The moral tone of the Ypsilanti is plainly shown by the manner in which such entertainments as that given by Snibaker's variety troupe is upheld, not only, but recommended. In a city where so many youth are attending school as there are in Ypsilanti such a newspaper has a very elevating (?) and ennobling (?) effect upon the minds of boys and young men. Surely a journal that has such regard for virtue and morality as to speak of that company as a "very enjoyable and good variety troupe" ought to receive the patronage of the fond parents in that city.

Last Sunday morning one of the clerks at the University Bath rooms was agreeably surprised in the following way. He had seen a young man safely into one of the rooms and had waited patiently for him to come out, while several patients had used the other room and gone their way, feeling refreshed. Finally, fearing for the safety of the individual, the clerk began to get uneasy, and ghosts of the departed Ann Arbor suicides began to appear before his mind's eye. At last he thought it best to examine into the matter, and cautiously opening the door he peered in and found that his guest had quietly taken French leave, closing the door behind him. Those who were waiting for their turn vowed immediate vengeance upon the perpetrator of the sell should he ever cross their paths.

Another sudden death occurred on Saturday morning about half past 10 o'clock. Mr. G. Grossman, of this city, was around the house as usual in the morning attending to his business affairs, but soon after breakfast complained of feeling ill. He retired to an adjoining room and lay down. Shortly after his wife thought she heard him speak, and upon going to him, found him beyond the power of speech. His death was undoubtedly caused by heart disease. It has been only a few months since a brother of his fell dead on the street from the same disease. The funeral occurred on Tuesday at 2 o'clock. At his own request he was buried by the Odd Fellows, of which order he was a member. The deceased leaves a wife and two sons. Health in Michigan.

Reports to the State Board of Health, Lansing, for the week ending November 5, 1881, by forty-two observers of diseases in different parts of the state, show causes of sickness as follows:

Table with 3 columns: Disease, Number, Per Cent. Includes Typhoid fever, Consumption, Typho-malarial fever, etc.

The diseases shown to have most increased in area of prevalence, during the week ending Nov. 5, are bronchitis, whooping cough, and measles. The diseases which have most decreased are dysentery, diarrhea, cholera morbus, diphtheria, erysipelas, and intermittent fever. The great decrease in sickness from dysentery, diarrhea, and cholera morbus, and the considerable decrease in ague were to have been expected, and judging by the experience in preceding years, this low rate may reasonably be expected to continue. As regards diphtheria the decline has not usually occurred until December, and in one year it did not occur until January. Much depends on what efforts are made to restrict the disease. HENRY B. BAKER, Secretary.

Nearly Fatal.

Two servant girls of Hon. Philip Bach, on going to bed last Tuesday night, locked their door and closed the windows. Properly turning off the gas, as they supposed, they soon went to sleep. About midnight one of them feeling ill arose and immediately fell to the floor. Her companion asked her what the matter was. She said she felt bad and began to walk the room. Soon feeling better she lay down again. As the girls did not make their appearance in the morning, Mr. Bach and his family became alarmed, and breaking in the door, they found the girls in a senseless condition and the room filled with gas. The windows were opened and their heads turned to the fresh air, Dr. Kapp was summoned at once, and worked with them vigorously all day. They are now about recovered. The cause of the escaping gas was probably carelessness in turning it off, for the girls had occupied the same room for several months past.

Mr. Spooendyke.

"Now, my dear," said Mr. Spooendyke, hurrying up to his wife's room, "you come down in the yard I've got a pleasant surprise for you."

"What is it?" asked Mrs. Spooendyke. "I have your pet horse, a horse."

"I know! It's a new parlor carpet. That's what it is!"

"No, it isn't, either. I said something like a horse; that is, when you make it. Guess again."

"He is going to the kitchen walls?" asked Mrs. Spooendyke, innocently.

"No, it ain't; and it ain't a hoghead of stove-blacking, nor it ain't a set of dining-room furniture, nor it ain't seven gross of stationary washbuds. Now guess again."

"Then it must be some cake curtains for the sitting-room windows, or a pair of just splendid?"

"It's a bicycle, that's what it is!" cried Mr. Spooendyke. "I bought it for exercise, and I'm going to ride it. Come down and see me."

"Well, ain't I glad!" ejaculated Mrs. Spooendyke. "You ought to have more exercise, and if there's exercise in anything, it's in a bicycle. Do let's see it!"

"It's a fine one, and it's just what you need, and I'm going to ride it in the yard, and dismount at length on the merits of the machine."

"In a few weeks I'll be able to make a mile a minute," he said, "and I'll have the apparatus against the clothes-pole and prepared to mount. Now, you watch me go to the end of this path."

"He got a foot into the treadle, and went head first into a flower-patch, the machine on top with a prodigious crash."

