igan, in Schoolcraft county, although a lumbering town, proposes to be a decent one. It has recently inaugurated a war against whisky and prostitution. The only two dealers who are licensed in the village are in jail. A third, who was bondsman, has been behind the bars, but is out now on bail, but likely to go back again. The keeper of a miserable den in the woods, about a mile from town, is also in jail, and the inmates of his brothel have fled.

A young girl by the name of Leonard, living below Flushing, Genesce county, aged 14 years, mysteriously disappeared a few days ago, and no trace of her can be found, although hundreds of people have been almost continuously searching for her. The neighbors in the vicinity hint at the child having been made away with by her mother. As the mother has frequently been very cruel to the child, the neighbors think perhaps she has killed her while punishing her and thrown her body in the river to conceal her crime. The family are Germaus and very poor, and can understand English only very imperfectly, and it is impossible to elicit any information concerning the matter. The authorities have now taken the matter. George Vanderpool, whose triple trial at Manistee, Kalamazoo and Hastings, for the murder of Herbert Field, his partner in the banking business at Manistee, awakened widespread and intense interest through Michigan some 12 years ago, is again in trouble—this time with an accomolice for alleged forgery. Since his trial he has suffered from sickness, has been burned out, and it would seem that only by the most strenuous effort has he succeeded in keeping the wolf from the door. His family now reside, it is said, at Tiffin, ohio, while he is engaged as a traveling agent on a salary of $1,000, out of which he pays most of his own expenses and supports his wife, a 9 year old son and little daughter 3 years old. His wife has stood by him in all his difficulties, but they have reduced her to a wreck of her former self, and few of her old friends would know her. The family is living in a small wood-colored, dilapidated tenement house, scantily furnished, and its furniture of the cheapest possible quality.

Digging down to the coffin they placed the strap under, but couldn't budge it an iota. The grave being on a side hill, they dug away the lower side, and by putting skids underneath the coffin were able to slide it out. The corpse being so heavy it prompted their curiosity to open the coffin, when they found the corpse petrified, resembling yellow marble, and solid as stone. > The epidemic throughout the Departments now is the civil service reform fever. It is the chief topic of conversation, and many requests have been made since Congress adjourned for leaves of absence for six and eight months without pay, the object being to avoid civil service examinations should they desire to enter the public service again.

There are still forty-six congressmen and ex-congressmen remainining in the city, whose chief occupation would seem to be seeking favors from the heads of Departments. Although a law has been enacted regulating civil service appointments in the Government Departments, and a Civil Service Commission has been designated by the President, the demand for Federal patronage according to po-Wednesday morning before, he went to litical influence is almost as great now as Detroit, and taking cold, a chill was it ever was. LOCAL.

An Arbor day has been fixed by the Governor for April 26.

Parties are at work painting the engine house. It greatly improves its appearance. Thirty-five are to be confirmed at 10 o'clock Sunday morning, in Zion's church. In 1853 the late Dr. Farrand was a Latin pupil of Martin Clark's, in this

The brother of the late William Noble, living in Charlotte, did not long survive him, as he died Wednesday.

For Gough's lecture, which takes place next Tuesday night, reserved seats will Bliss & Son's.

Ex-Governor Felch goes into Detroit to-day to attend the Governor's levce given by the Light Guards. All of the living ex-Governors will be present.

A beautiful cross of calla lillies on scarlet dais, surmounted by the initial letters of I. H. S. in flowers, decorated the pulpit of the Presbyterian church last Sabbath.

Several of the citizens in town have received the handsomely printed invitations to the Governor's Levee which is given this evening in Detroit by the Light Guard, in honor of Governor Begole.

Alonzo A. Gregory, Jr., who has been connected with the postoffice department in this city for the last seventeen months has resigned to accept a position at 218 Woodward Avenue, Detroit.

M. B. Kelley & Co. expect to open their new dry goods store next week. They have secured the services of William Fisher, who for fifteen years was a faithful clerk at Wines and Worden's store.

