SKETCH OF ADMIRAL DAVID DIXON POR-TER.

His grandfather was appointed by Geo-Washington, a master in the American Navy during the Revolutionary War. His father, Captain David Porter, in the farmer fright Essay, captured the first famous frigate Essex, captured the first man-of-war taken from the British in the war of 1812, and was Commander-inchief of the Navy of Mexico in its war for independence.

Admiral David Dixon Porter came of a race of naval heroes. He did his first service for Mexico; but he afterward entered the United States service, and passed through all grades, from midshipman to admiral. He assisted in the operations against Vera Cruz, and gave new lustre o a name already synonymous with valor. His chief exploits, however, have been performed in the great American Civil

They began with the relief of Fort Pickens in Pensacola Harbor, and ended with the capture of Fort Fisher, the main defense of the Port of Wilmington, North Carolina. He commanded the mortar flotilla which reduced the forts guarding the approach to New Orleans, and after the capture of that city co-opperated with the army of Gen. Grant in the capture of Vicksburg and the open-ing of the Mississippi. Wherever there was water enough to float a gunboat, the flag of the Union was carried under his command. He held rank second only to the glorious Farragut, and, on the death of that illustrious man succeeded him as admiral of the United States Navy, which position he now holds.

The growth of our navy was one of the marvels of the age, and it was a power of o small magnitude in crushing the reellion. It was second only to the arm

It co-operated with the army wherever there was water enough to float a gun-boat, while on the high seas, our navy covered itself with glory. Care of Animals in Winter.

The American Humane Association offers the following suggestions relative to fowls, horses and cattle, to persons having these in charge, in the northern latitudes, during the winter months.

Do not compel domestic fowls to roost in trees. Aside from danger of being captured by owls and other enemies, the are sitting will prevent them from getting rest; while in the severely cold weather thus exposed, feet and combs are frozen and the bird is so benumbed as to make it impossible for it to be much profit or roosts, feet are thus kept warm, refresh ing rest is obtained and the fowl is much stronger, healthier and more profitable to

Do not clip horses during the winter months. With the same propriety we might cut the hair from a dog or shear a sheep at this season of the year. The argument in behalf of the practice is that the horse in perspiration will dry more quickly if the hair is short. If the animal sheltered or warm place, after being driven, no danger results from perspiration, whatever the length of hair; while the horse that has been deprived of its coat in the winter time suffers perpetually while being exposed to the cold.

It is a cruelty inflicted upon beautiful carriage horses for the purpose of style Blessed is the ordinary work-horse, in the winter time, for, however much it perspire, it is allowed to carry its growth of hair during the cold

Do not leave cattle to stand shivering, vhile extremities often freeze, in the snow forms and severe winds of winter, when a little time would suffice to costruct of boards, rails or poles, a support upon and around which may be placed hay, straw or weeds, thus making a shelter that may comfortably protect them. Cat tle kept in fairly warm condition through out the winter will, as milkers, give a larger and better yield of milk, and as beeves will take on flesh much more rapidly than if left exposed to incleme

Aside from a question of humanity, the more attention and care that is bestowed upon animals, with a view to their comfort, the more will they be of service and source of profit to their owners.

THE NATION'S DISGRACE.

While the national administration is engaged in carrying out the ante-election cry of "turn the rascals out," it might be well for it to turn the reflector of public opinion upon itself, and ascertain just how many members of the cabinet deserve to be turned out.

