After the storm the calm. The anxiety of some men to get into trouble is only exceeded by their solicitude to get out of it. It happened so with these. The violent and headlong haste of the action was eclipsed only by the reaction. To the swordless officers musing in their separate tents, and the imprisoned soldiers discussing the affair between their bars, there came, in due time, repentance and regret. Through the clemency of the man whom they sought to destroy, there was at last afforded, on certain conditions, the oppor-tunity to erase their names from that black muster-roll, and secure restoration to duty. ome quickly, others reluctantly, but final ly all availed themselves of the absolution except one—the sergeant, the leader, the prime mover and champion of the affair.

He scorned forgiveness; it implied an acknowledgment of guilt. He would stand by the deed; whatever the law called it, he held it just resistance to tyranny. He had sought no man's life. He had felt: "We cannot live together; therefore de then go cannot live together; therefore, do thou go thy way, and I will mine; and he had simply said so. If that were a crime, he could not help it. No matter if a thousand men were cowards, he had not the blood of a poltroon in his veins. The men knew it was the letter of the law that was slaying him; but how to invoke its spirit, and whether Gulf. The orders were to rendezvous at Alexandria, Louisiana, and after due preparation to march across the country into Texas for the purpose of re-establishing the authority of the Government—to follow up the spirit could save him if it would, sorely puzzled them. They were satisfied that he should be punished, but by something less severe and irrevocable than death. Among the regiments ordered to report to the General there was the ill-fated Second Cavalry. It had suffered somewhat from

But he never dreamed of it. Whether justly or unjustly, he was despised by his command; and only held his place by sheer force of will, backed by the authorline, piloting the grand old army to vic-tory! If he could have died in the hospi-tal, slowly wasted away by the incurable wounds or diseases! If only in any way his blood might have been reckoned as part of the price paid for liberty and free government. But no-none of these. The very rec ord of his devotion to his country's cause, and of his faithful years of untiring service, was to be blotted out. His memory was to be blackened forever, and his name to become a legacy of shame to his children; and yet they knew he was conscious of no was it possible to save him in any way? Could he be pardoned, or his sentence be commuted? Yes, but only one man could do it—the General. Would he do it? Only one man in all the command could ask it and hope to be heard-the Lieutenantbeen troublesome under any circumstances that kept them in the service; but to be thoroughly organized and subjected to the Colonel. Would he do it?

The days of respite passed rapidly, and the anxiety and sympathy for the doomed man constantly increased in a cumulative At last the indispensable man ar rived at division headquarters with a "Petition for Pardon," and asked the staff to sign it. Every valid reason that could be devastating-and that, too, by a man whom they called a "yellow-haired circus-rider from the Shenandoah"—this seemed to them to be almost beyond the limit of hufound was urged, and he went away with all our names. He fared the same at the brigade headquarters; and by the time he reached the commanders of regiments, who man endurance.

The command had hardly pitched their tents and kindled their camp-fires before the spirit of reckless disregard of authority began to manifest itself. The men hated all signed it, the report had rejoiced the hearts of every tent-squad in the whole division. The sixth not a word spoken—to-morrow, "between the hours of ten and twelve o'clock—." They lay in squads, scattered through the camps, talking until late into the night, not caring to sleep, and the reveillee seemed to break in upon their first nap. The morning wore away in the midst of its usual duties.

Seven o'clock—breakfast. There was the usual hum throughout the camps, the neighing of the horses, and the voice the men calling back and forth as they struggled in, each to his own mess. Once more as they drank their coffee and ate their hard bread and bacon, grumblingly

There were no more questions. From the mere force of habit the men obeyed the summons; and by ten o'clock whole division was in motion. Silently, sullenly, the troops moved away from camp, down the main road; and, one brigade after another, regiment by regiment, were formed in hollow-square around a large and put through her paces, without a movacant sugar-field adjoining the town. Boston Advertise The Manner in Which Some Mothers Act With their Children.

Opposite is a young woman with a little child. An angelic child. This is no common creature, and it would be difficult to exaggerate her beauty. She is as delicate and dainty as a fairy. At first one only sees the lovely picture of rosy cheeks, deep blue eyes, made quite angelic by dark lashes-the enchanting, laughing mouth, absolutely illuminated by the sweet baby teeth, and the finishing touch of a loose, yellow curl showing below the white cap. Very soon, however, any woman notices that she is not only becomingly, but very expensively dressed, and when it becomes manifest that the mother is probably the wife of a mechanic, it occurs to one to wonder what would be the emotions of a European mother of this class on seeing a child of hers arrayed in all this lace, embroidery, and the softest and snowiest of

At once all eyes are drawn to this sweetest of sweet things-a beautiful child. The first person to notice her is a pleasant-looking man, who sits with his wife in a seat next the baby. Something about them makes one feel that this is a childless pair. The baby at this moment is half sitting, half lying on her mother's lap, kicking up one little redshod foot against the next seat. She is almost the only unconscious creature in that car as she lies there perfectly happy and at ease. Friendly man stretches out his hands toward her. Up springs the mother, and with a nervous hand seizes the

How have any of us ever deserved that the kingdom of heaven should be given right into our arms?

