HOW SCULPTORS WORK.

Description of the Best-Known and Most Popular System of Statue-Making. Several great sculptors, Michael Angelo among them, have occasionally hewn their statues straight out of the block of marble, without going through the preliminary courses of modeling in wealthy people of this country began clay and casting in plaster. But this is mature life poor. rarely done, for, in the first place, the work would be too long for any artist who has a regard for his time, and in She is fifty-seven years of age.—Boston the second, the hewing of the marble Journal. demands a special practical experience tor would probably spoil a hundred blocks of marble before making as much as a statuette a foot high, were he to trust only to himself in the matter. Even Michael Angelo, when he tried to dispense with the "statuary," or "practitioner," succeeded only in making fragments of figures. Not being an adept in judging of the size of the block he needed, he was con-stantly finding that he had miscal-culated, and that an arm, a leg, or a head must remain unfinished in consequence. The "statuary" who is sessed of as much talent in his way as model on a platform, measures it, and places it side by side with a block of marble of the requisite height and breadth. This done, he applies to the model an instrument of methanics.

—When a Mexican girl marries she simply becomes part of her husband's estate. For instance, if her name was Anita Nunez, and she marries are considered. nodel an instrument of mathematical precision, by which he obtains the de-tailed measure of every part and angle as Jose's house or other piece of proptailed measure of every part and angle of the statue. He then returns to the erty. marble, and roughly sketches on the outside of it, by means of points, a sort of outline of the figure or group. Upon each of the spots where he has marked a point with his pencil, a workman bores a hole with an awl, taking great care, however, not to bore a fraction of an inch deeper than he is told. When the "statuary" has inspected all the sides of the block, and when the holes have all been bored according to his directions the marble looks as though it had been riddled by bullets.

fragments of marble between the different holes and along the pencil lines drawn as guide marks. This work is more or less easy as the attitude of the statue is simple and fanciful. If the I was troubled with salt shoum for a number of statue is simple and lauchti. If the ears, so that the skin entirely came off of my figure be one of a modern personage hends from the finger t ps to the wrist. I tried remedies and doctors' presc iptions to no purpose until I commenced taking Cuticura Remedies, and sides, attired in the clothes of our day and with nothing eccentric in the po-sition of his legs, the task offers no difficulties and may be entrusted to a very ordinary workman. But if the subject be a group or a figure in an attitude, for instance like that of Ajax Defying the Lightning, the chisel can not be en trusted to any but a practiced hand, and every blow of the hammer must be struck with the greatest precaution The appearance presented by the marble when the preparatory hewing has ended, is that of some person or persons thickly wrapped up in a shroud. The outlines of head and body can be vaguely detected under the white covering, but nothing more. And it is not until the "statuary" himself has set to work with his finer chisel and more delicate hand, that a tangible form begins to emerge from the hard mass. First the then the shoulders and trunk, then the legs, and then the arms and hands appear. The arms and hands, if outstretched, are reserved to the last; if detached first from the block, the oscillations caused by the chisel in hewing the other parts of the marble might shake and crack them. This is a very necessary precaution, and it is even usual to keep the arms, the fingers and other projecting parts of marble statues continually supported by props of wood, until the moment when the work is set upon its pedestal and uncovered. When the statue is handed over to the sculptor so that he may give the final touches to it, there sometimes remains scarcely any thing for him to do. This is the case when the "statuary" is himself a first-class artist and can trust himself to imitate to a nicety the slightest details of form and expression in the plaster model. But such examples are rare, less because of the inca-pacity of the "statuaries" than by reason of the natural desire which every artist has to terminate in person the work he has conceived and begun. The statue is usually returned to the touches, which will constitute the special beauty of the work, yet remaining to be done. The most delicate of tools are then employed; slender chisels with the finest points; toy hammers of scarcely any weight, little graters that fit on, something like thimbles, to the top of the forefinger. And to polish the marble and smooth it, chamois leather, sand-paper, sponges steeped in oil and the palm of the hand are used. When the work presents a nude figure, the amount of care needed for the correct modeling of the limbs and muscles is inconceivable. Works like the Laocoon, the Dying Gladiator and the Apollo Belvedere must have cost the makers more trouble and anxiety than any sum of money could repay. -N. Y. Mail and Express.