The Washtenaw Journal gave its German readers its first dish of news last week. Although we hardly think that two German papers can exist here we can congratulate it upon its neat appearance.

News has reached here that Mr. C. R. Church, a resident of this place some ten years ago, died February 18 at his home in Walnut Grove, Texas, at the age of 62 years, and of rheumatism of the heart.

The fine display of diamonds at Watts' on Monday made a good many ladies envious as they looked upon the brilliants in crosses, crescents, brooches, ear rings and finger rings, varying in prices from $100, to $1,200.

In last week's issue of the Michigan School Moderator, published at Grand Rapids, is an interesting article entitled "Lessons in Zoölogy," by Prof. J. B. Steere. It gives much interesting data about birds.

Our esteemed cotemporary, the Chelsea Herald, advertises a man as a humerus lecturer. This anatomical subject must have something to do with the funny bone, because, you remember, that bor-

The music of the Easter services in the Episcopal church was very nicely rendered. Besides the usual floral decorations there was an elegant cross of prim and tea roses and white satin. It was sent by David Henning.

Rev. John Alabaster, of Detroit, has had a call to the Meridian street Methodist church in Indianapolis, and has expressed his willingness to respond to it if the Conference will allow. This is one of the best appointments in the West, and Mr. Alabaster's friends in this city will be pleased to learn of this honor for

Tuesday evening, April 17th, the Princeton College Glee Club will give a concert in University Hall, under the auspices of the Students' Lecture Association. A good male glee club will never fail to draw an enthusiastic audience, and as the Princeton Club is unsurpassed by any similar organization, their concert will no doubt be well patronized.

The following strong ticket has been put in nomination for officers in Ann Arbor town:

Supervisor-Frederick B. Braun. Clerk-L. Davis. Treasurer-Carlton M. Edmunds.

Highway Commissioner-John C. Schenk, Justice-J. D. Williams. School Inspector-Francis M. Holland. Constables-Walter Whitlark, Benj. Bradley, Jr., Chauncy Orcutt, James Cowan.

The management of the amateur plays soon to be given in the Opera House, has decided to return to "Woodcock's Little Game," with the following cast:

Mr. Woodcock Prof. de Pont. Mr. Christopher Larkings Mr. W. B. Chamberlain

Mr. Adolphus Swansdown...Mr. E. Caleyron.Mr. J. M. Zane. Mrs. Col. Carver....Miss Bessie Hunt Mrs. Woodcock Miss Annie Wilson Mrs. Larkings......Miss Annie Condon. In "Ici on Parle Français" Miss Clara Mack will take Miss Loving's place as Mrs. Rattan.

Geo. Bissinger, brother-in-law of A. D. Seyler, who has been living for thirteen years in St. Barbara Co., California, is now visiting his old friends in this city and vicinity. Mr. B. reports that the county he is living in is well settled by well-to-do eastern farmers. The climate delightful, snow rarely seen. He came through on the Texas and Southern Pacific R. R., and brought with him a branch from an orange tree well filled with the

The Junior Exhibition of the High School, class of '84, given Friday evening, was a complete success. The hall was crowded with the friends of the school and the exercises were carried out without any hitch. In an elocutionary way great improvements over former "Ex's" was marked; it being seen at its best advantage in the delivery of the essays of the Misses Jones and Taylor. The music was be sold this morning at nine o'clock, at creditably given by a quartette of young ladies and by Miss Strickland.

> The organ of the Baptist church has arrived and is now being set in position troit. The outside wood-work is black ash to correspond with the other interior decorations of the church, and the pipes have a delicate lilac for their ground color. It stands just back of the pulpit nearly 10 feet deep. Its two manuals have 61 notes, and its pedals 27 notes There are about 800 pipes and 22 stops. These stops are conveniently arranged by beautiful piece of mechanism, and is gaged to play it. The organ will hardly be finished for next Sunday's service, but it will be in order for a grand concert to be given Friday evening, April 6.

