TWO SUCCESSFUL CO-EDS.

They Are Hustlers in Their Chosen Professions.

The following description of one of them is from the N. Y. Press of July 5th:
Miss Kane was among the first American women who selected law as a profession, and achieved signal success. She commenced the study of law at Ann Arbor, Mich., and completed her course in the office of A. A. Jackson, of the Janesville (Wis.) bar. After a thorough and protracted examination before a committee appointed by the court for that purpose, she was found well qualified to practice law, and on their recommendation was admitted to the Janesville bar in 1878. Immediately after her admission she went to Milwaukee and practiced law there until 1883, when she went to Chicago and was admitted to the Illinois bar and practiced there. On the motion of Robert G. Ingersoll she was also admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States at Washington.

Miss Kane devotes her attention mainly to criminal cases, but has a good knowledge of civil practice, and devotes entire attention to the practice of her profession.

The Detroit Evening News gives the following sketch of a lady graduate of the university, that may be of interest to some of our university readers:

The west, with its opportunities for enterprise and oftentimes the necessity for self-culture, has given us many a product of which the older civilization might be proud. From Milwaukee, with the best education to be obtained in the university of Michigan, comes Miss Elizabeth Jean Jordan, a pretty, dark-eyed, black-haired young girl, half Spanish in descent. She takes assignments and goes about collecting news as if she were a man, and, what is more, she comes back to the office and writes up her "story" in a way which is the envy of many a man who claims that newspaper women are out of place in the journalistic field, and that they retain their positions through favoritism rather than earnest work.

Miss Jordan contradicts this by every act of her journalistic life, moving about with a swing and an independence that is all her own. One day sees her en route for the south, where, among the wilds of Virginia, she spends seven days and nights in the saddle, looking up a story and stopping for rest only when mission forbids further pursuit of her mission. Another time finds her at a sudden summons from her editor invading the morgue in company only with the keeper, in search of the body of a dead baby whose parents were too poor to give burial and who were obliged to send it to a morgue to be buried at the city's expense.

With but two hours' notice, dinnerless, fatigued with the work of the day, the plucky little woman looked up the baby, found its little body in its rough little coffin and wrote up the "story" turning in the copy before midnight, so that it might be in time for the next morning's paper. So pathetic were the details of the poverty and sorrow of the parents that before 10 o'clock in the morning enough money had been subscribed to take the little one to its last poor resting place.

Fatal Accident on the Motor Line.

Joseph Christy, of Lockport, N. Y., was killed at Ypsilanti Sunday evening, at about 9.30, by jumping off a car of the Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti motor line, while they were moving backward, which motion threw him directly under the wheels, killing him instantly. His body was terribly mangled, presenting a frightful and sickening appearance. A corner's inquest was held, and several witnesses examined, all of whom agreed that the deceased was warned not to jump off the train while it was in motion, backing up, and that he did not ring the bell for the car to stop so that he could get off. The cars were only running at the rate of four miles per hour. The deceased was a well-to-do resident of Lockport, N. Y., and had been visiting his sister Mrs. P. Hascall, of Ypsilanti, and his niece Mrs. George L. Moore, of Ann Arbor. The accident is a very unfortunate one, but one in which no one appears to be to blame, and also an accident which is liable to occur at any time, unless people will be more careful, and not attempt to get on or off the cars while in motion.

A Summer Note Book

"A Summer Note Book" issued by the Michigan Central Railroad, contains some very handsome views along the line of the road, that are printed in the highest style of the engravers' art. "A view on the Haron River near Ann Arbor," is a fine landscape, taken near School-girl's glen. Our people hardly appreciate the many beautiful scenes here, until they find that other people pick them up and portray their beauties. The book gives valuable information for people who expect to take an outing this summer, and contains routes east and north to the quiet summer resorts and watering places. If you desire any further information, apply to H. W. Hayes, station agent at the M. C. R., Ann Arbor.

THE VISITING 'CYCLISTS.

They Circle About The 'Varsity City and Contest for Prizes.

About fifty wheelmen were in the city yesterday, one-half of whom belonged to the Hunt tourists, all of whom were on their way to the national L. A. W. meet at Detroit. These were joined by about 25 local 'cyclists, making quite a handsome parade on our streets. The foreign visitors were met by the local club, and entertained handsomely by them.

The program published last week was carried out, except that, because of the rain during the previous night, the visitors did not arrive as early as expected.

The ten mile race, out five miles on the Saline gravel road and return, had eight contestants. The first prize was won by Edward Staebler, of this city, the second by George Wright, also of this city and the third by Mr. Salisbury, of Owosso. Time: 1st, 38 min. 42 sec.; 2d, 40 min.; 3d, 40 min.; 4th, 57 sec. The hill climbing contest, up the half mile steep hill on Broadway, in the 5th ward, required the greatest skill and lasting qualities. The first prize was taken by Arthur Pugh, of Racine, Wis., the second by Wm. Frank, of Ann Arbor, the third by Harry B. Walker, of Chicago. Time, 2:45 2-5; 3:14 3-5; 3:17.

In returning, and while coasting down this hill, Frank H. Hendrick, of Howell, took a header that laid him up for a time, but it was thought not seriously so.

The entire party started out on their wheels this morning early.

THE BANQUET.

In the evening the Wolverine club entertained the visitors and their lady friends at A. O. U. W. hall.

