THE ART LOAN.

Some of Its Wonderful Attractions.

Preparations for the opening of the art loan are going rapidly forward. Workmen are putting the building in order, and the work of decorating the walls and preparing for the arrival of the various choice collections is going on under the supervision of the committees. Each committee is doing all that can be done to make the loan a fine art exhibition in the best sense of the word. At the right of the entrance is the

FLORAL ROOM.
Under the supervision of Mr. Randall. This room is being draped in canopy form with soft draperies of apple green, and with its palms, its ferns, its potted plants, and its wealth of lovely cut flowers it will be a veritable bower of beauty. This charming retreat will be presided over by young ladies in flower costumes. Opening out of the floral room is

THE GERMAN ROOM.
This room will be draped in colors, and will contain much antique German furniture, many fine German carvings, a collection of ancient German spinning wheels, and many other articles of interest distinctively German. Our German friends and students cannot fail to pass a delightful hour here. Communicating with the German room is the

COLONIAL ROOM.
In this room the furniture, nearly two hundred years old, will be arranged to represent two rooms of "ye good old colony times." Our furniture dealing friends will be interested in the very ancient bedstead, the magnificent chest of drawers and the curiously wrought writing desk, and all will be especially interested in the bit of china that came over on the Mayflower.

At the rear of the building are the two rooms adjoining each other and communicating with the colonial room. These rooms constitute the much talked of

ART GALLERY.
The walls are being decorated with hangings of chocolate-brown, the windows darkened, and light furnished by electricity. A large and choice collection of pictures will be placed here. This collection will comprise both oil and water color pictures, and will represent the best work of the best masters as well as many thousands of dollars of money value. One of the many other desirable features of the art loan is the

EVENING ENTERTAINMENTS, which have been arranged by a competent committee. Next Saturday evening, the evening of the opening day, a concert will be given under the direction of Prof. Hahn, of the Detroit Conservatory of Music. A treat may be expected.

The loan will open May 16th and continue until the 30th, and a delightful entertainment has been provided for each of the intervening evenings. Prof. Schrenser and Prof. Ebler of the Detroit Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, Prof. Pease of Ypsilanti, Prof. Trueblood, U. of M., and others will assist in these entertainments. Admission 25 cents.

Winchell Memorial Service.

On Sunday evening, at the M. E. church, there was held a very impressive and interesting memorial service, for the late Alexander Winchell, L. L. D.

After the singing of a hymn by the choir; reading of scripture, and prayer by Rev. Dr. Rust, several papers, taking up the life work of Dr. Winchell were read. Prof. H. S. Carhart gave a review of the "Life and Character" of the deceased, reciting the principal events in his career, and telling of the labors that made him famous.

The life of Dr. Winchell as a "Teacher" was next spoken of by J. E. Beal, who referred in feeling terms to the deceased, and his many excellent qualities of mind and heart.

The character of the professor as a "Citizen" was ably presented by Dr. W. F. Breakey, who told of his labor as president of the board of trustees of the M. E. church, and of other relations in the walks of every day life, how he was always clear, consistent, earnest in everything he undertook.

Prof. E. L. Walter spoke of the "Culture" of Dr. Winchell, and presented perhaps as fine a tribute to his memory as was given during the evening. The paper of Prof. M. W. Harrington was upon the "Religious Aspect" of the life of the deceased, in which no flaw appeared to mar the general harmony of his grand life.

UNIVERSITY.

Athletic events are now shaping themselves for the Spring Field Day.

The oratorical association is devising ways to procure means to pay its prizes. If you owe the gynasium fund a subscription you will confer a favor upon the authorities by paying the same.

On Thursday evening Dr. Pick will deliver two introductory lectures upon Memory, under the auspices of the Philosophical Society.

It was quite noticeable that the churches were not as well filled as usual Sunday. Perhaps the late ride home from Detroit Saturday night had its influence thereon.

The $4,500 appropriated by the Regents for fitting up the Athletic grounds, will make one of the finest athletic fields in the country. Something the U. of M. may feel proud of.

A fine picture of the late Dr. Winchell has been placed in Room 24 by the Winchell chapter of the Agassiz society of Ann Arbor, composed of children who have tastes for natural science.

McMillan hall will be dedicated on Saturday, May 30. As the meeting of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church closes in Detroit on that day, it is expected that many delegates will attend these services.

At the annual election of Hobart Guild last Friday evening, the following officers were chosen: vice president, Miss Catharine Camp; recording secretary, E. C. Nicols; corresponding secretary, Alonzo Andrews; treasurer, Ross Whitman. The rector of St. Andrew's church is permanent president of the guild.

On Friday evening the Glee and Banjo clubs give their home concert in University hall. The brilliant success of the clubs in the west presages one of the finest entertainments of the kind ever given here. But then, it is unnecessary to speak of that, home pride in the boys will give them a full house anyway.

It took two trains of twenty cars each and each car was filled full, to convey the students and their friends desirous of attending, to Detroit last Saturday to witness the great game between the U. of M. and the Cornell nines. A large number of ladies attended also, and the day was made a memorable holiday. There were upwards of 1,500 persons on the two trains, and the air was made melodious along the line by college songs and college yells. It was a great day for the U. of M.

It has cost Senator McMillan over $20,000 to build and complete the hall that bears his name, to be used by and for the Tappan Guild of the Presbyterian church. In the basement of the hall there will be a nicely equipped gymnasium. On the first floor are pleasant parlors and reception rooms, and above a pleasant hall. Taking these together with the Sackett house, adjoining which is also a present to the Guild, the Presbyterian students and young folks will be handsomely provided for.

The score of the great Cornell game at Detroit Saturday p. m., is as follows:

Cornell defeated Oberlin at Oberlin, Ohio, Friday, by a score of 6 to 2.

On Friday last the Medics were defeated by the Sophomore lites at foot ball, by a score of 14 to 0.

The reserved seats for the Glee and Banjo clubs are now to be obtained at Sheehan's, on State st.

The 'Varsity will play the Northwestern's on the Fair Grounds, next Saturday, May 16, at 2 1/2 o'clock p. m.

Dr. Gibbs delivered an address at the meeting of the State medical society, at Saginaw, last Monday, having "Phthisis" for a subject.

Some of the enthusiastic athletes propose to put a boat crew on the raging Huron and shortly thereafter challenge the famous Harvard and Yale crews.

A bright young student, with a Jay Gould brain, bet $20 to $40 on the U. of M., and then made a similar bet on Cornell. He believes in a sure thing.

The Freshmen lites defeated the regular university team Friday by a score of 6 to 4, and the Varsity's defeated Cornell! Why shouldn't the Freshmen crew?

