I have received courteous co-operation from both sides, and constant kindness in the discharge of official duties and in personal intercourse. I ought to be, and believe I am, fully sensible of the obligation imposed by these acts, the more so as I entered upon the duties of the Chair almost a stranger to parliamentary practices. Six years have passed since the Legislature of Illinois conferred upon me the trust which is shout to expire by conme the trust which is about to expire by constitutional limitation. I neither sought nor expected an election, which was brought about by a union of different elements. Political questions have separated me from the two great parties, and have subjected my action here and elsewhere to the criticism of the organs of both organizations. A public man who steps outside of regular party lines is exposed to a misrepresentation of his motives, and to a charge of weakness in his conduct. He gains little credit for the moral courage of self-assertion, and none for casting aside ambition in defense of his principles. statesman of Georgia, and at the time of his death Governor of the state, died at Atlanta on Sunday, March 4. He passed quietly away, exhaustion rather than disease, causing his death. News of his death created the profounddeath. News of his death created the profoundest sensation, as he was not known to be so near death's door. Mr. Stephens was born at Tallaferro, Georgia, February 11, 1812. After passing successfully through college and practicing several years as a lawyer, he entered political life in 1836 as a member of the house of representatives of his own state. In 1842 he was chosen state senator, and the following year was elected a member of congress, which office he continued to hold for 16 consecutive years, or until 1859, when he voluntarily retired to private life. After the nomination of Gen. Scott for the presidency Mr. Stephens, who had been a prominent whig leader, became a supporter of the democrats. He was placed at the head of the Douglass-Johnson electoral ticket in 1860, and in 1861 was a member of the convention which passed was a member of the convention which passed the ordinance of secession. That measure he carnestly opposed by vote and speech, but whilst he advised against the policy of seceswhilst he advised against the policy of secession for existing grievances, he maintained the right of a state to peacefully secede for sufficient cause. When a rupture became inevitable, however, he acquiesced in the decision of the convention, and on the formal organization of the confederate government he was elected vice president. In February, 1865, he was placed at the head of the commission on the part of the confederacy in the famous Hampton Roads conference. At the close of the war he was arrested and confined a prisoner of state in Fort Warren, but was released on his parole in October, 1865. In February, 1866, the general assembly elected him to the office of United States Senator, but congress ignored the restoration of Georgia to the Union under the proclamation of Andrew Johnson, so Mr. the proclamation of Andrew Johnson, so Mr. Stephens was not allowed to take his seat. His legal disabilities having been removed, he was elected a member of the forty-third congress and re-elected to the 44th, 45th and 46th. If the statement the owner of the Register made to a brother newspaper man last week, to the effect that the Company only lost $1,500 last year is true, they are to be congratulated over their brilliant financial achievement. If, as reported, the present owner wishes to sell the concern, this will be a good advertisement for it, especially if he will explain how he is losing only one-third as much per year as did his predecessors.

A WORD IN DEFENSE OF THE POST AND TRIBUNE.

From all parts of the State come fearful denunciations against the Post and Tribune for its course in the late senatorial contest. Some have stopped their paper, others have threatened to do it, and if the deep imprecations and mutterings against them they would no longer think that they were all of the party. We think we have but we have none of that fierce and vin-made serious mistakes in the policy adopted. We do not believe, as is generally believed, that personal ambition of some of the stock-holders to be a United States Senator was the only motive which actuated and caused them to desert the cause of Mr. Ferry; but rather that it was by a deep laid plot, planned by Jay A. Hubbell, which undermined them before they knew it. We think we could tell how this was

MORE ON PENSIONS.

Apropos of our article on "Pensions" in last week's Courier we have had other | Truly, the last days of the Congressman points come to our attention in regard to are hard. the methods of claim agents. We have before us one of their flaming announcements which reads: "PENSIONS! Any wound or injury, or any disease, however are yet entitled. INCREASE. The pension laws are now more liberal than formerly. and those who are drawing pensions are entitled to better rates. DESERTION removed under new laws and all dues col-Discharges procured."

And now after a judicious delay, comes a circular which we quote from, to give our readers an idea of the agent's scheme :

"While no one aside from the Commissioner of Pensions has power to advance a claim out of its regular order, an energetic and competent attorney can, by the exercise of good judgment and a large amount of work, have a claim so complete by the time its turn is reached that nothing can be found wanting, and it must of necessity be at once decided.

