VOLUME XXV II.-NO 29 ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN, WEDNESDAY, JULY 18, 1888. WHOLENUMBER, 1412.

From Tim Inter Ocean. WURKK WILL THE THISH BK1 BY UKOKIE E. POWELL. When we meet to cast the ballots for Nation and for State. In the battle without bloodshed which molds bright freedom's fate. That calls ten million men to act a part for you and me. There's many ask from far and wide, "Where will the Irish be?"

"Where find them, when the 'Olden Club' is spending England's gold To purchase ballots for 'free trade'—where Irishmen's rights are sold? Where Iritlan asks a traffic free to bring our labor's wage. And let her brand all goods, we wear with burly Iritlan's crown?"

Where were they when foul treason, dark, mail freedom's bulwarks shaker. Where were they when secession strove our land to break? Where were they when 'Death traders' feet fell on our banner?

While fresh in living memory is written Ireland's wrong. How England's free trade law here she means her wrongs to lay. How England's free trade law here she means her wrongs to lay.

Can any man with sense of right, who asks Who's real his Ireland suffer, and how Who's real his Ireland suffer, and how Who's real his Ireland suffer, and how UNEXPECTED LEGACY. The Kev. Herbert Kvans was in great distress last perplexity. He was sickening with fever, and ere a week had passed she was tossing restlessly and in pain, for scarlet fever had developed itself in all its intensity. He had lived through those days he never knew, but he preceded with all his joy and brightness came.

What was he to do, he asked himself. In these dingy apartments with a little jill of seven? How was he to find the means to clothe and feed his two? To amuse and instruct her?

His heart stood still at the prospect. Yet, like the brave and God-fearing girl, he never wavered for a moment. He reached her, and with a generous heart and an earnest desire to help the needy in body and spirit, felt this a grievous burden almost too heavy to be borne.

Without the loss of a single moment, Herbert Evans hurried her away home, hoping and praying, oh, so earnestly, that no harm might, have befallen her. "Alas! next day her head ached, and she was sickening with fever, and ere a week had passed she was tossing restlessly and in pain, for scarlet fever had developed itself in all its intensity.

"Can she sleep through it?" he asked the doctor with trembling lips, "as he saw her lying almost lifeless, now that the fever had run its course." "We must hope and pray," said the doctor, kindly but solemnly.

"My dear child!" he exclaimed, agitated. "Think one moment—you will see that it is impossible for me to do so. I am a clergyman now, and I would look upon it as a disgrace to be seen in such a room as I used to do in those days. Besides, you are getting too old for such a game," he added, hoping that she might be considered above such childish sport.

"Oh, no!" she cried. "Besides, it will be such fun!" and she clasped her hands in prayer. "See how earnestly you will make a splendid husband. Now you crawl three times round the room, and then I will be with you."

"Oh, Cousin Herbert, will you refuse little Ivy the first thing she asks for? Oh, you are unkind!" and the blue eyes flashed, and she crawled on her hands and knees, and she crawled on her hands and knees, and she crawled on her hands and knees.

True, there were times when he felt discontented at her waywardness. She had asked him, as a great favor, always to give her a look before he began his Saturday evening lecture, and he had promised to do so. Indeed, his eyes naturally wandered down from the platform to where she sat—just below—ere he proceeded with his address. One evening, however, his mind being full of thought and care, he forgot to do so.

A minute or two after, he became conscious and promptly returned to the platform, and looking down, he met Ivy's wondrous eyes and knitted brows, whilst with her parasol she had occasioned the unbecomingly noisy, and somewhat amusing amusement amongst some of the audience.

Kept her afterwards for thus disturbing him, he was met by the sweetest smile, and a gentle, confiding voice said, "Ah, but you did look; and Cousin Herbert, I hope you will never forget your promise again."

