A Cowardly and Mysterious Murder. A cold-blooded and cowardly murder, the particulars of which are shrouded in mystery, was committed in Detroit, on Saturday night, dents in the neighborhood, there was but one shot fired, and that about 11:20; some say 11:15, others say 11:20, and still others undertake to give the time exactly between those hours. At the hour mentioned the residents of the neigh borhood were awakened from their sleep by a pistol shot and several persons came out to ascertain the cause of it. Nothing could be seen in the darkness save a man who was running at a rapid rate and a horse and buggy which was near the scene. An investigation in the direction of the shot disclosed the terrible crime. A young man was found lying as above

tated on the walk, still alive, and was found to have been shot in the head. He was unable to speak and died shortly afterward. A large crowd gathered around the dying man, which was the state of affairs found by Patrolman mangled. When Alles was found ne was attired in an undershirt, and wore his coat and a straw hat. He had only one sock on, which strengthens the theory that he came down stairs in response to the call. His hat was found lying by his side.

ANOTHER THEORY. omewhat different from the above though based on the same idea, is that the young man came down stairs in response to a call; that he was getting the preparation called for when the visitor, whose design was plunder, seized some articles and ran off; that the young man pursued him, which accounts for his being outside, and that the thief, finding himself hard pressed, fired the fatal shot.

Hon. Fred Douglass was chosen Presilent of the convention of colored men at Louisville, and it is said that never since he became a free man has he felt prouder than on the norning of the second day of the convention when he walked up to the president's chair. The hall in which the convention was held, was densely packed with white and black, who had come to hear the most celebrated colored man in the world. In a speech burning with the fire of eloquence he passed rapidly in review the days when the spectre of slavery haunted the land, with all its attendant horrors, to the better and brighter days which brought them freedom, education and enfranchisement, and placed them in a position when they could enjoy and appreciate the beneficent rays of the Sun of Righteousness, and go forward, un-shackled, in the race for higher and nobler things. He set forth in glowing terms the object of the convention, which is to secure the social and political equality of the people. In scathing language he intimated that the Republican party had not lived up to its platform principles, and should be abandond by colored tected one of the Imperial Chamberlains in the men. His speech is pronounced one of the act of placing a Nihilistic document in her grandest Phillipics of modern times, and was

News of the disaster spread like wild fire, and soon thous. ands of people were on the way to the scene of destruction. Upon arrival there a fearful sight met their gaze. The boiler department, a brick structure, was a complete wreck, as were also a number of passenger and freight cars and the master mechanics' shops of the Lake Erie railand children were running about wringing their hands and calling for friends, who they supposed were either killed or wounded. In the ruins of the flanging department, scattered around, were the dead and dving, some with arms and legs off, some disfigured almost e yond recognition, and others suffering from painful burns and scalds. By this time the pclice had arrived in force and the work of re moving the killed and injured from the ruin was begun. It was found that at the time of the explosion twenty men were at work. Of these, nine were reported all right, three were could not be done by which the order of Post | Pegans, who agreed to cede to the government | killed and eight badly injured, four fatally while four children of Charles Douglass, who lived across the way, were also badly hurt.

MASSACHUSETTS' DILEMMA.

Against the Eastern skies an ungainly figure rises up like a nightmare to the people of New England, and particularly to the citizens of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. These political unfortunates are cursed with a State election every year, so they are in a perpetual turmoil and gain but little rest, stirred up by rival factions, ambitious candidates and conflicting parties. This year they are in a dilemma as to whether or no they shall be able to throw off Butler, the dread incubus weighing upon them. Benjamin F. Butler is a man of strong will, abundant resources of mint and mind and a large personal following. These things give him considerable power and they are not now being unemployed to effect his reelection- He is a man of determination and is unscrupulous as to methods used to gain desired ends. Thus because of his well known penchant towards chicanery the lovers of old Massachusetts deem it no honor to be represented by him at their head. Last year, after many and repeated trials Butler was carried into the Governor's chair by the tidal wave which swept the country. This year, the best people are putting forth every honorable effort to drive back the flood and leave him stranded on the sands. He understands that if he can get this election it will put him in sight of the White House. Consequently no money or stratagem will be spared to gain the prize. But opposed to him and his wiles is the determination of those who truly love the State, and with Mr. Robinson as a leader the chances are somewhat against the bold usurper.

