THE CENSUS.

The results of the tenth census of the United States can probably be condensed into about 15,000 octavo pages...

The statisticians which of course are complete, are of great value and interest as showing the growth and condition of the country...

All these facts are worthy of a larger circulation among the masses as their value increases proportionally with their widespread dissemination.

To give a proper idea of our relation to the whole we first will give the aggregates of population and afterwards the more local statistics.

Michigan has a population of 1,636,937. Of these 892,355 are male and 744,582 are female...

Sudden Death.

The numerous friends of Mr. and Mrs. Rev. J. C. Wortley, of Saline, have been greatly shocked at the sudden calamity which befell her last Friday night.

She was killed, but Mrs. Briggs was not, although dangerously injured. This happened at 9.32 Friday night, owing to the difficulty at present existing of getting telegraphic communication, Mr. Wortley did not hear of it until Monday forenoon.

THE STATE ENCAMPMENT.

Orders Issued by Gen. Withington.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST BRIGADE, MICHIGAN STATE TROOP, July 19, 1883.

General Order, No. 4.

1. An arrangement has been made with the Detroit, Bay City, Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids and other cities in the state...

2. Regimental quartermasters should be on the camp ground by the 6th of August.

3. The rifle teams will report for duty to the Inspector-general, on arrival at Island Lake...

4. The troops now being provided with knapsacks will make use of them for un-derpolishing, etc. in place of taking stench. The men are not to take their clothing to camp.

5. The brigade staff not ordered to duty before will report as early as possible on the 7th of August.

6. Regimental commanders will report at brigade headquarters in person on arrival, and will report their commands as soon as complete, and by tattoo on the 8th, then incomplete.

7. Company commanders will be held responsible for the conduct of their men en route to camp. The general commanding trusts, however, that a proper self-respect and respect for the service will restrain the state troops from any indiscreet acts.

By command of Brig. Gen. W. H. WITHINGTON, Lieut. Col. and A. G.

The Royal Baking Powder was found, besides being of absolute purity, to be the highest amount of leavening gas of any of the powders tested, and hence it was placed at the head of the list and recommended for Government use.

But the crucial test of the kitchen is after all, the most satisfactory to the house-keeper.

The law is again in force on and after January 1st of each year.

The club will also encourage the destruction of hawks, crows, blackbirds, chipmunks, woodchucks, and other vermin injurious to the farmer and destructive to game.

It is to be hoped that more of our neighboring farmers will join this association and thus enable it to carry out its aims more effectively.

A membership fee of one dollar and annual dues of one dollar are charged.

The club will meet for wing practice on balls and clay pigeons, each Friday afternoon at 3:30.

Outdoors will be allowed to participate in these shoots at the following rates: balls 2c per shot, clay pigeons 3c per shot.

(Extract from By-Laws.) Guns may be used and loaded shells may be purchased at reasonable rates on the grounds.

There are enough temperance men and women in Ypsilanti to obey the law as it now exists, and to give a large majority at the polls in favor of making laws more to the point.

What is lacking is organization.

Literary Notices.

A Map of Boston has been sent us with the compliments of J. W. Wolcott, Hotel Vendome, Boston, Mass.

It is 20 inches square, when unfolded from the light board covers in which it is encased, and shows all points of interest, prominent hotels, churches, theatres and public buildings.

A stranger in the Hub can have no better guide.

The publishing house of Lee & Shepard of Boston, has put in neat print from the now celebrated address of Charles Francis Adams, Jr., entitled "A College Felch" which was recently delivered before the Harvard chapter of the Fraternity of Phi Beta Kappa.

It has excited considerable comment for its fearless exposure, and is worthy of a careful reading.

The current number of the Magazine of Art is on our table and as usual gives pleasure and instruction.

The frontispiece is one of Henry Irving as Hamlet. Valuable remarks are made on "Electric Lighting for Picture Galleries."

In turning further the attention is caught by a strong full-page engraving of "A Royal Martyr," from a picture by Struys.

"Greek Myths in Greek Art" gives some capital delineations, and the descriptions of Current Art are strikingly illustrated.

"The Artists" at Wimbledon Camp" are discussed and pictured, while the number is concluded with a humorous cartoon of "Polichinelle," one of Meissonier's sketches.

