ScalySkin Diseases

Psoriasis 5 years, covering face, head, and entire body with white scabs. Skin red, itchy, and bleeding. Hair all gone. Spent hundreds of bollars. Pronounced Incurable. Cured by Cutleura Hemedies.

My disease (psoriasis) first broke out on my left cheek, sprending across my nose, and almost covering my face. It ran into my eyes, and the physician was afraid I would lose my eyesight altog-ther. It spread all over my head, and my hair all iell out, until I was entirely bald-headed; it then broke out on my arms and shoulders, until my arms were just one sore. It covered my entire body, my face, head, and shoulders being the worst. The white scabs fell constantly from my head, shoulders, and arms; the skin would thicken and be red and very tichy, and would crack and bleed if scratched. After spending many hundreds of dollars, I was pronounced incurable. I heard of the Cuticura Remedies, and after using two bottles Cuticura Remedies, and after using two bottles Cuticura Remedies, and after using two bottles Cuticura Remedies, and after I had taken four bottles, I was almost cured; and when I had used six bottles of Cuticura, and one cake of Cuticura and one cake of Cuticura and one cake of Cuticura. Soar, I was cured of the dreadful disease from which I had suffered for five years. I thought the disease would leave a very deep scar, but the Cuticura Remedies with a pen what I suffered before using the Cuticura Remedies. They saved my life, and I feel it my duty to recommend them. My hair is restored as good as ever, and so is my eyesight. I know of others who have received great benefit from their use.

L. J. GAGE. Last summer, New York was giving serious attention to the project of celebrat-ing the quadri-centennial of the Discovy of America by Columbus, by holding World's fair in 1892. At the same time thicago was active in the same direction, comparatively little was the attention ich the other cities paid to her efforts, since it was an almost certain fact with most, that New York owing to its more favorable position, and its greater resour-ces, would carry the field. Great was therefore the surprise when it became nown that on February 24th 1890, the House of Representatives voted the essential national endorsement to the city the lake. ### WAGES TOO HIGH!

The following paragraph is taken from an article written by M. S. Benedict, the great free trade advocate, and published in the Nebraska Farmer of May 27th. Every laborer should read it:

"Under normal conditions of supply and demand in labor, trade, etc., $8 per month should permit a family to live in comfort in this land of plenty. The bountiful gifts of soil, forest, mines and fruits in these United States should make it the cheapest place to raise a family or provide for a camfortable living outside the warm regions of the earth. The reason this is not the present condition is explained in two words. High wages can't perform it just-ly, for we think wages are too high. Can any family necessity be provided with wages three times too high? Are Americans getting the benefit of high

THE VILEST SACRILEGE.

GETTYSBURG, PA., May 31.—The morning of Decoration day dawned clear and beautiful. Senator Ingalls delivered the oration of the day. He said in part:

Twenty-five years since the hosts were marshaled for the last review. They assembled within the shadow of the dome of the capitol they had saved. The splendor of the vernal sun illuminated the scene and shimmered on the flag. The hosts of Grant, Sherman, Logan and Hancock, and above them flashed and gleamed the redeemed glory of the flag. It was their flag, Had it not been for their sacrifices and that of their sleeping comrades this flag would have been a dishonored rag.

I have thought what would have been our emotions had the rebellion been successful. Suppose the dome of the capitol stooped to its base; supposed Robert Toombs fulfilled his insolent menace to count his slaves within the shadew of Bunker Hill Monument; suppose the stars and stripes had gone down in defeat before the stars and bars, what would have been our emotions? I confess for myself to have never ceased to implore that all men might be free, to hope that some time by some desperate battle the Union might have been restored. I should have kept in some secret repository some emblem of the stars and stripes, which I would have kept in some secret repository some emblem of the stars and stripes, which I would have taught my children to love and cherish. Now in view of the occurences of the last two days in the extinct capital of the extinct Confederacy, I which to say a few words. I have no desire on this sacred occasion to revert to any subject that its monosistent with the soleracy. I wish to say a few words. I have no desire on this sacred occasion to revert to any subject that its monosistent with the soleracy which out dead do the miness the ideas of which out dead do the miness the ideas of which out dead do the miness the ideas of which out dead do the miness the ideas of which out dead do the miness the ideas for which out dead do the miness the ideas for which out dead do the morning of patriotism in this hemisphere. In the circuit court last Thursday there was a decision rendered by Judge Kinne that was of more than ordinary interest to the Ann Arbor public especially. In the case of Joseph Lamoreaux vs. The Regents of the U. of M., which case was originally brought against Dr. J. C. Wood of the homeopathic department, growing out of alleged neglect by the nurse of a patient, Mrs. Lamoreaux, at the homeopathic hospital. After a surgical opera-tion bottles were filled with hot water and placed about the patient, some of which were so hot that they burned the flosh of the patient. The suit against Dr. Wood was not prosecuted and allowed to drop. Then the woman's husband commenced suit in this circuit against the Regents. The defendants demurred, alleging that the hospital was a charitable institution and as such not liable, also that being the

REVIEW OF EIGHT MONTHS OF HARMONIOUS WORK.