To do this work in advance of the official requirements is, of course, of great benefit to the claimant, but it requires that the cost of the labor and material be advanced, and it would be unreasenable to expect the attorney to adopt the plan un-less he were furnished with the requisite means to do so by the person who will thereby be benefited. To those who can pay our legal fee in full, and who desire their claims worked ne following proposition: On receipt of the full amount due, to make $10, we will immediately stamp their claims special, and use the money so received in employing a special force of educated and experienced knowledge of the workings of the Departments to assist us in working up these paid claims. * * We are not different from other men, and can therefore work more heartily after we have been made secure. The legal fee only is what we want-$10- and no more." While it is acknowledged that the Commissioner of Pensions only can advance a claim out of its regular order, yet it is more than broadly hinted that it can be hurried up if the claimant will come down with a little more money. This coupled with the first affirmation, shows they stand ready to tell any man who was in the army that he can get a pension. Then if they first get their fee, they are safe, whether the man gets his pension or not.

We wish it to be understood that we do not in the least oppose the granting of pensions to worthy and needy soldiers, but we would like to see some method adopted to put a stop to the wholesale raid on the treasury by every man who ever enlisted

The Ann Arbon Couries in the United States Army. And the best of a list of all pensioners to be posted in the localities wherein they live. By this means fraudulent claims could easily be detected and cut away, thereby saving the government, we believe, many thousands of dollars, which now are worse than squandered on claim agents and criminal

Washington Letter

From our Regular Correspondent. WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3, 1883. The Capitol is, by far, the most popular resort in Washington this week, and the evening sessions of Congress are the most attractive to visitors, for then the galleries are packed with strangers accompanied by their city friends: the house draws the largest crowds. Buncombe and parrot speeches are the rule, which, with monkey gesticulation, make so good a show that the spectators get the worth of cordially invited to be present, and it is their money, since the seats are free. They lance below, which has reached its climax stormy, wholly unintelligible discussion. At times nearly every member will be on his feet, and two dozen of them addressing the chair at the same time, and cheers, applause and laughter, which render not only their own words, but the utterances of the chair inaudible. Of course the chairman refuses to recognize anyone until they can come to order, but no recognition is asked for or desired. But, in spite of all this fun and fury, these last days of the forty-seventh Congress will never be remembered by the soon departing members with unmixed pleasure. Home, rest, and if possible, inform us where the redeemrelaxation will doubtless (for a time at least) be a boon to all of them, for their souls are being sorely tried now by a train | nities of its hideous form and to be trod of grievances following close upon their on by its iron-like heel. heels and dogging every step, in the shape in the city, aided by thousands of others to Texas, from Florida to California; each

COMMUNICATED.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., March 5, 1883. EDITOR COURIER.-I, Edmund Day, of the township of Waterloo, Jackson county, Mich., do affirm that on the 19th day of June, A. D., 1881, the commissioner of drainage of the town of Sharon, Washtenaw county, had duly advertised to sell a portion of the Sylvan and Sharon ditch, and that I did appear at said sale and did bid off a portion of said ditch and com pleted the same according to the terms of my contract and to the satisfaction of the drain commissioner of said town and received the necessary certificate of such commissioner. The town board refused to pay for the work because they thought I had made more than day wages on the job. They have persistently refused to up in this manuer, we in good faith submit | pay for the work for eighteen months. The amount due me is $250.00; for which the town board offered $125.00, if I would give a receipt for $250.00, which I refused to do. I live fourteen miles from the town men of good legal ability and thorough hall of Sharon, and have traveled this distance ten times on being notified by town clerk. About seventeen months ago the supervisor said he would not stand out if I could get a statement from the prosecuting attorney that the matter of said ditch was according to law. I got the statement required, and the gentlemen refused to listen to said statement because it did not agree with their will, namely, to cheat a laborer out of his pay. The culminating point is an arbitration before E. D. Kinne; and the said E. D. Kinne is their paid attorney, and he has decided that the written contract should be thrown away and that I be paid common day wages for the actual time employed working on said ditch, without any interest on the money they have held in their hands for the last eighieen months. I have submitted to this arbitration from which I have no appeal.