Mayor Doty gave a fine address of welcome, demonstrating again the fact that never before has Ann Arbor had a mayor, who could represent her so well by welcoming speeches to conventions or organizations coming here. The Ann Arbor banjo and guitar club rendered several selections, which were applauded to the echo. The response was by Chas. A. Conover, of Coldwater, the secretary and treasurer of the Michigan Division, L. A. W., who praised our fine roads and streets. The handsome gold prizes were then distributed to the winners of the two races, Messrs. Staebler, Wright, Salisbury, Pugh, Frank, and Walker. Mr. Hunt, who brought the Grand Rapids tourists through, told of their tour and J. E. Beal, who presided, told some incidents of his European bicycle tour. Then followed a banquet tendered by the club, and a pleasant social time was had.

A NOTE OR TWO.

Ray Potter, of Lansing, rode his bicycle from that city to Ann Arbor, a distance of 65 miles, arriving here at 4 o'clock, in time to witness the contests. Considering the bad roads, it was a great feat.

Comrade Morrill, a one-armed old soldier from Toledo, was one of the wheelmen. He rode his wheel from Toledo, and from here to Detroit, and he never rides in the rear rank.

Among the hill climbers was a lady, who went up the grade in good style. One of the riders from Grand Rapids was a lady, who appeared to bear the fatigue of the journey as well as any of the gentlemen.

Where There are no Bad Indians.

The Sisseton Indian reservation at the eastern boundary of South Dakota and containing one million acres of choice farming lands, has just been opened for settlement and offers to the homeseeker inducements that cannot be equalled. The soil is very fertile, the country well watered, there being numerous small lakes within its boundary, and it is within a short distance of the northwest, St. Paul and Minneapolis, insuring good markets almost at the settlers' doors.

This is not a frontier reservation, but is surrounded on all sides by an old, well settled prosperous country.

The reservation will be held for actual settlers, only homestead entries of 160 acres being permitted, and there is room for more than 6,000 farms. To get the best, however, come early: first come, first served. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway is the only road which runs directly through the reservation. To reach it from the east, buy tickets to Summit, S. D., Waubay, S. D., Wilmot, S. D., or Wheaton, Minn. Summit is within the reservation, the other stations on the border. All ticket agents in the United States or Canada sell tickets via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway.

For further information, apply to Geo. H. Henford, General Passenger Agent, Chicago, Ill., or to Harry Mercer, Mich. Pass. Agent, Chic., Mil. & St. Paul Ry., 82 Griswold st., Detroit, Mich.

The barn and contents of T. J. Hallock, of York, were burned on Monday. Barn insured for $100, and contents for $400.

The barn and contents belonging to Frank H. Sweetland, of Sylvan, burned at 12 o'clock last night, with 60 tons of hay. Origin of fire unknown. Insured in County Mutual, barn for $870; contents, $1,200.

A ROMANCE OF TWO BROTHERS.

BY EDGAR FAWCETT.

Author of "The Confessions of Claud," "An Ambitious Woman," "The Evil That Men Do," "A New York Family," etc.

[Copyright, 1900, By Edgar Fawcett.]

CHAPTER X.

"You are ready, Perdita?" said Gerald with great gentleness, on a certain morning just three days later.

"Yes," she answered, standing before him in a simple dark dress, with a bunch of flowers at her bosom. Then, as he raised her hand and held it to his lips, she went on: "Who is waiting there, Gerald?"

"Down in the drawing-room? No one except the clergyman who is to marry us and our good friend, Dr. Clyde, not to speak of poor, dull, obliging Mrs. Brawne." He was going to add, in humorous afterthought, "expensive Mrs. Brawne, I might also call her," but suddenly preferred not to speak the words.

"Instead of them he gayly said: 'The sun is shining as merry as if it were one of my old English May mornings. And the sun is shining in my heart, too, Perdita! I do so hope it's the same with you!'"

Her eyes swam in tears as they dwelt on his face. "Oh, Gerald," she said, "whatever that blotched-out past of mine may have been, I'm certain it never brought love to me, never, never!" She bowed her head on his shoulder. "There is no forgetfulness that could cloud such love as I feel for you. It is this thought that makes me sure I can not be doing wrong. And yet who knows? who knows? There are times when those hidden years are like a monstrous iron door, against which I seem to be slowly dashing myself to death."

Her words ended in a shudder. With tender force Gerald slipped her hand and kissed her fervently once or twice on the lips. "These arms are here," he said, "ready to save you from any such forlorn fate. And remember," he went on, with a kind of boyish catching of the breath in his hope-stirred tones, "there is somewhere a new life prepared for us in a land that is new. He who so long has been my benefactor will not desert me now. By degrees, my dearest, you will begin to forget that you have forgotten. Even the recollection that I found you homeless and shivering in the street at night will melt into the brighter consciousness of how much mutual joy that meeting has borne us both. Come, now; let us go down; they are waiting. There, I'll kiss away your tears. Above all things that the sun hates to shine on, I'm sure it must be a tearful bride."

They went down-stairs together into the little front drawing-room. The placid-faced clergyman (unconscious of her mental trouble) had taken Perdita's hand and was saying something kindly or perhaps jocular to her in a lowered voice. Just then a servant slipped up to Gerald's side and handed him a card.

Gerald turned toward Clyde. "My brother, Sylvan," he said. "Can he have heard of my marriage?"

"I did not tell him," Clyde returned, neutrally.

"Where did you show Mr. Maynard?" said Gerald to the servant.

"Into the next room, sir," he was answered.

A pair of heavy folding-doors (in what is now a somewhat old-fashioned style for New York) separated these two apartments. These doors were tightly closed. Gerald turned to the clergyman with a smile.

"Just excuse me for a moment, please," he said. "I promise you I'll return directly. I haven't got frightened enough to run away."

He quitted the room by a side door, passed through the hall, and speedily came into the presence of his brother.

He was smiling, and instantly put forth his hand. It seemed impossible that he should hold a shadow of malice, that morning, toward any human being—and least of all, toward one so near of kin.