A FEW WORDS ABOUT ART.

It has been remarked by Herr Saurestuff -an atrabilious friend of the writer'sthat they who make the most ado about virtue have the least of it. Of course, Herr S. is a cynic: but I have often fancied that his sarcasm is true enough of art, and I know it to be true of "culchah." Whenever I am asked (as now and then happens) "Mr. Opieque, do you love 'a-aht?'" my staccato-"Thank God, no ma'am!" is as far from art as possible. Indeed, the whole breed of a-aht-lovers call me "vulgah." Ah, my dear reader, some of us are "vulgah" by even the bounty of the Creator. Let us be thankful for it; not puffed-up, but humbly and this place to Dexter, a distance of about devoutly thankful.

All that we here deprecate is cant, not culture; and of all cant, art-cant is the most contemptible, because a foolish vani ty impells us to assume that which we not only have not, but also are not blameful for not having. Of all vain assumptions perhaps this is the quickliest detected, for Nature is hardest of all to counterfeit, and real art-love is nature and not art, is always nascitur non fit.

This spurious "culchah" leads to art "crammed" by a catalogue. When the blooming glory of a Titian is grimed with dust, and wafted by cruel fortune as a that "trick i' the voice" although the sorrow-crazed King spake in the storm and the darkness. This "culchah" can be placed in the very atmosphere of art, Heaven-inspired art, and be as insensible to its divineness as is a thistle-eating ass to the glory of a sunrise in the vale Tempe. But thistles were made to be eat-

Amidst such art-twaddle as we have heard in even this "Athens of the West" there is much thistle-eating; and we are led to this saddening conclusion by a portrait which is now hanging in the tasteful reception room of Messrs. Lewis & Gibson. In a catalogue it would figure as "A Portrait of a Gentleman," and, as the modest artist's name has not yet been noised abroad, it would be passed unheeded by your creature of "culchah." But let us-you and I, reader, who do not know one single phrase of cheap artslang. We see a good-natured face looking at us from the canvas, and the silvered beard and bald crown speak silently of the past-meridian. This fellow-man has passed life's equinoctial line, and happily too.

this silent face on the canvass has insensibly infused some of its own trust and patience into you and me. We are better men, more hopeful men, and therefore stronger men for having looked on this picture. Now let the modest and littleknown artist lift up his heart, and work, and wait-work hopefully and wait trustfully. Do you know why, O creature of "culchah?" Ah, such knowledge is not for you-it has no meaning for you-

But you who stand looking with me have caught it-you feel that the portrait my reader, is the chiefest function of art, Lauriat of Boston publish the books.

and it is love, not "culchah," that teaches

But look at the face again. What makes it stand-out so? You cannot see behind the head; but don't it look as if your hands really could reach around it? And that prominent nose-wouldn't it sneeze if you held a snuff-box under it; and wouldn't a chirping grandchild-Grandpa's pet-actually think it could pull it. Of course there is a technical term for the subtle cunning which gives this flesh-and-bone projectiveness to a flat surface—but what care you and I for terms. We feel the effect, and there ends the function of art.

But look at the flesh and bloodness of the face! That tinge tells of sun and mind—the man got his flesh-tints in the open air; but where, oh where, did our modest artist get his? "Aw, Mr. Opie, how do you mix your paints? asked a perfumed creature of "culchah," "With Brains, Sir." Our too-little-known artist has got the identical ingredients beyond peradventure.

And, now, O gentle reader, you will pardon one art term if I own that it is used only to avoid a regular freight train of synonym-"Pre-Raphaelism." There t is-its quickly learned, easily said, and with chiaro oscuro and "foreshortening" will form quite a stock in trade for your creature of "culchah." It means, for intance, the-painting-of-a-leaf-so-exceedngly-accurately-that-you-have-represented-the-tiniest-veinlet-that- ever-thrilled with-sap-in-it. That gives the meaning of Pre-Raphaelism, and is'nt it a regular reight-train-of-a-synonym with words for cars and hyphens for couplers?

