Ferris S. Fitch of Fitchburg, Ingham county, died suddenly on the afternoon of March 29, having lived in that place since 1848. He was prominent in Democratic politics, and in 1855 was a member of the legislature, since which he has held various minor offices. The Lansinsg wheel-barrow works took fire in the paint shop a few evenings since. The entire works were at one time threatened, but the promptness of the fire department and a plentiful supply of water enabled the flames to be extinguished with but small loss.

The case of Dr. Hall, of Oakland County, on trial at St. Johns for the murder of his wife, ended in a disagreement of the jury. The charge of Judge Smith to the jury began about half past twelve and closed at 1:30, when the jury retired. At 5 o'clock it returned and reported disagreement, whereupon the judge sent it back. At 9 o'clock disagreement was again reported, and the jury was discharged. Its members stood three for acquittal and nine for conviction.

The decision was in the murder case of Chas. T. Kring against the state of Missouri, a brief synopsis of which we append: Kring, the plaintiff in error, on January 4, 1875, shot and killed a woman named Dora Brewster. At the March term of the St. Louis criminal court in the same year he was indicted for murder in the first degree, tried and found guilty, and sentenced to be hanged. Upon appeal the judgment of the criminal court was reversed and a new trial ordered. Two more trials followed, in both of which the jury failed to agree. Upon the fourth trial the prisoner made an agreement with the state's attorney to plead guilty of murder in the second degree, upon condition that his sentence be imprisonment for a period not longer than ten years. Under this plea he was sentenced to imprisonment or 25 years. He again appealed and the judgment of the lower court was reversed by the supreme court and the cause a second time remanded. Upon his next trial the prisoner refused to Court and the cause a second time remanded. Upon his next trial the prisoner refused to withdraw his plea of murder in the second degree or to make another plea, whereupon the court ordered a plea of not guilty to be entered for him and he was again tried for murder in the first degree, found guilty, and sentenced to death. The supreme court of Illinois. the full bench assenting have just filed an opinion declaring in sub-stance that the Pullman palace car company and like corporations are common carriers, and placing them in the same category with rail-road companies. This is contrary to a decision road companies. This is contrary to a decision given by the same tribunal some years, and affirms the principle that the present state legislature has endeavored to embody in a statute. A suit was brought by Luke Nevin against the car company for refusing to permit him to occupy a berth assigned him which he offered to pay for. The lower courts decided that the plaintiff had no power to enforce accommodations from the car commany and outstood on tions from the ear company and optional on its part to furnish the same. The court asserts that running sleepers has become a bus-iness of social necessity and in this view the law can impose obligations on the company the same as on railway men, ferry mer and innkeepers. In the language of the opinion "When, therefore, a passenger who under the rules of the company is entitled to a berth at the usual fare, and to whom no personal ob-jection attaches, enters the sleeping car at the proper time, for the purpose of procuring ac-commodations, and in an orderly and respectful manner applies for a berth, offering or ten-dering the customary price therefor, the com-pany is bound to furnish it, provided it has a vacant one at its disposal. When Longfellow the poet of grace ful art and of sympathy as tender as his voice, took his departure, there went up a cry as from a sense of fireside loss. People everywhere dwelt upon the story of his life and recalled his folk-songs. Emerson glided away almost unperceived under the shadow of the popular pereavement. But soon, and still multiplying from the highest sources, trib utes to his genius began to appearsearching, studying, expounding himas when a grand nature, an originating force, has ceased to labor for us. Thi s the best of fame; to impress the selected minds, which redistribute the effect in steadfast circles of extension. More than his associates, Emerson achieved this fame. He had the great man's in tellect, which, according to Landor 'puts in motion the intellect of others.' He was, besides, so rare a personage that one who seeks to examine his writ ings apart from the facts and conduct of his life, needs must wander off in contemplation of the man himself.

GENERAL NOTES.