A Fire.

The ordinary quiet of the town was suddenly broken in upon Monday noon by the clangor of the fire-bells. The alarm was caused by the burning of Wm. Taylor's barn on Thompson street, which had probably been set afire. The Lower Town engine arrived and had the first stream upon the building, but it was too late to save it. Nothing further was burned. The contents were mostly removed, and as the barn was insured for $500 there was not much loss.

Entertainments.

Perhaps the highest mark that has ever been offered for a dog in this country has been made for one of Miss Marie Wellesley's Leonberg dogs. We are permitted to copy the following letter from William F. Cody to that lady:

MY DEAR MADAM.-As I am anxious to purchase your Leonberg pups, I make the following offer—$3,000 for Sultan or $5,000 for both.

WM. F. Cody, (Buffalo Bill).

The answer to Mr. Cody was: "The dog is not for sale at any price, as he cannot be duplicated in this or any other country."-Afield and Afloat, Philadelphia,

Feb. 14, 1880. This dog is now in the possession of Frank Frayne and performs with the company at the Opera House next Saturday evening. Some of the finest specialty performers in the country are with the company, and the whole performance is pleasing and entertaining, and well worth seeing. The fire and explosion scene and mechanical effects are new and startling.

THOS. W. KEENE. The fashionable as well as the dramatic event of the season will occur in this city on Friday evening, April 6th, on which occasion Mr. Thos. W. Keene, the popular tragedian, will appear at the Grand Opera House, in his grand impersonation of Richard III. The Chicago Herald says : " Mr. Keene has an advantage over Mr.McCullough and over Mr.Barrett. He possesses a voice of ample volume, free from the gurgling, throaty tones into which Mr. McCullough's merges in moments of excitement and passion. It is also free from that hard, metallic quality which prevents the auditor from believing that Barrett is ever in full sympathy with the feeling of the line or sentence he has uttered. The next great requisite of the actor is mobility of feature. We recolany silent acting of McCullough and Barlect no scene or part of a scene in which rett ever won them any quick commendation from their audience, whereas in sevto be given next Wednesday evening eral scenes in Richard III. it is oftener the

Mrs. Z. Burd has returned from Indian apolis, where she passed the winter. Mrs. Budlong of Chicago is visiting her sister, Mrs. Wilson, of South Ingalls

Miss Mary Clark returned from Detroit Wednesday, after a week's visit with Mrs.

Theodore Taylor came from Chicago Saturday and remained home several days before returning. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Day and Mrs.

Ferdon have returned home after quite a visit with relatives in New Jersey. Miss Paul goes to Sandusky next Mon day to take charge of a class in painting.

She expects to return the first of May. D. G. Taylor, who will graduate from the literary department next June is teaching at Battle Creek. He is spending his week of vacation in Ann Arbor. Dr.W. H. Dorrance, at the annual meeting of the State dental association held in Detroit, Wednesday evening, was elected Vice President and also delegate to the American Dental Association. T. B. Bronson, professor of Latin and modern languages, at Orchard Lake Military Academy, and W. H. Butts, professor of Mathematics at the same place, are spending this week of vacation in town. They contemplate a European trip together next summer.

UNIVERSITY ITEMS.

The School of Music will reopen next Monday.

The senior laws had to abandon the idea of having a class supper.

The University Calendar and the Palladium are out. Now for the Oracle.

The Princeton Glee Club will enliven us with their rollicking college glees and choruses at University Hall, April 17th.

The University Hall is insured for $70,-000; the Law building for $41,000, and the boilers in the boiler house for $4,500. The executive committee of the Regents composed of Messrs. Blair, Duffield and Norris, were in the city Monday night and had a meeting. The Dentals had a class supper at the St. James, Tuesday night. Nearly 90 were present, and they report that the new landlord, Stone, got them an elegant repast.