Dr. Vaughan was elected to the chairmanship of the section on practice of medicine and physiology at the American Medical congress in Washington last week.

Harvard University is advertising its courses in the Detroit papers. That is fighting for students on what ought to be barren ground. The U. of M. ought to fill the bill for all Michigan boys.

The May number of the Inlander is issued to-day, and promises some nice reading for its subscribers. The publication is proving a literary success, reflecting much credit upon its board of editors.

The national convention of the Delta Gamma Sorority is to be held with the Xi Chapter of the U. of M., in this city the coming week. Some 80 delegates will be in attendance and be entertained by the wives of the members of the faculty.

Secretary Wade has one gang of men excavating for the new stone walk upon the north side of the campus, and another gang are drawing in ashes from the boiler houses. The promenade on the west side of the campus is now one of the finest in the state.

The German room of the Art Loan exhibition will be one of the most interesting of the entire number. Miss Mack, who has it in charge, assisted by other ladies, is untiring in her efforts, and is meeting with unexpected success in securing art treasures, curiosities and relics.

The oriental room at the Art Loan will be hung with draperies taken from the Chinese collection in the university museum which have never been displayed on account of lack of room. Aside from these will be many other articles of the collection which have never been displayed.

Setting is not a thing to be commended, and it is to be regretted that it should have entered into the recent Cornell U. of M. game, but when a dispatch was sent broadcast over the country that $2,000 had been sent to this city and Detroit to wager on the success of Cornell's nine, it is quite consoling, under the circumstances, that the faith in our own team was so great that none of the $2,000 ever went back to Ithaca.

AN INTERESTING TABLE.
The following table, compiled by Prof. DePont, shows a gratifying advance in the literary department of the university in each of the points mentioned:

Look out for the Key!

The big dry goods firm of John J. Tuomey, of Jackson, formerly known as Tuomey Bros., was closed by creditors Monday. The liabilities are upwards of $50,000. The members of the firm are former Washtenaw county boys and well known here.

Can the Key be found?
Mamma (to her little boy). "Now Bennie if you'll be good and go to sleep mamma 'll give you one of Dr. Ayer's nice sugar-coated cathartic Pills, next time you need medicine." Bennie, smiling sweetly, dropped off to sleep at once.

CHAPTER II.

She watched him for a few seconds as though it had suddenly become known to her that he had gone mad. Then, obeying a little gesture that he made, she followed him and went with him into the dusty, belittered room where he had squandered, as it seemed to her, so many half-idle hours. Maynard closed the window, for too strong a breeze blew into the chamber. As he did so he watched a sunset that was simply one luminous orange haze, against which rose clusters of those red chimney-pots which invest with charm the forlornest London purlieus. Then he suddenly turned, and saw that his wife had seated herself. This seemed a concession, and he at once paid heed to it by dropping into a seat opposite her. She did not look conciliatory; she did not even look indulgent. But he strove not to care how she either looked or felt, and flung one hand with intimate abandonment toward the chaos of scientific utensils that filled the room.

"You see all these, Georgina? Well, I've gathered more than you guess from my long association with them. I need not tell you how strong was my passion for science when I first came over sea to Cambridge. At Columbia College in New York I had convinced myself that I could excel as a chemist, a physicist, a man of eager search into the actual."

"Oh, you need not tell me this, Egbert. I know it well enough. Why should I not?"

"But you thought it all waste of time after you had—mean, after we were married. . . . Well, pursuing these studies, I became specially fond of the wonderful and enticing ways of electricity. It happened, about four years ago, that I employed this great and mystic force during a series of essays in the line of chemical analysis. One day I drew back frightened from the result of a certain experiment."

"Frightened?" repeated Georgina. She was clearly interested.

Instantly Maynard felt himself thrilled by a very enthusiasm of narration. He again began to speak with great nimbleness of tongue, but with sorry disregard of his auditor. Presently Georgina stopped him, a ring of fatigue in her tones.

"I don't understand your technical terms, Egbert. They confuse me. But am I right in deducing from what you've already said that you found a certain new kind of electricity never even conceived of before?"

He nodded eagerly. "Yes—yes; that's just it. I'll be simpler; I should have been simpler when I first spoke. Of course you have seen toward what my preamble tended; you're too intelligent not to have seen. One single eternal principle of life spreads through the whole universe. That principle, that essence, no mortal has ever yet attained. To attain it, as I soon shall do, would in many cases have been defiance of death. For such an elixir—"

"YOU SEE ALL THESE, GEORGINA?"

"Elixir?" his wife broke in, with a faint, jeering laugh. "That has a very familiar sound, and not at all a credible one."

He bowed, with curt, swift acquiescence. "Oh, yes. No doubt I used the wrong word. It has a Cagliostro-like echo, I admit. But I don't mean that sort of thing at all, Georgina. I have accomplished, in a partial way, the liquefaction of electricity. It is a fluid, as we scientists have always more or less supposed. But none of us have thus far been able to find out anything concerning it except its effects. It always hitherto, has been, so to speak; we never presumed to say of it that it is anywhere. But I have imprisoned it in an actual liquid, through processes of molecular and atomic fusion with that one elemental body which I have managed to see that it loves, clings to, and is conquered by. But as yet my achieved results are not wholly triumphant. The liquid I have obtained is still too volatile. It evaporates with enormous rapidity; it needs a third force to slip in and prevent this continual disjunctive trend. Such a force I am on the threshold of finding. It will not be hard to find. I almost divine it at this moment. I have crossed the threshold of a superb conquest; I pause, as it were, in the antechamber. And I have paused intentionally. Do you know why? The excitement has been too intense. I wish to have my triumph shared with me. Will not you share it? Will not you rejoice with me in this magnificence of discovery, greater than man has ever yet approached, however he may in past years have dreamed, through trust in fable and superstition, that he might possibly reach it?"

Georgina had drooped her head a little and pressed her lips tightly together. Those words "fable" and "superstition" met her ears with an ominous note. She remembered (had she ever forgotten?) the abhorred skepticism of her husband.

"You mean, then," she slowly said, "that you may soon discover a power to prolong human life beyond its natural term?"

"Yes—I mean that," he replied, with vehemence, "and I mean more."

"More?"

"There is no reason—none whatever—why a human being with no organic disease or lesion, should not live forever, while fed and buoyed by this splendid stimulus. I—"

"Hush," she interrupted, rising. Her face was very pale, and her features twitched a little as she framed her next sentence. "I am sorry that you've told me anything of this. I didn't ask you to tell it. But now that you've done so, Egbert, I can only assure you how impious it strikes me—what a shameful revolt it appears against the sacred laws of God!"