Story of a Mad-Stone.

In 1848 Captain Wilson, of Alabama, killed a white Rates Low as the Lowest, Losses Liber- | deer, and, knowing the Indian theory. looked in its stomach, and there found a stone as large as a goose egg that resembled a petrified sponge. This was the mad-stone. The Indian theory is that the white deer is more susceptible to vegetable poisons taken into the stomach when eaten with grass than other animals. To preserve the life of the animal nature has placed in the stomach this porous stone, which absorbs the poison, neutralizes it, and saves the deer's life. The stone, applied to a bite into which poison has een injected, at once draws it out, and when its pores are filled drops off. Being soaked in milk, the stone is made pure again, and ready for another ap-

At 8:50 o'clock yesterday morning Deective C. J. Putnam, of the United States Secret Service, jumped from a train from the east that pulled into the Union Pacific assenger depot in this city. He rushed not the office of Division Superintendent Dorrance, and almost embracing that official in his eagerness, gasped:

"Name your price for a clear track and a special train to Fremont!"

"It will cost you $100," was the prompt

But understand me correctly," hurriedly continued the detective. Fremont, Elkhorn and Missouri Valley passenger train for the Black Hills leaves Fremont at 9:55. It is now 8:55. I want to catch that train—must catch it, in fact. In order to do so I must travel at the rate of a mile per minute. Can you pull me through? 'We'll shove you through or kill you,' said Mr. Dorrance. "Then, for Heaven's sake let me get

With a shriek and a bound the train d assembled to witness its departure, it was speeding along at a forty-mile clip, amd when it entered its second mile it was covering a mile a minute. The men in the caboose clung to their seats, but the detective never weakened. Proprietary Medicines.

A visit to Dr. Green's Laboratory, at Woodbury, N.J., has considerably changed our views, and especially our prejudices in regard to what are generally known as "Standard Patent Medicines. Of course we are getting to that age in life when we are forced to conclude Life itself is a hum bug, and naturally distrust anything that has not withstood long and tried experiences. Being a physician I had the curiosity to know how such a sale of two medical preparations could be sustained for so many years. The perfect system upon which the business is conducted, and the pharmaceutical arrangements for the manufacture of the two recipes with which we were made acquainted, are sufficiently envincing to us that the August Flow-ER, for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaints, and Boschee's GERMAN SYRUP, for Throat and Lung Troubles, were for the complaints they are recommended, most excellent remedies, and only regret that in much of our practice, medical ethics prevent us from prescribing them without making the formulas public. When we were shown the great quantity of voluntary letters having been forwarded to Dr. Green, from all parts of the country, and from all classes of people, lawyers, ministers and doctors, giving a description of their ailments, testimonials of their cures, etc. I feel like endorsing Dr. Green's suggestion that the Government accept such valuable formulas, and license them for general use by giving protection to inventor same as patents generally.—Copied from N. Y. Druggists' Circular of October, 1886.

NOW IS THE TIME to see Niagara in all the beauty of its winter garb, environed by marvelous and fantastic forms of ice and snow. Gigantic icicles form on the overhanging rocks and reach from summit to base of the tall precipices. The icebridge generally ex-tends from the Horseshoe Fall to a point near the railroad bridge, lasts generally from two to three months, and is crossed is ordinarily from one hundred to one hundred and fifty feet thick—rising from fifty to sixty feet above the natural surrising spray, seem partially buried; a mass of quaint and curious crystalline forms standing in lieu of the bushes; the buildings seem to sink under ponderous coverings of snow and ice: the tops of trees and points of rock on which the daz-zling white frost does not lie stand out in bold contrast, forming the deep shadows of the entrancing picture. The whole presents a wild, savage aspect, grand and imposing beyond adequate description.

