Not a little interest has been excited over the arrangements for the amateur presentation of "Woodcock's Little Game" which is to be played by the forces of the "Les Parisiens." Of course, nothing like the line of amateur theatricals could be a success without Prof. DePont's active and efficient assistance, so he has consented to "coach" the players. These have been carefully selected, and the play will probably be a success. It is to be given for the Ladies' Library Association.

Last Saturday was the first fire which has occurred for a long time. It was a large dwelling house owned by Mrs. E. W. Morgan and situated on South Main street. It was occupied by two Polish families and the fire originated probably from a defective flue about the chimney. The alarm was not given early neither could the engine get a stream upon the house when it did arrive, so with a large crowd standing around it was totally consumed. It was insured for $2,000—about the worth of it. It has had quite a reputation as a "haunted house."

Last Saturday night the seniors in the High School—that is the best looking of them—with a few outsiders to make the company complete, took a sleigh ride out of the city, about five miles, to the home of Miss Lillie Hicks, one of the class. After getting warmed and well fed they started back, little thinking how fast time had been flying while they were enjoying themselves. As they came down State street, waking up the good people with their music and noise, it was actually Sunday morning. It shocks our sense of propriety to hear of such actions on the part of members of the Christian Association.

The reason why Mr. Chamberlain, of the Keck Furniture Company, goes about with a gash on his head is this: The other evening he was reading in the paper an account of a man's falling down through an elevator. He talked about it, and then went home to dream on it. He dreamt that he was falling through the elevator way and to save himself he made a desperate lunge, jumping clear out of bed and straight over the footboard, landing on the floor. In his flying leap his head came into contact with a chair, more to the damage of the former than the latter. It woke him up and gave him quite a surprise.

There are eight news papers and new magazines published in Ann Arbor and it is a curious thing about the journalists of these papers that they are all young men. In fact we will warrant that but few towns of the same number of papers can show such precocity behind the editorial pencil. Where magazines are published by Boards as with the Chronicle, Argonaut and Index, we take the average age. To begin with the baby of this literary family, we have the High School Index at the age of blushing 18. Then come the Chronicle and Register at 21, the Courier at 22, the Argonaut and Washenaw Post at 23, the Democrat at 38, and the Argus at 43. The eight editors taken together are 209 years old which would make an average of 26 years.

It is also interesting to note that the youngest is edited by the youngest and the oldest editor in the city by the oldest editor. In this making public the ages of our brother quill-drivers we have done it without asking their consent, so if you hear any of them making a fuss about it "For goodness sake don't say I told you."

Antiquities.

We have been shown by Mr. C. E. Worden, who is now in the city on a vacation from his business in California, some pictures and papers of interest because they are connected with what we have but little in this country, that is with antiquities. It seems that about a hundred years ago four of the earliest missionaries among the Indians on the Pacific coast died and were buried at the old San Carlos Mission in Monterey, Cal. Rev. John Crespi was placed there in 1782; Father Junipero Serra in 1784, Rev. Julian Lopez in 1797 and Rev. Francisco Lascien in 1803. Long since the old church had fallen into ruins and the vaults of the fathers had been covered up and almost forgotten. Only the records of the Mission remembered them. To verify these dusty papers and to satisfy all doubt it was decided to exhume the remains. So on the third of July of last year the rubbish was removed and a way was made to the sealed sepulchurs. Upon their being opened the redwood coffins were found intact but within were only the bones of the former occupants. About them in an excellent state of preservation were the silk shrouds and bands which had been aged. It was taken out and Mr. Worden being present secured a piece of it. He brought it home and with some views of the memorable scene he intends to present it to the museum. The pictures show the solid old cathedral with adobe walls and its quaint architecture, somewhat Moorish in form. Another view shows the interior and the group of bystanders at the time of the excavation. The bit of silk is brown but probably had another color previous to its strange experience. All these things telling us of the early days are strange and rather fascinating for us to dwell upon in thought.