A BANKRUPT's lot is not a happy one in China. The broker of a silk firm in Shanghai which has recently suspended payment was set upon in the street by ereditors of the firm, beaten, and hung up by the queue so that his feet swung clear of the ground. Having been discovered by the police in that painful situation he was taken for protection to the police station, followed by the creditors, who declared that if he fell again into their hands they would bite him to death and eat him afterward. A REVOLT among the students at a Paris school called the Lycee Louis le Grand will occupy a conspicuous place in the history of academic insurrections. It originated in the displeasure of the boys at the expulsion of one of their number, and before it was finally quelled a detachment of forty policemen, one of whom was seriously wounded, had to break open the dormitories behind whose barricaded doors the rebels had intrenched themselves. The pupils sent preposterous terms of surrender to their principal, who promptly declined the same, and thereupon expelled and caused to be ejected no fewer than 270 of the refractory youngsters.

THE Malagasy Envoys have made their first formal effort to rouse public sympathy against the foreign invasion of Madagascar. It was at the meeting of the Congregational Club, in New York, and they issued a feeling address, reviewing the wrongs which the French Republic seems determined to inflict upon them. The Envoys say: "If the truths of Christianity and the blessings of commerce are the forerunners of European aggression, then will our growing love be changed to hate." We fear our Malagasy friends, Methodist preachers though they be, are not well grounded in Christian principles. This is not blessing them that persecute you.

THERE is a bright and intelligent newsboy in St. Louis who is a great ton Exchange. A few days ago, some of the dignified old members brought him upon the floor of the Exchange, and proceeded, after the manner of dignified old members, to give him some good advice and to tell him what he might accomplish, citing several notable instances of great men who had risen from small beginnings. The boy listened attentively and modestly, but as he went out, said: "Oh, pshaw! Wind is cheap, and Wiggins deals in it. get lots of advice, but I'd rather sell a dozen papers, and then I know my bank account will grow."

Any one who has read the reports of the labor-union meetings held from time to time during the past winter, must confess that they are of little or no benefit to working men. The sessions have been marked by nothing but bickerings or violent quarrels. The members apparently have no faith in one another, and indulge in endless jealousies, accusations and counter-accusations. The most blatant demagogue has always been the best man; stirring up trouble in the trades or planning to secure political advantage seems to be the only object of the leaders. There have been no lectures and no efforts to discuss questions which workingmen might consider to their advantage. Occasionally some member, who realizes how beneficial the unions might be made in this way, has striven to lead discussion in the right direction, but he has always been quickly suppressed. At present, intelligent and self-respecting workmen seem to be letting the meetings severely alone. They do well. They would do better, however, if they would take steps to prevent demagogues from trading on the reputation of respectable laboringmen, and posing as their representatives.

INASMUCH as the cry all over the land is for domestic servants, it seems a pity that our consuls should not be instructed to let it be known in the countries to which they are accredited how great and unceasing is this demand, how inadequate the supply, and how splendid the remuneration. It should be known that an untrained girl receives here wages such as the most accomplished and valuable woman could not command in Germany or Scandinavia, while a really efficient and steady person may obtain a remuneration unheard of there. A man servant is paid here about five times as much as there, which of late Swedes seem to have discovered. The similarity of their language to English enables them rapidly to acquire the latter, while the ways of Swedish house holds appear to be much more consistent with our customs than those of Ital ians, or even of Germans. Next to Frenchmen, Italians seem to have most trouble in grappling with English. The men who have been for years keeping fruit stalls can rarely comprehend any English save that relating to their stock in trade. Italian servants of the higher grade scarcely seem to come here at all; and looking to the low wages in Italy and the large population, this seems rather unaccountable, more especially in view of the number of Italian immigrants.

It was put in evidence that a letter was found upon Dennis Deasey commending to the other conspirator, Patrick Flanagan, as a person who might be intrusted with any post of duty. At Flanagan's lodging a variety of explosives were discovered, besides a revolver, false beard, other equipments for dynamite work and disguise. The most interesting evidence given during the examination was that of expert scientific witnesses, who testified that the explosive material in question was known

How the matter will stand when the trial is ended we do not know, but we do know that the evidence at this time is not overwhelmingly in favor of Prof. Maclean.

TOWN MEETING.