The name of Dr. Dio Lewis is one familiar to multitudes in the United States for his activity in pushing health reforms.

As long ago as when Prof. Moses Cook was studying in Boston he took a course in physical training under Dr. Lewis, and he is still remembered in Ann Arbor for his enthusiasm in athletics.

Now the Doctor, to popularize Sanitary Science starts a magazine called "Drive Lewis's Monthly," and says he will "strive to make the subject of the health of our bodies as simple and interesting as a story."

The numbers will have 96 pages and are neatly printed by Clarke Bros, New York, for 25 cents a number, and $2.50 a year.

Much valuable and interesting information is given in it.

Want of confidence accounts for half of the business failures of to-day.

Eberbach & Son's Druggists are not likely to fail for the want of confidence in Dr. Bosanquet's Cough and Lung Syrup.

For a bottle free to all who are suffering with Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, and all affections of the Throat and Lungs.

LOCAL.

Not much wool brought in this week. The walls of the Tappan school are up and the roof is being put on. The boys of Company A are drilling regularly in preparation for camp. A new tea store will open soon in the place vacated by Goodspeed's shoe store. The cold nights of the past week have not been conducive of fast growth in corn. Rev. Dr. Haskell speaks to the temperance people Sunday afternoon at the usual place. The lawns about town are unusually bright and green for this time of the year, thanks to the late rains. The Ann Arbor ball nine went over to Tecumseh last week and beat the home nine two out of three games. By the completion of the four tar walks on the postoffice corner, that is made the smoothest and cleanest crossing in the city. During the past winter the Workingmen's Aid Society has paid out over $700 in relief of their members and families. That is good work. The price of Ohio wool in the Boston market is 38 cents—3 cents lower than last year at this time, and Michigan wool is 34-5 cents lower than last year. A contract for painting the Methodist church has been let to H. G. Emery, who did the frescoing on the Unitarian church. His was the lowest of several bids. A laborer named Michael Felska was hurt on the gravel train of the T. A. A. & G. T. road Tuesday afternoon, about two miles north of town. He had a couple of ribs broken. The new book firm of George Osias & Co., are fitting up the cellar of their store preparatory to opening a wholesale carpet department in connection with their other business. Emancipation day was duly celebrated by some 250 colored folks from town joining the two excursions to Lansing. They returned at six o'clock the next morning and report a grand time. For his professional services during her illness last year, Mrs. Dr. Worden, before returning home to Des Moines, presented Dr. Breakey with a handsome lap robe knit and embroidered by herself. The Directors of the National Bank engaged the services, as Cashier, of Mr. S. W. Clarkson of Manchester, where for some time he has been the Cashier of the People's Bank. He will assume the duties of the position in a couple of weeks. Town people have had but little excuse for going to summer resorts this week, as with the delightfully cool weather we have had, they undoubtedly have been more comfortable at their own homes than if they were in a crowded hotel at some resort. The County House takes about 80 tons of coal each year. This has just been purchased at $6.00 on the track. A little more than that is required for the Court House and the egg coal for that place and the fall is being delivered for $6.25 and $6.45. News reached here the other day that E. B. Prindle, a former resident and merchant in Ann Arbor, had been struck by lightning at his home in Dakota and killed, together with his step-son. He was formerly a Methodist preacher and afterwards for a time was in the grocery business on Huron street. The opera house for next season is again to be under the efficient management of Mr. A. J. Sawyer, who has already made arrangements for some of the best dramatic companies. The season will open September 7th with the celebrated variety John T. Raymond, Rhea, Maggie Mitchell, and others will follow. The Detroit firm of newspaper advertisers, Savage & Farnum, has moved and is now in commodious quarters, in the new Campau building. In the reading room over 11,000 different papers and periodicals are on file. Visitors are always well received and welcomed to nicely fitted waiting, reading and toilet rooms. Considerable sympathy has been felt for Charles Schultz, who was burned out Thursday night of last week. He is an industrious carpenter and had just been adding to his house, making it a very comfortable one. When the fire came but little was saved and the neighbors have been helping with a subscription. He will rebuild again near his former site. The Ypsilanti Sentinel has this joke at the expense of its own town. It is good for its evident truth: When Tom Thubb first exhibited in Michigan, the village council of Ypsilanti, demanded a license, which the agent refused to pay, and went on to Ann Arbor, where free tickets to trustees were a sufficient legal tender for any kind of show. This gave occasion to the following "gag," which the manager taught little Tom to squeak out: Visitor—"Gen. did you stop at Ypsilanti?" Tom—"No, sir, I did not." Visitor—"Why not, General?" Tom—"Because, sir, there are smaller men in Ypsilanti than I am."