Plenty of Material, and no Deaths Resulting from Operations or Neglect.

As the Courier advocated one year or so go, with the strongest arguments it was apable of bringing to bear, a change in he medical faculty, it seems quite appropriate that now, as the college is near- attendance upon the National Medical ng another commencement, that the and Surgical convention of which he was work of the past year, as far as the Uni- vice-president, and before which he read versity hospital is concerned, should be a paper of much interest. Clarke, who has the entire supervision and direction of the hospitals, and after making known our desires, were most graciously shown over the entire establishment, from cellar to garret, through kitchen and dining room, through long corridors winding around to wards where lay sick women and children, to other wards where men lay suffering from different afflictions, through operating rooms, ampitheatre, and dispensing rooms, in fact everywhere about the building, and wherever we went there was order and cleanliness. There seemed could be kept so neat and attractive

DR. C. B. NANCREDE, SUCCESSOR TO DR

MACLEAN. There were 53 patients in the regular ospital at the time of our visit. Of these 28 were male and 25 female. The number is still greater than that at times. There are often 100 to 125 including the help, who sit down to their meals in the dining room. Last year it was difficult to find table room, this year there has those performed in his department the ons: Mrs. Prot. Perry, Mrs. Prof. Green, been no difficulty in that direction. The reason for this is explained in the fact that the number of what is known as "tray patients," those who have been operated upon and are not in condition to come to the table, have largely increased, having averaged 25 daily for the year, there being frequently as high as 36 of them at one time. This fact is pointed to with pride, for it shows that there is more work being done than usual. Patients are operated upon, are given the best of attention and care and Dr. B B. Rowe, the resident physician, Let this fact be noted: There has not been a death at the hospital this year of a patient under treatment.

There have been two deaths, however, one being Mrs. Freyburg, of Big Rapids, who came to nurse and care for her little son, (who by the way is still in the hospital under treatment for hip disease), who was taken with la grippe and had to patients not only prompt attention to not sufficient strength to recover from the attack. The other death was that of Mr. Randall, of Coldwater, who came to the hospital suffering from chronic kidney trouble with the disease too far advanced for medical aid, and being too weak to return home, he remained here until death relieved him of his suffering.

It is true that not every person presenting himself for treatment has been taken in and treated. When people come to the hospital for treatment, they are examined by the proper member of the faculty, and frankly told whether or not the surgeon's knife or medical science can be of benefit to them. Those for whom there is a particle of hope are given the benefit of that hope.

In startling contrast to this year's record stands out that of 1887-8, when there were twenty-six deaths at this hospital. An attempt to find the causes was a total failure, for the records are so incom plete that no one can tell anything about them only that there were 993 patients registered. This much is known that there were no cases of obstetrics that

During the year 1888-9 there were 979 patients, of whom 659 were taken care of in the hospital. There were six deaths to any considerable extent. But strange that year, two resulting from ovariotomy, two from railroad accidents, one spinal meningitis, and one diabetes. There were but three operations for ovariotomy, two dying. During the year there were ten cases of obstetrics.

For this year, 1889-90, up to June 10th, there have been 958 patients registered, and of these 694 have been treated in the hospital. There have been five operations for ovariotomy, every one of which went away well. There were at one time eight patients in bed in the hospital from removal of cataract, and Dr. Carrow removed five cataracts at one clinic. Last year there were during the entire year 47 cases of cataract, for the past eight months there have been 63 cases. A good comparison.

There have been ten cases of confinement at the hospital, and every senior medical student has been present at and witnessed at least one case of this kind. These cases have been secured against a strong influence exerted from certain quarters to keep them away from the Only three from Ypsilanti have paid, and hospital. This adverse influence was so great at the beginning of the year that on January 28th the hospital register showed that there had been 101 less patients under treatment than at a corresbeen 89 more patients since Jan. 28th to date than for the corresponding perloc last year. This is gratifying, and shows that confidence in the medical department is not only restored, but that the hercu lean efforts being put forth in certain quarters to destroy, not only the Univer sity hospital, but the entire medical department, is petering out very rapidly. So much for what has been accom olished, now for the PROFESSORS' RECORDS.