We are not surprised at the result of the election last Monday, when the leading Republican organ of the State, in what it perhaps considered to be the conscientious discharge of its duty, counselled rebellion, and that it was right for onethird of the Republican members of the Legislature to rebel against the action of the two-thirds, and openly set at defiance all the past usages of the party. There could be but one result this spring, and who is prepared to say that it is not right that the party leaders should be severely rebuked?

owners of the Post and Tribune should Capuage themselves so strongly against the appointment of Mr. Bloom as Receiver of the Land Office in Detroit, for the reason that in the great contest in Detroit between ex-Gov. Bagley and Baldwin for the Senatorship, every one of them, as well as Mr. Bloom, earnestly supported Mr. Baldwin. When the time came when Mr. Baldwin and his friends found that he could not be elected, most of them went for Mr. Conger and elected him. So he would never have been elected if it had not been from the fact that Mr. Baldwin and the most of the anti-Bagley men in Detroit and elsewhere preferred Conger to Bagley. In view of the fact that the present principal owners of the Post and Tribune, at the time preferred Mr. Conger's election to Bagley's, it is in bad taste for them now to join the Bagley men in their cry against Mr. Bloom, whose only offense seems to be that he voted in accordance with the wishes of the Baldwin

CONDITION OF THE ROADS.

When it is considered that Michigan annually taxes her citizens $2,000,000 to pay for the construction and repair of highways, this should be a guarantee that the State should have good roads. For that amount, if properly and intelligently applied, ought to be enough to save farmwhip tired horses over mud roads.

It is in the country where the farmers have to do their heavy hauling, and to do this on unfavorable roads occasions a loss of time and money, for on a good macadam or gravel road twice the distance can be traversed with almost twice the load, and with less wear and fatigue to man and beast. Says a talented writer on this subject: "There is no other public improvement which pays farmers, rural villages, and all country towns and dwellers so large a percentage of profit as firstclass roads. Those seasons of the year when mud and water have made the poor country roads impassable, or nearly so, are the very seasons when the farmer who is blessed with good roads can obtain at his village market the highest cash prices for everything and anything he has to sell. The village which has good roads country, maintains thereby a perpetual market, is easily and constantly supplied, the fall and spring rains. On the other twice annually, and its surrounding farmcondition of the ground keep them idle, ket. Good, hard, smooth and reliable average country village than a railroad connection. They are an almost necessary adjunct to a railroad connection. Therefore the making of good country roads is one of the most important reforms to which public attention can possibly be directed." Now the roads in and about Ann Arbor are not what might be called bad roads, yet it is very evident they are not what they ought to be. It is safe to say that enough money and labor has been spent on the roads in this county to make every one of them a first-class gravel road. The Greenback ticket was elected, ex Properly managed, such a road in the end would cost less than a soft, sandy and rutty one. Inasmuch as these roads are home charities. We have hundreds of Properly managed, such a road in the end not what the times demand, we must look to the system of working and repairing them, and see whether or not some better way can not be devised. That discussion we propose to enter upon next week.

While Myatt Kyau, M.D., of Rangoon Burmah, a graduate of Ann Arbor uni versity, who is here attending the missionary meeting at the Baptist church, was delivering a missionary lecture at Charlotte, the other day, Mrs. Hiram Welch, an insane woman, came into the church, and, walking up lo the dusky lecturer, kissed him. She said she had a right to kiss him, and it was all right. The audience protested, however, and the woman was apprehended and jailed. She will be taken to the asylum at Pontiac as

From the Herald. Although the Baptist church at this place has been in existence for a long time, yet, it was only organized under the State law on Saturday last. The society has at least $12,000 worth of property. As Durand & Hatch were unable to have the room in readiness for the new post-office on Friday, the office was not moved until Tuesday, as a large number of people wanted their mails Saturday and Monday.

SALINE. From the Observer. It is said there is to be a new school louse built near the Lake Ridge hotel in York, and that material is now being got on the ground for that purpose. A new telephone wire has been put up between this place and Ann Arbor this week. The same wire will connect this place with Mooreville and Milan, the work to progress as soon as the poles arrive. This second wire has become necessary because of the increase of business and there has been so much "talking from Clinton, Tecumseh and Adrian-al of which had to pass over one wire—that Saline would often have to wait almost hours before she could get the use of the wire. We keep our connection with the State exchange, this new one only being a local one between Ann Arbor and Mi lan, although a "switch" here will connect it with the general exchange. TPSILANTI.