The thing itself is one of the consumnations of art, for it too is an effecta producer of feeling; but it is a means that must be sparingly used, or it be comes slavish and wearisome. Rightly and fitly used, it is a tour de maitre.

Now please look at the beard-it flows adown from the chin as graceful as a violet through a meadow. Note the transparency of its thinnest parts. It is'nt a mat of hair; you can see through it, and you feel as if you surely could run your fingers through it. Surely, if the wind blew on it that beard would wave:

A little closer, please. There! Look a the moustache on the right-hand side of the face and slantingly back from, what Professor Ford would call, the commisure of the lips. As I live, there is one solitary hair standing out alone as independently as an adopted citizen on election day.

My dear creature of "culchah" did it ever occur to you that there is a shrine of true Art in our own leaf-clad Ann Arbor and an Artist, "born not made," abiding his time there in all the unconscious and all the modest self-distrust of absolute genius? If not, keep away from that modest studio, for even Genius can't paint your portrait and-put a soul in it. DIOGENES OPIEQUE.

The students and professors of the literary department have returned, rooms have been secured, and all are now recounting summer reminiscences of travel and conquest. Next week they will begin to settle down to work. The Steward is rapidly making entries of students on his books, and yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock the numbers were: Literary, 329; medicine, 183; law, 90; pharmacy, 38; dentistry, 21; homeopathy, 19. This makes a total of 680. By next week this number will probably be nearly doubled. Gabriel Campbell, a graduate of the literary department in 1865, has accepted the Chair of Intellectual and Moral Philosophy and Political Economy at Dartmouth. In 1862 he was the captain of the "Normal Co.," 17th Mich. Vol. Infantry. He has recently been connected with the University of Minnesota as vice-president and lecturer on Philology and Fine Arts.

There is a rule in the High School that there shall be no secret societies, but from time to time rumors have floated about of the existence of one or two. Last week this suspicion was made a certainty by the records of a society called the Delta Theta Phi being placed in the hands of the authorities by a man who had seized them for the rent, which had been withheld from him. It showed there were eight members, and as the law demanded their suspension they were compelled to leave. Six of them have been allowed to return however, upon promise of severing their connection forthwith. They were accustomed to meet Sunday night and their meetings were of such a character as to disturb the other tenants of the Haven block. The affair was perplexing to those concerned in many ways. First, there was doubt as to the right of the landlord to break in and get the records and then to surrender them to the school board, then the school board and superintendent were each anxious to lay the responsibility of action upon the other. The board gracefully retired and let Mr. Perry face the music. He suspended them all, then took back six. As to the justness of the rule and also the advisability of days. Up to yesterday noon eighty-five taking back those who had broken it there is a wide difference of opinion.

The Editors are noted scholars of rare culture and long practical experience in Cyclopedia making and its requirements, who have a love and enthusiasm for their work, to which they have given years of the most careful personal supervision and labor. Every article in the work is written with the greatest care, and then subsected to the most searching revision, thereby securing an unusual exactness and clearness of statement, completeness of detail, and giving to every subject its relative treatment and space, thus gaining a symmetry of form and proportion not ually found in works of its class. While it eschews all expressions of opinion on controverted points of science, philosophy, religion and politics, it aims at an accurate statement of facts; doing justice to all men, all creeds, all sections and nations; and it is pronounced by distinguished men and leading reviews the best work of the kind in the world:

In History.-It is not a collection of dry and barren dates, but a complete and imprehensive condensation of the history of all ages and peoples, written in a clear and attractive style. BIOGRAPHY.—This department forms a vast biographical dictionary, including all great men of history, and all prominent living men throughout the world.

Religion.—The history and growth of Christianity, and the religions of different ages, and nations, and all the denominations of the present day, receive the careful and impartial treatment due their importance. SCIENCE AND ART, -in all their branches, are by noted specialists, and are sur-prisingly full and comprehensive; each subject being followed by a liet of standard works relating to it. LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE.—This department is very comprehensive, including, besides very many special articles, the language and literature of each country BIBLIOGRAPHY .- Its treatment and matters pertaining to it is superior to anything previously attempted; besides the special articles there is appended to every impor-tant subject a list of standard works ou that subject. Every department is thoroughly and systematically treated according to its importance in relation to the whole-every article is brought down to the latest pos-

"Appleton's Cyclopædia is certainly a work of very rare merit, even among its own class. It is without a peer for the wants of the American Scholar. It is the boon of the poor scholar, who with it alone, has an extensive and reliable library."
I cordially concur in the above.