"Hadn't you better tie it up to the post until you get on?" suggested Mrs. Spooendyke.

"Leave me alone, will you?" demanded Mr. Spooendyke, struggling to get an even keel. "I'm doing most of this myself. Now you hold on, and keep your mouth shut. It takes a little practice, that's all."

"Mr. Spooendyke mounted again, and scuttled along four or five feet, and flopped over on the grass plot."

"That's splendid!" commended his wife. "You've got that already. Let me hold it for you this time."

"If you've got any extra strength you hold your tongue, will you?" growled Mr. Spooendyke. "It don't want any holding. It ain't alive. Stand back and give me room, now."

"The third trial Mr. Spooendyke ambled to the end of the path and went down in a heap among the flower pots."

"That's just too lovely for anything!" proclaimed Mrs. Spooendyke. "You made more'n a mile a minute, didn't you?"

How a Thief Robbed Himself.

"One of the funniest things that happened during my experience was being sent for one day to call upon a man who was charged in the jail upon the charge of burglary. The reputation of the man was bad; he was known to be an expert thief, and though burglary had been his trade for several times, no conviction had been obtained. I responded to his message, and at once recognized him as a man whom I had previously met. He told me his story, denying, of course, his guilt of this particular crime; but I was convinced he knew more of the matter than he had told me. He desired that I should take his case in hand, and at any rate to get him out on bail. When I asked him if he had any money, he said he had none, and I suggested that he should go to the out-house of a certain saloon, and upon the rafters in a corner I would find a roll of money containing $500. 'Take that and use it,' said he."

I followed his directions, found a package just where he said it was, and carried it to my office. The roll unrolled itself, and to my utter amazement found that it contained $3,500. I studied over the matter, but could not, for the life me, explain the difference in the amount and the $500. I called upon him the next day and told him I had secured the package. 'Now,' said he, 'I want you to take the money as soon as possible.' I at once looked into the package, and lo! it was empty, and the money gone against him, found it was weak, procured bail, had his examination, and he was discharged through the want of evidence. He was present at the examination only through my assurance that conviction could not be had. He was profuse in his thanks, and liberal in his treatment of myself and friends in the way of drinks and cigars. He bade me good-by and said he would leave the city for good. Not a word was said about the $3,500.

Six months afterward this man was again in jail, and when brought up for hearing said he had no money to hire a lawyer. I got a foot into the treadle, and went head first into a flower-patch, the machine on top with a prodigious crash."

"Hadn't you better tie it up to the post until you get on?" suggested Mrs. Spooendyke.

"Leave me alone, will you?" demanded Mr. Spooendyke, struggling to get an even keel. "I'm doing most of this myself. Now you hold on, and keep your mouth shut. It takes a little practice, that's all."

"Mr. Spooendyke mounted again, and scuttled along four or five feet, and flopped over on the grass plot."

"That's splendid!" commended his wife. "You've got that already. Let me hold it for you this time."

"If you've got any extra strength you hold your tongue, will you?" growled Mr. Spooendyke. "It don't want any holding. It ain't alive. Stand back and give me room, now."

"The third trial Mr. Spooendyke ambled to the end of the path and went down in a heap among the flower pots."

"That's just too lovely for anything!" proclaimed Mrs. Spooendyke. "You made more'n a mile a minute, didn't you?"

"Come and take it off!" roared Mr. Spooendyke. "Help me up! Do-dag the bicycle!" and the worthy gentleman struggled and plunged around like a whale in shallow water.

Mrs. Spooendyke assisted in righting him and brushing him up. "I know where you make your mistake," said she. "The little wheel ought to go first, like a buggy. Try it that way going back."

"May be you can ride it better than I can," howled Mr. Spooendyke. "You know all about wheels! What you need now is a lantern in your mouth and ten minutes before you get to the city hall clock! If you had a bucket of water and a handle you'd make a steam griddle! Don't you see the big wheel has got to go first?"

"Yes, dear," murmured Mrs. Spooendyke, "but I thought if you practiced with the little wheel at first, you wouldn't have so far to fall."

"Who fell?" demanded Mr. Spooendyke. "Didn't you see me step off? I tripped, that's all. Now you just watch me go back."

Once more Mr. Spooendyke started in, but the big wheel turned around and looked him in the face, and then, began to stagger.

"Look out!" squealed Mrs. Spooendyke. Mr. Spooendyke wrenched away, and kicked, and struggled, but it was of no avail. Down he came, and the bicycle was a hopeless wreck.

"What'll you yell for?" he shrieked. "Couldn't you keep your mouth shut? What'd you think you're yawning—a foghorn? Do-dag the measly bicycle!" And Mr. Spooendyke, with a look that folded him up like a bolt of muslin.

"Never mind, my dear," consoled Mrs. Spooendyke. "I'm afraid the exercise was too violent anyway, and I'm rather glad you broke it."