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many mitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER ha steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its un-paralleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the eceipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction. The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alco-holic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

The court house again had a narrow escape from fire last Sunday. It happened that Mr. Robison went into his office and built a fire in the grate. Soon after, noticing a smoke, he examined and found the floor all afire. It seems the builders had carelessly laid the boards right up to the grate without anything between but a piece of iron, consequently they easily became heated, and had they been undiscovered a little longer we might now be talking of a new court house.

The chorus of fairies of the opera, Io. lanthe meets twice a week, and the chorus of Peers three times a week, for singing and stage rehearsals. Thirty-five persons will take part; both principals and choruses have been very judiciously selected, are doing good work. The opera will probably be given May 18th.

At the churches in this city it has been noticed that congregational singing is rapidly improving. A lady visiting in the city who has traveled to some extent declared that she did not remember of having been in any other place where so many joined in singing with the choir. The plan the Methodists have adopted of having Friday evening meetings for singing is proving to be quite popular.

A meeting of the bicyclists of the town and University was held last evening, and a bicycle club was formed with the following officers: president, J. E. Beal; vice-president, H. O. Frank; captain, G. W. Lee; 1st lieutenant, H. B. Wheelock; 2d lieutenant, W. S. Hough; treasurer, L. D. Taylor; secretary, George Keck. There are over forty wheels in town and it is believed that much pleasure and profit will come to the members from the drill and "runs" of the club.

The house of Mr. Doty, out on the Dexter road, burned Friday night. It was with difficulty that he was rescued, as he was quite sick at the time. The whole house was crowded with relics, pictures, drawings, colored photographs, etc., which were the handiwork of the daughters. There were undoubtedly very few houses hereabouts which had so many objects of personal interest, and they all were destroyed by the fire. The house was partially insured in the Washtenaw Mutual.

From the term essays written by the hetoric classes in the High School, five of the best, on various themes, have been selected to be read this afternoon. Essays are handed in by Miss Chittenden's class as well as by Mr. Douglas's, and those selected furnish an excellent epportunity for judging how well the pupils in the weekly and the daily classes are able to make a practical application of the principles taught in these classes. The beacon glowed steady and red,
The calm sea icily shimmered
Like the eye of one who is dead.

Then, all alone on the ocean, The ghost of the island came— The ghost of a vessel in motion, The ghost of a vessel of flame.

It shone with vaporous brightness-It was not fire, but the whiteness Of a ghost of a perished blaze. We watched it with all our vision,

We watched it doubting and dumb; We had heard of the thing with derision, But we surely beheld it come.

We saw it glide o'er the water, A phantom of pallid fire; We saw it tumble and totter To ruin, and then flash higher.

Again and again to leeward Its ghastly rigging fell o'er; At last, far away to seaward, It foundered, and rose no more.

We had watched it with all our vision, We had watched it with eye and glass. And gone were doubt and derision, For surely we saw it pass.

NORA'S PERIL.

On the following forenoon we made a close examination of the castle, the result of which was that a letter was despatched that evening to an eminent architect in Dublin, requesting his early attendance In the afternoon the Colonel and I continued our walk through the demesne occasionally sitting down to rest upon the trunk of some fallen tree, or moss-covered stone on the margin of the river; selecting points commanding beautithe river; setecting points commanding occurred to views of the stream and glen, through which it took its devious course. The water in the pools was as clear as crystal, and we could see the lively trout in great numbers disporting in their pellucid depths.

Seating himself under the shade of a venerable oak, my host requested me to take a seat at his side; he then said.—

his side; he then said,—
"Yon have now, Mr. Mervyn, become almost a member of my family; and living, as I hope we shall do, upon the most familiar and confidential terms, I think it right to mention that my daughter Norah has, of late, become an object of great solicitude to me. During a visit to Genoa last summer we formed the acquaintance of an Italian nobleman, Count Albano, a count man of handsome person and pleasing young man of handsome person and pleasing address. He is the owner of a beautiful yacht, the fastest saller in the Mediterranean, and which generally lay at anchor in a small bay formed by the promontory of Porto Fino, within gunshot of an ancient castle, somewhat re-sembling mine in extent and ruinous condition. We visited it several times during our stay at Genoa, sailing thither in his yacht when the Genoa, saining thither in his yacht when the wind served; or driving along the beautiful shores of the gulf. A very small portion of the eastle was habitable, and our friend informed me that his family resided in one of the Grecian islands, and had not visited Porto Fino