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure liseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many mitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one ause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the eccipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all im urities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alco holic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

The candidates for City Marshal are looming up. So far we have heard mentioned E. B. Gidley, Henry Richards, John Nowland and Thomas Clarkens. The Common Council, which meets Monday night, is a tie politically, and it is hard to say who has the inside track for that responsible position.

A correspondent from Dundee, Tuesday produced here last evening under the management of the Ann Arbor City Band and applications for seats will be advisable. was a most pleasing entertainment, and especially J. E. Harkins and Miss Nellie simply immense. We wish the boys to come again."

The bi clubs of Chicago and the western part of Michigan will rendezvous at Ann Arbor June 30, and wheel to Detroit on the following Sunday. The next day the entire party, increased by the clubs of the eastern part of the State, will cross into Canada and ride to Niagara Falls and Buffalo. The return will be by way of Cleveland. The wheelman expect to do the entire distance in twelve days. - American Sports.

The funeral services of the late Oliver M. Martin were largely attended Sunday afternoon by friends and the Masons. Mr. Martin was City Marshal in 1865, and in 1866-67 was Mayor. He introduced the first hearse in the city, and the first child buried with it was his own.

Gough, the inimitable, again delighted an Ann Arbor audience Tuesday evening, when he gave some of his own experiences on the stage. Although past 65 years of age, he still retains much of his oldtime vigor and fire, and as formerly, he kept his audience alternating between much as he used to do. His stories are as rich, as varied, as pointed in application as ever, and his control over all those who heard him is as complete as in the days of

The Irish drama, "Robert Emmet," was given at the opera house, Wednesday night, by home talent, to a crowded house, which was well pleased with the performance. The rollicking Irish boy, always ready for a bit o' fun, was admirably portrayed of Mr. Harkins, and he was capitally seconded by the piquant Miss Nellie Hoban, who threw enough spirit into the | Sill and wife; R. J. M. Swift & Co are preparing to make extensive changes in their flouring mills in the near future. The time-honored millstones will be entirely discarded and a "Complete Roller System" substituted. At the same time the capacity of the mill will be nearly, or quite, doubled, thus enabling them to turn out from 250 to 300 barrels per day. The contract has been let to the "Lease Manufacturing Co." of Columbus, Ohio, and calls for a strictly first class mill. The work of remodeling is to commence in two or three weeks, and it is expected that operations on the new system will commence some time in

The meetings of the sixth anniversay of the Reform Club were well attended Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon and evening. Mr. Finch appeared again and gave some of his forcible temperance speeches. We were glad to see that he tacitly acknowledged the force of our criticism on his former speech in University Hall, by this time sticking to his subject and not running off into mere tirades against the party, which, although outside the prohibition party, is nearest to it of any of the parties, in regard to the great principle which actuates it. Those demagogical arguments were not only useless but actually harmful to the cause we are convinced he loves. Mr. Finch is surely a powerful speaker, and it may be said of him that while he lacks the tact in storytelling that Gough has so pre-eminently, he naturally excels the latter in logic and argument. He never will become a Gough in holding an audience, but a little of the "old man's," mantle has fallen upon him.

EMMA ABBOTT'S ENGAGEMENT. The engagement of the Emma Abbott

Grand English Opera Company to appear at the Opera House, Friday evening, April 13th, will be generally looked upon as the chief event of the amusement season. The degree of popularity and favor in which Miss Abbott is held in this city gives assurance that she will be welcomed by a large audience. She will appear under more favorable conditions than ever before, by reason of the fact, that she is singing in far better form this season than As usual in the spring the river needs hitherto, and the further fact that she is damming again, because the heavy ice aided by the largest and best company took away a part of the old dam. It is that has ever given English opera in this country. In numbers and excellence it is far in advance of any similar organization and its work is every where pronounced artistic and complete. The names of such eminent artists as Madame Rosewald, Lizzie Annandale, Marie Hindle, Kate Hoyt William Castle, Valentine Fabrim, Alonzo Stoddard, Wm. Broderick, and others equally prominent, give guaranty of the enacted, to-night Thomas W. Keene's principals. The chorus is large and well Thos. J. O'Brid fine musicians. Flotow's ever popular "Martha," will be presented here, and will be given by a splendid cast, and with the aid of everything requisite in a firstclass operatic presentation. There they were shot by Mateo, the boy Prof. Steere brought with him from the Phillipine islands.