According to the New York World and the New York Sun, (both democratic), the "rascals" are not all confined to republican officials. In fact, while the democratic administration has searched the records from Alpha to Omega with a harbor of education the women of our fine tooth comb, in the hope of unearthing some fraudulent transactions, it has signally failed in finding anything even censurable. But half of the democratic administration is not yet ended, when one of the most disgraceful schemes of fraud and speculation that was ever conceived is brought to light, with the nest-egg under the very nose of President Cleveland, being none other than Attorney General Garland, whose official influence was needed and purchased by thousands of dollars worth of stock in a company which required only the word of his mouth to make him immensely rich, or the reverse. It was a terrible temptation but an honest man ought to have resisted it. The good name of Mr. Cleveland's Cleveland's cabinet, the good name of the American nation demanded that Mr Garland should resist this temptation, and the moment he succumbed to it, he should have stepped down and out, and not allowed disgrace to come upon the

The scheme of the Pan-Electric Co., which Mr. Garland allowed himself to become a party to is one before which all other schemes pale into insignificance. It seeks not only to enrich a number of congressmen, members of the cabinet and high officials, but will rob others of that which rightfully belongs to them. It annuls, practically, the use and value of an invention by its discoverer, and will seriously cripple men who invested in a enabling them to enter the higher grades legitimate pursuit to develop and build at a much more advanced stage and better up the telephone business.

The Nomenclature of Ann Arbor.

A correspondent asks the Chicago Tribune the cause that led to the naming of the University city Ann Arbor, to which that paper makes answer as follows: that paper makes answer as follows:

In February, 1824, John Allen, of Virginia, and Elisha W. Rumsey, of Genessee county, New York, met by accident in Cleveland, O., and formed an acquaintance. Both were in search of a new home in the forests of Michigan. They started for the interior of the territory together, and on arriving in the vicinity of the present site of Ann Arbor they located on some government lands embracing a beautiful burr-oak forest, with the Huron river on the north and east. Here they pitched a tent and built an arbor, of which Mary Ann Rumsey became mistress. This primitive home was christened "Ann's Arbor," and the name, in the shorter form of Ann Arbor, was afterward chosen by the early settlers as a name for their new and thrifty village.

That's all very plausible, but how ab-

That's all very plausible, but how aburd! The word Ann Arbor is derived from a cross between the Pottowotamie and Flat-head Digger Injun. The Potcowottamie word "Agh-an" meaning squaw or hen and the Flat-head Digger word "Haw-baw-waw" meaning home or harbor; which translated into English is hen harbor, so-called from the fact that where now stands the beautiful University city there was once the camping ground of those two great tribes of Indi-

Besides this, the great influx of but enough so to give the mountain a marriagable girls who in time become "college widows," proves again the appro priateness of the original name.

Art Education in the Public Schools of Ann Arbor.

In general education and culture the claims of art education are practical and important. Art education to be successtaught in public schools should administration, the good name of Mr. be taught by one qualified, possessing energy and love for the work. The writer having given considerable attention to this branch of study and the interest taken in it, and the method for teaching in the several ward schools of the city, believes that the attention of the parents should be called to the fact that much credit is due to the present teacher, Miss Alice L. Hunt of Mass., for important changes and improvements in this department. Contrary to previous years Miss

Hunt has introduced drawing in the primary classes of the first and second grade, she believes this to be an essential feature in that it trains the hand and eye and the children become accustomed to use of the pencil and materials, thus prepared for the work. In this grade drawing from objects, is taken up in a simple way they are taught the names of the lines and led to discover surfaces, corners and edges of solids. These primary classes are much interested and enjoy their work. The principal changes she has introduced in the higher grades is the study of construction, or that of making working drawings, a course of exercises based on what is known as the "Shop Method." She is also giving more instruction in drawing from models and objects, and the study of proportions than has heretofore been the custom. This is a change in the right direction. It is Miss Hunt's ambition to instruct her pupils in a manner which will enable them to execute in wood from these working drawings, thus rendering their education of practical value. Miss Hunt is striving to impress upon her pupils the care in their work, believing that to draw well simply is not so requisite a feature as training them to think and see. Even if no direct industrial use were to be made of this education by half of those who receive it, the intelligence, the sensitive-ness, and the habits of accurate thinking developed by it are needed by every human being, every day of his life. It is

Miss Hunt's intention to have a public

The Ypsilanti Sentinel feels bad because the munificent gifts of the Lewis art gallery and Roger's casts, models, etc., call for the erection of a new art hall, and asserts that the state cannot afford to accept such gifts, but better buy what they want outright. First Glimpses of the Hawaiian Islands the shore, perhaps a half a mile, footand Honolulu.