But Sylvan took no notice of the outstretched hand. He was extremely pale, and the lung-malady that threatened him was plainer, now, in his glassy eye and hollow cheek.

"I would not have come here," he said, "if it had not been for a most extraordinary matter. In their searches for my wife the two detectives I employed appear to have been very keen. They insist upon it that they have traced to this house (with final private

SHE SANK TO THE FLOOR. QUIRES OF THE LANDIARY NERE. MRS. BRAVNE IS HER NAME.

"I preferred to make inquiries of you," said Sylvan. "I preferred it because I have learned that the lady whom the officers have suspected of being Lucia is in a certain way under your protection and that of Dr. Clyde."

Gerald started, frowned, flushed and then grew deadly pale.

"She has entirely lost her memory," pursued Sylvan, "and—"

"Stop there!" broke in Gerald. He spoke as if a cord girt his throat.

"What devilry is this?" he went on, gaspingly. "Who dared to tell you such a lie?"

He stood staring at Sylvan with a fixity that was full of both defiance and bewilderment.

"I have mentioned my informants," replied his brother, coldly. "Perhaps they are mistaken; they have not claimed infallibility; but I am sure they have not dealt in falsehood."

A sudden impulse as of desperation took hold of Gerald. "The lady to whom you have so distinctly referred," he said, "is here. Look for yourself." And quietly, but with speed, he unlocked the folding doors.

In a moment the two rooms became as one. Gerald moved forward, his brother following.

She whom they sought stood, just then, between the clergyman and Clyde. Mrs. Brawne, with commonplace visage and a queer, festive flutter about her toilet, was slightly in the background.

Having approached within a few steps of the woman he meant to marry that morning, Gerald drew back and indicated Sylvan by a quick wave of his hand.

"This," he said, looking straight at Perdita, "is my brother."

She grew very white, and remained for a few seconds motionless, with her gaze on Sylvan's face. Then she sprang to Gerald and clutched his arm.

"Your—your brother?" she questioned. "Yes," said Gerald.

She had not taken her eyes from Sylvan. Clyde, who watched her now, never forgot the surge of intelligence mixed with frightful agony that soon swept across her features. In another instant her clasp on Gerald's arm loosened. She staggered toward Sylvan. Her eyes had now the look of being dragged from their sockets. Her frail, pure throat became seamed with lines as of straining tendons.

"Oh! my God!" she cried. "It all comes back! I—I remember!"

In that one last word rang out such anguish as a perishing soul might utter if damned by a sense of either its own despair, misfortune or disgrace.

"Lucia!" exclaimed Sylvan. He advanced as though to meet her. But even then she sank to the floor—sank with collapse so quick and terrible that no arm of those near by had enough mingled force and swiftness to break her fall. Gerald was the first to raise her, and as he did so a wild cry of sorrow broke from his lips. He had told himself, in that single fleet glance at her bluish altered face, that she had ceased to live. . . . And soon afterward, when she had been borne to a sofa, Clyde bent over her and verified the ghastly conviction.

"Her heart has been feeble for weeks," he said, when no gleam of doubt as to her death longer dwelt with him. Rising from the sofa, he gazed with great gentleness and compassion at Sylvan, saying:

"She was your wife, then?" "Yes," answered Sylvan.

At this point Gerald tore something from an inner pocket. "The manuscript and the letter!" he cried, in a voice throbbing with misery. "Take them—burn them! you are right; they are accursed!"

Sylvan received the envelope in a dazed way, with shaking hand. The morning, in spite of its sunshine, had been somewhat chill; a fire of big black coal-blocks flashed and crackled below the mantel. Sylvan examined the papers, for a brief space, as well as his keen agitation would permit. Then he almost recoiled toward the grate and flung them in among the yellow, coiling flames.

Nearly a month had passed when one evening Clyde and his friend Ross Thornadyke sat together.

"It is charming," said Clyde, "to think of Gerald's devotion to his brother nowadays. Instead of that horror having divided them it has made them better friends than ever before."

"Poor Sylvan is doomed, I fear," said Thornadyke. "His father's old malady has him in its clutch."

"Yes. There seems every sign of an incurable decay." The two friends were seated in Clyde's charming study, full of books and of artistic touches in the way of picture, bust or tapestry. Clyde let his eyes wander for awhile among these various proofs of his own taste and culture. Then he slowly said, with a half-smile playing between his lips:

"If all record of the elixir had not been lost, its powers of healing might be tried on poor Sylvan now. I don't refer to any greater powers it might have possessed, my dear Thornadyke, so don't watch in me that half-contemptuous fashion. I merely mean—"

But here Thornadyke gave his gray beard an impatient pull and flung one leg irritably across the other. "Oh, Clyde, Clyde!" he protested. "I often wonder that imagination of yours has ever allowed you to become the brilliant practitioner you are. Upon my word, I believe you secretly think there was something sane in Egbert Maynard's queer deception, after all."

"I can't help but wonder, sometimes," returned Clyde, "at the resuscitation of that drowned woman!"

"Wonder at it?" echoed Thornadyke with unsparring scorn. "Why, how many thousands of so-called drowned people have been revived by a dose of stimulant!"

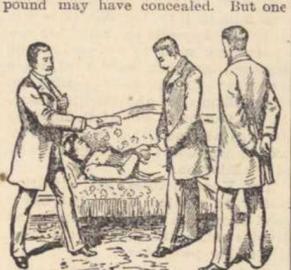

"Then you admit—"

"That it is a stimulant? What else could it have been? But no more so than brandy—and perhaps not as much."