HORATIO POTTER,

Bishop of New York. [From Rev. Dr. Porter, President of Yale College, New Haven, Conn.] "I have been accustomed to consult Appleton's American Cyclopædia for many years, and have uniformly been satisfied with the information which I have found it to contain. "The changes and additions in the last edition add greatly to its value, and I confidently recommend it as an excellent work." [From Hon. GEORGE E. BANCROFT, the Historian.]

"I find Appleton's American Cyclopædia a most comprehensive and trustworthy book of reference. It treats the greatest variety of subjects, and always with can-

AN ELEGANT PLACE.

The Cloak Room of the Dry Goods Establishment of Bach & Abel.

An Interesting Place for the Ladies

If the ladies of Ann Arbor would be surprised and charmed with the beauty of all that goes to make up adorument of person and would see the fabrics upon which fashion has set its seal and spend an hour pleasantly they need but visit the dry goods establishment of Bach & Abel at the corner of Main and Washington streets. These well known dealers have recently added to their store a Cloak Room, which is used exclusively for the exhibition of ladies' cloaks and which is filled with an immense stock. The room is one-half as large as the store and directly above it. A fine brussels carpet, handsome wall-paper and an immense mirror give the place an inviting appearance, while sofas and easy chairs make it a pleasant place for ladies to spend an hour or two. The crowded condition of our columns this week forbids an enumeration of the many lines of goods kept, but a few of the most desirable are mentioned. In the neat and close fitting Jerseys a large assortment can be found, ranging from a light one for $2.50 to the heavy winter Jersey for $20.00. Light colored walking coats, half ulsters and ulsters to satisfy any one for $3.00 and upward. The stock of black walking coats and ulsters is also large and correspondingly cheap. Dolmans, handsomely trimmed with fur and astrakhan range in price from $8.00 to $50.00. In the next department we come to are a fine lot of what A. L. NOBLE. will be the most popular garments this season-the Russian Circulars. These are trimmed with fur and astrakhan and made either of diagonal goods or Ottoman and Sicilian silks. The cloaks made of Ottoman and Sicilian silks and satins are usually trimmed with fur and are very tastily gotten up. The plain circulars are also to be found at prices ranging from $12.00 to $40.00. But by far the finest garments are the elegant plush cloaks, some of which are worth $100. In addition the line of ladies' cloaks, there is a full stock of children's goods-something not often found in a place of Ann Arbor's size. and daily visited by many ladies who are attracted by the fine display. A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. Ball, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882: "Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. Well, wife, I'm powerful weary, I've walked

From early morning yesterday, until the sun went down.

And at the musty tavern, I early went to bed. But could not sleep for rattling carts, and noises I saw the Exhibition, quite countrified it feels.
Until you reach the building full of whirligigs and wheels.

Some good machinery there I saw, and elsewhere some handsome cows,
While the horses were good racers as every one allows.

But I didn't see a pair of steers to beat our

They haven't old-time farmers' wives to rear 'em now, I guess.

For you had always luck with calves. I think

THE BURDEN OF GUILT.

BY MARK TWAIN.

Do you remember when Jimmy Finn, the town drunkard, was burned to death in the calaboose? The caboose victim was not a citizen; he was a poor stranger, a harmless whisky-sodden tramp. I knew more about his case than anybody else; I knew too much of it in that bygone day to relish speaking of it. That tramp was wandering about the streets one chilly evening, with a pipe in his mouth, and begging for a match. He got neither matches nor courtesy; on the contrary a troop of bad little boys followed him aroun and amused themselves with nagging and annoying him; I assisted. But at last some appeal which the wayfarer made for forbearance, accompanying it with a pathetic reference to his forlorn and friendless condition, touched such sense of shame and remnant of right feeling as were left in me, and I went away and got him some matches, and then hied me home and went to bed, heavily weighted as to conscience and unboyant in spirit. An hour or two afterward the man was arrested and locked up in the calaboose by the Marshall-large name for constable, but that was his title. At two in the morning the church bells rang for fire, and everybody turned out, of course—I with the rest. The tramp had used his matches disastrously; had set his straw bed on fire and the oaken sheating of the room had caught. When I reached the ground, two hundred men, women and children stood massed together transfixed with horror, and staring at the grated window of the jail Behind the iron bars and, tugging frantically at them and screamin for help, stood the tramp. He seemed like a black object against a sun, so white and intense was the light at his back.