WHAT SHE SHOULD DO.

A Few Suggestions of Importance on a Subject of Interest to the Ladies.

And Certain Facts Which Should be Known by All Women.

From the Home Journal, New York. A short time since a paper appeared in a lecture delivered by a prominent woman before a well-known New England society, and she addressed with the needs of women, and contained so many hints which were valuable, that it naturally attracted no little attention, and was read and discussed in the social circles in nearly every part of the land. Realizing that no subject can be of more vital importance, as well as interest to the ladies of our country, we have collected and prepared with considerable care, additional facts bearing on the same subject.

The ladies of our country have been more observed and talked about than those of any other land, and Europeans always notice their characteristics usually with admiration. Sara Bernhardt declared she did not see how any one could resist falling in love with "those pretty American ladies." It has been added to even her far-famed French nation would find it difficult to equal, much less excel, American women in quickness of perception and brilliancy of intellect.

The women of America are all that can be desired; but it is a lamentable fact that their physical frames are far inferior in comparison with their social and mental characteristics. The women of England are noted for their fresh health; those of Germany for their strong constitutions, and the ladies of France for their exuberance of spirits; but American women possess none of these qualities in an eminent degree. The reason of this must be plain to every careful observer. Sedentary ways, devotion to fashion—but above all, the neglect of their own health, have rendered the women of this land far less strong and healthy than it is either their European or American sisters.

The primary cause of suffering from disease is impure blood. The performance of the functions of womanhood and motherhood is dependent upon a due and regular flow of blood through the system. If the blood is impure, the organs which are dependent upon it for their life and vigor are weakened and give way, and finally the kidneys and contiguous organs become the source of great pain, and without prompt relief, death is inevitable.

It is the office of the kidneys to take from the blood the poisonous matter which accumulates in the system, and to pass it off from the system. If they are impaired in their action they cannot do this work, the poison accumulates, and the organs which are dependent upon it for their life and vigor are weakened and give way, and finally the kidneys and contiguous organs become the source of great pain, and without prompt relief, death is inevitable.

There is but a very small proportion of the women of this nation that do not suffer from some of the diseases which Kidney-Wort has become famous for curing. Kidney-Wort is a powerful medicine, and its use will cure all the diseases which it is designed to cure.

At Grand Island the other day a passenger found three flies in his tea at the eating-house. He called the waiter to him and said: "You evidently think I am traveling in a social car and putting on a great deal of dirt. I'm riding second class, without baggage, and am only entitled to the back part of my seat. You are a director of the road, and are entitled to three flies in his tea and a dead cockroach between his panicles. I cannot travel second class and be treated in this manner. Please pass the mustard before you go, and set the attending physician to work at once. I don't want to throw one at the head waiter occasionally to attract his attention."

The Newspaper Man.

The reason why so few men comparatively succeed in journalism is because so few have for it the temperance and the constitution. More than a moiety of mankind is slow, lacking in activity, and devoid of the sense of public duty. This is the reason why we have long-winded, tedious, and uninteresting lectures, and magazine work which presupposes that longevity vouchsafed to the long-abiding old gentlemen and ladies of the olden time.

The public is not inconsiderate—it is only ignorant. The newspaper is a mystery of the manufacture of which it knows hardly anything. Those who give to the editor whatever of wisdom old age may have brought with it might have done better in this department of literature, or in other, in the field of science, in the arena of public affairs. Taste or accident has betrayed them into a line of work which they man-easily, and do they quarrel with their fortune. He who drifts into journalism rarely leaves it; he still plods on in the daily toil which for his troubles rate fastidiously. Often there is no fame for him. The cleverest newspaper man may be utterly unknown, and not forgotten only because he has never been added to the list of the forgotten. However, at any rate, and, come what may, the editor of a newspaper, of his competence, or the lack of it—come the highest or the humblest position, he should be a man of letters, and a man of letters who when all is over with him that his associates who survive him will be reasonably sorry or solemn at his funeral.

Be of Good Cheer. There is one remedy which has proved itself to be a priceless boon and a true friend to suffering humanity. It has saved thousands of nervous and debilitated persons from the horrors of insanity, and the full enjoyment of robust health. If you are weak, nervous and debilitated, or suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia, and all the possibilities of paralysis, apoplexy, and other disorders that lead to sudden death, and will remedy a man a serious mistake and do yourself great injury if you fail to try this excellent medicine. You will find it a perfect cure for all the troubles that attend nervousness. In a few weeks time your shattered nervous system will be restored to a natural and healthy condition, all symptoms of dyspepsia, indigestion, dizziness, and all the possibilities of paralysis, apoplexy, and other disorders that lead to sudden death, and will remedy a man a serious mistake and do yourself great injury if you fail to try this excellent medicine.

So says the Decatur Republican.