The public debt was reduced $18,000, 000 in June, and $138,000,000 during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1883.—Washington Dispatch. Turn the rascals out.—New York Sun. Last week's storm did great damage at Grand Rapids, especially in the direction of the carrying away of bridges, some townships even being without bridges and almost inundated. The description of the disaster in the Grand Rapids Eagle is a fine piece of reporting. The Michigan Military Academy is doing such a kind of work as to make it popular and prosperous, because a preparation for college it adds a discipline of arms and a care for health. It takes good men, for it wants it distinctly understood that it does not "undertake to reform wayward and vicious boys." Being well located and in a condition to surround its students with good influences it must meet with success. There is a German temperance paper called the "Bahnbrecher," of Chicago, which has exercised its opponents not a little by its articles. It is edited by J. Adolph Schmit, and a novel way to work has been adopted in town, that is to get some of the people interested in the cause to subscribe for it, to have it sent to some German family where its teachings may do good. A number are thus sent. Company A will have 65 men go into camp at Island Lake this year—an unusually large number. They received their knapsacks Tuesday and these they have to make answer for satchels. The cooks of the companies go out next Tuesday to have everything in readiness for the arrival of the troops on Wednesday. The Ann Arbor boys have neglected to practice rifle shooting to any appreciable extent and their team is not yet selected. Last week from one of the officers of the K. of P. we obtained a list of the officers but it was found to be incorrect. All the other city and Detroit papers published them wrongly, as well. For a change we give it as it should be: C. C. Dr. V. Vaughan; P. C. J. W. Hangsterfer; V. G. Dr. G. A. Hendricks; P. W. Merwin; M. A. J. Kelly, Jr.; M. F. Clark; Hendrickson; M. E. Dr. J. L. Rose; K. of R. S. Osgood; O. S. G., John Lindenschmidt; O. G., C. Sanford. When Mr. Schumacher was in Fremont Ohio, Tuesday he called on ex-President Hayes and found him with coat off and sleeves rolled up hard at work weeding out a little grove of walnut trees he had planted. He has a beautiful home there and promised if he was home on the 16th he would talk with the excursionists from Ann Arbor. When asked about the political situation in Ohio he expressed himself enthusiastically for the Republican State organization and was very confident they would carry the state by a good safe majority. Judge Joslyn fixed the dates for holding the terms of court in the twenty-second circuit, for the years 1884 and 1885, as follows: In Monroe county, on the second Monday of September, the first Monday of November, the first Monday of February, and the first Monday of April; in Washtenaw county, on the first Tuesday of October, the first Tuesday of December, the first Tuesday of March, and the first Tuesday of May. At present the regular terms are held in Monroe in February, April, June and November, and in Washtenaw in January, March, May and September. For several years past the nuisance of the "Cat-hole" in the sixth ward has been a source of embarrassment to the Common Council and the Board of Health as well as to the residents in its neighborhood. It is a natural reservoir difficult of drainage, and as several of the adjacent street gutters have been turned into it, the city ought certainly to see to it that it be not dangerous to the health of the people. The Board of Health have advised with the Common Council as to whether they had the power alone to abate the nuisance, and it seems their advice was not satisfactory. However 4 or 5 years ago $50 was appropriated by the city fathers to be expended in improving the place. The money appropriated was from a fund only available that year. For some reason it was not then expended, and consequently it was lost. Last year Drs. Breakey and George went before the council asking that something might be done. Again $50 was appropriated with the understanding that there was a joint responsibility between the city and the residents thereof for the unwholesome hole. So it was expected that they would render assistance. Matters were delayed until just before the freeze-up in the fall when it was too late to do much. It seems to be an unfortunate state of affairs that there is no city law properly covering such a case, and that a needed improvement should go a begging for so long a time. UNIVERSITY ITEMS. Miss Emma Bower, Homoeopathic, '83, goes to Detroit, Saturday, in the office of Dr. Phil. Porter. Mr. H. C. Adams, lecturer on Political Economy at the University was on the train which was wrecked at Carleton, Friday night, but he was uninjured. Don A. Garwood, '81 is the department superintendent of Music Hall for the 12th annual Fair of the Northeastern Indiana Agricultural Association held at Waterloo in October. E. L. Cole of '82, has been offered and accepted the chair of mathematics and science in a Presbyterian Academy at Placerville, California. He left last night for his new field of work. Dan Carpenter, of Mansfield, Ohio, a student in the university two years ago, was in Ann Arbor, Tuesday. He is engaged in the lumber business, and had been to Duluth and Mackinac for his health. S. W. Beakes a law student graduated this year, has formed a partnership with F. P. Gardner, who was in the law department one year, to publish the "Review" of Westerville, Ohio. The paper has a good literary appearance. The Music School has secured for next year the services of Mr. Luderer, the violinist of Detroit. This will be good news for the lovers of violin music for he is really an artist on that instrument and will give several public violin recitals. Hon. A. H. Pettibone, of Greenville, East Tennessee, was in the city on Tuesday and Wednesday. He was the guest of O. A. Sessions. Mr. Pettibone is one of the best lawyers and stump orators in Tennessee, and though a radical Republican and protectionist, has been twice elected to Congress, after meeting his opponent in joint discussion in every part of his Congressional District.