The Marshal could not be found, and he had the only key. A battering ram was quickly improvised, and the thun-der of its blows upon the door had so encouraging a sound that the spectators broke into wild cheering, and believed the merciful battle won. But it was not so. The timbers were too strong: they did not yield. It was said that the man's death grip still held on to the know. What was seen after I recognized the face that was pleading through the bars was see by others and not by

I saw that face, so situated, every believed myself as guilty of theman's up with them I had not a doubt that I should be hanged if my connection time are burned into my memory, and the study of them entertains me as much as they themselves distressed me then. If anybody spoke of that grizzly and alert to hear what might be said, for I was always dreading and expecting to find out that I was suspected; and so fine and so delicate was the perception of my guilty conscience that it often detected suspicion in the most purposeless remarks, and in looks, gestures, glances of the eye, which had no significance, but which sent me shivering away in a panic of fright, just the same. And how sick it made me when somebody dropped, howsoever carelessly and barren of intent, the remark that sult is that the elections go just the "murder will out." For a boy of ten same since the Edmunds Law was years I was carrying a pretty weighty

All this time I was blessedly forgetting one thing—the fact that I was an inveterate talker in my sleep. But one night I awoke and found my bedmate my younger brother -sitting up in bed, contemplating me by the light of the moon. 1 said:

"What is the matter?" "You talk so much, I can't sleep." I came to a sitting posture in an in-stant with my kidneys in my throat and my hair on end. "What did I say? Quick; out with it. What did I say? "Nothing much."

"It's a lie! You know everything."
"Everything about what?"
"You know well enough about that." "About what? I don't know what you are talking about. I think you are sick or crazy, or something. But any way, you are awake, and I'll get to sleep while I have a chance.

He fell asleep, and I laid there in cold sweat, turning this new terror over in a whirling chaos, which did duty as my mind. The burden of my thoughts was, how much did I divulge! How much does he know? What a distress in this uncertainty! But by and by I evolved an idea, I would wake my brother and probe him with a supposi-

"What! In this town?" "Yes; in this town." "Well, go on; I won't say a single into God's Grand Central Depot of the millenium. All aboard for heaven!"

Well, then, suppose you forgot to tell him to be be careful with it, be cause it was loaded, and he went off and shot himself with that pistol-fooling with it, you know, and probably doing it by accident—being drunk. Well, would it be murder?" "No-suicide.

After deep thought came this answer "Well, I should think I was guilty of something — may be murder. probably murder, but I dont know. This made me very uncomfortable. However, it was a decisive verdict. I should have to set out the real case; there seemed to be no other way; but I would do it cautiously, and keep a watch for suspicious effects. I said: "I was supposing a case; but I am oming to the real one now. Do you know how the man came to be burned up in the calaboose?"

"Haven't you the least idea!" "Wish you may die in your tracks if you have? "Yes. I wish I may die in my tracks." "Well, the way of it was this. The nan wanted some matches to light his pipe. A boy got him some. The man set fire to the calaboose with those very natches and burned himself up." "Yes, it is. Now is that boy a mur-lerer, do you think?"

"Let me see. The man was drunk!" "Yes, he was drunk"

"Very drunk?" "And the boy kne w it?"

"Yes, he knew it." There was a long pause. Then came his heavy verdict:

"If the man was drunk and the boy knew it, the boy murdered that man. This is certain. Faint, sickening sensations crept along the fibers of my body, and I seemed to know how a person feels who hears his death sentence pronounced from the bench. I waited to hear what my brother would say next. I believed I knew what it would be, and I was right. He

I came out of my collapse as one who rises from the dead. I said with admir-"Why, how in the world did you ever

"You told it in your sleep." I said to myself:

"How splendid that is. This is a habt which must be cultivated."
My brother rattled innocently on: "When you were talking in your sleep you kept mumbling something about matches, which I couldn't make anything out of; but just now, when you began to tell me about the man in the calaboose and the matches, I remembered that in your sleep you mentioned Ben Coontz two or three times, so I put this and that together, you see, and right away I knew it was Ben that burned the man up." I praised his sagacity, effusively. Presently he asked:

"Are you going to give him up to the "No," I said; "I believe that it will be a lesson to him. I shall keep an eye on him of course, for that is but right, but if he stops where he is and reforms it shall never be said that I betrayed "How good you are!"