For a few moments our dear baby was allowed to rest in this quiet man's arms, play with his watch, to hunt through his pockets, to be let alone to do whatever she pleased. It was not long, however, before the mother began struggling in an ominous way with her traveling basket, and then, while baby was entirely quiet and happy, watching the reflection of the lamp on the bright watch, a large piece of what looked like pound-cake was passed over to her by

It was hard to see her put her little white teeth into it, and to judge from this what the ordinary diet was likely to be; hard to glance from the beautiful peach like cheek of the child to the sallow one of the young mother, which, together with the fragile, broken American teeth, told the story of chronic dyspepsia and general debility. Is this what our blooming baby is coming to?

She throws the cake on the floor, thank heaven, but eats the rest carelessly and without appetite (there is no member of S. P. C. present to prevent this case of cruelty to children), and then standing for a moment on the man's knee she glances

Remarkable Prophecies.

Among the prophecies of Holy Scripture none are more remarkable than those which speak of the future condition of the Jews themselves. If ever there was a patriotic people, who loved their country with an intense affection, it was the Jews; and this intense love burnt in none so brightly as in the prophets. And yet whatever might be the state of their own times, in prosperity and peace as well as when the shadow of impending calamity was growing dark above them, they all described their nation as doomed to be scattered and dispersed over the whole world, yet as ever looking back with love to their land, and returning to it only to be exposed to fresh disasters. no enemy was ever able to destroy them. Amidst all the chance of war they were to bear a charmed existence. Other nations scheme of God's government of mankind, and then pass away. Not so the Jews. With one consent the prophets affirm that God will never make them a full end. There is always to be a remnant; and that remnant is to strike its root downwards, and grow upwards, ever oppressed yet ever vigorous, until the times of waiting are ended, and the prophecies still unfilled of blessedness at last awaiting both Jew and Gentile in fuller tide than it has ever yet een bestowed, have their accomplishmen

-Rom. xi, 22 26. Never has any race had so hard a measure dealt it as the Jewish, and so thriving in spite of all that could be done for its extinction. They have been hated of all man-kind, and all mankind have, as it were, combined to extirpate them; and yet they are to be met with everywhere. No climate is too severe for them; they bear the extremities as well of heat as of cold. No form of government can prevent their existence within its realms. They return again and again, if only to be burnt; but the fire never destroys the roots. It remains to be seen what the juster treatment of modern days will effect. At last the Jew is meeting with fairer laws and milder treat ment. How will it affect his inveterate nationality? Will he merge himself now among the nations who treat him as one with their own people? I think not. Till he has fulfilled that high purpose for which God preserved him as a separate people so ong under disaster which would have uterly crushed any other race, the Jew must remain distinct and severed, apart from all other inhabitants of the world. Hidden among them, he is at this day a stock buried beneath the ground, with roots branching far and wide, pushing forth its fibres over all the earth; but sending up as yet no sucker. It has no central trunk. It has no prince, no government of its own, no apital, no army or navy, no money coined for itself, no national laws of its own maks preparing for some great work, but has no work in hand. The sharper, it seems, will always find plenty of victims even in this land of schools and enlightenment. In Van Buren county ecently they have made several big hauls getting farmers to sign what purported to be a contract for an agency of a patent gate wheel, but which proved to be a prom-

The Russian Secret Police.

It is one great obstacle to the progress o reform in Russia that her various political institutions are linked together so closely as to render it difficult, if not impossible, to touch out without deranging all the rest. This fact is aptly illustrated by the proposed abolition of the secret police, the most useless and odious feature of that exploded system of abuse which the Russians call "government." It forms an sians call "government." It forms an organized brotherhood of political spies, such as that maintained by Napoleon during the first empire or by Austria in the generation preceding 1848. Its avowed misssion is to detect and eradicate every symptom of disaffection. This duty empowers its agents to enter private houses, to arrest private individuals, to override, in a word, all personal rights whatever. There is no redress, no appeal. The talisenced to the Jackson state prison 14 years, manic words, "On the government service," suffice for every emergency. The extent to which such powers might be abused to gratify personal hatred or avariee needs no demonstration. Indeed, this hateful sys-tem is sufficiently described by the fact that its name and character have more than once been assumed by professional thieves as an aid to some unusually daring robbery.
A striking instance of this occurred some years ago in Moscow. A well-dressed stranger presented himself at the house of a rich merchant as an agent of the secret police, and producing a search-warrant, proceeded to rummage the whole house, examining even the merchant's wardrobe, writing desk and safe, after which he de-clared himself satisfied, and withdrew. Soon after his departure the pretended agent was discovered to be a noted thief, his warrant a forgery, and the result of his visit the abstraction from the safe of secur