Miss Harding, who was graduated from the Literary department last June, and went as a missionary to Africa, arrived at Gaboon, on the West Coast, November 21, after a two months' voyage from New York. She has learned the language and has gone to teaching.

John H. Grant, who graduates from the Law School next week, goes to accept a good position in the law office of Judge Ramsdell of Manistee. Mr. Grant has been in school here for the past seven years and by his active participation in church and college affairs has gained a large circle of acquaintances who, while missing him, will be gratified at his good fortune in starting in his profession.

It was an anomaly for the law students who went to the postoffice Saturday night, for it was, probably, the first time they by the builders, G. Wood & Son, of De- had ever gone there not wishing to get a letter. The reason of it was, the professors had told them after examination that all who did not get a note from them could consider themselves passed. For that reason, when they saw a letter in and is 211/2 feet high, 14 feet wide, and their box, it did not make them particularly happy. Last week was issued for the graduating law class, a book which ought to have a place in D'Israeli's "Curiosities of Literahaving an oblique register on the knobs ture." Being a class-history, with short so that they all face the player. It is a sketches of the lives of the various members of the class, it was only intended for worth $2,300. Mr. Buzzell has been en- private circulation, but we have been allowed a peep at it, and its array of ponderous words, mixed metaphors and involved. sentences would raise a smile between the jaws of an Erie canal mule. Although the book is gotten up in sumptuous style, such as gilt edges, morocco cover, heavy paper, etc., the literary part of it is such that the members of the class are not particularly proud of the volume as a whole. The committee consisting of Profs. I. N. Demmon, W. H. Pettee, and R. C. Davis which was appointed to arrange for the dedication services of the new Library building, have decided upon the following program which is to be carried out the first week of the next college year :

1. Speech by a member of the Building Committee, giving a history of the appropriation for the building, its erection and formally delivering the building to the

A little breeze was stirred up in court Saturday afternoon when some senior laws were being examined for admittance to the bar. The committee, which was composed of Messrs. Kinne, Knowlton and Lawrence, had been giving the boys some 'stickers" in the shape of law conundrums, and many of the questions seemed to them irrelevant and flippant. The students, we understand, quite generally were unable to respond to the abstruse questions, and after one of them had failed, Mr. Kinne made the remark that they had been fooling away their money here and that they ought to go up to the Law department and demand a return of their money, as not having received an equivalent for it. Upon this, the gentleman last questioned took it as an insult to himself, to his classmates and to the department. He objected to the remark and refused to proceed unless it were taken back. Whereupon Mr. Kinne explained that it Third floor over Post-office, or at the Country was not meant for any insult to him or his classmates, nor was it a slur upon the law faculty. With this explanation the examination proceeded and all were admitted to the county bar and to the Suoreme Court.

Obituary.

CHURCH—Died, on the 21st inst., in the township of Venice, Shiawassee County, Mich., Henry Church, in the 20th year of his

Henry Church was born in Roxbury, Delaware county, New York, on the 17th of Sept. 1793. In 1816 he was married to a Miss Elvira Harris, of Amsterdam, Montgomery county. New York. In 1824 they moved into what was called the Genesee country, and during his residence there he became a Christian and joined the M. E. Church. In 1831 they came to Michigan, and settled in the town of Supe rior, Washtenaw county, where his wife died in August, 1844. In 1846 he married Mrs. Catharine Leonard, widow of Ashbel Leonard. He was an exemplary Christian, and for more than fifty years he had been identified with the household of faith, doing whatsoever his hands found to do for his Lord and Master. His house was always open to the weary itinerant preacher in those days when long journeys had to be made to reach appointments, and his purse strings were always held with an open hand, and ready to help when help was wanted. He was a constant reader of the Bible, which book he prized above all books, and the family altar was maintained in his house until his failing eye sight, and the infirmities of age weighed so heavily upon him that it had to be omitted, but he had made such good use of his time in his earlier manhood that he could repeat whole chapters from the Bible, and only a few days before he died, as he lay on his bed he repeated the whole of the fourteenth chapter of Job, from which chapter, at the 14th verse, the text for his funeral discourse was taken. Thus has passed away a father in Israel, a true friend and a man who had no enemies. He leaves six children, four sons and two daughters, and a large circle of friends and acquaintances to mourn his loss. His life's work is done, and 'tis well dene.