"Goodness! Dolly, what's the matter?"
His song came to an untimely end as he caught sight of the sobbing, shaking little figure on the hearthrug.
He took one stride toward her, but at the sound of his voice she had sprung to her feet with crimson cheeks and dangerously sparkling eyes.
"Stand off, sir! Don't dare to touch me!"
"Great heaven! Dolly!" indirect bewilderment.
"Don't Dolly me!" facing him like a diminutive tigress "don't dare to touch me!"
"Don't mention my name so soon after this!"
"Don't mention it to whom you are 'Dick darling'!"
"Dolly!"
"Can you find no other word with which to defend or vindicate yourself except the repetition of my name?" this he said with unnatural calmness.
The temper had wafted around from the torrid to the frigid zone.
"Have you gone mad?" slowly.
"If I have, find the cause—there!"
Scornfully she flung him the crumpled sheet.
He snatched it eagerly and read every word.
"Where did you get this, Dolly?"
"There!" in blank astonishment.
"She pointed dramatically at the tumbled overcoat.
He glanced from the note to the coat, from the coat to the note and back again to Dolly.
She was looking desperately to steady her feet, but still her heart sufficiently to ask him how he liked Gerster, just to exhibit a piece of stinging sarcasm; but she could not to save her life.
There was a blank silence a moment then Dick walked over and picked up the crumpled sheet.
Hark! what was that? Not a laugh, surely.
Yes, a laugh! The maddest, merriest, wildest peal that ever rang from human lips.
They on the hearth rug stood Dick, the coat fallen loosely on the floor, his hands on both hips, and laughing—well, he was.
"Dick!" in faltering amazement.
"Yes!" howled Dick, "oh, Dolly, in the best joke of the season."
Oh—
And then he roared like a circus-mad school-boy again.
"Dick—tell me!"
Then, seeing her white, anxious face, he grew suddenly grave.
"Dolly did you look at the envelope?"
"I saw one."
He showed her the slip that had fluttered unnoted under the table.
She read the address:
192 HARVEY, ESQ.,
12 South—st. City.
"Dolly did you particularly notice the overcoat?"
A tremendous "No!"
"Look! See that velvet collar, those buttons! This pocket-book! Is this my overcoat?"
"Oh, Dick, my dearest forgive me! No, no, no!"
She was sobbing in his arms now.
"But," he bubbled again into boyish laughter, "what a glorious joke! To think that I should walk home in it, and you should mend Dick Harvey's overcoat? Wonder if his folks are going through my pocket-book, whom he has to sneeze off, so because of a formidable heiress staying at his house at present, to whom his folks are trying to marry him. He told me all about it."
"Dick—shy arms went creeping around her neck and blue eyes looked luminous through their tears—"I'm never going to be jealous again. I—I'm never going to ask you where you were to-night," with triumphant heroism, underlaid by a stratum of mocking curiosity.
"My pet, I was just going to tell you, but these will speak better than I can. You see I had not quite forgotten what day he had drawn would be.
