Up went Ellis' ax. Down it came again like a flash of lightning on the bulwarks.

The giant arm was severed cleanly, and Jeans was free. The second tentacle slipped nervelessly from Moulton's body. Joseph Ellis braced himself to safety. The great beak which was pounding madly at the Vivid's sides let go at last, and the mammoth body, swirling round and round in the inky sea itself had coiled, dropped away.

But for many yards about the sea was jet black with a foul smelling fluid squirted out by the devilfish. The crippled Vivid could just make port. There was a great hole in her side where the pounding beak had penetrated, and the ponderous beak was scarred and torn by the giant arms which all but pulled her down to the depths.

The crew of the Vivid are not the only ones who have fought for their lives with devilfishes. Dan Squires and Jim Piccott, with his boy Tom, a lad of twelve, know what it means to fight one of these sea demons too.

They were codfishing in a skiff off Portland cove, near St. John's. They saw what they thought was wreckage, and they pulled close by. Squires gaffed the mass and started to pull it inboard when to his horror he saw it was a live devilfish. In the twinkling of an eye the great thing had the entire boat encircled in its squirming arms. Another moment and it was drawing the skiff down beneath the surface till the water poured in over the sides.

Piccott seized an arm of the monster in his despair.

It let go the boat and twined about his body. The boat righted, but it seemed all up with Piccott. But little Tom, his boy, caught up an ax from the bottom and with one clean blow cut off the tentacle which held his father. Another squirming tentacle instantly whipped up out of the water and inboard the skiff just as Piccott sank exhausted to the thwart. Again the boy rushed to the rescue and chopped off the second arm.

The devilfish, crazy with pain, half leaped out of the water. Its horny beak pounded at the gunwales.

It hit its loathsome ink at the men. It shotted over the side in fury. But the boy's ax and Squires' knife finally gave it a quietus. Letting go, the devilfish dropped back into the depths beaten when it had almost won the victory.

PURSUED BY AN ELEPHANT.

Narrow Escape of Selous, the Hunter, From an Infuriated Bull.

F. C. Selous, the king of big game hunters, who for thirty-two years has made his home in the wilds of South Africa, has had many narrow escapes from the fierce beasts he has pursued.

It is eloquent of the daring of the man that of his seventy-eight elephants all but one were shot on foot.

On one occasion when he was pursuing a wounded elephant on foot he found himself hotly chased by an infuriated bull, which was literally whirling its trunk over the huntsman's head and screaming with rage. "How I got away," he says, "I scarcely know. Urged on by the short, piercing thorns, I bounded over and through thorn bushes which in cold blood I should have deemed impossible. I emerged from the bush without a shred of clothing on me."

Still undaunted, he turned round on his pursuer, and, raising his gun, fired at him at short range. The gun, however, had been loaded twice, and the recoil dashed him to the ground, inflicting a serious wound on his face, of which he bears the mark today.

EVIDENCE TAKEN IN DIVORCE CASE

TROUBLES OF MR. AND MRS. SAVERSPOOL AIRED IN COURT

Husband Was All All Right at First But Develops Bad Temper and Wife Had to Get Out

Testimony was taken Monday in the divorce case of Mrs. Vena M. Saverspool vs. Wm. L. Saverspool. The wife testified that she was married to defendant at Macon, Lenawee county, Dec. 22, 1897, and that they lived together until the 15th day of last August, when she left him. The wife charged extreme cruelty. She swore that for four years after they were married they lived with his people in Detroit, where he was a telegraph operator for the Lake Shore & Michigan Central railroad. During this time he was everything that a good husband could be. But after they went to live by themselves he developed a bad temper, flying into a passion on the slightest provocation, calling her vile names and threatening to break chairs over her head. Once he kicked her and one rainy night he put her out and locked the doors. Later he unlocked the door and she returned. The wife swore he was not a drinking man.

One Mark G. Hotchkiss, who said he was married with Mr. and Mrs. Saverspool for about two years, gave similar testimony.

Mr. Montague, father of Mrs. Saverspool, who lives in York, was sworn, but knew nothing of the troubles of his daughter and her husband except the little he heard when he went with his daughter to get her belongings. The husband told her he hoped she would go to her home and never return to him any more.

This finished the evidence which will be submitted to the court. The case is not contested.