She rose, after this, and promptly swept from the room. Maynard could have cursed himself for telling her. The breach between them seemed in a few short minutes abysmally to have widened. He might have known that her mind would have taken some such view of his grand project. Thenceforth every hint of his old love perishes. The last remnant of tenderness for this woman had given place to a dread lest she might seek to thwart and balk his designs. But soon he had controlled such dread and even scoffed at it. Still, he felt humiliated, insulted, slapped on the cheek. Were it not for the boys, he told himself, he would never willingly look again on the face of his wife.

He went out into the breezy starlit garden, where his sons' laughter had lately rang. They had gone into the house now, and were perhaps being undressed for bed by their mother, who had always strictly enforced upon them early hours. Ah, such a mother! Maynard shuddered there in the chill of the nearing night, and as he shuddered a pain darted through his chest and he coughed. Then, in a little while, the handkerchief which he put to his lips grew stained, and somewhat copiously, with blood. A pang of fear now thrilled him. What if he should die before completing his transcendent work? He had had that cough for years, and been careless about it. Possibly the very agitation through which he had just passed had developed a furtive lung weakness of whose real existence he had been but vaguely aware.

The first step in his great accomplishment had yet to be taken. He spent several hours of feverish work in his laboratory that night and went to bed feeling strangely feeble. The next day he visited a certain famous London physician, who told him things which he no sooner heard than he began to doubt them, after the fashion of countless consumptives. The mortal who suffers from any pulmonary ill seldom can see his own threatening doom. Still a young man, Maynard had been attacked with an arterial hemorrhage whose effects absolute rest might have appeased though never cured. But rest of any sort was precisely what he now refused to take. A double incentive hereafter swayed him. He desired to perfect his unparalleled drug, and he desired to use it upon his own impaired body. It could not endow him, he argued, with immunity from future disease, but it might prolong his life for many a decade by the intense nutriment it gave to other organs than those already harmed.

His wife watched his labors with cold disrelish. She perceived that his health was failing; he had never borne the look of a man free from all lurking malady, and now his glassy eyes and sunken cheeks told a sadder tale. Always previously willing that his boys should go and come as they chose during his studies and experiments, he got into the habit of exiling them from his presence while he brooded and toiled. The two little fellows loved him very dearly and resented being thus proscribed. He would endeavor, at intervals, to console them for this hated denial, but often while giving them the fatherly caresses for which they both hungered in their pretty eagerness, he would either discern, or fancy that he discerned, a sort of smoldering disapproval on the part of their mother.

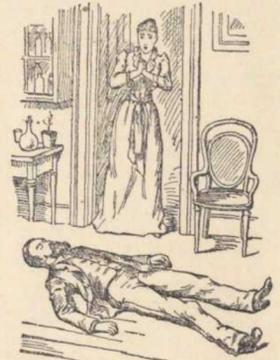

One day he said to himself, with a wild gladness: "It is found! I knew victory was waiting just beyond my reach, and I have put forth the one-needed effort and grasped it!"

That evening he poured into a large flask what he felt even more than firmly convinced was the energy, wondrously materialized and liquefied, which permeated, in its vital sovereignty, the entire universe. He was very unwell and exhausted; he had worked for many hours without the least pause. It was nearly midnight, and he went to one of his windows, raising it recklessly, and letting a raw wind blow into the chamber from a clouded, opaque sky. On the sill of the window (which he forgot to close) was a wilted rose-bush in a common earthen pot. He drew the plant in from its cheerless ledge of shelter, and poured round its root some of the fluid which he had so lately distilled. Then he took a glass and made himself a potion from the same source. He seated himself beside the table on which he had placed the plant. He was about to lift the glass to his lips when something that a saner and less passionately excited mind might have called a mere vision of its own over-wrought powers, burst upon him with delicious violence of confirmation. The drostems revived; the faded leaves grew hardy and green; at the ends of the slim stems buds broke, and then swelled until pink petals gleamed between their dividing segments. At once these petals unfolded, and rich roses were born. It was the magic of the fairy tale suddenly turned real; it was the giving to necromancy an every-day gear. . . .

But now what had suddenly happened? Maynard, with colorless face and straining eyes, leaned forward. The rose-bush was again its previous withered self. Just the same old dry, thorny stalk, and the same effete, blighted leafage! What did this re-transformation mean? Had he dreamed the fanciful and walked to the real? . . . In another moment he rose, staggering; his brain whirled, and it seemed as if the floor dropped away from him in gulfs of darkness. Groping for the bell-rope, he pulled it twice or thrice. Then he sank . . . It was not with any sense of painful fall, however; it was more as if arms caught him and let him gently down in their embrace. But he passionately recollected and craved the fluid. Where had he left it? Ah, he was incapable of thinking where. And yet he so wanted it, he so wanted it! . . . But soon afterward—even sooner than his wife came hurrying into the room—he had ceased to know if he wanted it or not.

A great vein had burst. His life hung by a thread for days. All this while he was unconscious. Then came a time during which he saw distorted shapes about his bed, and among them the familiar, yet altered face of his wife. He strove to ask her for that cherished flask; did he fail to make his meaning known? He could not decide; she had not the look of one who even heard him, apart from heeding. There was a deadness of unconcern in her features more stolid to him than stone.

One day all the ghosts had withdrawn their grim shapes, and he found himself lying with clear intellect though strengthless frame. Georgina entered, and he saw her start a little as she bent her gaze upon him.

"You're better," he heard her say, as if she were talking of the weather having improved from rain to sunshine.

"But you must not speak; you must not try to speak. The doctor forbids it." He did not try to speak. He had begun to think of his beloved flask again. It might work marvels in him, though, of course, its fight with his disease must end in final defeat. Still, he wanted to do a certain thing regarding it. He yearned to enshrine the formula of his creative process in a sort of last will and testament for his eldest son, Sylvan. He wondered, as he lay there, mute and stilled, who "the doctor" was, and whether she had not called in his old friend, Ross Thornadyke.

Presently he found this true. As Thornadyke stood at his bedside (a fair, tall, stalwart man of his own age) Maynard feebly stretched forth one hand. The young doctor took it, but at once commandingly, though softly, said: "You mustn't speak, Egbert. I'll get you paper and pencil, old fellow, if there's anything you must tell me. But it's a great deal better for you not to bother your head about anything in life for the next five days at least."

"I wish that you would bring me," Maynard was presently writing, "the large flask of white liquid which you will find in my study."

Thornadyke left the room and was gone a good while. "My dear Egbert," he said, on returning, "I can find no trace of the flask of which you speak. Could it possibly be?" and while Maynard interrupted him with a quick negative he lifted into sharp evidence several phials which he had brought from the laboratory.