City Convention.

The Republican City Convention assembled in the court house, Saturday evening Mr. Kinne was made chairman and upon proceeding to ballot for candidate for mayor three ballots were necessary because of the strong opposition of the two forces which it was seen were present. The one for Mr. Keech was the stronger, but they were rather nonplussed by the repeated declinations of that gentleman. The others in the convention sympathized with the Law and Order party and desired to endorse Mr. Ellis, but they were in a minority and Mr. Keech was nominated nolens volens. The other positions there was no struggle over, and the following were unanimously nominated: For Recorder, Charles J. Durheim; Justice of the Peace (long term), James McMahon: Justice o the Peace (short term), E. B. Clark; Supervisors: 1st district, Conrad Krapf; 2d. dist. Patrick O'Hearn; 3d. dist. Benj. Brown.

The City Committee as appointed consists of Charles Hiscock, chairman; A. W. Hamilton, secretary; Titus Hutzel, D. Wilcoxson, Eli Manly and A. F. Martin.

CITY ELECTION.

The result in this city is not as bad for the Republican party as it might have been, and we cannot see where the Democracy have any chance for exultation. There was only one Democratic ticket in field, the Republicans had two, and the result is a draw game. The next Common Council standing 7 Republicans, and 7 Democrats.

For the Courier. Who Should Keep Bees?

Any one who likes honey, other things being favorable, should keep a few bees from which to supply his own table with honey and also to sell to his neighbors. But says one, I would like to keep bees, but don't know how, and they sting "awfully." As for the knowledge necessary to manage a few bees, books and periodicals are abundant on bee culture. Dr. Chase's Recipe Book published by R. A. Beal contains information that will assist a beginner very much in starting with a few swarms. But a good periodical is indispensable for successful management af Apiary. The stinging can be prevented without much difficulty, a vail over the face and gloves on the hands will do it, with learn bee culture if a person wishes to keep Miss Mary Burkhart, of Ann Arbor, is a large number of colonies is to work with visiting with her consin, Miss Anna Hau- some good Apiarist for his board and instruction, through the months of June and July, if not other ways engaged. missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

Messrs, J. C. Ayer & Co., Gentlemen:
Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Khlowing the value of Ayer's Sarsaparallel, hy observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were aliayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the Sarsaparllla, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.

Yours respectfully, Z. P. Wilds." setts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

The Douglas in his hall."—Scott.

The colonel expressed himself overjoyed at the prospect of such a return home, and of a visit from our friend, for by this time the old soldier and the young sailor had become mutual admirers, the open and straightforward nature of both having already led to a warm and sincere friendship.*

*For the naval details in this chapter the author is indebted to a work published in New York, entitled "The Ocean Post."

We reached Corfu on the evening of the real We reached Corfu on the evening of the sec ond day, well pleased with the sailing qualities of the "Ariadne." On making inquiry we ascertained that the "Gulnare" had arrived there on the previous morning, and, after a few hours' stay, had sailed again, it was supposed, as was her custom, for the Gulf of Ægina. Replenishing our water casks, we sailed in pursuit with the utmost dispatch; and on touching at the port of Poros, again

Colonel De Burgho's anxiety and agitation increased visibly as he neared the object of his search, and I congratulated myself that I had insisted on accompanying him, for even he acknowledged that the enterprise would require a caution and wariness which he, moved as he was with apprehensions for the safety of his daughter could not now command. Even I daughter, could not now command. Even I myself began to feel the excitement of the approaching crisis; and we both felt how much we were likely to be indebted to the cool judgent and wise advice of our friend Lieutenan Bakhus, when the decisive moment should ar-