"Well, dear, you know the other day, when Harriet and Amy Seaton were here, we wanted a little amusement, and I proposed that we should have a mad tea party, like they had in 'Alice in Wonderland.' Amy was the mad hatter, and I lent her my high hat, and when we put a card, 'In this style, 10 of 8.' Harriet was my child, and she was the mad hatter, and I wrote on a slip of paper, 'Mad as a March hare.' I pinned it just under the collar of your best coat—and I quite forgot to take it off. Well, as I looked at you going up the room, I could see this; and, oh, if you knew how I pinched my fingers, trying to keep from laughing, you could love your little cousin so much."

"But, Ivy," he exclaimed, in dire dismay, "what must the people have thought?" "They couldn't read the writing; Cousin Herbert—it was so badly written; but old Mrs. Jones (who is very short-sighted, you know) said to me, 'L. i. r. miss! person's got a new coat last, and he's forgotten to take off the price-ticket!'"

"And my hat, oh, the groaned." "Did you forget to take the card out of that too? I noticed one or two people looked at me in rather a strange manner."

"I believe I did. Oh, I am so sorry! But," brightening again, "you know how absent-minded you are, and will be sure to think it was some person's card where you wanted to call."

How happy his home was now, how merry Ivy's laughter, how seldom those grave, melancholy visions of past days ever occupied his mind!

One evening when he returned, he found to his surprise that the house was empty. Neither Ivy nor Sarah was to be heard of.

At last, by dint of persevering inquiries, he learned that they had been seen on their way to Smith's, whose youngest child he knew but too well had been seized with the scarlet fever. Full of alarm, he hurried on, hoping to overtake them, but as he passed the cottage window he saw Ivy sitting by the bedside of the little boy, talking softly to him, and feeding him with grapes, which the child was eating with feverish satisfaction. Hastening in, he met Sarah in the passage.

"Sarah!" he cried indignantly, "how could you allow her to come here?" "You may well say that, sir," said Sarah, wringing her hands, "but she said that she would not have kept her at home by me. She heard the postman say to me that Mrs. Smith had gone out to fetch Dick some medicine, and that she had been crying for something to eat. She said, 'Ivy darling,' 'how could you come here?'"

"Because—because," she said, hesitatingly, "I thought the child might become in reality a starving angel, and though I know I can't be that, yet when I heard little Dick was in the hospital, I thought I would do something to help him. I saw some of the neighbors' children, and I thought I would do something to help him. I saw some of the neighbors' children, and I thought I would do something to help him."

"Without the loss of a single moment, Herbert Evans hurried her away home, hoping and praying, oh, so earnestly, that no harm might, have befallen her. "Alas! next day her head ached, and she was sickening with fever, and ere a week had passed she was tossing restlessly and in pain, for scarlet fever had developed itself in all its intensity.

new woolen dresses and strong boots, and you can have your tea for the old men every week as you want." And so she continued with quite a long catalogue of charming possibilities, concluding with "And, Cousin Herbert, you can have a new coat at last. Only," she added laughing, "don't leave the ticket on, or old Mrs. Jones will tell the whole parish about it."

"And you, little Herbert—what shall I do with you?" he asked smiling. "Teach me to be humble, and grateful, and putting her arms lovingly round his neck, "and perhaps I may one day be like you—always think of others first and myself last."

Literary Notes. The Republican party is to be congratulated on the biography of Gen. Harrison, their candidate for President, will be written by Gen. Lew Wallace, the author of Ben Hur. Gen. Wallace will have the assistance of Gen. Harrison, who will give his views on matters of national interest. The book will be a finished literary product and will unquestionably be the best campaign book published, and have an immense sale.

Agents who want to make some money and do a good work for the republican party can apply to the well known publishers, S. S. CRANTON & Co., of Hartford, Ct., who have the work to sell by subscription.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Every Michigan member who was present refused to vote in favor of reducing the tariff on sugar from 01 per cent...

There are more people interested in the pledge of the republican party for one cent postage than our democratic brethren are willing to admit.

Matilda Fletcher, the noted lady lecturer has given up all her appointments...

Some of our democratic friends are accusing the republicans of having a free whisky plank in their platform.