If you can see Niagara but once, it had better be in winter than in summer. The scene is one of peerless grandeur, worth going hundreds of miles to see, and daily excites the enthusiastic delight of the Michigan Central pasengers, who gaze enraptured upon it from the magnifi-cent standpoint of Falls View, above and almost on the brink of the Horseshoe falls. From this point says Peck's Sun, edit-

In a moment an easily recognizable and quite well known Dexter turnout came slowly into sight. What the tentre contained would have puzzled that terrible disease; have used the most powerful liniments on my hip and knee to soothe the pain, that I might get a little sleep. My hip and knee had lost nearly all strength by the use of the liniments, and I could get no help. I saw an advertisement of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, ordered half a dozen bottles, took them that cutter contained would have puzzled ordered half a dozen bottles, took them the oldest inhabitants. It looked for an instant in our imagination not unlike a prairie schooner or an internal machine, but finally resolved itself into a promiscuous pile of robes and blankets. All was quiet save the tinkling sleigh bells and the mournful howl of the distant watch dog. Suddenly there broke upon our ears the sound of a resounding "smack," like the cracking of an ox drivers gad, followed in quick succession by another, and then the sound of a partially stifled scream sounding like "now — — you stop that!" We were upon the point of rushing to the rescue of the owner of the decidedly feminine twanged voice when the bundle of robes was suddenly transformed into the figures of a couple of Dexter's "best." # THE LIQUOR TAX AGAIN.

Very many of our state exchanges have quoted the Courier's article opposing the turning over of the liquor tax to the counties, approving the position taken. But our off-horse neighbor of the Ypsilanti Sentinel quotes it disapprovingly, than before. I suppose this will continue and remarks :

and remarks:

We say, let the counties have this money, and the cities and villages thus share it with the townships. It comes from them. The saloons in Ypsilanti, Asn Arbor and Manchester, Saline and Dexter, would have poor picking if it were not for their ccunty custom. In small villages the people are nearly or quite relieved from village taxes by the liquor tax. That is the surrounding country pays the tax of the village. In larger places the liquor tax is exhausted in extravagance and other taxes are not made appreciably lighter. These are the reasons why the proposition to put the liquor tax in the county treasury is opposed.

The Sentinel's assertion that it is the

A NEEDED LAW.

The benevolent ladies of Detroit, who seek to furnish a home to friendless children, meet a great difficulty in the reluctance of parents who place their children in their care, only to reclaim them again when they have been cleaned, dressed and made pleasant and attractive. The ladies propose to ask for the enactment of a law authorizing the proper officials to terminate the authority of unfit parents over their children, and place the latter under the care of the society. There can be no question about the need of some such measure. There is nothing so pitiable as infancy subjected to the crueity of degraded, intemperate and vicious parents. We have seen many instances of innocent helplessness in the hands of unfeeling crueity, but never one without feeling that here was a lack of legal protection. The State takes some little care of orphans, but children in the power and control of crueity clous parents, are worse off than orphans, and many times more need the protection of the law.—Ypsilanti Sentinel.

Had this proposition come from the COURIER or almost any other paper, the trimmed it with all sorts of shining Sentinel would have "kicked" lustily their parents who are their natural protectors, and causing said parents in their sane, or sober or moral moments to have their heart-strings bleed for their offspring, torn from them by a cruel law, and so on to the end of the chapter.

Now we are glad to see the Sentinel commend the need of such a law. There are many parents totally unfit to raise or care for children, and there is no power at present by which charitably inclined people may come to the rescue of such children. We join with our neighbor in recommending this to the legislature.

Common Council Proceedings.

There was a special meeting of the ouncil last evening. In the absence of the Mayor Ald. Martin was called to the chair. The first business of importance was the passage of the following, offered by Ald. Allmendinger:

Resolved, That for being late the Mayor be ined 12 boxes of cigars, and the Marshal be instructed to collect the same for the benefit of the council and city officials.

Which was passed unanimously and in such a hurry that the very room smoked. N. B.-Neither the boxes or cigars have as yet been collected. Directly afterward the Mayor coming

In Memoriam.

Expressions of sympathy from classes 87, '88, '89, and '90, of the literary department of the University of Michigan: It hathipleased our Heavenly Father, in His all-wise providence, to call home from the the midst of his labors, our friend and teach-er, Dr. Edward Olney.

We bow submissive to Divine will, while we recognize that the University has lost one of its brightest lights, and we, as students, a warm personal friend and noble Christian worker.