"Well, I try to be. It is all a person can do in a world like this." And now, my burden being shifted to other shoulders, my terrors soon faded

The Mormon Question.

The Mormon question is likely to attract a good deal of attention again next ession of Congress. There is no doubt that the Edmunds Law is practically a failure so far as its true objects are concerned. It probably has disfranbars when he was dead, and that in this positions the fires wrapped him about and consumed him. As to this I do not Delegate Cannon it only affects a small percentage of the population of that great Territory, for only a small percentage of the Mormons are polygamists. Cannon always insisted in the many talks upon this subject which your cornight for a long time afterward; and I respondent had with him that the Edmunds law would be a failure because death as if I had given him the matches of this fact, that it would only affect a purposely that he might burn himself small portion of the community of small portion of the community of Utah, as but a small proportion were polygamists. This view is again prewith this tragedy were found out. The sented by Elder Gross, who has just re-happenings and the impressions of that turned from England, where he has been gathering in a few lambs for the He further adds that only a very few comparatively of the Mormons have more wives than one, and that it matter I was all ears in a moment, is only the few who are wealthy and able to support a plurality of wives that marry more than one. It is at least > that only those who are polygamists need be reached, is a mistake. Those who are not polygamists sup port the sins and systems of the church as vigorously as the others, and do the oidding of the disfranchised polygamists even more closely now that they are unable to vote for themselves. The reenacted as before. What the next move will be is the unsolved problem. There s talk of a bill relegating the Territory to Government control, and repealing the law creating the Territory, but it is hardly probable that it will pass, as by many it would be considered an inter-ference not warranted by the Constitu-The question appears to grow more difficult as it is more thoroughly understood. The number of Mormons pretty evident that any attempt to reguate the Mormons, based on the idea is constantly being increased by the number of Mormon immigrants, the additions to the ranks from the southwestern section of this country, and by the growth of population in Utah. "All Aboard for Heaven!" The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage has resumed his regular Sunday services at the Brooklyn Tabernacle. His text the other Sunday was, "I will show wonders n the heavens and in the earth. Among other things he said: '-Knowledge rolls its tide at every oor man's door, and if the philosophers of past centuries were required to stand in line with the boys of the Polyechnic or the girls of the Packer Instiute, they would be sent to the foot of the class for failing to answer questions. These are the blessings of free libraries everywhere except in Brooklyn—and newspapers are falling all around like leaves in the September equinox; and news three days old is considered ranc id. There are more copies of the Bible than of Shakespeare's, Tennyson's or Dumas' works published every year Before long the best investment will no be in Western Union or railroad stocks but in trumpets and cymbals, for we would not be unbelieving if I saw the wings of the apocalyptic angel spread for flight at this day's sunset, or if tonight Christ announced from Mount this world. The combination under garment of knitted wool, or cotton, or both, the skirt of pleated wool attached to a lining waist cut with a spring over the hips, and a polonaise or woven "Jersey" supplies all the requirements for such a dress. If the polonaise is employed, the lining waist may be extended so as to require only a deep pleated flounce of the wool to bring it to the length of hambers' Journal. Rats are wonderfully clean animals, and they dislike tar more, perhaps, than anything else, for if it once gets on their jackets they find it most difficult to remove it. Now, I had heard it mentioned that pouring tar down at the entrance of their holes was a good remedy, also placing broken pieces of glass by their holes was another remedy. But these remedies are not effective. The rats may leave their old holes and make fresh ones in other parts of the house; they don't, however, leave the premises for good. I thought I would try another experiment—one I had not heard of before. One evening I set a large wirecage rat-trap, attaching inside a most seductive piece of strongly smelling cheese, and next morning I found, to my satisfaction, that I had succeeded in trapping a very large rat, one of the largest I had ever seen, which, after I had besmeared him with tar, I let loose into his favorite run. The next night I tried again, and succeeded in catching another equally big fellow, and served him in the same manner. I could not follow those two tar-besmeared rats into their numerous runs to see what would happen; but it is reasonable to assume that they either summoned together all the members of their community, and by their crest-fallen appearance gave their comrades silent indications of the misfortune which had so suddenly befallen them, or that they frightened their brethren away, for they one and all forsook the place and fled The experiment was eminently successful. From that day in 1875 till now, 1883, my house, ancient though it is, has been entirely free from rats; and 1