Clyde got up from his chair, with both hands thrust into his trousers pockets and with head reflectively drooped. "No, I won't admit that," he said; "I simply won't. There were novel methods of dealing with electricity pointed out by Maynard in that formula which might have astounded the greatest living chemists."

"Pah!" scoffed Thornadyke. "I should have liked to see any great living chemist give it five minutes of serious attention."

There was now a silence, during which Clyde stared up at one of his rare engravings. "Well, well," he at length murmured, "it's useless to talk now of what merit or humbug the strange compound may have concealed. But one thing is sure: it has wrought grief and ruin enough to have been the shirt of Ness or the 'popped shell' of Medea. And Gerald! how it has drugged him! Do you think he will ever quite recover from its effects?"

"Yes," exclaimed Thornadyke, with a hearty emphasis that was somehow both manful and sweet. "He's young yet, and he's got all the world before him. Besides, you know, he has my warm friendship while I live, and he'll have what's no doubt a good deal more valuable to me after I'm dead."

Clyde turned, with glowing eyes, and went up to his friend's chair, laying a hand on the elder man's shoulder.

"You dear old chap!" he laughed. "No wonder the Chicago fire spared your goods and chattels as it did!"

"Nonsense," muttered Thornadyke, in his beard. "It ruined many a better man!"

[THE END.]

Sad Work with the Birds. The beautiful little mackerel gulls, which, a few years since, were so plentiful in our Maine bays and estuaries, have entirely disappeared, and are now never seen. The cause which effected this was the demand for plume for the decoration of the fall and winter bonnet. So exacting was this that taxidermists established branches near the supply, that they might prepare the skins of these and other birds as soon as killed. For the mackerel gull they paid ten cents each, a price so remunerative to professional gunners that these birds were in the short space of two years practically exterminated. All of the snipe family were also in great demand; even the little ox-eye did not escape, for a single order was placed for 600,000 of these at three cents each to fill an English contract.—Lewiston (Me.) Columbus at the World's Fair.

The World's Fair Directory is recommended by its foreign affairs committee to appropriate $50,000 for the purpose of building at Jackson Park a fair simile of the ancient convent of La Rabida, of Palos, Spain. It is believed that this would be the most appropriate structure possible in which to exhibit the large number of relics of Columbus which is being collected. If the project is carried out, as it seems probable it will be, this building and its contents will doubtless be one of the Exhibition attractions which no visitor will be content to leave without seeing.

It was at the door of the convent of La Rabida that Columbus, disappointed and down-hearted, asked for food and shelter for himself and his child. It was here that he found an asylum for a few years while he developed his plans and prepared the arguments which he submitted to the council at Salamanca. It was in one of the rooms of this convent that he met the Dominican monks in debate, and it was here also that he conferred with Alonso Pizarro, who afterwards commanded one of the vessels of his fleet. In this convent Columbus lived while he was making preparations for his voyage, and on the morning that he sailed from Palos he attended himself the little chapel. There is no building in the world so closely identified with his discovery as this, and fortunately its architecture is of such a character as to permit of its reproduction at a comparatively small cost, and at the same time furnish a picturesque view and appropriate group among the splendid buildings that will be erected at Jackson Park. It will not only be of itself a monument to Columbus, but it will furnish commodious and convenient show rooms for the collections and relics of Columbus that are to be exhibited. Besides a large collection of maps, manuscripts, books and pictures are being secured there will be among them public and private collections both from Europe and the United States. Many of the articles being of great value, it is proposed to bring them all together in this building, where they will be secure from fire and all other dangers.

Northern Alliance Men Beware.

Northern alliance men may do well to study the situation. The Birmingham Age-Herald in an editorial makes the following estimate and draws its conclusions. It says: The alliance representation in Missouri is put down at 90,000, and in Kansas at 120,000. If the Northeastern states the representation is comparatively small, particularly in New England, but New York is credited with 25,000 members and Pennsylvania with 20,000. In the south the figures run up to 75,000 in Alabama and 100,000 in North Carolina.

It is a great mistake to suppose that the entire alliance and kindred organizations will follow the third party movement inaugurated at Cincinnati.

Especially is this not true of the south. The white alliance men in this section are as a rule the staunchest of democrats and will be found voting the democratic ticket in 1892.

So prominent a southern man as Governor Tillman, of South Carolina, has openly repudiated the sub-treasury scheme, and so has the Hon. Eth Wade, secretary of the alliance in Tennessee.

Barring President Polk, no prominent southern alliance man has demonstrated any affinity for the third party.

Things may be different in the west. Party attachments have never been so strong there as here, but the south had as well be eliminated from such calculation as made above. Alabama's alliance men are all democrats.

Believes in the Wool Duty.

The Mandan, (N. Dakota) Pioneer, talks to the farmers of that section this way:

"The tariff on wool is all right and the farmer of this region wants to keep it right where it is. He will do what he can in this direction if he knows what is in his own interest. The republican party is the only party now on deck that is in favor of the present tariff on wool. The democrats are howling to have it taken off. They are looking after the man that wears woolen clothing. As the Pioneer has said before, the settler in these regions, who has to put up with blizzards, frosts, drought, lack of society and the many other disadvantages of frontier life, is entitled to a little sugar in at least one direction. He gets it on the wool he has to sell. The one industry that is helping our settlers more than anything else is the sheep industry, and yet there are some people, and some of them live right here, who want to take away from him what profit he gets out of his wool clip. It is a wonderful thing that there should be men who will, for the sake of a political idea, work and vote, politically, against their interests and the interests of their neighbors and their community, but such is the case."

Spare our loved ones. Hear the pleading.

That goes up from aching hearts. But grim death, our plea unheeding, Pieces with us his fatal dart.

Those who wish us fair would tarry, Those we long so much to keep, And ere long their forms we carry.