"Continental society," he continued, "is such that it is impossible to satisfy oneself as to the antecedents of all the acquaintances one forms. We met Count Albano in the best society in Genoa, and also at Civita Vecchia, Naples, and Genoa, and also at Civita Vecchia, Naples, and other places on the coast, and as we moved along it during our tour; and, in fact, if the Count's yacht had been fitted up, as such vessels usually are, we probably should have spent more time at sea than on land; but, although over one hundred tons burden, she had only one small cabin for the owner, and seemed to have been designed for his exclusive enjoyment. The Count and his yacht occasionally disappeared for a few days, but he always returned and renewed his assiduous attentions disappeared for a few days, but he always returned and renewed his assiduous attentions to Norah. It is impossible to deny that he is an attractive person, and equally impossible to overlook the fact, which I now regret, that she was allowed to spend more time in his society than, perhaps, was prudent on my part; the result is that she bocame deeply attached to him and on his proposing an engagement. than, perhaps, was prudent on my part; the result is that she bocame deeply attached to him, and on his proposing an engagement, and acquainting me of their mutual affection, I thought it my duty to exact food a gun at sunset. I suppose it is meant as a signal to us." and acquainting me of their mutual affection, I thought it my duty to speak frankly my sentiments. I told him that I was about to return to Ireland, and that, although I would prefer that my daughter should not marry in a foreign country, yet if he could satisfy me that his fortune was sufficiently ample to justify my approval of his union with Norah I would endeavor to overcome any scruples of that nature. He assured me that, although not wealthy, his income was such as enabled him to aspire to her hand, of which he would give me ample proof; and we parted with the understanding that a year should clapse before the marriage would take place, and that he was to visit us here this summer; in fact," said my host, "I expect to see his yacht, the 'Gulnare,' anchor in the bay at any moment, as Norah wrote to inform him of our moment, as Norah wrote to inform him of our arrival, and of the difficulty of approach by I thanked Colonel De Burgho for the confidence he had shown by making this communication to me; and, although my heart beat quickly during its recital, and I felt a jealous pang of disappointment at finding that Norah's affections were preoccupied, I, hypocrite that I was, calmly expressed a hope that nothing would occur to prevent the realization of her anticipated happiness.

"We must never reckon over confidently in

"We must never reckon over confidently in these matters, Mervyn," he replied. "I am bound to return the Count's hospitality; but I certainly will not consent to take him as my certainly will not consent to take him as my son-in-law unless he gives me ample evidence of his ability to support my darling Norah in the rank in society to which she belongs. The British consul at Livorno is an old friend of mine, and I shall require that the promised proofs shall be pronounced satisfactory by him; in the meantime, I have made you acquainted with the present position of matters, and we must await the denouement with patience. Of one thing I am assured—Norah is a dutiful and affectionate daughter, and has promised me that she will never marry Count Albano without my consent.

Here was a feeble gleam of hope for me, and I resolved to keep a guard upon my feelings, but at the same time, to watch closely the pro-ceedings of my rival, who, I felt convinced, would turn out a villain of the deepest dye. How true the proverb

"Trifles, light as air, Are, to the jealous, confirmation strong As proof of holy writ."

I found myself already selfishly gloating over the satisfaction and triumph I should feel in detecting and exposing this, I felt certain, vile imposter, who had dared to aspire to the hand of my beautiful Norah. I never for a moment thought of the pain and sorrow she would naturally suffer; and I vowed to subject his every action to such a microscopic scrutiny as would urally suffer; and I vowed to subject his every action to such a microscopic scrutiny as would infallibly pierce through the mystery surrounding his character and real position.

Colonel De Burgho arose from his seat and we continued our walk. I observed that the extensive plantations had been entirely neglected, and that they contained a vast quantity of valuable timber which should be at once removed for the sake of those selected to remain.