"Aunt Abbie" in Country Gentleman gives a recipe for a very delicious cake of five parts, which can be baked in layers, or as a marble cake:

Yellow Part .- Yolks of four eggs, one cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, half cupful of milk, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Flavor with orange.

White Part.—Whites of four eggs. one cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, half a cupful of milk, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Flavor with pineapple.

Brown Part.—Yolks of four eggs, one cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, half a cupful of milk, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, and one teaspoonful of baking powder. One cake of sweet chocolate, grated, and one teapoonful of vanilla.

Red Part. - Whites of four eggs, one cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, half a cupful of milk, one and one half cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of blush, flavored with rose, one teaspoonful of baking powder. This may be made a more delicate shade of red by using half the quantity of blush.

Lavender Part.—Two eggs, two cupfuls of sugar, two thirds of a cupful of butter, half a cupful of red raspberry jelly, dissolved in hot water sufficient to make a cupful of liquid, three cupfuls of flour and one teaspoonful of baking

A Simple Disinfectant.

One pound of green copperas, costing seven cents, dissolved in one quart of water, and poured down a water-closet, will effectually concentrate and destroy the foulest smells. On board ships and steamboats, about hotels and other public places, there is nothing so nice to purify the air. Simple green copperas, dissolved in anything under the bed, will render a hospital or other places for the sick, free from unpleasant smells. In fish markets, slaughternouses, sinks, and wherever there are offensive gasses, dissolve copperas and sprinkle it about, and in a few days the smell will all pass away. If a cat, rat, or monse dies about the house, and sends forth an offensive gas, place some dissolved copperas in an open vessel near the place where the nuisance is and it will purify the atmosphere. Then keep all clean.

Wanted to Settle.

Among the passengers in a stage oach, stopped one day by road agents n Montana, was a Buffalo man who was out there to look over the ground with a view of establishing a clothing store. He was the last one out of the eoach, and as he was ordered to hold up is hands he called out: "Shentlemen, I like to settle dis case like an honest man."

"Keep your hands up!" "If I can't make an assignment to my brudder Moses I settle mit you for twenty cents on der dollar." "You shut up and shell out!" was the stern command.

"Shentlemens," continued the victim, as he wriggled around, "I have made three assignments and failed seex times in peesness, and I nefer vhas treated like dis before. I shall now offer thirty cents on der dollar, und if you daon take him I'll go into bankruptcy und my wife puts all per cash in her pocket

The above depicts a very pleasant feature of bicycling as a sport. The club have ridden from their headquarters in the city, to a suburban village some twenty miles away, where they await the arrival of the racing members who were to start just thirty minutes later.

Five minutes more and the two foremost of the racing men—Fri, on his "Harvard," and Yonson on his "Yale," appear in sight. The pace is tremendous: the men are neck and neck, and Dodges, the captain of the club, whom you observe is leaning on his "Shadow "light roadster, in the foreground, declares the race a tie.

"Where are the other men?" he asks.

"Oh, behind, somewhere," is the reply.

"Are there any 'Harvard's' or 'Yale's' or 'Shadow's' among them?"

"Ah! that accounts for it," says the captain. American bicyclers as a body will realize the force of the captain's last remark, but the thousands of new riders which the coming year will produce, should each one of them realize that the only true economy in choosing a bicycle is to be content with nothing less than the very best that money will procure. Each should find out all he can about bicycles before making his choice, and in order to assist enquirers in their search for information, we will,'on receipt of a a three-cent stamp, send to any address, a copy of our large illustrated catalogue by returnmall.