To the grave so dark and deep, Pleading with death avails nothing. We must do something to ward off the dart he aims at those we love. We must protect them from him. When the itching cough, the hectic flush, or a pain in the side or chest gives indication of a consumptive tendency, act promptly. Go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This remedy always the inflammation of the delicate lung-tissues. It heals the irritated parts. It strengthens the blood and tones up the debilitated system, and in this way death can be forestalled and his hold upon our friend. It is guaranteed to cure, if taken in time and given a fair trial, or money paid for it will be refunded.

His Sight Failed.

An appalling prospect for anyone to face is that of losing the use of the eyes. A remarkable experience of one of his friends. On returning home from business, he put his glasses in his pocket and lay down for a nap. When he went to dinner he found, to his great alarm, that he could not read a letter which his daughter handed to him. He washed his eyes with a sponge and warm water, but to no purpose. For years his left eye had been comparatively useless, and now that his right eye was apparently affected, the prospect was depressing. He retired to his room at once, with a sinking heart. Probably he could not even see to write. He felt in his pocket, the pocket where he carried the now useless eyeglasses, for a lead pencil. His fingers touched something which sent a thrill of joy through him. His sudden blindness was explained. He had found the pebble out of the right eye of his glasses.

The Dome at Washington.

The capitol dome at Washington is the only considerable dome of iron in the world. It is a vast hollow sphere, weighing 8,000,300 pounds. How much is that? More than 4,000 tons, or almost the weight of 70,000 full-grown persons, or about equal to 1,000 laden coal cars of four tons each, which, if strung out one behind the other, would occupy about a mile and a half of track. On the very top of the dome the allegorical figure "America," weighing 13,985 pounds, lifts its proud head high in air. The pressure of this dome and figure upon the piers and pillars is 14,477 pounds to the square foot. It would, however, require a pressure of 735,386 pounds to the square foot to crush the supports of the dome. The cost of this immense dome was a little short of $1,000,000.

California Oranges.

The orange crop in southern California in 1889 amounted to about 2,200 carloads, each car containing 300 boxes, which means that southern California sent east 660,000 boxes of oranges in that year. The oranges now being packed and shipped from that region will easily fill 3,000 cars, and it is at this rate that the culture is advancing annually in this section. The first oranges in southern California were planted by the old mission fathers, who undoubtedly brought the seed from Spain. In the past ten years the consumption of oranges has grown 500 per cent. in that state alone. Rival and new roads have opened up a market which it has never before known.

A Burglar Captured.

This morning about two o'clock, John Wood, the well-known plumber who resides on Main street, was awakened by hearing glass break. On getting out of bed he received a blow on the head. He immediately grappled with the burglar, and after a terrible struggle, succeeded in holding him until his wife obtained help. On being searched at the station, Mr. Wood's watch and wallet were found on his person. He gave his name as Robert Terry. The broken glass proved to be a bottle of Sulphur Bitters which had a little cured Mrs. Wood of rheumatism.—Exchange.

Wonders

Are wrought by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor in restoring gray hair to its original color, promoting a new growth, preventing the hair from falling, keeping it soft, healthy, and abundant, and the scalp cool, itchy, and free from dandruff or humors. The universal testimony is that this preparation has no equal as a dressing, and is, therefore, indispensable to every well-furnished toilet.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time and it has wrought wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor my hair is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend to one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair to use Ayer's Hair Vigor as a dressing."—Mrs. Lydia O. Moody, East Pittston, Me.

"Some time ago my wife's hair began to come out quite freely.

not only prevented my wife from becoming bald, but it also caused an entirely new growth of hair. I am ready to certify to this statement before a justice of the peace."—H. Hulsebus, Lewisburgh, Iowa.

"Some years ago, after a severe attack of brain fever, my hair all came out. I used such preparations for restoring it as my physicians ordered, but failed to produce a growth of hair. I then tried, successively, several articles recommended by druggists, and all alike fell short of accomplishing the desired result. The last remedy I applied was Ayer's Hair Vigor, which brought a growth of hair in a few weeks. I think I used eight bottles in two years; more than was necessary as a restorative, but I liked it as a dressing, and have continued to use it for that purpose. I believe Ayer's Hair Vigor possesses virtues far above those of any similar preparation now on the market."—Vincent Jones, Richmond, Ind.

THE KALAMAZOO CONVENTION.

The good people of Kalamazoo opened their hospitable doors to the editors of the state last week in a generous way such as to make them all remember that city with pleasurable recollections of a jolly time. For three days there was continual sight seeing, receptions, banquets and entertainment for their guests.

Editors Shakespeare and Dingley are credited mostly with the success of the meeting.

Otsego also tendered an excursion and banquet at the Bardeen Paper mills, where the largest mills in the state were inspected. Otsego is a growing place with several large manufacturing whose weekly pay rolls make glad the merchant. One of the chair factories donated a large easy rocking chair to be given to the homeliest editor present. The choice fell on McMillan of Bay City, who responded in a witty speech concluding himself that he would be all right when slabs came into fashion.

One of the several drives about the city took in the buildings of the Michigan Buggy Co., which turns out $600,000 worth a year with its 250 employees; also the American Playing Card company's establishment where we saw how they print, paste and put up cards.

Of course one would not have been to Kalamazoo if he had not seen the celery growing. We drove through the fields and saw how they get their three crops a year, how they irrigated and tended their little spots, for no one owns over five or ten acres, and most of them but one acre. They are frugal Hollanders who have reclaimed an almost worthless tract, making it worth $200 per acre and over. About 2500 get employment there and it is stated that the celery brings a million dollars a year.