SKIN FROM FROG GRAFTED ON NANO

DR. WESTFALL SUCCESSFULLY PERFORMS OPERATION

On Clyde Witt of Sturgis, Whose Hand Was Injured While Working In a Mill.

An interesting case of skin-grafting occurred last week at the Homeopathic hospital. Clyde Witt, a 17-year-old boy, who was working in a mill in Sturgis, Mich., had his hand caught in the machinery so that the flesh was torn from the inside and some from off the back. Bloodpoison set in, and he came to Ann Arbor for treatment. The result of the operation was that the skin on the inside of the hand and the back sloughed away. So the skin from the abdomen of a frog was laid on the skinless parts and by means of adhesive straps held in place until it united with the underlying tissue. Dr. Westfall did the skin-grafting and at present the hand is doing nicely.

BRUTALLY TORTURED. A case came to light that for persistent and unmerciful torture has perhaps never been equalled. Joe Golobek, of Colusa, Calif., writes, "For 15 years I endured insufferable pain from Rheumatism and nothing relieved me though I tried everything known. I came across Electric Bitters and it's the greatest medicine on earth for that trouble. A few bottles of it completely relieved and cured me." Just as good for Liver and Kidney troubles and general debility. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by H. F. Miller and A. E. Mummery, druggists.

A Matter of Temperature. Speaking generally, wild creatures inhabiting hot countries are more savage than those of cold or temperate countries.

The Cutty. It is not generally known that the word cutty as applied to a species of clay pipe very much used is a corruption of Kutach, a city in Asia Minor, where a species of soft white stone is found which is exported by the Turks to Germany for the manufacture of tobacco pipes.

LABOR DAY CELEBRATION

WILL BE HELD IN ANN ARBOR THIS YEAR

Committee is Now Formulating Plans For the Big Event—Program Will Be Announced Soon

The report has been circulated hereabouts that there was a mixup in the labor day celebration plans and that both Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor had claims on this year's fete. A member of the committee having in charge this year's celebration states that this is a mistake and that there has never been any question as to where it was to be held. Ann Arbor will have it this year and plans are being outlined to give the biggest thing ever seen in this section.

The arrangements committee held a long session Monday for the purpose of fixing up the details and will hold another later in the week when they will be ready to make public announcement of the general program for this year's celebration.

THE NORTHFIELD CELEBRATION

A MOST SUCCESSFUL OBSERVANCE OF THE DAY

Large Crowd Present Who Thoroughly Enjoyed Themselves—Fine Program Presented

The annual picnic celebration given by the ladies of the Northfield parish, at Whitmore Lake, Saturday, was, it is needless to say, a success. Everyone expected it would be, but the ladies hardly looked for the immense throng who came out and taxed to the utmost their hospitality. But they were equal to the occasion and no one had reason to complain at the entertainment offered either for the physical or mental part of man. The ladies work hard and, we imagine, a great deal harder than any of them do on any other day of the year, but their reward was accordingly great. Over nine hundred persons were fed during the day.

And what a time everybody had. Friends greeting friends they had not seen for years; old neighbors recounting events of auld lang syne; and lovers renewing old vows and making new ones.

The program was followed as published last week and every participant was greeted with applause and compelled again and again to respond to encores. The address of Hon. W. W. Wedemeyer was a masterly effort and was listened to with rapt attention and most evident pleasure by the large audience.

GUARDIAN USED HIS WARD'S FUNDS

FAILED TO MAKE ACCOUNTING TO PROBATE COURT

Admits Using the Funds But Promises to Restore All the Money

Some days ago Judge Watkins issued a body attachment returnable at 2 o'clock this afternoon and placed it in the hands of Sheriff Gauntlett, commanding the presence of one Wm. L. Bussey to answer to the charge of contempt of court in having failed to file his account as guardian of one Clyde L. Pirie, minor. Bussey, it seems, was ordered by the probate court on June 2nd to make an accounting of his guardianship. He failed to do this and hence the attachment.

Monday he came into court and rendered the accounting and was thus purged of contempt. He frankly admitted having used the funds belonging to the before mentioned minor in his own business, but promises before the final settlement will make good all funds so used.

He will probably be removed and another guardian appointed to collect these funds improperly appropriated and such other business as there may be still to close up.

Deeds of Brico

The Remarkable Career of Corsica's Most Noted Bandit.