We could do nothing whatever until our arrival at Naples, and, aware of the necessity for husbanding our strength, we sought some repose, which, indeed, was necessary after our long and fatiguing travel during the day. We arrived in London early on the following morning, and after refreshment Col. De Burgho repaired to his bankers, and to the office where passports were obtainable, while I sallied forth in quest of weapons of the kind I thought requisite for our undertaking. I purchased three revolvers and as many daggers, calculating that I might be so fortunate as to find my friend Dennis somewhere on the Italian coast, in which case I knew that his services would be at our Dennis somewhere on the Italian coast, in which case I knew that his services would be at our disposal. We sailed that night from Dover, and pursued our journey day and night for some days, as far as railway extended, and then by diligence and steam, until on the eighth day we arrived at Naples. Worn out and fatigued by our continuous travel, we both retired early to recent our expansived strength.

continuous travel, we both retired early to re-cruit our exhausted strength.

Early on the following morning we repaired to the residence of the British consul; what was my relief and satisfaction at finding our good friend Dennis on the look out for us. He demonstrated his joy at seeing me by throwing his cap into the air, and shouting "hurroo!" seyeral times, to the amazement of the spectators, who evidently thought him insane.

"Och, och!" exclaimed Dennis, "I knew ye'd be hot on his thracks; an', begorra, av yez had been wan day sooner ye'd have cotched him here. We sailed into the bay yesterday morning, and took in provishins an' watther; and faith, Mr. Mirvyn," said he, "I thocht it was toime to give thim the slip, for I observed the Count an' that baste o' a mate colloguing togither, an' looking hard at me, and I jist mizzled as quick as I could; I slipped over the side into the 'dingy' and paddled ashore as fast as wir I did whin I wor bathin', an' saw wan o' thim bottle-nozed sharks about; an' I made off through the town till evening, an' thin I came down to the mole an' saw she was gone; an' I've been lookin' out for ye all mernin'. I'm thinking I know where she's bound for, or thereabouts; tho' I don't know the name of the place, but it's not far from 'Corfoo,' or wan o' thim islands, and iv ye can make hot purshuit ye'll be close on his heels yit." "Och, och!" exclaimed Dennis, "I knew ye'd

I asked Dennis how he had got this intelligence; he told me he had "got thick" with a black boy that "sarved out" the "rashing" from the cook's galley, and was, he thought, a Malay, and that he had "got out of him," from time to time during the voyage, that the Count had a house on the shore of one of the islands a the Grecian seas, and moorings for the acht; and that he had heard him telling the late that he would take her there and remain for some months in those seas.

We spent the greater part of the day making enquiries as to the most expeditious mode of getting to Corfu, which we thought would be the best port to go to, in the first instance, but the best port to go to, in the first instance, but were unable to ascertain that there was any direct communication from Naples. We at length concluded that our best plan was to hire or purchase a small vessel, which we should have to do in any case at Corfu; and we spent some hours in endeavoring to ascertain whether one could be procured, but without success.

Wearied and chagrined at the delay, and apparent failure of our efforts, the Colonel and I entered a large cafe adjoining our hotel, and ordered some dinner to be served immediately, intending to pursue our inquiries during the evening. The tables were all occupied, and after walking through the room for some minutes in search of a seat, an officer in the uniform of the American navy said,—

"I say, stranger, guess yer stumped, and don't find seats hendy; don't bestreaked,—tell the garcon to bring your chickin-fixins here, the garcon to bring your chickin-fixins here, and I'll make room for you and yer guvnor."