"Kurnal," said he, "we're close on the trail. I know your great anxiety to recover your lost daughter soon, but all may be spoiled by too much haste; my advice is that we give our friend a day, or even two, to lay up his yacht and land his crew. From inquiry I made at Corfu, they are nearly all Greeks from this vicinity; the probability is that they are natives of the islands in this gulf. I have no doubt that under present circum-stances the Count will not venture out into the stances the Count will not venture out into the Mediterranean for some time, in which case he will lay up his vessel in a snug harbor near his abode, and will keep his crew together for a day or two for that purpose; they will then disperse to their homes. If we anticipate this by following them up too closely, we shall have a fierce encounter and some loss of life, and I should not feel disposed to put my friend's crew and yacht in such jeopardy; besides, I really think our object will be more securely attained by the course I propose."

"I entirely concur in your opinion, Lieutenant Bakhus," replied the Colonel; "in fact, I have resolved to defer in all matters to the advice of yourself and my friend Mervyn, as I am aware that my feelings might prompt me to injudicious and premature action. I therefore put myself under your command, having the greatest confidence in you both."

we bowed our acknowledgments, and the eutenant, thinking for a moment, said,—

"Wa'al then, Kurnal; we'll just stop here for two days and scout; the Count's place of retreat can't be more than fifty miles off, and we'll be able to find out his whereabouts from some of the skippers about this port. It won't do to run straight to the place; we must cruise round to some small port as near to it as possi-ble, but not visible from it; and creep round the shore in some kind of disguise; there are excellent telescopes on board, and we can sweep the coasts as we go, and make pretty sure of the 'Gulnare' at twenty miles."
'I think, Lieutenant," said I, "we should purchase about a dozen fishermen's dresses, purchase about a dozen fishermen's dresses, such as they wear here; it occurs to me that, to disarm suspicion, we had better adopt the local costume when we come to close quarters and the moment for action arrives."

"Yer right," said he; "these Greeks are the cunningest critters out—it won't do to take one of our boats within five miles of the place; we'll have to hirel native boats for that job;—but let's go shore and look about."

We accorded the better the present of the place in the place of the place in the place of the place in the place of the place but let's go ashore and look about."

We anchored in the bay of Poros, and in a few minutes the Colonel, Lieutenant Bakhus, and I, landed on the fishing quay. Our arrival did not cause much excitement, as the place was frequently visited by yachts in the summer season. We sauntered about, examining the town in a careless lounging manner, deferring our purchases till the next day, and endeavoring to find some person with whom we could converse. On returning to the mole, with the intention of embarking and renewing our visit to the town in the morning, an old sailor, who was leaning against the wall, said in broken English, "That's a nice vessel of yours, Eccellenza; but there's one in this gulf that could give her a mile in ten, and maybe more." This, we saw, was the opportunity we were seeking; we saw, was the opportunity we were seeking; so lighting our pipes and presenting the old tar with an ample "quid"—the best introduction all over the world to one of his class—we sat down on a log of timber, and soon entered into a lively conversation.

"Yes," said he, "there's not a vessel, big or little, in these seas that can beat the 'Gulnare.' She sailed by here, close inshore yesterday, with a fresh breeze, and she was out of sight with a fresh breeze, and she was out of sight round that point in five minutes; she's at her moorings now, no doubt, and she'll lie there for three weeks, or a month; for now's the time for catching fish along these coasts, and salting them for winter stock; and her crew will be off home till the Count wants them again."

"Where does she lie?" said I, lighting another pipe, and looking as indifferent as possible

'About forty miles from here," he replied. "About forty miles from here," he replied.
"You can see the island on a clear day; it's called Angistri, and she lies in a small bay about a mile from the Count's house; it's an old ruined tower that he has partly repaired."
I handed our informant another quid, and saying that we might land again to-morrow, we walked carelessly down the steps and stepped into our boat.

The Colonel and Lieutenant Bakhus had listened attentively to my conversation with the old sailor, and when we arrived on board we at once consulted our charts and found the island of Angistri delineated on it as described.