Minister Lotthrop has resigned the Russian mission, the rigors of the climate being more than he cares to contend with...

The people wanted a change, and Mr. Cleveland was elected upon that issue.

The fact that Mr. Cleveland allowed "circumstances" to prevent his attending the Gettysburg anniversary is quite significant...

P. S. Dodge of the Stanton Clipper, has invented a new press, and by the prof cut to Mr. C. B. Ovison of this office...

A great deal is said by our friends, the enemy, about the Chinese and their importation here.

Such papers as the Detroit Free Press protect against a "personal campaign" this fall.

Michigan farmers are asked by the democrats to vote for free wool!

The democratic national committee has been given $4,000,000 by a few individuals for campaign purposes.

The Pioneer Press, of St. Paul, will tower over all its competitors when it gets into its new granite building.

Rev. Washington Gardner, the commander of the O. A. H. of the state, recently refused the degree of D. D. from the Grant Memorial University.

The demand for Protection literature is very great from all sections of the country.

Nabob Mackey, who has come out for Cleveland, earns his money in America and spends it in Paris.

Levi P. Morton has a villa at Newport, a park on the Hamptons, a yacht, a motor car, and an office on Wall street.

The difference in the two men is this: Morton made his wealth by his own hands and head, commencing a poor boy.

Alpena has been devastated by a terrible fire within the past week, fully one-third of the city being swept away.

John Helfron, who once ran for congress on the greenback ticket in Detroit, is in St. Johns this week.

When the democratic state convention meets in Detroit Thursday to-morrow, there will be but one candidate for the governorship.

FROM THE PEOPLE.

In Opinion in Reference to the Midical School.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., July 15, 88. EDITOR CORKER TO THE WOMEN'S mind, the solution of the present problem in regard to the Medical Department of our University is a simple one.

There are several of our democratic friends who insist upon repeating the falsehood, which has grown out of the general distribution of the "One a Day" postal card.

The Board of Regents of the University at its last meeting called a halt in the appointment of MM resident professors which is much to be commended.

In the New York Press of a recent date there was a notice of the shutting down of innumerable mills and factories in the manufacture of woollen goods, carpets, machinery, etc.

The Detroit Evening News flings all the trusts, monopolies and monopolies upon the republican party with as much ease as Sampson pulled down the columns that crushed his persecutors.

The Register does not believe that the tariff keeps wages up, there is no such thing in theory or in fact.

The man who wrote that sentence must have received his practical education out of the Michigan Club text-book.

The enemy begin to show the whites of their eyes. They will soon be on the run.

The members of Bethlehem German church enjoyed a picnic at Relief Park, last Wednesday, and a good time is reported.

Company A marched gaily away with band in front and banners flying, about 50 strong last evening.

It is a masterpiece of art.

IT is fitting that the pioneer of low-priced journalism in the West should lead in placing the American newspaper of to-day upon the basis of the lowest unit of American coinage. Twelve years ago that unit was the nickel in Chicago and throughout the Northwest. The founding of THE DAILY NEWS at a lower price was regarded by the journalistic profession as inviting certain failure.

THE DAILY NEWS has prospered beyond the most sanguine hopes of its founders. For this it has more than once made its grateful acknowledgments to an appreciative public. It believes, however, that the time has now come when, acting entirely within the limits of a wise commercial progression, it can give its thanks more practical expression. It proposes henceforth to "divide" as to its friends—and to multiply as to its circulation.

And anticipating the questionings of the doubtful let it be briefly said that the thing can be done. THE DAILY NEWS—all that it has been in the past, and well as all that is rightly expected of it in the future as a leader in progressive American journalism—can be produced and sold for one cent a day, and this by reason of those common principles of trade which make possible lower prices just in proportion as the aggregate volume of sales increases.

THE DAILY NEWS now sells over a million papers a week, as shown by its published sworn statements of circulation, and it can afford to sell at a smaller profit per paper than other Chicago dailies, no one of which has as much as one-third the average daily circulation.
