ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1881.

WHOLE NUMBER 1026

THE BRACKET.

Why I lie about the world,
Julia, this sinner tells,
But what other reason's there?
But to show thee how, in truth,
Thou art a little better than I,
But thy soul's a little less than mine.

IT MATTERS MUCH.

It matters little where I was born,
Or if my parents were rich or poor;
Whether they shrank at the cold world's scorn,
Or whether I live as a beggar;
But whether I live as a beggar,
Or whether I live as a beggar,
It matters much.

A POET'S DILEMMA.

Here is a poet on a winter's stream,
His heart is full of love and pain;
He looks at the world and sees it all the same,
He looks at the world and sees it all the same,
He looks at the world and sees it all the same,
He looks at the world and sees it all the same,
He looks at the world and sees it all the same.

recommendation of a friend, who was about returning to his country, and who was a cot as our guide, and a well informed one he proved to be. Not only did he know all the places of interest in the neighborhood, and take delight in pointing out the best views in the lovely landscape, but his strength was such that he would lift me in and out of the saddle and help me over the roughest places, as though I were an infant in his brawny arms.

"One day we made the trip we were making together, when an accident befell me, which resulted quite seriously.

After walking a good distance on the Uxbridge Glace, we started to return to the house, and were obliged to cross several blocks of ice. Pierre was in front with a hatchet, cutting little steps for us to descend by, when, in some unaccountable manner, I slipped and strained my ankle most severely. The pain was intense, so that I could not walk, and was obliged to be carried back to Chamouni.

For several weeks I kept my room, but at last, feeling much better, we started on an excursion to an old saw mill, from which an—odgingly fine view was to be obtained; I had to mount a mule, my husband promising to arrive at the old saw mill before us, and have our lunch in readiness.

"Alas, he little dreamed of the danger I would be placed in, or the wonderful escape from death I should experience before we again met.

"After following for several miles the old trail of a stream in the valley, we entered a dark gorge, and commenced the ascent. The scenery was most picturesque.

On either side were heavy masses of ice, and the ground appeared carpeted with beautiful mountain flowers. My numerous in that district. I have forgotten the name of the mountain we were ascending, but I remember the name of the valley.

At intervals a place was excavated in the bank for parties going up to wait until the snow should melt.

"The old mill was situated high above at the distance of a mile, and Pierre had just pointed out to me its site, when he uttered an exclamation of surprise and jumping from the box, he rushed toward the mill, and I followed him.

"Looking in the direction he had taken, I saw a sight which curdled the blood in my veins, and I inquired to freeze my eyes.

"Coasting around a curve in the road, and very near to us, was a runaway mule, attached to a load of lumber, which striking his heels as he bounded along, goaded him on, and he rushed toward us.

Failures for the Year 1880.

Figures of failures for the entire country for each year, as it is completed, afford the best indication of the condition of commerce that is furnished. Such a compilation is possible only to an extensively organized concern, such as the mercantile agency of K. R. Dunn & Co. The figures for the year 1880 are exceedingly satisfactory, especially in comparison with those of preceding years, as the following will show:

KAUFERS IN THE UNITED STATES.

Number. 285
Amount. $1,117,000
Percentage. 7.40

The above table indicates that the mercantile failures in the United States during the year 1880 were in number 473, with liabilities aggregating nearly $600,000,000.

The failures for 1879 were 473, with liabilities of $98,000,000. The decrease, therefore, for the past year is 1-43 in number, and in liabilities $27,000,000.

Thus showing an improvement equal to 40 per cent, in number and a saving in losses by bad debts in the same proportion. While the comparison of the last year with the previous one is extremely favorable, the comparison of 1880 with 1875 is even more remarkable.

In 1875 the failures numbered 10,478, while in 1880 they numbered only 473, indicating a less number of failures than in 1875, and a saving in losses by bad debts in the same proportion. V.L.I. Imitate A None.

This very old motto should be kept in mind by all who are inclined to imitate. It is a motto which should be kept in mind by all who are inclined to imitate. It is a motto which should be kept in mind by all who are inclined to imitate.

Intake. Mill It a Million.

These latter few have been with the mill. It is a motto which should be kept in mind by all who are inclined to imitate. It is a motto which should be kept in mind by all who are inclined to imitate.

Observe the sign of the times. With which claw do the epidemics that so fit a time come upon a community like lightning from an Oodowood sky? It is the mill. It is a motto which should be kept in mind by all who are inclined to imitate.

The simple rules of suggestion fitted to be many as the breath, are however simple. It is a motto which should be kept in mind by all who are inclined to imitate. It is a motto which should be kept in mind by all who are inclined to imitate.

Irregularity in eating is an evil that works gradually but surely much mischief. It is a motto which should be kept in mind by all who are inclined to imitate. It is a motto which should be kept in mind by all who are inclined to imitate.

It is breakfasts for young and (rowing) men that are most a necessity. It is a motto which should be kept in mind by all who are inclined to imitate. It is a motto which should be kept in mind by all who are inclined to imitate.

While war is rising, and early breakfasts are essential. It is a motto which should be kept in mind by all who are inclined to imitate. It is a motto which should be kept in mind by all who are inclined to imitate.

To sleep in the clothes worn through the day is mother bad practice. It is a motto which should be kept in mind by all who are inclined to imitate. It is a motto which should be kept in mind by all who are inclined to imitate.

It was not long after Mr. Conger was nominated before the telegraph advised Mr. Bassett of the fact, and accordingly, Mr. Conger's name was put down for the seat. It had hardly been reserved, however, before Senator Conger said:

Mr. Bassett, I want you to reserve except Senator Chandler's seat for me. Mr. Bassett, I want you to reserve except Senator Chandler's seat for me. Mr. Bassett, I want you to reserve except Senator Chandler's seat for me.