Maynard had absolute confidence in Ross Thornadyke. They had been warm friends at Cambridge, and in a manner had continued so ever since. Two qualities in the young physician had always won his devout respect: Thornadyke had a crystal reasoning power and a veracity of robust vigor. To be at once so lucid-minded and so honorable was in himself a passport into Maynard's admiration. "I wish I could keep Ross up more than I do," he had often mused, "and not let him drop as I somehow must." Still, since his marriage, Maynard had smoked a good many social pipes in the company of his friend, though latterly they had seen less and less of each other, as the big hum and bustle of London had seemed to slip separately between them. While he now heard Dr. Thornadyke speak, an expression of pain touched Maynard's hueless face. He had swiftly suspected his wife of duplicity; he could not refrain from the belief that she had served him a horrid and stealthy trick.

But his brain, at present thoroughly clear, saw the futility of attempting either accusation or romance. The will-to-live was strong in him. If such peril menaced speech, he would strive to preserve silence. By a gesture and a meaning movement of the features he showed Dr. Thornadyke that he would impose no further search. Resolving to live on through the preservation of silence, he suffered for the next three days untold tortures. Mentally he was vitality itself; physically he was almost complete failure of fiber and nerve. Georgina would come into his room and perform the offices of nurse with careful exactitude. Now and then she brought the boys in to stand at his bedside and let him clasp their hands. Sylvan would be very gentle and demure; Gerald would sometimes press his warm, plump cheek against the chill and thin paternal hand, and show with trembling lips and tearful eyes the depths of his pity and regret. Dr. Thornadyke would drop in twice a day, always ordering continued silence by the elevation of his forefinger, and always uttering, as well, words of sympathy mixed with cheer. Meanwhile Maynard still suffered beyond words, and at last, one evening, he determined to suffer no longer in just this same horrible way. He might be called upon to endure fresh miseries, but at least they would be of a new and less ghastly kind. His wife had left him; the candles were lit in his small bedroom; he was quite alone; it would be only a step to his laboratory. He felt much stronger than at any time since his wakening to consciousness.

After slowly quitting his bed and standing erect on the floor, he felt better still. A dressing-gown lay on a near chair, and he hastily enshrouded his form in its folds. The room was cold, and he longed for slippers yet could find none. Soon ceasing the quest for them, he glided into the outer hall, carrying with him a box of waltzers which he had snatched exultantly from the mantel.

To gain his dark laboratory was but the work of a minute. To light his gloom took even less time. There he was, girt by the old scene of his toil and yearning. With gaze that shot from corner to corner of the well-known room, he sought for his lost flask. Nowhere! He scented, like some heavy and repulsive smell, the treachery of his wife. Soon he gave up searching. What if at any moment some new illness gripped him? And there was his desk; paper, pens, ink were on it, just as of old. To write out the full recipe of that incomparable drug would not take more than twenty minutes at the most.

He seated himself before the desk, and began to write. This was a message—perhaps a dying message—to his son, his eldest boy, Sylvan. He knew just how to frame the whole formula; he had thought it all out while prone there in his speechless torture. What a fine steadiness his hand had! How his pen darted along the paper! After all, was he so ill as Ross Thornadyke had thought? Two pages already—four, five, six; why, in a little while every thing would be told. And such a vengeance on his thieving wife, who had dared to call this wondrous rape from the locked vaults of science an insult to Omnipotence! "Never mind," he kept saying to himself, "if I do fail to recover the drug, Sylvan will get this. I'll make Ross Thornadyke swear he'll give it him when he's five-and-twenty. And I'll put a letter inside it, too—if my strength holds out, if I don't die here before I can fully bequeath to my eldest boy this peerless prize."

He did not put a short letter inside the larger document. Then, lighting on an envelope of more than common size, he placed both within it and thrust the package thus made into a pocket of his gown. Scarcely had he done this before the sound of a step reached him from the outer hall. It was his wife's; he recognized it. Rising, he quietly fronted her as she entered the room, with his face like chalk and his big gray eyes full of scorn and wrath.

Why Suffer? with the Remedy at Hand.

GENTLEMEN: I have been a great sufferer from Sciatic Rheumatism for five years. A portion of that time have been confined to my bed. Have been treated by the best physicians without relief. I am now taking the fourth bottle of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup and firmly believe it will work a permanent cure. It acted upon the liver and regulated my kidneys and digestive organs immediately, and has done me more good already than all the other medicines I have ever taken. I cheerfully recommend this medicine. Mrs. Altha Herrington, Altona, Mich. Sold only by druggists.

One of my children had a very bad discharge from her nose. Two physicians prescribed but without relief. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and much to our surprise, there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm, and in a short time the discharge was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

MEDIEVAL LONDON.

The Tortuous and Broken Perspective of Its Ancient Streets.

Who can rebuild before the eye of the mind a single ordinary dwelling of the vanished London of the middle of the thirteenth century? It was a dwarfish, squalid structure, says a writer in Atlantic, of such crazy unsubstantiality that, with a stout iron crook and five strong cords, provided by the ward, it might be pulled down and dragged off speedily in case of fire; a structure of one-story jutting over a low ground floor, with another jut of eaves above, its front bearing an old resemblance to the back of a couple of huge stairs, and the whole a most rickety, tumble-down top-heavy, fantastical thing.

Chimneys were fairly in vogue then, so it had them, squat, square, wide mouthed, faced with white plaster, red tiles, or gray pebble-work. Red tiles covered its roof; its walls were of rough planed planks, or a wooden framework filled with a composite of straw and clay, buttressed with posts, and crossed this way and that with supporting beams—the whole danted over with whitewash, of which the weather soon made gray-wash. In front was a stairway, sometimes covered, sometimes not, or a step-ladder set slantwise against the wall, for an entrance to the upper story. The doorways were narrow and low, the windows also, and the latter, darkened with overbrows of wooden shutters, propped up from beneath, and sticking out like long, slender awnings, were further darkened by sashes of parchment, linen, or thin-shaven horn, for glass came from Flanders, and was costly and rare.

Such, joint and seam and tile being loosened into crack and cranny and crevice everywhere, was the dwelling of the London citizen as the eye might see it in the middle of the thirteenth century. Multiply that dwelling into a tortuous and broken perspective of like buildings, some joined by party-walls, some with spaces between, all pent-roofed or gable-peaked, heavy-caved, stub-chimneyed, narrow-latticed, awning-shuttered, staircased, post-butressed, beam-crossed, dusky-red-roofed, dingy-white-walled, and low under the overhanging vastness of the sky, and you have an ancient London street.

CONCERNING GLASS EYES.

Not Always to Be Detected When Seen—The Trade in Them. "Good glass eyes come high," said an oculist recently to a Buffalo News man. "Cost a big price, do they?" "Yes, the good ones do."