Sent to the Mountains an Outlaw Through an Unfortunate Love Affair—His Tragic Ending.

The recent death of Jean Baptiste Tramoni Brico, the famous Corsican bandit, brought to a close a career of crime scarcely paralleled in history.

Brico was a true hero of romance in that he was urged to his course of bloodshed by an unfortunate love affair. He loved and was beloved by his TRAMONI WAS SHOT FROM BEHIND A HEDGE, cousin, Josephine Tramoni, but the girl's father refused his consent because of Brico's poverty.

For two years thereafter whenever he met Josephine's father Brico asked him for his daughter and was as regularly refused. Finally in August, 1894, Father Tramoni, exasperated at his pertinacity, was unwise enough to say that never in his life would he consent to the marriage. Brico's hand slid to his knife at once, but such hasty action would be contrary to the Corsican code of honor. He waited a month, then shot Father Tramoni from behind a hedge, and, not stopping to get his bride, he made for the hills.

The vendetta thus established differed from the traditional Corsican feud, which demands an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth and a life for a life from any member of the offender's family. The Tramonis were in duty bound to avenge their father's death, but instead of making war on Brico's family in general they centered all their energies on catching him.

The government stepped in to aid them. Brico became a will 'o' the wisp. He was here, there and everywhere just before the Tramonis and the gendarmes. In the mountains he found a fellow spirit in one Giovanni, and the two performed enough deeds of valor to establish a saga. Had the government not lent a hand Brico's end might have come sooner than it did, for general sympathy was not with him. But country folk never have a liking for the police and did all they could to thwart them. Moreover, they were greatly afraid of the two bandits. In the little village of Mola they had seen death come mysteriously to four persons suspected of having given the police news of the outlaws.

This so aroused the authorities that they arrested the whole Brico family—father, mother, uncles, aunts and cousins—charging them with giving aid and comfort to the outlaw. The day of the trial Brico, just to show how he felt about it, shot a Tramoni relative, and the following day he shot the gendarme who arrested his mother. Thence on murders followed in quick succession.

Last November he killed a cartman whose sole offense was carrying some household furniture belonging to one of the Tramoni families. This was the beginning of the end, and the end he brought on himself. His last crime turned the whole island against him. He went down into the village of Mola a few months ago and deliberately shot and killed the seven-year-old son of the murdered Tramoni.

From that day he was hunted by every one. His companion, Giovanni, had been killed the year before in an encounter with the police. The two persons who still stood by him were his mother and an aunt. One day last May at noon he bid goodby to his mother, telling her she would probably never see him again. He went to his aunt's house in a neighboring village, and when at night he was leaving it to go to the mountains he was ambushed and killed. Now the gendarmes are after his slayers. The total list of his victims numbered a round two dozen, which is a good record even for a Corsican.

DITCHED THE ENGINE.

Quick Work on a Railway in Disposing of a Runaway Locomotive.

Railway men have to think and act quickly when by some unforeseen event a locomotive or train gets beyond control. Such an emergency arose a few days ago at Los Angeles, when switch engine No. 1070 broke away from its train crew in the yards at River Station and after a wild dash down Alameda street and through the Arcade depot ditched itself at Florence, four miles south of the city limits. That the eight mile run right through the center of the city at a time when the yards were filled with both passenger and freight trains and at a speed approximating twenty miles an hour was made without a collision of some kind is a matter of wonder.

When the engine made its plunge through the Arcade depot, an accident was averted only by seconds. The overland from El Paso, filled to the platforms with colonists, pulled into the depot at 1:20 o'clock and after discharging its human cargo took the siding at the south end of the depot just as the runaway engine appeared at the north entrance. Part of the baggage, still on the track, was sent flying as the engine rushed down the main track so close that the air sent the lights flickering in the rear coach of the overland. No warning whistle announced its coming; no headlight danced over the pilot. Swiftly and with a roar it sped on its path toward the ocean, leaving the depot watchmen and a number of brakemen, who waved stop signals with their lighted lanterns to no avail, huddled together by the track in speechless amazement.

The watchman was the first to recover. "Boys," he yelled, "she's a runaway! Look out! Some cars may be following her!"

Then he dashed away up the depot stairs and rushed in on the night dispatcher with the tidings that a runaway had just passed through the station.