Senator Stockbridge gave an elegant reception at his home, assisted by Mrs. J. C. Burrows and other ladies. There the editors and their wives had the pleasure of meeting Senator Sawyer of Wisconsin, who was also the guest of Michigan's senior member of the U. S. Senate. Next morning the visitors had another taste of his hospitality upon visiting his well known stock farm. There they looked upon $10,000 to $75,000 horses as common as printing presses are about the editors. One could not look anywhere on that half section of land without seeing droves of horses, while a track built on the place shows their perfect appliance for training.

On a hill above the city instead of a fortress with frowning cannon, is a Female Seminary which is doing good work under able teachers. Here a lunch was served and speeches made.

The festivities closed with a good banquet tendered by the citizens of Kalamazoo where a most elegant repast was set before their guests. It was seasoned with toasts, editor Dingley of the Telegraph acting as a graceful toastmaster. Dancing followed until the jolly company broke up to say "Good bye."

The three days were so crowded with sight-seeing that we were unable to visit many of the factories which were thrown open for our inspection. Kalamazoo has nearly thirty manufacturing each of which do $100,000 or over of business every year, among which are the American Wheel Co., the largest of the thirty which control the trade in this country; Ithling & Everard have an immense printing establishment, employing 70 men and girls making blank books, etc.; Frank Henderson is well known everywhere for his secret society regalia, uniforms, etc.; the Cone Coupler Carriage Co. is a new but large establishment getting its name from a peculiar invention attached to the forward axle of their carriages; The St. John Plover Co. have many ingenious inventions on their plows which they turn out to the $200,000 figure every year. Other factories make cigars, washboards, saw mill machinery, railroad velocipedes, springs and axles, pills, wind mills, caskets, paper, flour, etc. too numerous to mention.

Kalamazoo is one of the most beautiful cities not only in Michigan but anywhere on the globe. Its broad, well-shaded streets, elegant houses, pleasant people, industrious factories, combine to make it a lively and charming residence or business town. It lies in the centre of one of the best farming districts, commanding all the trade for many miles around, because there are no other towns near by to draw from it. We believe it will become to Michigan what Rochester is to New York state.

Next January the editors meet in Ann Arbor, and we shall have to hustle to give them as good a time as all enjoyed in Kalamazoo. After that meeting a trip south will be taken to Washington, Richmond, Florida, Alabama and Chattanooga.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Gov. Winans, being a candidate for president, can find use for that $1,000 extra and expenses, for a campaign fund. He has an eye to business all right enough.

Warden Davis is not proving a howling success in the shoes of Warden Hatch. His feet appear to be too small for the shoes, while his head is so enormously large that it makes him top-heavy.

It is the democratic party that is afflicted with an incurable malady, and not any of the republican statesmen, as the papers of that party are continually attempting to make out. Republican doctors will see that a proper surgical operation is performed next year on the democratic anatomy.

Reciprocity is a republican policy, proposed by a republican secretary of state, and adopted by a republican congress approved by a republican President, and carried out by a republican administration. There is a tendency among democratic organs to misrepresent these facts.—Detroit Tribune.

The enhancement of property along the improved highways (in Union County, N. J.) is stated in various proportions, ranging from 10 to 50 per cent.; and in one case, when an official estimate was made, the increase of value due to the improvement of country roads was judicially found to be 15 per cent.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

It wasn't anything out of the way for Gov. Winans, in the interest of economy, to approve a bill, the provisions of which give himself $1,000 a year and expenses, but an appropriation to help entertain and care for the Grand Army Veterans at their national meeting he vetoed! What do the old soldiers amount to, anyway, Governor? They are all growing old, right enough.

The great reformers, who composed the aggregation that assembled as legislators at Lansing last winter, have gone in for economy every time. They did away with several boards having charge of the various penal institutions of the state, and formed one board to control all of them. The former boards served without pay, but this democratic board is provided with a salary of $1,000 for each of its members, besides expenses. All in the interests of economy and reform! To meet these democratic salaries there must be something done, so they reduced the salary of the superintendent of the Reform School at Lansing, from $2,000 to $1,500. The people will pass judgment upon such dastardly extravagant legislation as that, and it will be in no uncertain manner. By this same bill the governor is made a member of the board and receives a cool $1,000 extra and expenses. Great head, for figures, Gov. Winans has got, you will perceive.

The next voting in this state will be under the Australian system. The day of election slips has passed and gone. Now, the names of all the candidates will be printed on a sheet of paper, one of which will be given to an elector by an inspector, and he must either vote it or return it to the inspector. No more ward heelers, no more herding of voters and running them in like so many cattle. A cross opposite the name indicates who you want to vote for, and if the name is not on the ticket, you are at liberty to write it on, space being reserved therefor after each title. The ticket will necessarily be a very large one. The booth will be used the same as heretofore. Now, if the law will prohibit any man from voting who cannot read the ballot he proposes to vote, it will accomplish a still greater and much needed reform. There is no need of ignorant voters in this land of schools. No one should be allowed to show any man how to vote, or to select names for him. It should be made a criminal offense so to do.

Even the Adrian Press, which usually swallows anything democratic without even tasting to see whether it is palatable or not, does not take kindly to all the acts of the late squaw-buck legislature. Hear what it says, it is really refreshing:

The postmaster of the house reports himself short $19.93 in making change. A resolution was offered to reimburse him, and the house committee, A. S. White, J. D. Shull, and L. Lowden, reported in favor of the resolution. The report was adopted. Such action is wholly indefensible, and is a mark of the most vicious and dangerous policy. In the first place the postmaster has no business to be short in making change. He sought the position, and he should have been held to a rigid account for all stamps. There was an excuse for the shortage, and the people should not be called upon to pay for a man's business blunders. We are astonished that such a claim should be submitted, and still more surprised that a committee should recommend paying it. We do not care under what circumstances the shortage occurred. It makes no difference how small the sum. It is encouraging carelessness if not actual dishonesty. The committee might better have recommended prosecution for rather than approval of neglect, and reimbursement. On this theory if the state treasurer makes a "mistake in change" and is short $100,000, the people should make it up. The house deserves censure for the act.