OAHU COLLEGE, HONOLULU, H. I., ] January 12th, 1886. Tuesday morning, Sept. 8th, I was on deck about half-past seven o'clock. In being told that land had been in sight for some time south of us, I quickly and eagerly gazed in that direction, but nothing seemed visible. Looking again with more care and scrutiny, I saw just above the horizon the faint outline of a cloud differing very little in color from the blue heaven above and around it; and this proved to be the first sight of the longed but all that could be seen from our place for land. As we came nearer, the cloud took on a more solid appearance, gradually changing into a long, narrow, gray mass with clearly defined outline. This was the Island of Molokai. To the northwest of it is the Island of Oahu, on whose southern coast are situated the Bay and City of Honolulu. Our course was, therefore, southerly until we sighted Molokai, when we turned westward so as to run along the southern coast of Oahu. The Island of Molokai owes its chief reputation to the colony of lepers occupying a part of it, about which I hope, in due time, to write something. It lies nearly east and west forty miles in length and has a width of only seven miles. A range became involved in a great war with the of volcanic mountains extends along the whole northern coast, varying in height it in the midst of the deep blue waters great and desperate battle, which occurred from a few hundred to 3,500 feet; and furnished a very effective foreground for to the north, near what is now the thriv- this line of gray mountains, jutting up the beautiful panorama that lay behind. bare, rugged and wild out of the ocean, A narrow channel opened through the was the most that could be seen. The growth of grass was not very thick, very beautiful bronze-green color. So, in order not to reach Honolulu before noon, we just barely crawled along. Before reaching Makapun Point, there appeared beyond it, southwest, at a distance of five miles another extinct volcanic crater, quite similar in size and appearance to the first one. This is Koko Head, about twelve miles east of Honolulu. Passing this roint, a new and very different scene presented itself to us. Bewond Koko Head to the west about seven miles is one of the most famous landmarks on the Islands, known as Diamond Head, an enormous, much-worn, extinct crater, standing out boldly and grandly majestic against the sky. Between Koko the disbanding of Protection Fire Co. Head and Diamond Head, the shore curves No. 1 was adopted and the balance rein, forming a very beautiful bay. To describe satisfactorily the view presented by the island back of this bay is impossible; and it is extremely difficult to convey any at all adequate idea of it. A few miles back from the shore of the bay and nearly injure himself so badly that he has been parallel with it, runs a high mountain range, its ridge broken up into sharp, $5 per week for room and board, and $4 jagged and fantastic peaks, crowned with green trees and touched by the clouds. Never have I seen a picture of nature in quiet peace, so beautiful, so luxuriant as in these tropical garden valleys. The valleys are, perhaps, what at home you might call immense ravines. They vary in width from a quarter of a mile to one or more miles. Their soil is very fertile and their bottom and sides are covered with a most luxuriant growth of tropical vegetation. Ald. Henderson, as chairman of the

To his Honor the Mayor, Recorder and Council of the City of Ann Arbor:

of the City of Ann Arbor:

GENTLEMEN—The undersigned having the interest of the Fire department in view would respectfully call your attention to a few things in that department which we think if adopted would increase its efficiency, and not in any way increase its expenses, but in the opinion of the undersigned lessen them.

Our water works are now ready for use in case of fire, and we are enabled to deffective work at fires with a less number of men than formerly, and we would recommend the disbanding of Protection Engine Co. No. 1, and reducing the number of firemen and hosemen to about seventy-five or less, and we would also recommend the payment to each fireman and hoseman the sum of $10 per year.