"He had drawn leather case from his pocket, and touching a spring, disclosed a set and necklet of milk-white pearls on a turquoise velvet bed.
"Oh—h, Dick!"
A long drawn breath, a rapurous lighting of blue eyes, a lifting of rosy lips, and then—well, she got through. Dick thought himself well repaid.
"Won't there be fun at the office tomorrow! Jealous of Dick Harvey? But, by Jupiter, what a reception I got! Oh, Dolly, Dolly, Dolly! It's the best joke I ever had!"
And Dolly joined him merrily; for, after all, is not the sweetest laughter that which springs from tears?
Sincerely Yours,
An American who visited Edinburgh a few years ago met, on one of his excursions of the town, an old gentleman whose face greatly attracted him. There was a shrewd humor, a benevolence, a quiet nobility of thought and intent, in the worn, sensitive features and brilliant eye that caused the stranger to follow him through the crowd. Presently he stopped an acquaintance whom he saw exchanging greetings with him.
"Will you tell me who that old man is?"
"I think I would rather claim him for a friend than any man I have seen in Europe."
"All Scotland would probably share in your opinion," said his friend. "That is Mr. John Brown, author of 'Rab and his Friends.'"
"Most of our readers are familiar with the narrative of 'Rab and his Friends,' which is only a true story of a dog and two old Scotch people, but with a touch of the wonderful simplicity, power, and pathos that has made Dr. John Brown the household name of a friend wherever the English language is spoken.
He died in Edinburgh during May, and the English papers have been filled with reminiscences of this most beloved of Scottish authors since Sir Walter.
It is a singular fact, however, that in all these allusions to him, it is the man, tender regency, who made him the noble nature dominate his genius.
"His professional practice was of a peculiar kind," says one biographer. "He could not come into a family as a physician only; he must visit it as a friend, share in all its joys and sorrows."
"As he walked along Prince street daily," said another, "his presence was felt like a passing sunbeam by old and young. I saw him once enter a room where convalescing grave directors were met, armed with conceit and obstinacy for a business squabble; but at one remark from Dr. Brown, full of good sense, kindness, and humor, the pugacity and ill-temper fell off, and they went cordially to the work in hand, rered to their better selves."
"It was this broad, fine sympathy for others, this intuitive recognition of the best in each man, that gave John Brown his power, and has made his death a national loss to Scotland.
Such a closed record has a meaning to the dullest boys and girls just beginning life. They may not have the ability of this man, but they can cultivate in themselves that sunny temper and regency love which made him the idol of his native city and a helper to all who came near him.
Queen Victoria does not indulge in the affectation of pretending not to read the newspapers. She takes a morning and an evening drive and several weeklies, she is fond of novels, too.