"Then there is a good deal of difference?" "Oh, yes. They range all the way from fifty cents to fifty dollars."

"Is there such a big demand for them?" "Larger than most people suppose. The fact is that many people get along so well with a glass eye that not one person in ten suspects the fact."

"Some of our friends may be wearing one of those solid visual organs and we do not know it?" "Precisely. I'll bet that several people in this city with whom you are acquainted are wearing glass eyes, and the fact has always escaped your attention."

"Tell me something about the business, doctor." "In the first place the greater share of glass eyes, so called, are not glass. The best quality of artificial eyes is manufactured in America by a process that is kept absolutely secret. These are the lightest and best and will last the longer. The Germans also make a fine artificial eye. The best eyes are made of stone. The German article is cheaper than the American. The veining in the foreign eyes is not so well marked."

"What makes the trade profitable?" "I'll tell you. One-eyed men are likely to be rather scarce, and one would think that having one stocked up they would buy no more. But this is not the case. An artificial eye gets to be a nuisance after it has been on duty two or three months. Another one has to be purchased. This explains the reason for the lively trade in these articles. There'll always be a trade in them, and a good one, too."

"How is it we don't notice a glass eye in some men?" "Because they know enough to keep still about the matter, and wear the best eyes obtainable. In this way if you notice anything at all peculiar about their optics you imagine they have a squint or are cross-eyed."

GEMS IN VERSE.

Jack the Evangelist. (As related by Stray Garver, Historian.)

I was on the drive, in eighty, Workin' under Silver Jack, Which the same is now in Jackson, And ain't soon expected back; And there was a chap among us, By the name of Robert Waite, Kind of cute and slick and tonguey— Guess he was a graduate.

He could gab on any subject, From the Bible down to Hoyle, And his words flowed out so easy, Just as smooth, and slick as oil. He was what they called a skeptic, And he loved to sit and weave Hifalutin' words together, Tellin' what he didn't believe.

One day, while we were waitin' For a flood to clear the ground, We sat smokin' under the shade, And hearin' Bob expound. Hell, he said, was humbug, And he showed as clear as day That the Bible was a fable, And we 'lowed it looked that way.

Miracles and sich like Was too thin for him to stand. As for him they call the Shavour, He was just a common man. "You're a liar," some one shouted, "And you've got to take it back." Then everybody started, 'Twas the voice of Silver Jack.

And he cracked his fists together, And he shucked his coat and cried, "It was by that religion That my mother lived and died; And though I haven't allus Used the Lord exactly right, When I hear a chump abuse him He must eat his words or fight."

Now this Bob he wer'n't no coward, And he answered bold and free: "Stack your duds and out your capers, For there ain't no flos on me." And they fought for forty minutes, And the lady would hoot and cheer When Jack spit up a tooth or two Or Bobby lost an ear.

Till at last Jack got Bob under, And slugged him one 'n'ot or twice; At which Bob confessed, almighty quick, The divinity of Christ; And Jack kept reasonin' with him Till they began to yell, And 'lowed he'd been mistaken In his views concernin' hell.

So the fierce discussion ended, And they riz up from the ground, And some one brought a bottle out, And kindly pressed it round; And we drank to Jack's religion, In a quiet sort of way, And the spread of infidelity Was checked in camp that day. —Carson (Nev.) Appeal.

Two. How does a woman love? Once, no more, Though life forever its loss deplore; Deep in sorrow or deep in sin, One king reigneth her heart within. One alone, by night and day, Moves her spirit to curse or pray. One voice only can call her soul Back from the grasp of death's control; Though she loves best her friends deride, Yes, when she smelleth another's bride, Still for her master her life makes moan, Once is forever, and once alone.

How does a man love? Once for all, The sweetest voices of life may call, Sorrow daunt him, or death dismay, Joy's red roses bedeck his way; For a love best he, or friend deride, The cruel thumb of the world turn down, Loss betray him, or love delude, Through storm or sunshine, by day or night, Wandering, toiling, asleep, awake, Though souls may madden or weak hearts break. Better than wife, or child, or self, Once and forever, he loves—himself. —Rose Terry Cooke.

Caprice at Home. No, I will not say goodbye— Not goodbye, nor anything. It is gone, but I wonder why. Lilies are not sweet this spring? How that tiresome bird will sing! I might follow him and say Just that he forgot to kiss Baby, when he went away. Everything I want I miss. Oh, a precious world is this!

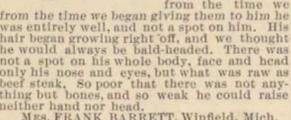

What if night came and not he? Something might mislead his feet. Does the moon rise late? Ah, me! There are things that he might meet. Now the rain begins to beat. So it will be dark. The bell? Some one some one loves is dead; Were it he— I wonder why. Half the fretful words I said, Half the fretful tears I shed. Dead? And but to think of death; Men might bring him through the gate; Lips that have not any breath. Eyes that stare— And I must wait! Is it time, or is it late? I was wrong, and wrong, and wrong; I will tell him, oh, be sure! If the heavens are builded strong, Love shall therein be secure; Love like mine shall there endure.

Listen, listen—that is he! I'll not speak to him, I say. If he chose to say to me, "I was all to blame today; Sweet, forgive me," why— I may! —Mrs. S. M. B. Platt.

Baby's Fearful Suffering from Skin Disease Covering Entire Body Cured by Cuticura

My baby was taken very sick when he was three months old, and in a few days began breaking out. We employed both of the home doctors and they could do nothing for him. Then we sent for the best doctor in Eaton Rapids, Mich., and he doctored him for two weeks, and he got worse all the time; and then I took him to Jackson, to a doctor who attends especially to skin diseases, and then he got worse than ever. Then I told my husband we had better try CUTICURA REMEDIES any way; did not have any idea they would do any good, but in less than two months from the time we began giving them to him he was entirely well, and not a spot on him. His hair began growing right off, and we thought he would always be bald-headed. There was not a spot on his whole body, face and head only his nose and eyes, but what was raw as beef steak. So poor that there was not anything but bones, and so weak he could raise neither hand nor head.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The New York Press, one of the liveliest newspapers in the United States, increased its subscription list 279,674 copies during the month of April, over the previous year.

According to newspaper reports a new society is being formed at Washington, D. C., having for its object "to secure a constitutional provision that no government aid shall be given to sectarian schools."

"Old Hutch," the Chicago speculator, who has made millions of dollars in gambling in stocks, etc., on the Chicago board of trade, has recently lost much of his easily gotten gains, but is still said to be worth $500,000.

Queen Victoria has been obliged to hand over some $2,000,000 to pay the gambling debts of her son, the Prince of Wales, who may be king some day, if the old lady herself ever concludes to relinquish reigning over Great Britain, India and Canada.