Have the grip—Bulldogs.

If Mrs. Lieut. Peary wears the costume papers array her in, up in Greenland, she will be quite apt to get chilled. She will find it as cold as our friends, the enemy, will in the next election.

One of the most corrupt, partisan, and conscienceless bodies that ever assembled in any state, in any country, to legislate for(?) the people, has just adjourned at Lansing. Requisite as purgatory.

The Adrian Press is so full of wool items that you can almost hear a blat every time you touch the paper. It is tearing itself all to pieces in an endeavor to pull the wool over the eyes of the farmers.

Poul air and disease are an evil pair of twins. Cleanliness and good health are a desirable pair of twins. Twenty thousand dollars and sewers bring us the latter. Inaction and stinginess will bring us the former. Choose.

Two excited New Orleans editors fought a duel with rapiers. A little blood was drawn, but no serious damage done. If they had really meant it they would have hired an Italian apiece to use stilettoes on each other in the dark.

And now comes Venezuela and desires to enter into reciprocal trade with U. S. All right. The more of the South American sister states that desire to establish pleasant commercial relations with Brother Jonathan the better.

The democratic papers do not remember that the last congress had to pay the bills of the former democratic congress, which that body left unprovided for upon its adjournment. With them, that don't count. How about the expenditures of the last Michigan legislature?

In Iowa the republicans have nominated a strong state ticket, with Hon. H. C. Wheeler, a prominent farmer, for governor, and have gone into the campaign with greater unity and vigor than ever before. It is to be hoped that Iowa will be redeemed from the free trade, free silver, and free whisky gang now in control.

The treasury surplus is no longer a standing menace. The billion dollar congress did not long permit such a danger to the republic. The treasury isn't exactly empty, but the bottom is so clean, that any hole in it can be easily discovered without the aid of glasses.—Adrian Press.

There is considerably over $100,000,000 in the treasury yet, but of course such a little sum is nothing to the greed of the hungry democracy. If the treasury is so low covered "any hole in it can be easily discovered" there can be no desire on the part of the Press and its party to assume control of it.

The meeting between the Kaiser of Germany and the Kaiser (in prospect) of England, the other day, was very affecting. As the German Kaiser landed on the English shore he kissed the Prince of Wales, and in return the Prince kissed the hand extended to him. As we said before it was an affecting scene. Then Albert Edward took William to see his, (William's) grandma, Victoria, who, by the way, is the mother of Albert Edward and at present his only stumbling block to England's throne, but a pretty solid one. Then Victoria brought out all her company silver ware and gave a fine spread for her eminent young-grandson and his wife. In the meantime France and Russia have been leant upon the scene with glowering eyebrows. The visit means more than a family reunion with them, and they are consequently laying in an extra supply of fire arms and gunpowder.

The plan of a Farmers' wheat trust to withhold this year's wheat crop from the market until the farmers get their own price for it as telegraphed from Chicago, is not novel. The fact that a similar movement, with cotton as the staple of action, was attempted some four years ago, when the Farmers' Alliance had just begun its operations in the southern states, takes away the item of originality from the present scheme. The results of that attempt may be instructive to the manipulators of the present enterprise. General John B. Gordon, governor of Georgia, conceived the cotton operation. He presented it to English capitalists, who stood ready to furnish any amount of capital necessary to hold the cotton by making advances to those cotton growers who would not be able to hold it without financial assistance. But the innumerable producers, whose consent to the plan was necessary in order to put it into effect, utterly prevented it from being carried out, and we have since seen cotton selling below the lowest record. We fancy that the projected Alliance trust in wheat will have the same ending. It could be put in operation—but only in Utopia.

At last! At last! Yale has had to fall in with the advancement of the times, and has at last admitted a woman. A dispatch states: "The first certificate of admission which Yale has ever granted to a woman, has just been received by Miss Irene W. Colt, of this city. Prof Seymour, of Yale, notified Miss Colt yesterday that she had passed the examination satisfactorily and would be admitted."

Free trade would bring the Canadians to their knees, while such measures as the McKinley Bill only serve to arouse a bitter spirit of retaliation and dislike. For Canadians are apt to believe such legislation is intended as a blow to their trade, and are not aware of its true motive; viz., the squeezing of the purse of the American consumer for the enrichment of a clique of millionaire monopolists. It is well to remember, in considering the future of Canada, that Bismarck secured German unity by welding all the states into a commercial whole, which he easily converted into a solid empire. Canada would rather have to commit commercial suicide or enter the Union, if the Republic declared itself a free trade country.—From "A Brief for Continental Unity," by Walter Blackburn Hart, in New England Magazine for July.

By giving Canadian farmers and manufacturers our trade, and by building them up and enriching them; by throwing open to them the richest markets in the world and allowing them to come in here and take the cream, to the detriment of our own people; by making them wealthy and independent at the expense of our own citizens, we would "bring Canadians to their knees," would we? Now Mr. Hart, would not the case be reversed, completely? Would not a short season of that sort of statesmanship(?) bring our own people to their knees, in a most abject manner? The experiment would be a dangerous one to try. It would be against all precedent, all reason and all common sense. The writer of that article is evidently just out of college, with his head full of theories, that are beautiful to contemplate, but smash as easily as "castles in Spain" when they come in contact with practical life, or else he is a shrewd Canadian. The reference to millionaire monopolists, being benefited by protection, proves how little the writer knows about the subject he is writing upon. He should study political economy from the practical side awhile and gain a little practical wisdom, before he assumes too much. He has evidently been reading a democratic Cobden club document and by "unconsciously" absorbing its vagaries gives them out as his own.