We mourn the loss of his helpful counsel and his encouraging presence, yet his example lives in our memory and serves as an inspiration to our lives. To the bereaved family we extend our sympathy and commend them to the care of Him, "whose loving kindness is over all."

JOINT COMMITTEE.

January 22, '87. At a meeting of the Students' Christian Association last Friday, the following was adopted: Our Heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom, hath called home our brother and coun-selor, Dr. Edward Olney; We bow submissively to Divine will, although we miss the inspiration of his presence, his spirit and influence are ever with as to lead us on to higher faith and action. To the bereaved family and friends we extend Christian sympathy, and commend the consolation and blessing of the Holy Spirit that was ever the strength and guiding star of him they mourt. of him they mourn.

At the Sunday afternoon meeting, Jan 23d, of the Ann Arbor Temperance Union, the following resolution was unan-

Resolved, That in the death of Prof. Edward Olney, prohibition has lost a friend just where it most needs them—in the church and in the educated classes—one whose voice and pen and vote were never equivocal, never doubtful, always clear, prompt and brave for prohibition in law and for a party friendly to such law to ensure its execution.

Of the new Ideal Uncle Tom's Cabir Co., which is to appear at the grand opera house next Monday evening, the Toledo Evening Post of Sept. 11th, says: "The New Ideal company in Uncle Tom's Cabin still draws large houses at the Peoples. Their new manner of presenting the play takes with the public. Everybody is charmed with the beautiful scenery and the wonderful effect of the transformation. The company's engage ment here is proving a decided success. evening and the same to morrow."

THAT HEAD.

The Chesaning Argus thinks that new head is all right: The Ann Arbor Courser has a new head in which is pictured the University, office of the Courser and a miniature map of Washtenaw county, in which much taste and enterprise is exhibited.

This from the Chelsea Echo:

The Ann Arbor Courier has got a brand-new head, with the county map engraved thereon. It makes quite a change in its ap-pearance and looks better. It has entered up-on its twenty-sixth volume. Saline Observer .

The Ann Arbor Courier is 25 years old. It has a new engraved head. The Manchester Enterprise thinks it a

Some one has "put a head on" the Ann Arbor Coerier, and a new one too. It looks better than the old one, and has a map of the county on it. Yes, Ann Arbor is booming. The Wayne County Review is non-committal:

The Ann Arbor Courier came out last week with a brand new head, containing views of its publication office, the new post-office building, the University hall and a township map of Washtenaw county.

The Ypsilantian has observed it: The Ann Arbor COURIER and the Dexter Leader sport new headings—the former high-ity embellished by the engraver's art, the lat-ter a plain "block" letter.

The Coldwater Sun has a few rays of Sun-shine for us:

The Ann Arbor Courser, one of our best exchanges, comes to us this week with an artistic new head, containing cuts of the University, the postoffice, the Chase printing house and a map of Washtenaw county. The Pinckney Dispatch gives us a little

The Ann Arbor Courier comes to us in brand new heading which makes the paper appear very beautiful. Bro. Beal is a hustler from "away back," and not only the people of Ann Arbor, but of all the surrounding country should appreciate such a valuable paper.

It is altogether probable that the famous author of this work never wrote anything more entertaining for the people in general. It is a book that is not only readable but full of life and spice, and one the people will take to very kindly or we are no judge. A friend of ours says : "A rich and entertaining work. It has none of the officious smack about it. The author tells such stories as please him, and in the way that suits him best. He writes as if he feared nobody, and had nobody but himself to please. He is a jolly-looking old man, if the steel engraving does him justice, and he wields a trained pen, sharp as a bayonet and as limber as a willow switch. Such a wealth of criticism, compliment, reflection, quotation, and original estimate of men and women in high life and of parties, institutions and things generally, we have rarely seen brought together in book form. The work will have a great sale, and the veteran jouralist and author will be crowned with a crown of gold and greenbacks in the evening of his busy life." Vol. II. will