Society in New Mexico.
A correspondent of the New York Tribune, writing from Santa Fe, N. M., gives some very interesting facts concerning the society and industries of a land so recently known to the people of our country. We make a few extracts from his letter:
The opening days of the exposition that is celebrating the 33rd anniversary of the settlement of Santa Fe have furnished a kind of entertainment that would be possible nowhere else. There is less to attract a visitor in the exhibition itself than in the people among whom it originated or who are part of it. The population of the territory is not more than one-seventh white, while fully six-sevenths of the exhibits represent white industry or capital. There are Indians here whose tribes have lived perhaps for centuries on the same restricted domain, and in geographical proximity to other tribes, and all this time have kept not only their blood but their language distinct and unaltered.
The shields that the Zuni painted by Zunis in the days when men who lived with Columbus first penetrated New Mexico. Hardly less fanciful than now were the hunting costumes of the Apaches in those days, and no less their skill with the bow and arrow. The case of some of the small, sharp-tipped spears that were included among the Pueblo or hut-living Indians, has been so far back as tradition reaches. And when with their more Southern Indians the Spanish adventurers, failing to find the anticipated Eldorado and ashamed to turn home empty-handed, cast their lives, a hybrid race sprung up which has joggled along for two or three centuries, adding little to their mental or physical store; not expecting to draw sustenance or hope from a soil so unproductive, hardly caring to provide for more than modest daily wants, and content to yield to indolence.
There are rare exceptions. I heard of a Mexican living near Socorro whose wealth has amassed him a fortune, all in bullion, which he is said to keep under the floor of his house. He demands invariably thirty days' time in which to pay for purchases, however small, and he turns up with bullion to the amount of the bill, exactly weighed out. But even what he has did not come from trade, but from a silver mine that he has worked for years with only occasional help. His adobe hut is little better than the common run of adobe huts that are called houses hereabouts. His family have been raised on the staple diet of beans and jerked beef, with two or three mixtures of corn; and he expects to go to the city with a little of comfort and dress.
"I am happy where I am," he said.
"I see more I shall want more, and my savings might slip away from me; while by staying here and knowing of nothing beyond, I shall be sure of taking care of myself." Many others, industrious and hard-working, are required. Some of the richest land is held for this purpose, and of course nothing from such land has found place at the exposition.
The exposition is entirely the result of American ingenuity. Five years ago such an exposition would have been impossible, and the fact is very willingly conceded by the Mexicans. The exposition will have a beneficial effect, in that it will bring together the three races which inhabit the country, who would otherwise have known very little of each other. Tenacity of habit and customs that had become almost insuperable among the aboriginal clans and tribes will be relaxed and softened by mutual contact. The Indians will carry back to their tribes new and civilized ideas, and the Mexicans must learn that the price of living even in their own country must soon be unflagging industry.
Already in Santa Fe, and at Albuquerque, and in Los Vegas, where Americans have obtained a foothold and where new ideas predominate, the Mexicans are drifting out of the dark tangle into moving channels. The black dresses that the women wear will no more cover their heads for the children. The sun will not beat nor the rain pour many years longer heads never hooded, except by law, for the dark-skinned girls are learning to like coats, and their mothers are seeing that they look prettier shaded by glare and feathers than under the sun's glare, and that the grace of youthful forms is more attractive enshroued in white in summer than in funeral weeds. The dress pressure will be spreading also among the young men. A band of gaudy leather on a hat that would cover the top of a flour barrel no longer carries the potent charm that city cavaliers covet. The young men are beginning to wear their hats outside their boots and linen around their necks. This is not yet the fashion among natives, but they are approaching it in the settlements where fresh blood runs. Mexicans are yet attractive creatures. The adobe mud has settled in the pores of their skins and dulled the lustre of their eyes and stiffened their coarse black hair; but they are learning that nature may be beautified. They are beginning to be interested in other uses than drinking, and colors adorn homes as well as bodies, and one may occasionally catch glimpses of budding taste through openings in the stretches of brown walls that define the streets.
Sheldon says there can be no question that American ideas are growing among the natives. He expects little of the present generation beyond obedience to the law; but of the future he is more optimistic. He believes a regulated school system, together with good government and the strict enforcement of salutary laws will furnish a certain solution to the social problem that confronts the territorial authorities. The Indian, he thinks, is doomed to slow extinction and the Mexican to improvement by American blood and by ever-recurring contact with modern ideas.
Secret of a True Life.
Dr. Arnold, of Rugby, gives in one of his letters, an account of a saintly sister. For twenty years, through some disease, she was confined to a kind of crib; never once could she change her position for all that time. "And yet," said Dr. Arnold, "I think his words are very beautiful, 'I never saw a more perfect instance of the power of love and a sound mind. Intense love, devoted to the annihilation of selfishness; a daily martyrdom for twenty years, during which she adhered to her early resolution of never talking about herself; thoughtful about the very pins and ribbons of my wife's dress, about the making of a doll's cap for a child, but of herself—save as regarded her improvement in all goodness—wholly thoughtless, enjoying everything lovely, grand, beautiful, high-minded, whether in God's robes or man's, with the keenest relish; inheriting the earth to the fullness of the promise; and preserved through the valley of the shadow of death from all fear of impatience, and