"Yes," said he, "I quite agree with you; the only prudent thing my father ever did, although not done with a view to profit, but for the encouragement of game, was to plant a great portion of this demesne, and I, during the entire famine years, authorized my agent to expend the entire rental in additional planting, in order to give employment to the starving population. The result is that there are now several hundred acres of marketable timber; but the difficulty is to get it to market."

ficulty is to get it to market." I pointed out that as he contemplated con siderable outlay upon the castle and estate the most profitable mode of transport would be to purchase two small coasting vessels, and to cut and convey the tim-coasting vessels, and tocut and convey the tim-ber to the water's edge, ready for shipment to Cork and other ports where there was a good demand; the vessels bringing back the foreign timber, slates, etc., required for his purposes. Land carriage for either being quite imprac-ticable; this suggestion Col. De Burgho at once approved. In discussing matters connected with the in teresting science of wood-craft, we arrived at the castle in good time for our afternoon meal, and spent another delightful evening, as be-fore, in sailing on the bay.

The weather had hitherto been mild and calm. This frequently happens in summer on the west coast of Ireland, and is apparently vouchsafed as a compensation for the dreary days of storm and fog that prevail through the winter months. A week had elapsed since my arrival, during which my intimacy with my host's beautiful daughter increased daily. Col. De Burgho and I occupied the greater part of our time in inspecting the grounds and estate, and in devising plans for their improvement; my professional skill and practical knowledge of the country here came to his assistance. He had been a keen observer of the most improved modes of agriculture in Italy and the south of The weather had hitherto been mild and modes of agriculture in Italy and the south of France, and many of his suggestions were admirable, but required for their successful adoption the mechanical knowledge with which I was so conversant. We agreed that the wiser course would be to sketch the whole 'campaign' relevant—and carry out the subsequent "movements" when it was complete. "Better," he heart. - Confucius.

said, "lay siege to one difficulty at a time; we will batter away at and 'reduce' the most important outpots first, and then cut up the enemy in detail; let us first direct our full force upon the salient points,—you see I have studied the art of war," which indeed he had not only done but had also distinguished himself highly in the Sar dinian service, as his numerous medals and decorations well testified. Ihad obtained maps of the estate, over which Inad obtained maps of the estate, over which we had ridden or walked during the week, and on the day at which I have now arrived had completed a rough plan of the "campaign," upon which we adjourned to dine, and take our boating excursion as usual. The evening was beautiful, a gentle breeze rippling the waters, just sufficient to impel our boat upon an almost even keel. Norah and Kathleen were in high spirits, and the Colonel and I, after a close day's work, felt the delicious languor that accompanies the well earned repose of men who have toiled mentally or physically nen who have toiled mentally or physically

Ye dwellers in cities, how are you not to be commiserated—who have never enjoyed the agreeable sensations experienced by the weary agreeable sensations experienced by the weary sportsman after a day's hunting or constant walking over bogs and moors, the luxury of a "tub," of change of garments, of the preprandial glass of old brown sherry, the comfortable meal, the glowing wood fire, and bottle of generous Lafitte; the lounge upon a sofa, with the fragrant mecha and mature bavannals at hand; the game at whist or chess, the dressing-gown stage of toddy and a pipe; and then the arms of Morpheus, most benignant of the gods! He who has not experienced all this has not lived; he may have existed—so do moles, toads, and oysters; but that is not life.

Pains in the bowels may be mitigated or removed by applying to them rubber bags of hot water, or folds of woolen eloths wrung out from water as hot as can be borne. The same thing is true of face-ache, ear-aches and of most aches and pains.

On she came, sailing with snowy wings as stately as a wan, until her hull was visible round its point. The words "There is that in Norah's attention to the beautiful vessel; instantly she exclaimed,—

"Oh, papa, give me the glass," which I was obliged to pass from the stern and hand to her.
"Oh, Kathleen!" she said, after looking intently through it for a few seconds, "it is the the topmast. Oh, how lovely she looks!"

And so I must admit she did, though, at the sea for nearly a mile. It was evident, however, that she had some pilot on board well acquainted with the coast, for he gave the headland a wide berth, and stood well out into the bay for a fresh tack, which would bring the yacht to morrings opposite the eastle a fresh tack, which would bring the yacht to moorings opposite the castle.