Mr. Washburne, the new republican mayor of Chicago, is starting out in a commendable manner. The gambling houses and other disreputable dens are being cleaned out, saloons are obliged to close up at 12 o'clock, and the sale of lottery tickets is prohibited.

The same legislature that deliberately stole two seats to which republicans were elected has refused to vote an appropriation to entertain the national meeting of G. A. R. veterans, to be held in Detroit during August. The old soldiers who helped the democratic party win its victory last fall have now received payment for their trouble.

The wife of August Grostic gets a judgment of $13,143.50 against the Detroit, Lansing & Northern R. R., at Howell, for the killing of her husband. The case will be appealed to the supreme court, and we will wager apples to pennies that the verdict will be set aside as excessive. That jury could not have been familiar with their trade.

St. Joseph and Benton Harbor have been united and rechristened under the name of Port Michigan. Here was a great opportunity for this wonderful legislature to secure fame everlasting to itself. Why did it not call the united cities "Squawback" or "Fridlander," or something nice like that? The people of those places might have objected, but what does this legislature care for such a trivial matter as that?

A Pittsfield farmer a year ago raised 1000 bushels of barley and was offered 70 cents per hundred pounds for it. He concluded, however, to hold it until the McKinley bill went into effect, and now he thinks that bill is all o. k. as he got $1.50 per hundred, or 80 cents per hundred more.—Chelsea Standard.

Referred to the farmers who have been getting their McKinley bill knowledge through such sources as the Ann Arbor Argus and the Adrian Press.

Ann Arbor citizens last year dug the graves and filled them with the soulless bodies of two hundred drunkards.—Register, May 7.

The report of the board of health made April 1st, 1891, gives the entire number of deaths during the year past, of men, women and children, from all causes, at 148. Besides being a falsehood, the above statement is a shameless one for any "citizen of Ann Arbor" to make.

There is a trite old maxim that the Register better read: "It is a dirty bird that fouls its own nest."

When the constitutional wisecracks get through with Mr. Cutcheon they may have more respect for his opinion in regard to the constitutionality of the Miner Electoral law than they did at the start. The law is certainly against the spirit if not the express words of the constitution, and it ought to be tested before that body. Further, it seriously infringes upon the dearly beloved doctrine, so persistently preached by democrats, of state sovereignty. It destroys the influence of the state in the electoral college, and accomplishes just what the constitution desired to guard against, viz: what is known down east as "the rotten borough system." The law is a partisan disgrace to Michigan.

It is estimated that 400,000 Catholics are coming into this country every year from Europe. These estimates are by the Catholics themselves.

Query—Will Mr. Cleveland succeed in hedging before the convention of his party next year? If not, what a dilemma his party will be in.

The Italian government now proposes to call in all the powers of Europe to assist in making the U. S. pay for the dead mafias at New Orleans. They can't do it.

Michigan's squawback legislature will long be held in the memory of the people as the most partisan and outrageous body of the kind ever assembled at her capitol. It's only aim is to pass some act that it thinks will be to the advantage of the democratic party.

The partisan enactment known as the Miner law, providing for the choice of presidential electors by congressional districts, is being universally condemned by the press of the country regardless of politics. Even the democratic press while not admitting its unconstitutionality, term it "revolutionary," and "against good policy."

REMINISCENCES.

Some Early Day Times.

The Flint Citizen is republishing from its own columns extracts that are of interest in the early days of this state.

From the Citizen of March 15, 1886, it takes this notice that may be of some interest to our readers:

KANSAS MEETING.

There will be a public meeting of persons intending to emigrate to Kansas, in Ann Arbor, on Wednesday Evening, March 26th, at 7 o'clock, to organize an Association for settlement in that Territory. All persons intending to make Kansas their future home are invited to attend.

By Order of the Provincial Com. S. S. BARNARD, President.

Following the above is a call for "a mass state convention of the Republican party, to be held at Ann Arbor, on Wednesday evening, March 26th, 1886," to elect delegates to the National Republican convention to be held at Philadelphia, June 17th, 1886. Each congressional district was entitled to three delegates and six to be chosen by the state at large. The call closes with this appeal:

Let there be an old fashioned turn out. Come with Banners and Music. Let us show the Nebraskaites that there is a Republican Party.

And was signed by G. D. Hill, at that time a prominent citizen of Ann Arbor.

Following the call is an exhortation to the republicans of Genesee county, and it is worth producing. Here it is:

We trust the Republicans of Genesee will take measures in their several Township Associations, and in any other manner that individual effort may make effectual, to secure a good representation of the Republican sentiment of this county in the Mass Convention to be held at Ann Arbor on the 26th. In 1854, Michigan took the lead in the Republican movement—let her keep the proud position! That she may do so it will be necessary for every County to send her quota of true men to swell the masses of those living demonstrations that the Peninsular State is unshakably determined to present an unquailing front to those who are bent on conquering Kansas. Already the Sham—Democratic press is sounding the tocsin of alarm, and urging its followers into opposition to our efforts. Opposition to what? To the endeavors to restore the principle of the Jeffersonian Ordinance, sanctioned by all the Fathers of the Republic—to the determination to frustrate the proclaimed intention of President Pierce to use the military power of the Nation to force Slavery upon Kansas, against the ascertained will of her people. These are the objects of the Republican Party, which the Democracy are called upon to oppose. Have true Democrats become enemies of Jefferson, that they should repudiate his policy, because a few of their leaders have sold themselves to the Slaveholders for Southern Presidential votes? We will not believe it.

Following the political matter is this item, which our genial friend M. H. Goodrich, will perhaps be greatly interested in:

A Mr. Goodrich, of Ann Arbor lectured before the Ladies' Literary Association, at the Court House, on Wednesday evening on the "Characteristics of the Age."

Resolutions of Respect.

We the class of '93 of the Ann Arbor High School, desiring to express our grief at the loss of our schoolmate, Agnes Crosey, and to extend our sympathy to the bereaved family and relatives, offer the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, We are called to mourn the death of our friend and classmate, Agnes Crosey, therefore be it Resolved, That in her untimely death we sustain the loss of one of our brightest and most exemplary members, who, by her kind and gentle bearing won the love and kindest regards both of teachers and classmates. In her death the parents lose a dutiful and loving daughter, and the sister and brothers a kind and gentle sister; her associates a true friend; and we as a class, a much loved and highly respected classmate.

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the sorrowing family and relatives, while we mourn with them the fair and promising, cut off in life's bright morn, with them, too, we would bow to the sovereign will of Him who doeth all things well.

AMUSEMENTS.