This thoroughly practical book will be warmly welcomed by all housekeepers, who, we are confident will find it a valuable aid and guide in the kitchen. She says in her preface that some of the receipts given are original; -many are contributed by friends; others are well known favorites which have stood the test of time; and the rest are similar to to those found in trustworthy cook books, but altered after trial, according to a ste. She explains that her aim has been not merely to give a collection of receipts, but to teach cooking, and also, by arranging epartments for Breakfast, Luncheon Dinner and Tea, to present suggestions to those housekeepers who find themselves taxed to make variety in the different meals. The style of cooking is for ate means, and especial attention is paid to showing how to use in a tempting manner remnants from a former meal The order of mixing and the time until 1873, in which year she came to Ann Arbor, making her home with her daughter. The Judge proposes to assist the Grant Monument Fund by organizing a grand competition on word-building (making the largest number of English words from a given sentence by transposing and using letters to suit the purpose), using for the theme the sentence "Who will be our next President?" and offering Cash prizes to successful competitors, each of who will have to pay Fifty (50) cents on presentation of his competitive paper. The money received will be applied as follows:

Twenty-five cents is at once credited to the Grant Fund.

Grant Fund.

The remaining twenty-five cents, after deducting the legitimate expenses of advertising names with their respective answers, etc., etc., will be placed in a common fund to be equally divided among the the six successful competitors, i.e., the six persons sending in the largest lists of English words (proper nouns included) made from the sentence, 'Who will be our next President?'

The magnitude of the prize will depend on the amount of money received, or in other words on the number of competitors. Communications open until February 15, 1887, 12 o'clock.

Jeff Davis is getting great fame throughout the state. The Eaton Rapids Journal says of him: "Jeff" Davis was tried last Tuesday at Ann Arbor for slandering Miss Thurman, a temperance lecturer of Jackson. He was found guilty and fined $25 or 30 days in jail. He didn't get a chance this time to don his petticoats and balmoral stockings, but About 40 or 50 friends of Mr. and Mrs. then he'll probably be pardoned just the

> The Jackson Daily Citizen of Jan. 25th, in a long account of the recent Knights Templar banquet in that city, pays Frank Hangsterfer, of our city, this compliment: "In the banquet hall elaborate prepar tions were made to entertain the quests. There were nine tables, seating altogether 150 persons. These were in charge of Mr. A. F. Hangsterfer, of Ann Arbor, and a corps of 16 assistants who did their part with most commenda-ble skill and courtesy. It was a rich and lavish feast made, attractive to the senses with elegant display of silver, glass, etc."

The Bazoo, published at Smith Centre, of John Schneider, on South Second Kansas, referring to the establishment of the Smith County National Bank at that place, pays a former Ann Arbor boy this compliment: "C. D. And the Bulletin of the same place has this item: "Messrs. Hendrickson, Chandler, and Ahlborn are counted as among our solid business men, are gentlemen of sterling integrity and will add strength, and new life to the iustitution."

A very curious case came before the probate court a few day's since. A resident of a neighboring city died recently and left a will. This will bequeathed to the widow-who was a second wife-and her child an equal share in the property with four children had by a former wife. But upon searching the records the fact former Sharon boy, and an old neighbor appeared that about one year previous to Justice Frueauff last Friday for larceny erty to his children by his first wife. As all of the children are minors, there is no way to dispose of or touch the property until they become of age, and the wife and her child are thus left penniless. The case was a very sad one too, as works great injustice to an evidently worthy woman.

The temperance meeting at Cropsey's Hall on Sunday was fairly well attended. Rev. Mr. Ryder, Congregational, gave an address. He briefly reviewed the temperance work in this city for the last ten years, and though the cause had not fully met with the success hoped for by its friends, yet a great work had been done which was a source of much encouragement to temperance workers. The address was delivered in the plain, sincere and Christian-like manner, so conspicuous in all Mr. Ryder's public utterances. Mr. Crozier offered a resolution highly commendatory of the excellent character of the late Professor Olney as a Christian gentleman, which was unan-imously adopted by a rising vote. Mr. Crozier said a few words approving the submission of the prohibitory amendment by the legislature, and most sincerely hoped it would pass. Van Ranesslaer Tyler, an old resident of this county died January 22d, at Vermontville in this state, of old age, having reached 92 years 8 months.