"My dears," said Colonel De Burgho, "if you think it is the 'Gulnare' we had tetter 'bout the ship,' and return to prepare for the reception of our guest; with this wind we shall be more than an hour before we ground keel, and I think I see a six-oared boat putting off from the yacht, which will soon overtake us; no doubt the Count has been informed that he will reach the eastle sooner by rowing across the bay than by tacking about in this dull breeze, and with an ebb tide."

"Oh. it is the 'Gulnare,' papa!" said Norah.

"Oh, it is the 'Gulnare,' papa!" said Norah. I would know her among a thousand ships, y her tapering masts, spread of canvas, and are low her! ong, low hull. "Well my dear," said the Colonel, "I think you are right; at all events it is time to re-turn," and he turned the boat's head shore-tighten with suppressed excitement—I could not articulate; I knew that my eyes looked green, and that my face was pale, for all my green, and that my face was pale, for all my blood ran turbulently to the region of the heart and was quickening its pulsation at a fearful pace. Norah's eyes were still fixed upon the last-pursuing boat, when Kathleen, kind soul! perceiving and, I believe, suspecting the cause of, my confusion, leaned forward, so as to conceal my face from her sister's gaze and said,—"You are lightly clad, Mr. Mervyn, and look cold; take this shawl, I am not using it, and the evening air is getting chill."

and began to busy myself with the boat hook and other preparations for landing. We had scarcely arrived at the quay and given our boat in charge of its custodian, when the Count's pinnace pulled alongside, and he, jumping ashore, threw his arms round Colonel De Burgho, and saluted him on both cheeks, exclaiming, "Carissimo amico."

"Welcome, Count," said the Colonel; "we have been expecting your arrival some days."

have been expecting your arrival some days."

The Count then turned to Norah and Kathleen, and shook hands warmly with both, bow-ing low to the former, and returning her ex-pressive glance with one equally significant. I was introduced as the "Stgnor Mervyn," and we all walked leisurely towards the eastle. The Count's valise was landed, and the pinnace rowed off to meet the yacht, now just coming to an anchor about a mile distant. I walked moodily and silently along in the rear of the part, the demon of jealously gnawing at my heart; new fuel was thrown upon the flame by the fact this hated foreigner conversed in Ital-ian. I did not reflect that it was his native tongue. I afterwards found that he was an accomplished linguist, as all his seafaring accomplished linguist, as all his seafarir countrymen are speaking French, Spanis Turkish, and modern Greek, like natives; bu

Turkish, and modern Greek, like natives; but my only thought at that moment was that he could converse with Norah in a language I could not understand. On that evening I purloined an Italian grammar, and spent several hours every night during his stay in clandestinely mastering colloquial phrases, and it was a mazing how jealousy assisted and stimulated my studies. In a fortnight I could hold a conversation with Kathleen, who innocently took an interest in instructing me innocently took an interest in instructing m how to translate an architectural work in the

Our days were spent as usual, the colonel and I occupying the forencon in business, while the Count visited his vessel daily, and in the evening we took long walks in the demenes, I always being one of the party, but my seat in the boat being now occupied by the Count, I ceased to accompany the boating excursions, and on those occasions I sauntered through the grounds and along the shore, animated with no very friendly feelings towards that favored individual.

I walked one evening in a little cove to the northward of the castle, when a sailor, one of the Count's crew, who had been lying on the sward, with a small bundle at his side, rose up and addressed me in a strong Irish brogue. I had been under the impression that all his men were foreigners, and this man was as sunburnt and rover-like as the rest. There could be no mistake, as to the place of his nativity, his salutation of these heaves? mistake, as to the place of his nativity, his salutation of "yer honor," being the usual one on that part of the coast. On further conversation he informed me that he had been in "furring parts" for several years, and having lately heard at Genoa that the "Gulnare" was bound for England, he had offered his services, and had shipped as an able seaman, for the summer's cruising. He it was who had piloted her safe round the treacherous "pots" at the headland and brought her to safe anchorage; he had, he told me, when a boy, fished the whole coast north and south of the bay for fifty miles. He had now received a week's leave, and was going to visit the "ould modther," who lived some twenty miles north, and hoped to see me on his return.