"We'll stay here to-morrow, Kurnal," said the Lieutenant, "and the morning after, if the wind favors, we'll drop down towards it, and give it a wide berth; we'll find out to-morrow with the help of a couple more quids, on which side of the island our friend resides, and we'll then know pretty near where the 'Gulnare' is berthed. I'm not sure but that it would be a good plan to hire that old cove as a pilot for a week; we can tell him that we're goin' to cruise about the gulf. He'll show us the Count's tower, and where the yacht lies, and after that tower, and where the yacht lies, and after that we'll give him a bottle of rum, and let him en-joy himself in the fo' eastle till we've done our

We went ashore next afternoon, purchased the fisherman's dresses, and made an engagement with our acquaintance Beppo to pilot us during our stay. He came on board early next morning, and we at once weighed anchor and morning, and we at once weighed anchor and directed our course for the island; he informed us that the Count's abode was a few miles south of the small port of Angistri, and we directed him to steer the yacht close by the southern point of the island, and then along the coast at about ten miles distance, and to the north of the island of Epidauros. Early in the afternoon we sighted the Count's tower, and the port of Angistri, which he po'nted out, and which were plainly visible through our glasses. The tower was situated upon a projecting headland, that appeared to rise perpendicularly from the sea; but between it and the port there extended a long stretch of pebbly beach, and we could see numerous fishing-boats in the intervening bay. intervening bay.

"Kurnal," said Lieutenant Bakhus, 'our plan will be to moor the yacht this evening behind that point north of the port, where she will not be visible from the tower; and early to-morrow to hire a couple of those fishing-boats, with one of the natives only in each to navigate them. You and I and one of our men can go in one, and Mervyn, your friend Dennis, and one of the crew in the other. We will array ourselves in the fishing-garments we have provided, sail along the bay among the other boats, and land on that beach close to the headland. I will have the pinnace fully manned boats, and land on that beach close to the neau-land. I will have the pinnace fully manned and armed, and after our departure from the yacht, ready to put off and keep us in view, cruising about within sight and awaiting a signal, which we can arrange, to bear down upon us. Mervyn, Dennis, and two of my men will land, while you and I remain in the boats. Of course we must all be fully armed; but I do course we must all be fully armed; but I do not see that we can make any further plans in regard to Mervyn's proceeding on shore, which I think must be left to his discretion when he lands; ignorant as we are of the environs of the Count's abode. If he is so, fortunate as to meet with and rescue your daughter, of course he will rejoin us as quickly as he can, and we will then put off and signal the pinnace to come to our aid."

"You have devised a most sagacious plan, Ligutenant," replied Colonel De Burgho. "The gem; though I fear if the Count is encountered he will resist. All your plans, however, are most excellent."

most excellent."

We sailed at a swift rate past the island and port of Angistri, and towards evening put about, and after a couple of tacks anchored in the bay we had selected; some boats came alongside to offer fish for sale, and through the medium of Beppo we engaged two of them for a pretended fishing excursion on the morrow, specially directing their owners to bring their lines and nets. We then selected two of the most athletic and intelligent men on board, and having served out arms and ammunition, retired to recruit ourselves for the serious undertaking of the succeeding day. taking of the succeeding day.

Youth's Companion The son of a leading lawyer in New York some years ago was attracted by the innocent face and quick wit of a her to all the fashionable beauties who had courted his notice. His family protested, but to no purpose. The only concession he would make was to consent to go to Europe for three years before marrying the girl. In the meantime, having an independent fortune, the lover placed her at one of the best schools in New York. The girl was ambitious, and devoted in her affection to the man who had chosen her. He returned, found her more lovely than ever. They were married, and the lady is now one of the leaders of society in the city where they live -a noble, refined, charming woman. An eminent jurist, well-known in Pennsyivania in the early part of this century, was "making the circuit" on horseback, and stopped for dinner at the house of a farmer. The daughter of the farmer waited on them of the farmer waited on them, and the Judge—who had been a cynic about women—observed the peculiar gentleness of her voice and a certain sweet candor in her face. The malarial chill is one of the most thoroughly established of American institutions. It prevails in all parts of the land, and is at once the most troublesome and the most convenient complaint known to mankind. In some cases the chill is quite slight, and the malarial symptoms are very strong. In others the chill is the principal development, and it attains dimensions which were never dreamed of when the complaint was in its infancy. Probably the most powerful chill on record was experienced As we whirl out of New York the v a clergyman in Orange County, N. thermometer begins to go down, though Y. It had been racking this pious person for some time and he had been trying to quiet it with quinine. This remedy ug of it. Whan the clergyman felt the chill gathering its powers for a fresh wrestle, he lifted the jug to his lips, and, as he says, 'drank thoughtlessly.'