Here there was no hesitancy. Long service had taught these men to act swiftly. Almost before the echo of the watchman's voice had died out the head dispatcher called: "It's all right! The night man at Florence just telegraphed that he had ditched an engine there!"

WON DETROIT'S DERBY.

Reservation, Owned by Detroit Man, Carries Off the Collar.
Detroit, Mich., June 9.—Owned by a Detroit man, backed by Detroit money and applauded by a Detroit crowd, George Hendrie's handsome bay colt Reservation Monday carried away the floral collar emblematic of the victory in Detroit's $5,000 International derby winning it in one of the most sensational races ever seen on a Detroit track, from crack 3-year-olds of the west, and comprising no less than two former derby winners, among them Claude, so far the most remarkable colt of his age in the west this season. Lauralighter finished second and Birch Broom third. Betting on the winner was 7 to 1.

While most of the interest of the day centered about the derby, the five other events all drew their share of the interest and play. The victory of Shrine in the first event was considerable of a surprise. It was nothing to that which centered about the winning of Branch II. In the third, however when the winner was developed in a 50 to 1 shot.

OLD RESIDENTS PASS AWAY

Mrs. Josephine Dennen died at her home in Newport, Rhode Island, Saturday morning. Mrs. Dennen had lived in Ann Arbor for the past sixteen years, but being in poor health her son, Rev. Ernest Dennen of Newport, persuaded her to go there and live. She went about six weeks ago intending to return as soon as she was able, but died very suddenly at 4:30 o'clock Saturday morning.

The remains were brought to Ann Arbor Wednesday morning on the 9 o'clock train. The funeral services were held at the place of interment at Forest Hill cemetery, Rev. Mr. Tatlock officiating.

The deceased leaves two sons, Ernest Dennen, of Newport, Rhode Island, assistant rector of the Episcopal church, and Ray Dennen, of Detroit. Mrs. Dennen had a wide circle of friends in Ann Arbor who will be deeply grieved to learn of her sudden death.

Jacob Stadel, a well known resident of the Second ward, died at his home 550 Seventh street, Sunday evening, aged 75 years.

Mr. Stadel was born in Germany, but came to Ann Arbor at an early age and has since made it his home. His wife died several years ago, but he is survived by six children, one of whom lives in Grand Rapids, the rest residing here.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the late residence, Rev. John Neumann officiating. The interment was at Bethle-hem cemetery.

The remains of Mrs. Henrietta Clark were brought to Ann Arbor Monday from Lansing on the 11:33 train on the Ann Arbor road. Mrs. Clark was formerly a resident of Ann Arbor, but for the past few years has been living with her son, Theodore Clark of Lansing. She was 81 years of age. The interment was made at Forest Hill cemetery, where her husband was buried some sixteen years ago. Rev. Mr. Tedrow officiated.

A VERY BUSY MEETING OF THE CITY COUNCIL

Eleven members of the council answered roll call Monday night and later the absentees all put in an appearance except Ald. Douglas.

When President Walz had rapped for order and been informed that there were no communications from the mayor, he announced the presence of Messrs. Mills and Beal and Mrs. Bach, who desired to be heard relative to an important matter which is fully stated elsewhere in this issue. Having disposed of that matter the council plunged at once into the regular business of the session.

A communication from the board of public works was read recommending the putting in of a 1-foot drain on Washitaw avenue from New Jersey avenue to Vinewood avenue, about 150 feet. The recommendation was concurred in.

A communication from B. A. Finney, who lives on Tappan street, was read, requesting permission to build a tar walk instead of a cement walk, which he had been ordered to build. He stated that there was no cement walk on that side of the street in the block, that on either side of his lot there was tar walk and, therefore, he would like to build a walk in keeping, although within the cement district. Ald. Fischer moved that the permission be granted. Ald. Johnson opposed this, saying the cement districts and tar districts having been definitely established walks should be built in accordance with the requirements. He mentioned the rigid enforcement of these regulations on Detroit street and against poor widows who could ill afford the expense of cement walks and thought the ordinance should be enforced in Mr. Finney's case. The aldermen from the 6th and 7th wards were all of the opinion that as the council had the right to grant such requests when they thought the circumstances would warrant, this was a case in point and the request should be granted. Nearly every alderman was drawn into the discussion before the matter was finally settled. The vote stood 9 to 5 in favor of granting the request and Mr. Finney will build a tar walk.