Dr. Nancrede, the professor of surgery has missed but two regular clinics, and then he was absent in Washington, in held five extra clinics. Being a resident With that end in view a Courier repre- of the city he has given his personal at largely to the success of the year.

DR. CARROW.

Dr. Fleming Carrow, "professor of ophthalmic and aural surgery and clinical ophthalmology," as the calendar gives his title, has not missed a clinic during the year. He has treated 400 patients, of which 63 have been operated upon for cataract. There are 57 different names given in the list of diseases treated by him, 45 being eye diseases, 6 of the ear, and 6 of the mouth, throat and nose. Of those treated 228 were male and 172 female. The supply of clinical material has been all that could be used. Instead of deterioating this department has forged ahead in every way. The doctor has probably had fewer private patients than his predecessor, but the students have reaped the benefit.

Dr. Martin was unfortunate enough to secure a lively attack of la grippe for himself the past winter, and during that time missed one or two clinics, which he has more than replaced by extra clinics and labor. It is but just to Dr. Martin to say that his faithful and studious work has had its reward, for there never has been more successful operations than present year, and what is quite important is the fict that he is a general favorite with the students.

The nervous clinic under Dr. Herdman has been very successful and promptly attended to, not a clinic being missed by him during the entire year so far. Dr. Lyster, not being a resident of the city, does not come in contact with patients as much as the other physicians. One of the most faithful and conscientious workers in and about the hospital is are discharged sooner than they have who has spared no pains to make the Bourland and others. work of the ellnical department a success, and is deserving of much commendation. The services of Dr. Clarke, which were secured two years ago to take general supervision and charge of the hospitals, have proven how wise this measure was. Out of chaos and confusion has come method and order. Rules have been laid down and are enforced, that secure their needs but more of the great requisite for a sick bed than anything else: rest and quiet. Dr. Clarke has so handled the finances of the hospitals that they have cost the state less by about $3,000 during the past two years than ever before, has provided better help and more of it than was formerly supplied, and adopted a systematic plan for the guidance of affairs. Now that after two year's trial the Regents have found a man that has made a perfect success of managing the hospitals, would not the board be justified in making Dr. Clarke's appointment perma-

Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculia combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." Mrs. ELLA A. society from which it is the means of excluding him, and Dowden, the great Shakespearean commentator, remarks that he "with his distorted and withered body, his arm shrunk like a blasted sapling,' is yet a sublime figure by virtue of his energy of will and tremendous power of intellect." He has a passionate scorn of men because they are weaker and more obtuse than he, the deformed outcast of nature. He practices hypocricy not merely for the sake of success, but his hypocricy is a cynical jest, or a gross insult to humanity."

Shakespeare has often been accused of making Richard's deformity a libel upon the historical Richard merely to curry favor with the court of Elizabeth. Many commentators, Dowden among the rest, have completely refuted this slander. The latter maintains and clearly shows that history supplied Shakespeare with his Richard. "The poet," Dowden says, "has been accused of darkening the colors and exaggerating the deformity of the character found in Moore and Holinshed. The fact is precisely the contrary. The mystic Richard of the historians (and there must have been some appalling fact to originate such a myth) is made somewhat less grim and bloody by the dramatist." In reproducing this, the most brilliant theatrical villain of any stage, Mr. Keene, has adhered as faithfully as possible to the Shakespearean ideal, aided largely by the opinions of the great commentators.

A Haunted House.

This body of ours has been likened to a tenement. It often has a haunted apartment—the stomach. Scared by the eldrich sprite, dyspepsia, digestion files and refuses to return. What can break the spell, what can raise the ban laid upon the unhappy organs? We answer unhesitatingly, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and we are warranted in the response by the recorded testimony of myrlads, covering a period of over a third of a century. A course of the Bitters, begun in any stage of the affliction, and persistently followed, will terminate in cure positive, not partial. The Bitters resiores tone to the epigastric nerve, renewes and purifies the juices exuding from the cellular tissue that act upon the food digestively, expels bile from the stomach and the blood, and promotes a regular habit of body. Malaria, kidney complaint, nervousness, rheumatism and neuralgia give way to this medicine.

the Conditions of the People. In a paper read before the Buffalo Economic association, Dr. Charles S. Butler said:

Of all the questions affecting the welfare of our people there is none of greater im-portance than a thorough system of scientifically constructed highways over which they may pass to and fro in their commercial and social relations with one another. Hitherto it has received but little attention. True there have been periods of awakening to the importance of the subject, and in 1869 interest suffi-cient was aroused in New England to begin a system of improved highway

But on the whole little or no progress has been made, and we are today constructing and maintaining our roads uner the system introduced into this counfrom England in the early days of republic, consisting of elective township and district road officers and labor tax-a remnant of the times of feudal vassalage, when one of the tenures by which land was held was the obligation to make the road passable for the troops of the lord of the manor.