A Carson City paper reports the following lively law proceedings: Yesterday afternoon a young man came into Justice Cary's court room with the rim of his hat drawn down over his eyes, and remarked, "Do you know me?" "The question of reciprocity between Canada and the United States has passed the commercial bodies, and is now before the American Congress. The way is being smoothed and made easy, and the moment a treaty is made and ratified, annexation follows. The plans are all laid, and before England has time to open her eyes, Canada, as a British colony, will be a thing of the past.

He was having a vacation there, and with some friends visited a little cooper shop where a single cooper worked. M., to elect delegates to the Republican National Convention to be held at other business as may properly come before it, will be held at the Court House, in the city of Ann Arbor, on Wednesday, April 14th, 1880, at 12 o'clock M. The several cities and townships will be entitled to delegates in the County Con vention as follows:

The nomination of candidates for Presiden and Vice-President being the ultimate object of the above convention, the committee deem it of the first importance that as full an expression of the people as possible should be obtained. With this view they suggest that, if convenient, the several cities and townships elect delegates to the County Convention at which the city or township officers are to be nominated, and that notice thereof be embraced in the call for the respective caucuses. # KETUKNS FROM THE STATE.

As the returns come in from the townships and municipal elections, held last Monday, but one conclusion can be arrived at, and that is the Republican party was never in a more healthy condition than it is to-day. Never before has there been so large a list of Republican officers elected, and so far as possible to judge, the counties have pretty generally returned Republican majorities upon their boards of supervisors, even in some Democratic strongholds. Of the prominent cities electing Republican Saginaw City, Ypsilanti, Lansing, Owosso, Rapids the Republicans and Democrats mayor only, while in several other places the majority of officers elected were Republicans. This shows how the people stand politically, and how fully the death-blow will be given to all hopes our Democratic friends may have ever had of making Michigan a close state in the coming campaign.

The returns of the vote upon the constitutional amendment relative to increasing the salary of the Governor from $1,000 to $3,000 are so meagre that it is impossible to state the decision of the people. The indications are that it is voted down, as nearly all amendments are, whether good, bad or indifferent. The people have a faculty of voting "no" upon nearly all proposed changes on the principle, undoubtedly, that it is best to let well enough alone.

HOMES IN THE WEST.

An item, laudatory in character, is going the rounds of the papers to the effect that Whitelaw Read, the editor of the N. Y. Tribune, has sent out another company of emigrants from New York City to the far west. Now we rejoice as much as any one can over the securing of comfortable homes by these people. They are very generally gathered from the slums and gutters, a class who eke out a miserable existence in the city, living-no one knows how, but undoubtedly by theft and crime. They are the terror of the better portion of the inhabitants. By sending them away the people of New York City must acknowledge that they cannot solve the problem of making them good citizens. It must be an humiliating admission to our eastern friends, who have been especially loud in their boasting that free America is not injured by receiving the offscourings and dregs from the European nations, but on the contrary, they are all converted into good, peaceable, law-abiding citizens by our laws, and the country benefitted thereby as well as the emigrants. The east cannot longer claim any share in this grand transformation. The west, the glorious west, with her broad prairies, and undulating plains; with her rich soil, pure air and plenty of work, is called upon now to do this labor alone. Every boat that lands in our harbors from the European shores brings its quota of emigrants for this great western all anonymous letters it was ignored and country. Hospital Aid Association.

EDITOR COURIER :- I think it will be of interest to the homœopaths who read your paper to know that a "Michigan Homeopathic Hospital Aid Association' has been organized by some ladies of this city. We propose to place free beds in the homocopathic hospital, and see that only those who are not able to pay for treatment have the benefit of them.

We hope to interest the homeopaths of the State who will aid us by contributions and who will send deserving patients here of it. The new officers need no commento be treated, and thus carry out as far as dation, being too well known among our we can, the ideas advanced by Dr. S. A. The following named persons were chosen fire wardens for the ensuing year:

For the past two years Mr. Charles B. Davison has held the position of chief engineer of the fire department, and was tendered the compliment of a re-election, in fact the members of the department showed their appreciation of his services by electing him three times as their chief, after he had told them he could not accept a re-election. Such a compliment to an officer, especially one who has so many to please, must be gratifying to the recipient, and we feel warranted in stating is highly appreciated by Mr. Davison. His private business, however, would not admit of holding the office longer, and the declination of the honor, much to the regret of the department and friends, could not be reconsidered. will be signed this week, with L. Button & Son, of Waterford, N. Y., the same firm ward of this city. A committee some time since examined into the merits of the different make, of steam engines made for fire purposes, and among the many valuable points, of the kind decided upon, found that it was light, durable, and just the thing for a city where no horses would be kept to draw it. The weight of the Button en-Y attached at the end, two streams of water 150 feet each; or through 100 feet of the 225 same hose, two streams 200 feet each. The manufacturers will send a man with the engine, put it in running order, test it, and if the warrants are not in every particular accomplished, return the same to the factory at no expense to the city. The firemen here feel confident that the Button engines are far superior to others in point of lightness, power, and in fact all the essential requisites needed in such an engine as the wants of this city demand. The engine will be provided with a heater which will keep from three to eight pounds of steam on the boiler all the time. It consumes from 36 to 46 lbs. of anthracite coal per day, requires filling at morning and night only. and needs less attention than a common base burner coal stove. Furthermore the water being kept warm all the time the engine is ready for immediate use, and the flues will not rust out as rapidly as when filled with cold water.

SOMETHING ABOUT WATER. There are ten cisterns within reach of the court house, with capacities ranging from 300 to 800 barrels. There are also several other cisterns about the city. One in front of the old Baptist church on Catharine street, another near the German church corner of Washington and 5th streets, another near the high school building and M. E. Another and very important item, is that our cisterns will not now be dependent upon rain to fill them. If a fire should empty one, or all, they can be easily filled from the creek by the steamer, at a trifling expense. We might continue to enumerate the advantages which will accrue from the new investment, but trust we have already said sufficient. We doubt our people ever regretting the step taken, and feel certain that the expenditure is a wise one.

Dyspepsia or Loss of NERVOUS POWER,
Are positively and speedily cured by Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites

The merit of this remarkable remedy is due to its peculiar property of restoring the wasted tissues of the body to their original firmness and vigor. It is well known that for every thought and action there is death or decay of an amount of material property. "why do you keep bees?" The reply was characteristic: "Even could I not make a good deal the most money from my bees, ionate to the magnitude of the thought or action. This waste is supplied by the unimpaired nutritive functions. The precocious activity of youths, the nthusiastic struggle for wealth and fame in the An apiarist may invest in bees any spring in Michigan, with the absolute certainty of middle aged, and old age itself cause an undue decay PROSTRATION.

For the last twelve months I have done so, and find that in incipient consumption, and other diseases of the throat and lungs, it has done wonders. In restoring persons suffering from the effect of diptheria, and the cough following lyphoid fever, prevalent in this region, it is the best remedial agent I have ever used. But for persons suffering from exhaustion of the powers of the brain and nervous system, from long-continued study or teaching, or in those cases of exhaustion from which so many young men suffer, I know of no better medicine for restoration to health than your Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites. farmers, and many others, do without this in making and caring for it. Sashes, a few boards and some horse manure are the ma-terials required. Regular hotbed sashes are 3 by 6 feet, and may be bought ready glazed at the sash and blind factories; old window-sashes will answer as a make-shift, but are far less convenient. Select a place sheltered by a building or fence from cold winds; dig a pit 2½ feet deep, as wide as the sashes are long, and as long as the num-ber of sashes to be used require. Line this pit with rough boards nailed to posts driven

About Fences.

An old farmer sends to the Manistee Times a little essay on farm fences, which contains some homely but truthful observations as applicable to other localities

I have observed an almost universal disposition in this region to sow grain close to the fence whatever it may be, and after witnessing so often its unbappy consequences, I thought a friendly word from an old man might not be taken amiss. The result almost invariably is, that when the grain grows up, some honest cow comes along, or perhaps one not so honest, and seeing it within reach, nips its head and passes on nipping what, to her, is a rare delicacy. This done, other heads can be reached by a little crowding, and then a

When she gets in the house she finds her bread is burnt, Josh has tipped over the water pail and deluged the baby, and she must go half a mile for another pail, and various things have gone wrong. Such things have a tendency to sour the disposition, and if repeated from day to day for weeks, in wet and dry, in hot or cold, be-stroying his own crops and those of other neighbors. He cannot keep her up, nor can his family do without her milk. Who in benefitted? Echo answers, "Who" and everybody answers, "Nobody." Who is injured? Everybody. What is the remedia?

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.
It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.
It removes all eruptions, itching and dardruft; and the scalp by its use becomes white and clean.
By its tonic properties it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness, and making the hair grow thick and strong. and making the bair grow thick and strong.

underrable shade, to brown or black, at discretion. Sold. We have demonstrated by frequent it is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

MANUFACTURED BY

Sold. We have demonstrated by frequent essays that many gold and silver cases offered in the market, are debased from 10 to 20 per cent. from the quality they assume to be. This is a fraud upon the purchaser, and accounts for the low prices at which such cased watches have been sold.