A letter was read from John M. Naylor relating to the unsanitary condition of certain premises on W. Ann street, and the urgent need of connection with the sewer in order to rid the neighborhood of these unwholesome conditions. The matter was referred to the health board for investigation.

The city clerk read his recommendation of the appointment of Alderman Grose as pound master. Alderman Grose said he could not at present perform the duties of the office, but he did not absolutely decline the appointment. Several other names were suggested, but there seemed to be a desire for Ald. Grose to take the place if possible and the matter was finally left with the city clerk without action by the council.

An electric light was asked for between Third and Seventh streets and one at the corner of Liberty and State. Both resolutions were referred to the lighting committee.

A resolution was offered for the placing of a fire hydrant 700 feet north of the intersection of Forest avenue and Wells street. This resolution was passed.

A petition was read asking for a sewer on Beakes street from Kingsley to main sewer, N. Fifth between Beakes and Catherine, on N. Fourth between Beakes and Catherine and on Kingsley between Division and Main.

Chairman Douglas of the finance committee, being absent, Ald. Coon presented the finance report which carried bills to be charged against the various funds as follows: Contingent, $2,861.78; street, $18.05; fire, $200.95; police, 40 cents; poor, $83.48; bridge, culvert and crosswalks, $291.75; water, $3,485; sidewalk, $81; park, $4.77; dog, $2.50; total, $7,029.68.

It was decided to change grade on Seventh street.

The 5th ward fire engine was ordered put in condition for use.

The committee having the matter in charge recommended placing a fire hydrant on Oakland avenue and Arch street. This recommendation elicited warm discussion. Alderman Hutzel thought it was not necessary as there were already three or four hydrants within reach of every house within the block. Ald. Schlenker said the people in that section while desiring another hydrant there seemed not to care for their fellow citizens who lived near the dangerous Dean & Co. oil tanks. This apparently was a hit at the aldermen who favored the additional hydrant but did not favor causing Dean & Co. to remove their oil tanks. The matter was finally referred back to the committee so the aldermen could take time to look the subject up more fully.

When Ald. Schumacher made the report for the lighting committee he took occasion to turn it into the lighting company for the poor service the city had been getting. He designated the service as rotten. Nothing was done, pending the getting of the Geddes plant into complete operation.

The plumbers bonds of W. S. Piper, W. R. Snyder and Emanuel Schneider were presented and passed. The sureties on Piper's bond were B. F. Schumacher and F. H. Belser, on W. R. Snyder's, Jacob Valz and M. Bowman, on Emanuel Schneider's Wm. Hill and Lewis Kurtz.

City Treasurer Beakes' report was read by City Clerk Granger and it contained the various transfers of funds which have been made in closing up various accounts. It gave the overdraft on July 1 as $5,072.22.

The city physician reported making 100 visits to the city poor during the past month for which the charge against the city was $15.10.

The council appropriated $150 for gravel for the streets. It is to be taken from a cellar being excavated by Prof. Thompson on State street. The city gets the gravel for nothing, but has to pay for removing it. A storm sewer was ordered on N. Division between Lawrence and Detroit streets.

A special committee consisting of Ald. Hutzel, Schumacher and Bangs was appointed to investigate and report on the question of city scales.

The tar walk in front of 705 Moore street was ordered repaired.

A temporary railing was ordered placed around a washout on Felch street.

A household necessity. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Heals burns, cuts, wounds of any sort; cures sore throat, croup, catarrh, asthma; never fails.

THE D., Y., A. A. & J. MAY BE SOLD

RUMOR SAYS THE DEAL MAY YET GO THROUGH

Detroit United Railway Will Be Purchaser—Very Anxious to Own It

The persistent rumor concerning the sale of the Ypsi-Ann electric line has again bobbed up. The Evening News of yesterday has the following:

The Detroit, Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor & Jackson electric railroad, the only one of the suburban lines radiating from Detroit which is not now owned by the Detroit United railway, will probably become a part of the latter system within a very short time. According to those who are well informed regarding the situation, a few details only remain to be completed before the sale is consummated. The Detroit United is known to be very anxious to acquire control of the Ann Arbor road, and about six months ago secured an option from the Hawks-Angus syndicate. The price that the Ann Arbor people wanted then was a little too steep, and it is said that negotiations which have been carried on from time to time have resulted in satisfactory arrangement of terms.