Thanking him for his politeness, Colonel De Burgho and I gladly availed ourselves of his invitation; in a few minutes dinner was served, and we found ourselves chatting familiar with our new acquaintance.

"Guess, stranger," said he, addressing himself to me, "yer Britishers?"

I replied that we were proud to call ourselves the subjects of her Britannic Majesty.

"Yer right, strangers," he replied, "yev a right to be proud of the old country,—the man that's a Britisher and isn't so, is next to near what I call a darned skunk! I'm a na-tive of the United States of Ameriky, and sport the eagle on my uniform, as you see, and of course I stand up for my own land, but I love the old country too. "Kurnal," said he, "I'm grit—an'l don't think I'm highfalutin when I say I'll see you thro' this business, or my name's not Bakhus. But yer barking up the wrong tree; ye'll get nothing to buy here but some old fishin' jigger that couldn't put to sea without being over-hauled for a month, and the sailors here would hardly venture out of sight of the coast. If it does come on squally, even off shore, down they go on their knees before an image of some they go on their knees before an image of some saint, and let the vessel drift; and for fighting—they'd absquatulate at the first shot; they're the biggest cowards in the world, as well as the greatest thieves. But I can help you in another way; my ship, the 'Pocohontas,' is lying at Ge-noa, and a friend of mine who has gone home to the states, left his yacht in my charge,—in fact, she's mine for the next two months; she is well fitted out and ready for sea, all but provisions, and they can be shipped in a day at she is well fitted out and ready for sea, all but provisions, and they can be shipped in a day at most. much warmth of feeling, and expressed his anxiety to depart at the earliest moment. "Wa'al, then let's liquor on it;—here, gar-con, cocktails. squiggle, you varmint, or I'll lift yer hair," was the Lieutenant's reply. "We'll breakfast at daylight, and sail in an hour after, and we can arrange our plans on the way. I'll wire to Ge-noa, and have the 'Ariadne' ready for sea, and save a day. Good-night, Kurnal; jist you reckon there'll be no fizzlin' in this bizniss; we'll knock yer friend the Count into a cocked hat in no time, if we can only catch him; 'o keep up yer pecker, for I guess he'll be a gone coon before he's done with Zeth Bakhus."

CHAPTER VIII.

At an early hour next morning we embarked on board a roomy and well-appointed boat, manned by a crew of three men, including Dennis, whom we asked permission to bring. We sailed along the coast, merely touching at Civita Vecchia and Livorno for water; at the latter place the Colonel disembarked and visited his friend the consul, but acquired from him no further information.

"Kurnal," said Lieutenant Bakhus, as we the consultation of the mean temperature of summer. There were exceptional instances when the rain fall was defective, but the main the rain fall was defective but the main.

"Kurnal," said Lieutenant Bakhus, as we sailed smoothly along on the morning of our embarkation, "there's one thing I can't see daylight into at all—why you Britishers are always spread-eagled one day about your navy, and funking the next; up gets one of your Parliament men and says, "We've forty ships in commission that's fit to lick creation;" and another gets up when he sits down, and says, "We haven't one fit to go to sea." The papers follow suit, and yer always washing yer dirty linen in public. Now, I know, for I see your ships in every station, that your talk's all flam. Yev good ships, and plenty of them; and flam. Yey good ships, and plenty of them; and yer officers and men are full of grit, know their duty, an'il do it; but yev a lot of buncombes in yer Parliament House that are kinky and always gabbling about things that are above their heads; and there's as much tall talk in yer House of Commons as there is at an Indian Sachem Council; and much the same result, for they both end in smoke."

"You are right, Lieutenant Bakhus," said the Colonel; "I am often astonished and ashamed at the tone of our naval debates; but I fear this will always be the case so long as unprofessional heads of departments are placed over our naval administration; and this, I think, will continue until we have another naval war, when some great sailor will distinguish himself, and public opinion will demand that professionally skilled administrators shall have their proper place and due reward. We are better off in the army; we have a soldier at the head of it."