Everywhere the "Little Tycoon" has appeared, audiences have went wild with delight. Hear what the Philadelphia Ledger has to say:

At the Chestnut street opera house next week Willard Spenser's "Little Tycoon" is to undergo a revival. It is interesting to note the extent of current interest in this work; which out-rivalled here in popularity every other operatic production of its class, with, possibly, the exception of "The Mikado," which Mr. Spenser claims, on what seems to be reasonable grounds, was the result of a reading of his own libretto by the Gilbert and Sullivan people after he had entrusted it to D'Oyley Carte some time before the work was made public. Of the merit of the "Little Tycoon," it is needless to speak extensively. At a time when comment upon it ranged mostly from faint praise to undistinguished ridicule, the Ledger found reason to cordially commend Mr. Spenser's music for its freshness, fluency and originality, and to approve with equal warmth the general interest of the entertainment. So long as the "Little Tycoon" was presented by competent principals and an adequate supporting company, that verdict has almost uniformly been sustained by the public in this city and elsewhere. Whether it will regain and retain the extraordinary favor it has heretofore enjoyed in Philadelphia remains to be seen. On the part of the management an elaborate and thoroughly enjoyable revival is promised, with a strong cast and new scenery and costumes. J. H. Ryley, the well known comedian, Madeline Lucette, J. Aldrich Libby, Arthur Pacie, Alice Hosmer, Joseph Nealey, Emma Lawrence and Nell O'Brien will appear. The production will be given under the personal supervision of the composer. In the repertoire of comic opera there are three works that have achieved remarkable successes in America; one is "The Little Tycoon," the second is "Pinafore," and the third is "Ermine." Mr. Willard Spenser's very clever opera this season.

The New Orleans Picayune has this to say of the great play, "The Little Tycoon," which is to be given at the opera house, on Friday evening, May 15th:

"The Little Tycoon" has captured the town. Monday night is generally a dull theatre night. Last night the Academy of Music was full of the best people in the city, drawn to see the second representation here of Willard Spenser's comic opera called "The Little Tycoon." It was as well received as on Sunday night, and made many new friends. It should be said for this performance that it is as clean and neat as a Gilbert and Sullivan opera. It is not what commercial travelers call a "leg show." The characters represented are ladies and gentlemen, and they wear such clothes as ladies and gentlemen could wear on the street and not be arrested. The airs of the opera are being whistled by small boys and played by young ladies to-day. The "Little Tycoon" is a jolly and clean comedy, elegantly dressed, sandwiched with simple melodies and sweet tunes for the year and backed by bright scenes for pleasing the eye.

is running with as much vigor as when it started on its gay career. It has been sung over the country season after season with great success. Some few apparently knowing ones who would be little anything American have sneered at "The Little Tycoon." "But notwithstanding this there must be considerable merit in it, or it would not have lasted so long," remarked a prominent musical critic recently. Crowded houses everywhere prove the element of success conclusively.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind. "I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." Can the Key be found? A Masonic Event.

On Wednesday evening, May 20th, there will be an event in Masonry that will undoubtedly call together the entire membership of the order in this city and vicinity, it being an exemplification of the work of the 3d degree by Oriental Lodge No. 240, of Detroit, said to be the finest workmen in the craft in Michigan.

The Detroit brothers come here to meet with Fraternity Lodge No. 262 F. & A. M., whose fame is not confined to this locality for good work, and the fortunate F. C., who will be raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason, is Prof. Wm. J. Herdman, of this city.

A special train will bring the visiting brothers from Detroit, to the number of at least 150. Among those expected to be present will be Grand Master John Q. Look, of Lowell; Deputy Grand Master W. H. Sandford, of Detroit.

DON'T GIVE UP

The use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. One bottle may not cure "right off" a complaint of years; persist until a cure is effected. As a general rule, improvement follows shortly after beginning the use of this medicine. With many people, the effect is immediately noticeable; but some constitutions are less susceptible to medicinal influences than others, and the curative process may, therefore, in such cases, be less prompt. Persistence in using this remedy is sure of its reward at last. Sooner or later, the most stubborn blood diseases yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For several years, in the spring months, I used to be troubled with a drowsy, tired feeling, and a dull pain in the small of my back, so bad, at times, as to prevent my being able to walk, the least sudden motion causing me severe distress. Frequently, boils and rashes would break out on various parts of the body. By the advice of friends and my family physician, I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla and continued it till the poison in my blood was thoroughly eradicated."—L. W. English, Montgomery City, Mo. "My system was all run down; my skin rough and of yellowish hue. I tried various remedies, and while some of them gave me temporary relief, none of them did any permanent good. At last I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, continuing it exclusively for a considerable time, and am pleased to say that it completely Cured Me.

GOLDWIN SMITH.

The United States has no stouter friend in Canada than Professor Goldwin Smith, who for many years has urged the Canadians to cultivate the closest relations with us and who is now the acknowledged head of the party, that wishes the United States and Canada to become one nation. He was born in England in 1823, studied at Oxford, where he greatly distinguished himself. Mr. Smith early became noted for his advanced views and was often in hot water on this account; although nobody denies his great ability. For several years he held the principal Professorship of Modern History at Oxford. During our civil war Prof. Smith was—together with John Bright—the champion of our cause in England. He wrote many pamphlets for us, the best of which were "Does the Bible sanction American slavery?" and "On the Morality of the Emancipation Proclamation." In 1884 he visited our country, where he met with an enthusiastic reception. On his return home he published "England and America." In 1888 he settled in the United States as Professor of English and Constitutional History in the Cornell University, at Ithaca, a post he occupied until 1871, when he removed to Canada to become a member of the Senate of the University of Toronto. Since then he has lived in the latter country, where he has been the most implacable foe of Sir John McDonald had. In season and out of season he has been busy with his pen in favor of his American friends and scarcely a week passes but that an article from him appears in some of our newspapers or magazines. During the last campaign in Canada Prof. Smith worked unceasingly for the Liberal party and no doubt he will, when that party again comes into power in Canada play a very important part in Canadian politics.

Food Before Sleep.

From the American Medical Journal.

Many persons, though not actually sick, keep below par in strength and general tone, and I am of the opinion that fasting during the long interval between supper and breakfast, and especially the complete emptiness of the stomach during sleep, adds greatly to the amount of emaciation, sleeplessness and general weakness we so often meet.

Physiology teaches that in the body there is a perpetual disintegration of tissue, sleeping or waking; it is therefore logical to believe that the supply of nourishment should be somewhat continuous especially in those who are below par, if we would counteract their emaciation and lowered degree of vitality; and as bodily exercise is suspended during sleep, with wear and tear correspondingly diminished, while digestion, assimilation and nutritive activity continue as usual, the food furnished during this period adds more than is destroyed, and increased weight and improved general vigor is the result.