The Detroit, Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor & Jackson road is looked upon as the best proposition in electric railroads that runs into Detroit. The system extends out as far as Jackson, is well built and thoroughly equipped. There have been three bond issues, the last one when the Jackson extension was built. These bonds are quoted at 112, 107½ and 92½ respectively, and the fact that the Detroit United has been known to have an option on the road has kept their prices first in the market.

Just how soon the actual transfer of the property will take place cannot be ascertained. S. F. Angus will admit nothing, and simply says there is no change in the situation.

SPECIAL AGENT U. S. TREASURY

IN THE CITY TO LOOK UP SITES OFFERED FOR POSTOFFICE BUILDING

Upon His Recommendation Will Depend Location of Public Building

R. S. Reed, special agent of the U. S. treasury, is in the city for the purpose of looking up the different sites offered to the government for the new postoffice building, and upon his recommendation will probably depend the location of the new building. Mr. Reed will remain at the Cook house until the end of the week and it is his intention to thoroughly investigate every available site offered to the government and any others that may be considered as suitable by their owners. He is also especially anxious to meet citizens in general who have no sites to dispose of and yet are sufficiently interested in the welfare of the city to give an unbiased expression of their preferences in this matter.

At present there does not appear to be any concentration of choice upon any one location and as the government is usually anxious to please the majority of the residents in choosing a site it would be well to have as many citizens as possible call on him and give a free expression of their opinion in the matter.

A CARLOAD OF MACHINERY

George W. Seybold, secretary of the Idaho Dredging Co. Ltd., was in Kalamazoo Tuesday loading a carload of machinery for the new dredge that the company is building on Snake river, Idaho. The machinery consisted of a 100 horse power engine made by the Clarke Engine works of Kalamazoo and a Morris steel lined centrifugal pump with a capacity of 2500 yards of gravel per day, making a carload in all. This machinery will reach the mines in Idaho in about six days, where the dredge is all ready to receive it.

This company, which is principally owned in Ann Arbor, has brilliant prospects. It owns extensive submerged gold bearing gravel beds along the Snake river whose richness has already been proven by practical working tests. Being submerged the gold cannot be washed out by the ordinary processes of placer mining hence the resort to the plan of dredging. By this method the dredge is moved slowly along the bar raising the gravel on board the dredge where it is washed and returned to the water in the rear of the boat. This method is no experiment having been successfully followed for several years by other operations on these rich Snake river beds.

The dredge has cost the company about $15,000 and they hope to be washing out the yellow metal by August 1.

A small amount of the stock set aside for equipping the property with machinery remains unsold and can be had on application to George W. Seybold, secretary, 113 S. Fourth avenue, who will give detailed information concerning the company.

YPSI-ANN CARRIED 1,994,061 PEOPLE

The census bureau at Washington has been compiling some facts concerning electric lines and has just issued a bulletin of statistics for the year ending June 30, 1933, which contains some valuable information.

There are twenty-four companies operating roads in the state and their gross earnings were $6,494,691, while their operating expenses were $3,655,328, or 56.28 per cent of earnings. The taxes and fixed charges amounted to $1,788,797. The state derived an income of $1,077,048 from the roads, dividends paid was $612,000 and surplus of roads $465,048. Of the gross earnings $6,014,842 was from passengers, the remainder of $479,849 being from freight, mail, express, sale of current for light and power and other miscellaneous items.

Regarding the D., Y., A. A. & J. line the bulletin has the following: Capital liabilities per mile of single track, $56,880; number of passenger cars owned 34; number of passengers carried 1,944,061 all of whom paid fare. No dividend was declared last year.

COUNTERFEIT GOLD.

The gold used in color printing and on the mirror and picture frames is not from the pure gold leaf, but is a composition of bronze and spelter. It resembles the genuine so closely that few people know the difference. To tell the difference between the genuine Hostetter's Stomach Bitters and the many imitations offered for it, some of which are put up in the empty Hostetter bottles, is to observe that the Private Stamp over the neck is unbroken. Refuse all others if you value your health. The genuine has a record of fifty years of cures of such ailments as nausea, dizziness, flatulency, headache, heartburn, indigestion, dyspepsia, and malaria, fever and ague back of it. If you have never tried it, do so today.