"Wa'al, all I can say is, that for ships and

"Wa'al, all I can say is, that for ships and guns, and men to work them, yer navy can lick creation, and a good deal to spare; but take my advice, and have a sailor at the head of your naval council, for the commercial men you sometimes appoint can't get the principle of limited liability out of their heads; and, indeed, it's but fair that their liability, or responsibility, should be tenderly considered when their knowledge of naval matters must be so ou manage these matters in the states?" "We're worse off, by a long chalk, Kurnal," he replied. "With us it's all an almighty fizzle from top to bottom. We have a department of the navy, as you have; but, then, we build and repair most of our ships by contract, and that's an all-fired bad way of getting a good war ship. But look at your commercial navy—that's an eye-opener; and your mall-carrying steamers—why, if you hadn't a war ship at all, and had time to convert them into fighting ships, I re-

The Colonel expressed much surprise at this statement, but said he had not sufficiently studied the subject to give a confident opinion on it.

"Wa'al, sir, I've studied it, an' say that you "Wa'al, sir, I've studied it, an' say that your Government, in commercial matters, is the longest-headed, far-seeing government in the world. They know that postal and passenger facilities are needed by all classes, and that the money they pay for them returns by a thousand channels of trade to the Imperial Treasury. Do you know, sir, that the British mercantile marine of sea-going steamships amounts to more than two thousand vessels, of which over one hundred are snbsidized as mail boats, carrying passengers and letters to all parts of the globe—at a charge to your government of a million and a quarter annually, only about a half of which is returned to the Post Office?"

We expressed our ignorance of this fact, and the Lieutenan continued,—

"Yes, sir, it's true; you Britishers hev got nearly the whole postal communication of the world in your hands. Why a letter from New York to Brazil, four thousand miles distant must needs go by England, Portugal, the coast of Africa, Madeira, and the Cape de Verdes, eight thousand miles, in a British packet! Now what do we do? The American mail steamers are about wenty-five in number, some of which have only a nominal mail pay; our steamers are about wenty-five in number, some of which have only a nominal mail pay; our mercantile steam-marine consists of about sixty ships, against your two thousand. This may appear incredible, but it is true; and furthermore, if we had more ships, we haven't engineers to man them. When one of our first American mail steamers sailed for Europe, no practiced marine engineer could be found to work her engines; they took a first-class engineer and corps of assistants from one of the North River packets; but as soon as the ship got to sea, and heavy weather came on, all the engineers and firemen were taken sick, and for three days it was constantly expected that the three days it was constantly expected that the ship would be lost. No river engineer is fit for service at sea until he has had months of experience and become accustomed to sea sickness."

"No sir," he continued, "you must have strength, power, and speed; full-manned crews, and first-class officers. Your government have got all these in the only way they are to be had—by paying large subsidies to the contracting companies; mail steamers cannot live without them, and keep up the required speed. Do you know that a vessel of two thousand tons displacement, steaming six nautical miles per hour, will consume only seven and a half tons of coals per day, while at twelve miles she will consume sixty-one tons. This must be paid of coals per day, while at twelve miles she will consume sixty-one tons. This must be paid for, and also the additional crew required to work her, the additional wear and tear to hull, boilers, and machinery, and the risk always accompanying great speed. Your government know all this, and are content to bear a heavy loss upon the postal receipts, for the sake of the commerce of the country, and the result is that England has almost a monopoly of the main passenger and postal routes of the world."

"You have given me interesting information, Lieutenant Bakhus," the colonel observed; "but if your commercial navy is not in a satisfactory state, you have at least a very fine war marine."

"I say, guvnor," said he, addressing Colonel De Burgho, "if yere a stranger here—I came here this morning, and I flatter myself I've done Naples, and know every hole and corner. the country in time of war. We have not steamers enough in the navy to place one at each of our important scaports, much less to sand them to foreign attains?" end them to foreign stations."