All things except man are governed by natural instinct, and every being with a stomach, except man, eats before sleep, and even the human infant, guided by the same instinct, sucks frequently day and night, and if its stomach is empty for any prolonged period, it cries long and loud.

Digestion requires no interval of rest, and if the amount of food during the twenty-four hours is, in quantity and quality, not beyond the physiological limit, it makes no hurtful difference to the stomach how few or how short are the intervals between eating, but it does make a vast difference in the weak and emaciated one's welfare to have a modicum of food in the stomach during the time of sleep, that, instead of being consumed by bodily action, it may during the interval improve the lowered system; and I am fully satisfied that were the weakly, the emaciated, and the sleepless to rightly take a light lunch or meal of simple, nutritious food before going to bed for a prolonged period, nine in ten of them would be thereby lifted into a better standard of health.

In my specialty (nose and throat) I encounter cases that, in addition to local and constitutional treatment, need an increase of nutritious food, and I find that by directing a bowl of bread and milk, or mug of beer and a few biscuits, or a saucer of oatmeal and cream before going to bed, for a few months, a surprising increase in weight, strength, and general tone results; on the contrary, persons who are too stout or plethoric should follow the opposite course.

Can the Key be found?

Calico Muslin Cheaper.

Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Under protection of the McKinley bill American print mill owners are reducing prices of their productions. Indigo prints that, when the McKinley bill went into effect, were selling at eight cents a yard, are now down to within a fraction of five cents. All kinds of shirtings and sheetings are also much cheaper, notwithstanding the higher duties. Is "the tariff a tax" then?

Some Things the Alliance Can Do.

From the Spokane Review.

Like all other organized bodies, there are some things the Alliance can do and do well; there are other things it can not do, or not so well. It can cultivate a spirit of fraternity among the farmers. It can alleviate by united effort the dull monotony of existence that drives the boys from the farms to the cities, where they may be stranded on the rocks and shoals of vice and dissipation. It can cultivate the study of the science of government among its members, whereby demagogic measures and rattle-brained theories will be discarded as absurd, their own political platforms. It can foster a more scientific cultivation of the soil, and cause two blades to grow where one grew before. Eventually it can lead to co-operation among the farmers, so that waste will be averted and the profits that would otherwise go to the middleman can be produced. It cannot create a party for political purposes that will supersede the two great parties. Such attempts have been made time and time again, and have always failed. Two parties, one, broadly speaking, conservative, and the other radical, analogous to the centrifugal and centripetal forces in the realm of physics, are necessary to maintain all governments in a state of equilibrium. The farmer, by virtue of his occupation, is naturally conservative. When he begins changing third-party will-o'-the-wisps in the garb of the radical he eventually brings up again in his deserted camp. Third party adherents are but the stragglers and camp-followers in the wake of the two great contestants. In skirmishes with detached wings of the two bodies they can gain victories. But they can not overcome both; and can overcome one only by an alliance with the other. Thus it will be seen that there is a splendid field open to the activity of the alliance where good results will be obtained. Another, looking tempting to the eye, is but a cul-de-sac where disaster awaits its entrance. It is true that there is too much frivolity in the American character and too little of earnestness, and this is reflected even in our politics. This is something that the farmers' alliance can work to overcome. By uniting common sense with energy and honesty a clearer vision will be obtained, and untenable theories vanish like mists before the sun. In this work, as in other details, the alliance can work incalculable good to themselves and confer lasting benefits on the public by the moral stamina and business activity with politics in the future would be invested.

Senator Jones, of Nevada, did not attend the Protective Tariff League banquet in New York last Friday evening, but sent a ringing letter, from which we clip the following:

"As I view the protective system it is indispensable to the full development and enduring prosperity of our country. Its continuance is therefore demanded by every consideration of patriotism. I am a staunch believer in the maxim 'The American market for the American people.' It is a market of unsurpassable value and importance. To preserve its advantages for our own people is the highest duty of the nation. It is sometimes charged that to do this would be equivalent to erecting a 'Chinese wall' around the country. Whatever epithet our opponents may apply to a vigorous and effective Tariff, it must be manifest that a nation owes its first duty to its own people. No foreign nation has a right to complain if this country chooses to adopt a policy under which our people shall do their own work, and not American for the American market. By Ald. Mann: Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to look up the worthy poor of this city for the purpose of making special provision for the same by regular monthly payment from the poor fund.

Alderman Wines moved that Alderman Mann be chairman of such special committee, pending which Alderman Herz moved that the whole question be referred to the Poor Committee, which motion prevailed and the resolution was so referred. To the Common Council: Your committee to whom was referred, in connection with the Board of Public Works, the question of the settlement of the claim of the Nowland heirs to a part of the old cemetery, respectfully report that we have had a meeting with the Board and at the same time a conference with Mr. John Nowland, who acted for the heirs, and find that heretofore, and on the 16th day of September, 1889, the Board acting under instructions from this Council, made an offer to the Nowland heirs of the sum of five hundred dollars for their interest in the whole of the old cemetery, which offer was duly reported to this Council, deeds were duly executed and ready for delivery, but this Council failed to approve such action of the Board of Public Works, for which reason the deeds were not delivered.

Your Committee further report, that as a result of such meeting and conference with Mr. Nowland, your Committee found that Mr. Nowland would now, for the sake of a settlement of the whole contention, deliver such deeds on payment of two hundred and fifty dollars and the removal and reinterment in the new cemetery of the bodies now buried on that part of said old cemetery claimed by said Nowlands on a lot or lots in the new cemetery, to be provided by the said Nowland heirs, before the payment of said money.

Your Committee, therefore, would recommend that the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars be appropriated from the contingent fund for such purpose and paid to said John Nowland on the delivery of such deeds, and that the Board of Public Works be instructed to cause the bodies now buried on the north part of said old cemetery to be removed to the new cemetery, and their interment on lands therein to be provided by and at the cost of said Nowland. All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN O'MARA, W. O. WALKER, Dated March 30th, 1891.

We, the Board of Public Works, concur in the foregoing report. THOMAS J. KEECH, H. HUTZEL, J. F. SCHUB.

By Ald. Mann: Resolved, That a warrant for $250.00 be drawn to the order of the Board of Public Works, to settle in full the claims of the Nowland heirs for their interest in the old cemetery.

The Ypsilanti Sentinel tells of the departure of one of the old citizens of this county to Detroit in a manner that will be generally endorsed: "In the departure from this city of Mr. Walter H. Hawkins, Ypsilanti loses not only a pioneer, but one of the most public-spirited citizens she has ever known. For years and years no public enterprise has been pushed to success which has not found him an ardent and valuable worker, and many public improvements stand as monuments to his zeal."