To the farmer the market means the nearest railway station, and when we reflect that in the state of New York there are only 7,500 miles of railway, against 100,000 or more miles of roadway, we shall see what a limited number, after all, are reached by the former and the vast multitude that are of necessity required to use the latter.

Do these facts indicate that railways have superseded the necessity for good roads?

Between 1760 and 1773 England enacted no less than 452 laws for the improvement of her highways. But out of this great mass of legislation came little relief, and it was not until an act was struction and repair of the roads under control of the state, that anything like beneficent and permanent results followed, and which, before the close of the century, enabled England to so perfect her highways that commerce was no longer repressed by difficulty of transport, and a vast expansion of traffic was the immediate result.

England is today crossed and recrossed by 50,000 or more miles of Macadam roadway, and it is easy of demonstration that nothing—except perhaps the repeal of her corn laws—has added so much to the intellectual and material prosperity of her citizens during the past century a her enlightened policy of highway con struction and repair.

Never in the history of the United States were internal commerce and communication so effectually blocked, except by railways, as during the past winter. Much of the time from November until May the roads were in an impassable conditon. Grain and produce in the hands of the farmers in April should have been marketed long before. The country merchant, requiring to replenish his stock in order to maintain his trade was compelled to pay two or three profits to get the goods from the railway station to his store, because of the impassable condition of the highways.

With good roads all this would be changed and one of the strongest influences in the fluctuations of the market eliminated. Prices would not be depressed on account of a necessity for reaching the market at a particular time, nor advanced because of the inaand 200 were made prisoners by the | bility of the farmer to transport his products over the public highways, but steady, uniform prices prevail, as the supply would be regulated by the de

> In looking through the assessors' report from 1877 to 1888 one is startled by the steadily decreasing value of farm property within New York state, while the report for 1889 says: "There contin ues to be a marked depreciation in th value of farm land in nearly every coun provement not good. Many assert that after paying expenses they cannot realize from their farms sufficient to pay the interest on mortgages, and consequently thousands of farmers are falling into the hands of the mortgagers annually."

Is it possible that the citizens of the state can longer look upon this condition of the farmers with complacency? Is there no remedy for this steadily de creasing value of the farm lands of the

I am credibly informed that the gar-den counties about Philadelphia have suffered a like depression in the value of agricultural property, except where val-ues have been held up by local improvement; the local improvement here referred to being the recently constructed turnpike along which lands have not only maintained their value but have actually enhanced. Governor De Witt Clinton, one of the nost progressive and far seeing of all our statesmen—the projector of the Erie canal, and for which he was actually put on trial for impeachment—said, "Every judicious improvement in the establish ment of roads and bridges increases the value of land, enhances the price of commodities and augments the public wealth," while a committee of the house of commons, in the early part of the present century, in a report urging the advantages of good roads, used the following language: "By the improvement of the highways every branch of our agricultural, commercial and manufacturing industries would be materially benefited. Every article brought to market would be diminished in price, and the number of horses would be so much reduced that by this and other retrenchments the expense of not less than £5,000,000 sterling would be annually saved to the public The expense of repairing roads, the wear and tear upon horses and carriages would be essentially diminished, and thousands of acres, the products of which horses, would be devoted to the production of food for men. In short, the public and private advantages which would result from effecting that great objectimprovement of highways—are incalculable."

Weak Women.

The more sensitive nature of the female sex renders women much more suscepti says: "I feel it my duty to tell what wonders Dr. King's New Discovery has done for me. My Lungs were badly diseased, and my parishioners thought I could live only a few weeks. I took five bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery and am sound and well, gaining 26 lbs. in weight."

These are prepared with a view to state the facts and arguments for Protection, whether in the interest of farmers, laborers, merchants or professional men. Each issue of the series appeals to those engaged in separate industries, and presents indisputable facts—comparisons of wages, cost of living, and other arguments showing the benefits of Protection.

Any single one will be sent on receipt of 2 cents in stamps except "Wages, Living and Tariff," which will be sent for 4 cents.

The whole list will be sent for 30 cents or any twelve for 20 cents, or any five for 10 cents, postage paid. Order by number.