On the afternoon of the second day we were rapidly nearing Genoa, and arrived alongside the "Ariadne" early in the evening; having ar-ranged to meet on the following morning, we separated for the night. On reassembling, we found that she was quite ready for sea, and had laid in water and seastock for a fortnight's cruise. We paid a visit to the commander of the "Pocohontas," inspected that fine vessel, asked and obtained an extension of leave for Lieutenant Bakhus, which was graciously granted by that gallant officer, and returned to our yacht. We set sail that evening for Corfu.

As soon as we were clear of the harbor the As soon as we were clear of the harbor the colonel proposed that we should go to the cabin and hold a council of war, but from this nothing resulted, the fact being that until our arrival at Corfu we could get no information of the whereabouts of the "Gulnare," and we therefore adjourned our consultation for the present. We were glad to find that the yacht was well supplied with charts of the Mediter-ranean, and of all the shores of Greece, which

I then explained that we wished to purchase a small vessel to carry us to Corfu, and thence to cruise among the islands on the coast of Greece, but that we had been as yet unable to find one suitable for our purpose.

"Lieutenant Bakhus," said Colonel De Burgho, "I am a soldier, and observe that you belong to an equally honorable profession; you have kindly expressed your willingness to assist me in my objects, and I accept your offer with a gratitude; and, at the same time, in a spirit of confidence which should subsist between gentlemen who have defended the honor of their country, and bear her commission, I will frankly inform you of my difficeedings. It's a romance, this aire.'

> TO BE CONTINUED. The Hand.

Lavater told Goethe that on a certain occasion when he held the velvet bag in the church, as collector of the offerings, he tried to observe only the hands: and he satisfied himself that in every individual the shape of the hand and of the fingers, the action and sentiment in dropping the gift into the bag, were distinctly different and individually characteristic.

What then shall we say of Van Dyck, who painted the hands of his men and from a model hand—his own very often? and every one who considers for a moment will see in Van Dyck's portraits that, however well painted and elegant the hands, they in very few instances harmonize with the personalite; that the position is often affected, and as if intended for display-the display of what is in itself a positive fault, and from which some little knowledge of comparative physiology would have saved him.

There are hands of various character the hand to catch, and the hand to hold the hand to clasp, and the hand to grasp the hand that has worked or could work and the hand that has never done anything but hold itself out to be kissed, like that of Joanna of Arragon in Raphael's picture.

Let any one look at the hands in Titian's portrait of old Paul IV.; though and keeps His commandments may find exquisitely modled, they have an expression that reminds us of claws; they belong to the face of that grasping old man, and could belong to no other.

With the view of ascertaining the influence of atmospheric temperature on the yield of wheat, M. Duchaussoy has compared the statistics in the department of Cher, France, for about the last the rain fall was defective, but the main inference was true.

"No, sir," said the old Indian down n Maine, "I don't have my boy taught arithmetic. I learned it, and the curse of my life has been the remarks of peothe effect that I was very pleasant because I was an Indian summer."

What is George Ellit's "Middlemarch" but length, and is never used, but is pointed by the Mansuch a book?—fascinating, brilliant, powerful, cruel and cold as the devil and death! The moral of "Middle women, not from individual nature, but march" might be accepted if the choice for Dorothea lay ever between men of the Casaubon and the Ladislaw typesthe Casaubon and the Ladislaw types—between faith without love and brains St. Malo is undoubtedly the most unique without faith. But to refute the conclusion and to scatter those mists of wretchedness, one has but to recall certain precious and helpful visions, which indeed, are not vision but reality; visions which the malevolent romancer hides from us, but which you can see any day, and of which I would say a word or two before proceeding. Look, then, at the Christian homes throughout Christian lands, where holy virtues and graces flourish in the atmosphere of faith, little if at all disturbed by the storms which vex the outside world there is the wherewithal to make other nomes as sweet and fresh as these, and in such work the woman who fears God