Many people forget that character grows, that it is not something to be put on ready made, with womanhood in manhood, but day by day, here a little and there a little, grows with the growth and strengthens with tin: strength, until, good or bad, it becomes almost a part of man. Prompt, conscientiousness, wit, clear-headed and energetic, when do you suppose he developed all these admirable qualities? When he was a boy. Let us see the way in which a boy often vaunts get up in the morning, works, plays, studies and will show you what kind of a man he will be. The boy that is late at breakfast and in a school stand in a poor chance to be a punctual man. He who neglects his duties he neglects his character. The boy who is effy saying, "I forgot I didn't think I'll never be a reliable man. And the boy who finds pleasure in the suffering weaker things will never be a noble, genuine, kindly man—a gentleman.

Dr. J. C. Holland in Scribner's Monthly, not long ago called attention to the large number of women in this country, who are studying art, painting portraits, historical pictures, landscape, or flowers in china, in the vain hope of earning a livelihood, who never had earned a dollar. He proposed as a substitute for these attempts, wood engraving; stating that then waconstant dained in this branch of art work not only of the fine-art quality, but the most interior, such a high head, and hence, etc., etc. We know that Dr. Holland's statements are true. Young girls and women are to-day earning a comfortable living in New York, Philadelphia and Boston by engraving these commonplace but necessary designs, while others More ambitious, it month after month in their studios, with their land scapes and genre pictures waiting to be bought. It is pitiful to see the eagerness with which these would-be artists seize upon each new popular fancy, and flood the market with painted horse-shoes, necklaces or pearl shells, all in vain. The cause of failure with most women is that they aim too high. A girl, belonging to a family of straightened means, wishes to do something to earn her own living. She is right. No true woman will become dependent upon the weight upon an old, hard-worked father or young brothers who tone day will wish to marry. Now, for a boy of no decided talent or skill there are a thousand common places ways of earning his bread, and a very few men of genius succeed as authors, or artists. But a girl finds at only the high marks. She writes poems or essays for the best magazine, or she studies and opens a studio. She would feel insulted if you should suggest to her that she engrave maps or advertising cards, or design carpets. There are many women writing stretched trash for the papers, one article out of a hundred being accepted, who could earn a good income by sending pins and home made pickles into the markets.

Just liver Migdaksna, in South America, running for a thousand miles between two of the Andes, falls only 500 ft in all that distance; above the theomineicucien of the Milla miles it is seen descending in rapid and cataracts from the mountain. The Miguarte Rio de la Plata has so gentle a descent to the ocean that in Paraguay, 1,500 miles from its mouth, large ships have been seen where have sailed against the current all the way by the force of the wind alone—that is M say, which, on the beautiful inclined plane of the stream, having been lifted by the soft wind, and even against the current, to an elevation greater than of our loftiest spires.

know When to Quit.

"I think I may be excused for a little show of pride in saying that I knew when to quit. Wall street," he observed as a clearest of rain carried him over that thoroughfare.

"So you used to speculate, eh?" "Yes. I was on the street for 8, 9, 10 years."

"Made your pile, I suppose?" "Yes; I made and lost money the same as the rest. At one time I could draw my check for $93,000, and that wasn't so bad for a man who went into Wall street with only $40 in his pocket."

"And you knew when to quit?" "Yes, sir."

"That was when—when—?" "That was when I had enough left to pay my fare to Elmira and hire a boy to carry my satchel up to my father-in-law's house I" was the quiet reply.—Wall Street News.

Chief Justice Man-fild, probably with a view to prolong his own days, was always anxious, when old witnesses were in court, to know their customary habits of life. It so happened that two very old men by the name of Kim were one day the objects of his inquiry.

"You are a very old man," said his lordship, to the elder brother. "I suppose you have lived a very temperate life?" "Never drank anything but water, my lord," said Kim.

"Nor you, either, I suppose?" said the judge, addressing himself to the younger. "When I could get nothing else, my lord," was the reply. "I always took my glass with me."

"Well, then," replied his lordship, "all that we can say is, 'an elm will flourish wet or dry.'"

I Didn't Hit.

Some time since, while riding slowly along a dusty macadamized road, I was startled by the hurried flight close by my side of a small bird, who dropped in the road a few paces ahead, and with a flutter in the dust sat perfectly motionless. I drew up my horse to watch events, when a moment later a hawk swooped by but missed it, and went off into an adjoining field.

A Cross Baby.

Nothing is so conducive to a man's remaining a bachelor as stopping one night at the house of a married friend and being kept awake for five or six hours by the crying of a cross baby. All cross and crying babies need only Hop Bitters to make them well and smiling. Young man, remember this.—Traveller.

Physicians claim Hope and Malt Bitters are the best.

Do not buy cheap medicines on the score of economy. The best are not too good for the sick, and are the cheapest. Such are the Cherry Pectoral the Sarsaparilla and other standard remedies of J. C. Ayer & Co. They are worth all they cost and should be in every house.

EPIDEMICS—Just now coughs, colds and bronchial complaints seem to be epidemic. In these cases of sudden colds the best thing to do is to get a bottle of N. H. Down's Elixir, which invariably gives speedy relief and ultimately effects a cure in all cases where the breathing organs are affected.

Fres or Doctors.

The fee of doctors is an item that very many persons are interested in just at present. We believe the schedule for visits is $3.00, which would tax a man, confined to bed, to the tune of a dollar for a daily visit, over $1,000 a year for medical attendance alone! And one single bottle of Hop Bitters taken in time would save the $1,000, and all the year's sickness.—Post.