Respectfully submitted,

The COURIER has received a communiation from Mr. Earnest Oberschmidt, of Scio, complaining of being unjustly assessed and taxed by the supervisor of his township. He claims in his letter to have given away and paid out nearly all of $6,000 received by him for the farm sold to a son 12 years ago; and that he now owes money which he has had to borrow. Also that he is assessed for 80 acres of land, only 60 acres being under cultivation, with no timber on the balance, (and which raises barely enough to support his family and stock) and on this he has to pay $67.10 tax $1000 of which is for ten day's road work. Why he should be taxed so much when there are farmers about him who pay only $90 taxes while their houses alone are worth more than all his property together, is a mystery to him, and he feels that he has been unjustly discriminated against.

Laws of Capital Punishment in 1650. EDITOR COURIER :- Fourteen or fifteen crimes were then punished with death, and the authority therefor was taken from the law of Moses. They are also recorded in the so-called "Blue Laws," page 28. Why didn't our forefathers go to the teachings of Jesus of Nazareth, which was not 'an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," out to overcome evil with good? Is that false doctrine? Oh, no! But our forefathers were in sentiment and feelings the hands of the Rugby Association of the university, to be used as a gymnasium. A like Moses. They believed that punishment and fear would prevent people from committing crime. But history shows that crimes were committed, notwith-

England had at one time a great many crimes punished with death. Did it lessen those crimes? History shows that the hanging and lawful killing became fearful, and the better class of citizens compelled the repealing of many of them, and so did we in the United States of America. But we have many citizens among us who are in sentiment and feeling like the Mosaics of old. When we hear of a brutal murder beng committed, in the excitement we say that he or she ought to be hung; but the ober second thought is very different. History teaches us that many a fellow man has been executed-his life takenand afterward proven to have been innocent of crime; then the state (or law) is guilty of murder in the first degree, and it ought to be hanged. But who can hang the state? The state should not take what it cannot give, viz: Life. Liberty it may take, and in case a condemned man be found innocent, that can be given back to him. Then, too, the state may pay reasonable damages for the loss sustained by the error of the law.

The fact is that in a state where the noral law predominates crimes are few, but where education is sought only as a means of making money, attaining power or high offices, virtue is necessarily of a low grade. By the law of a state we can induce of the careful of a state we can judge of the standing of the people: whether they are barbarians, semi-barbarians, professedly civilized or civilized By their fruits (laws) ye shall know them. Thistles don't bear figs nor figs thistles.
In an oration delivered at the Univer sity of Michigan on Commencement Day 1884, there was expressed a sentiment worthy of the speaker, viz: that after the ommencement most of the students yould commence work in a branch where they thought they would make the most money, while in the moral field comparatively few would work. Is there no work in that field? Have Martin Luther, Cal-vin, Wyckliffe and Melanchton exhausted that field? Or is there something yet to be learned and discovered in it? If these persons made some discoveries and worked reformation with the disadvantages they had to work under, might not the students of to-day, with all the advantages they have; produce greater blessings for mankind thas money has been able to give? More humanity, less profession of science of theology. More love and good will, and perhaps peace on earth, for such blessings are hidden in the moral field, and to possess them we have to work and find them and make them our own, for if we eformation with the disadvantages they bem and make them our own, for if we buy them they may not be our own; for by your fruits (not blossoms) ye shall be known. A sure test, verily.

Mrs. Emily McLaughlin is an oratress by inheritance, as well as by experience. Her brothers are both men of eloquence, and the older one Rev. Dr. R. R. Meridith, of Boston, is one of the most impressive ispeakers to whom I have ever listened. His addresses to Sunday school teachers in Boston, have packed Tremont Temple every Saturday for years. Mrs. McLaughlin is in look and manner "ther brother over again" upon the platform. So far as a woman of the utmost gentleness of refinement can be like a fervid masculine orator. That she has a great heart is at once apparent, and her sublime earnestness lends emphasis to her clear and logical reasoning. In the conservative cities of Boston and Philadelphia, Mrs. McLaughlin is an acknowledged favorite and all protestant pulpits are freely open to her, except, of course, the Episcopalian. For several years Mrs. McLaughlin has been a national officer of the W. C. T. U. and ex-officio member of its executive committee, I hope she will speak to the students as well as the general public of Ann Arbor.