"They're a quare set aboord," he said; "but he pay's good, an' I wanted to see the ould modther afore she dois, so I shipped with thim; but."—here he winked knowingly—"I'm not shure that I'll stop wid thim beyont the toime I'm bound to; av I can be of any sarvice to yer honor, yev only to give me the wink, for all me forebearers lived for generations anunder the colonel's; we wos sould to stranghers, but God be wid the ould toims when the De Burghos owned us!"

urghos owned us!" Burghos owned us!?

I saw at once what a valuable ally my friend "Dinnis," as he pronounced his patronymic, might prove to me; so, giving him a sovereign, I wished him good speed, and appointed to meet him at the same place on his return.

"It's handy, yer honor, ye'll obsarve" said he, "for it's out o' the castle, and o' the vessele too."

It was evident to me that Dennis had his suspicions, but of what nature they were I did not think it prudent to inquire upon so short an acquaintance, thinking it better to await the progress of events. TO BE CONTINUED.

A very appetising sauce to serve with broiled mackerel is made by melting a little butter, adding the juice of one emon, and a teaspoonful of chopped parsley. This may be poured over the fish, or served in a bowl and added by each one at the table to his or her porward.

This change of position gave Norah a clear view of the yacht, almost right astern, and of the boat which had just been lowered from her the boat which had just been lowered from her fore broiling; this to be done, of course, after the fish has been freshened over after the fish has been freshened over tion of fish. I gave her a grateful glance, for as yet I had not sufficiently mastered my emotion to speak my thanks. I had by this time recovered my composure, and began to busy myself with the boat hook and other preparations for leading. We had Recipes.

Snow Pie.-Two tablespoonfuls of eorn starch, wet the starch in cold water, as for making starch, pour on one pint of boiling water until it gets as thick as jelly, add one cup of sugar, keeping it on the stove till it comes to a boil, stirring all the time, then add the white of one egg, well beaten, and one teaspoonful of lemon; bake the pie erust first as for jelly pies, put the above mixture in and set in a cool place, as it does not keep good long.

Raspberry Pudding.—One pint of bread crumbs, one quart of milk, one cupful of sugar, the grated peel of a lemon, yolks of four eggs, small piece of butter. Bake. When done spread over the top a cupful of preserved rasp-berries; put over that a meringue made with the whites of the egg, a cupful of sugar and the juice of the lemon. Return it to the oven to color; let it partly cool and serve it with the cream.

Ovster Omelette.—Stew a dozen oysters in their own liquor; roll two or three lumps of butter the size of butternuts in flour, and put in and let it come to a boil; salt it well, and add black or cayenne pepper to suit your taste. Take out the oysters and chop them, and if necessary to make it thick add a little flour to the sauce, then put the oysters in, and set the saucepan in which they are on the back part of the stove. Beat four eggs until very light, and add to them two tablespoonfuls of cream er rich milk; fry in a well-buttered frying pan. When done remove to a hot plat ter or a deep plate, and pour the oyster sauce over it. Serve while hot.

Bismarck's Melancholy. From the Hour.

Generally speaking, Prince Bismarek

is indifferent to the world's opinion of But he has moments when his heart softens, and when a melancholy overcomes him, and for the time destroys the elasticity of his spirit. He then complains of having fought in vain, of having failed in almost everything. One autumn evening in 1877 he was sitting by the fireside in a room adjoining the green-house of Varzin, and complained bitterly that his political career had given him no pleasure and no satisfaction. "There is not one loves me for it," he said. "It does not make me popular. I have never made anyone happy in all my life, neither myself nor my family, nor the nation at large." His friends protested against this accusation, but he persisted in saying that the numbers that he had made unhappy far exceeded those that he had made happy. "If it were not for me he said, "the world would have seen three great wars less, and eighty thousand who died in their bloom might have lived, and how many parents, brothers, sisters, widows would have spared their tears!' Bismarck is also a little superstitious sometimes. He will not have a battle which is yet undecided spoken of as if it were won. He will not sit down to dinner if there are thirteen. When General Boyer came to him to negotiate in the name of Bazaine, Bismarck would not resolve anything of impor-tance because it was the 13th of October, of Hochkirch and Jern. Then he dislikes Fridays, will not start on Friday, nor sign any sort of an important document on that day of the week. When he was offered the title of count he hesitated before accepting it, because many families in Pomerania whom it had been conferred upon had died out in a si "The little country can't aff counts," he said. On the 24th of N ember, 1870, he was speaking of his o death, and said that he knew when would happen-the day of the mor year and all. His friends cried out t he must be mistaken, but he only sa 'No, I know-it is a mystical figur Seven years afterward he repeated same date, but added, "God's will done, however, in all things!" To of his ministers, who had appeared whis hair cut, he remarked: "You he cut your hair in a good time; the mo cutting hair and trees. Scientific p ple do not believe in the influence of the moon; but I do, and I feel I am right.