The context appears to justify the inference that he meant to say "copiously." The effect on the chill was very remark-

It at once started the reverend gen-tleman on a walk. Happening in his walk to come to a railroad station, he was impelled by some power he could not comprehend to jump upon an outgoing train and ride to Port Jervis. Reaching there, he was impelled by the same mysterious power to go into a liquor store for luncheon. Not liking the looks of the place, he went into another of the same kind. The mysterious distribution of the same kind. ous power was evidently an evil one or t would have led its victim into some other place of refreshment. By time he had entered the second liquor store, his control of himself had gone. and his recollection also nearly him. He was induced to drink some beer, whether as a remedy for the chill or not he was subsequently unable to state, and he also tried his hand at a game of cards with a bar room loafer. So far as he can remember, the game was a failure, but the dimensions of the failure are not given, through a weakness of memory. Subsequently he emerged from the back door of the saoon, lost his way, but finally got home in a more or less bewildered condition. We are not informed whether or not the chill ws still with him, but the probabilities are that it had left him. It is evident on the face of this artless but affecting narrative, given substantially as it was related by the victim, that he was suffering from a very bad chill. Other chilis have shaken their yictims, but this one led a clegyman out of his house into a railway car, then into two rum shops, then into beer and cards, and then into mental oblivion. Surely a chill of such dimensions and evil pow er ought not to be trifled with. This good man's experience will be of value to other sufferers. It will show that a frost in the car window with his tongue. chill cannot be overcome by drinking mixed quinine, whiskey and beer. We and looks out with one eye at the desolate wintry landscape flying past, and should have said as much without this lemonstration, but there are doubtless other victims who are as innocent of the effects of such a combination as the elergyman was. This was an aggavated case of chills. There have been others in which the malarial aspect was strongly marked.

A hard-working man thus afflicted went home the other night, as has been recorded, and was discovered by his faithful wife applying a match to the faucet of the wash-basin, under the hallucination that it was a gas fixture. He was impelled by a mysterious power also although his wife believes she can tell what it was. Then there was the English bing veins, and he is now riding out on the front platform frying to freeze himwhich he had raised between him and his wife. He accounted for it by say-

A Surprising Statement.

We are accustomed to think that the United States is the one absorbent point of emigration in the world, and that it bids fair, like Aaron's serpent, to swallow all the rest. Most of our readers will probably be surprised to learn that there is a country which, considering the size, is drawing in more foreigners than ours, and that that country is France. M. Leroy-Beaulieu has recentpublished in L'Economiste Français the statistics of the increase of alien population in France. In the first quarter of this century there was no immi-Welsh chambermaid in his father's for the French alone. In 1857 a small but steady stream of foreigners began to set in. Their proportion in 1861, however, reached only 1.33 per cent to the whole population; in 1881 the proportion had reached 3 per cent. In each year the increase reached 40,000. M Beaulieu calculates that if it continues to increase in the same proportion as the last two years for the rest of the century one-fourth of the adult population wil be aliens. The large proportion of this immigration is from Germany, and the causes of it are, according to M. Beau-lieu, the abundance of capital, the high wages and the fact that many of the trades are left unoccupied by French boys and men. The same causes account for the large immigration into our own country of skilled workmen. It is a very advantageous condition of affairs for the foreign skilled workman. But how about the native Frenchman and Americans, whose work, wages and prosperity are thus suffered to fall into alien hands? The French young man, says M. Beaulieu, is too effeminate to learn a hard steady trade. He goes to America to cook, to dance, to play some light role in life, while the German comes in to fill his place at home. Precisely in the same way the young Amer ican makes of himself a bookkeeper or salesman while the skilled trades are filled by Germans and English.