Too Much Dreaming.

A New Yorker who spent severa weeks in the Black Hills country last fall met with some rare chances as soon as he left Denver. The first party took "Say, stranger, are you after s "Well, perhaps," "Do you want the biggest spec in the West? "I might take it."

"Then you lay low. A sick man over here has dreamed three times running of finding the richest silver mine in the world, and I'll get all the directions as o how to find it for $500 cash down. The offer was not accepted, and within a few hours a second party had a "find" on hand that his brother had dreamed out. The third man wanted to sell his father's dream for $200, and the fourth had a dream of his own to sell cheap for spot cash. When the fifth one began negotiations the New Yorker cut him short with:

"Say, don't do it! you are the fifth man who has tried the dream business on me this week. Don't you do anything but dream out here?" "Well, there's a good d,eal of dream-ng around this locality" placidly an-wered the man—"in fact too much of If some of the boys don't quit the ousiness I reckon I'll have to go back to salting up mines and selling out to

"A Sort o' Expectin' Look."

oston Transcript. A New Hampshire countryman last summer used to do a good deal of observant sauntering about a house where boarded some city ladies. Oue of them, not very young, but of very attractive appearance, came in for much staring, shrewd, rather than impudent. Once it came in his way to do her a service by which he discovered her name and also the prefix Miss before it.

"Well, I be hanged," he remarked
"ef I hain't puzzled over thet a bit. wouldn't ask, fur I kind a made up my of milk on the stove in a farina kettle. mind long ago I could almost always tell. Somethin' about ye didn't look married, an' somethin' did. "What was it did?" she asked.

"Well, a sort a look as ef you about settled it; was contented, an' done fur, an' didn't ask nothin' o' no man. "Is that look so unusual?"

"Well, ves; hereabouts 'tis; but I've seen that look afore in women from down you way (Boston,) I used to s'pose them er hed it was always mar-rfed, but it seems not. Well, all I hav to say is, tain't natural! A woman ought always hav a sort o' expectin' look about her till she's hitched. It helps her market. It does, no mistake.

Kate Field's Summer Trip. N. Y. Tribune. Miss Kate Field intends to visit Colorado in May and spend some weeks Denver and its vicinity. To a friend in that city she writes: "I'm ashamed to know so little of my country, when I know so much of Europe. Born on the Mississippi, near St. Louis, I've never been west of the big river, and it's time I saw beyond. If it will pay, and I can find an honest, clever agent, I'd like to give my monologue in Denver. I began it with great success here and then went into an eclipse, all on account of cooperation. The monologue needs a pi-anist only, besides myself, and I presume such an animal can be found on the spot: one who doesn't get drunk preferred. I shall use my eyes and ears, and probably write a book-for which a publisher has already made me a bidand get materials for a play, if possi

Morning Duties.

Texas Siftings Mr. O'Rafferty has frequently had oc casion to rebuke his boy, Teddy, for failing to have the kindling wood ready to light the fire in the morning. A few nights ago O'Rafferty said to Teddy:

"What is it, me bye, that you have to do first thing in the morning?" "I know well enough, fayther, what I have to do first thing in the morning,' replied Teddy, laughing.

"What is it, ye spalpeen?"
"The first thing I have to do in the morning is to get the kindling ready the night before:"

Boiled Indian Bread .- Two cups of meal, one quart sour milk, one cup of flour, two-thirds of a cup syrup, one teaspoonful of soda, one egg; put in pudding bag, set in boiling water, and boil three hours.