"It is well to remember that Bismarck welded the German states together" by shrewd diplomacy and by the iron hand of military power. Does Mr. Hart pretend to say that commerce had anything to do with the welding process? If so, he better read modern Germany history. The same power that secured German unity secured Alsace and Lorraine as German states and holds them to-day as a part of that solid empire.

It will also be well for this writer to remember that Bismarck was quick to see the wisdom of protection as practiced by the United States, which he at once adopted as the commercial policy of Germany, and under it that nation prospered in a business and commercial way as it never prospered before.

Mr. Hart, free trade throw aside his democratic free trade prejudices and look at the commercial policy of this country as a true American citizen.

Ex-Congressman Allen's Opinion of the Late Legislature.

Ex-Congressman Allen, of Ypsilanti, stopped in this city Friday night en route to Schoolcraft where he delivered the Independence Day address.

From this point the talk drifted to the delinquent squaw-buck legislature. Mr. Allen denounced it in strong terms. "The recent legislature is one of the worst and most disgraceful in history," said he. "This is to a great extent due to a combination of circumstances. The democrats did not expect to carry the last state election and were consequently careless in the choice of candidates. They put up men who they would never be nominated, had they expected them to win, many of them, men with no experience and little reputation. These men assembled at Lansing and they did not know how to conduct themselves. If a parliamentary law stood in the way they swept it aside, letting nothing keep them from attaining the desired end. In this state of affairs I blame the democratic state central committee for the in-qualified legislation of these men more than I do themselves. They were mere men of straw in the hands of the central committee, who decided upon and shaped the measures which have been passed. The central committee should be held responsible, for while many of the legislators knew no better, the committee did."

The senatorial apportionment bill was one of the most outrageous measures ever passed," continued Mr. Allen. "Even Mississippi cannot show a record which will equal it. The democrats have tried the Indiana plan, but they will find that there are more school houses in Michigan than in Indiana. I look for the people to rise and rebuke it. Many democrats themselves see and acknowledge the injustice of it. By this measure the three cities, Detroit, Grand Rapids and Saginaw, will come into control of the legislature. The principal democratic strength is in the cities, and districts were arranged in view of this fact, thus ignoring the rural districts and the farmer. Could anything be more unjust than that one district of Detroit should contain only one-half the population of the republican district consisting of Branch, St. Joseph and Kalamazoo, and that the vote of the urban citizen should be worth two of the rural voter? Then another example is the 27th district, republican, which has contiguous to it the 28th and 29th districts, both democratic and having a combined population of the 27th. That is, the vote a citizen in the 27th district is worth less than half as much as the vote of a citizen in either the 28th or 29th district. Any people which would stand this state of affairs would stand a despot, and I look for the democrats to receive a rebuke."

"What do I think of the new electoral law? I believe it is a plan to neutralize the vote of this measure. The plea made in behalf of this measure is that it is democratic doctrine, why has it not been put into force in democratic states? The plan of dividing the state into two electoral districts is for the purpose of giving the democrats one of the two general electors. I do not believe that Mr. Miner would have introduced such a bill into the legislature of a democratic state. "But this is not the first time individuals have dug a pit for others into which they have themselves fallen, and I look for such an occurrence in this case. Many reputable democrats are themselves disgusted and will unite with the republicans in an effort to remove the tarnish from the fair name of the state."—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

C. R. station here on Tuesday morning, Aug. 4th, for the benefit of Welch Post G. A. R. and their families attending the grand encampment at Detroit, When Chester Fisher, of Oronoko, returned from Ann Arbor the other day he saw his wife for the first time in seven years, The young ladies' society of the Bethel church has chosen the following officers: President, Miss Beta Widenmann; vice-president, Miss Matilda Neumann; sec'y and treas., Miss Pauline Mogk; assistant treasurer, Miss Minnie Bender, Workmen are painting the outside woodwork at the M. C. station, and are oiling and polishing up the inside woodwork, Eugene Malony, a boy about 12 years of age, has got himself into trouble by throwing a stone through one of the windows of car No. 4, of the street railway, Justice Pond and County Commissioner Green will attend to the boy's case, Joseph Lanz, of the 2nd ward, attempted to make it hot for the lice and vermin in his hen house Monday morning, by smoking them out, A society known as 'The Brotherhood of St. Andrews,' is to be organized at St. Andrew's church next Sunday evening, There is some criticism relative to ringing the fire bell in case of fire, There is no automatic arrangement for ringing the bell, and the boys believe in obeying orders, one of the fire is, 'in case of an alarm, get to the fire the first thing,' Every man in the department has lively work to do when an alarm is given, and there is no time to lose, The only way that can be done is to hire some one to ring the bell, It has been rung by some one outside the department, so far, which has been the reason that wards were not rung, They did not understand it.

The Sons of Veterans held a very enjoyable picnic at Cascade glen Thursday last. Just now is a good time to kill those burdock plants with kerosene oil. Take a can and try it. The library of the Unitarian church is open from 4 to 5 o'clock Sundays, during the summer season. Welch Post will have meetings on every Wednesday evening up to the time of the grand encampment. After the soldier boys get out of town to-day for a week's stay, the quietness of Ypsilanti will settle down upon us. Mack & Schmid are to put in an elevator, to accommodate customers desiring to purchase goods on the 2d and 3d floors. There will be a lawn social on Saturday evening, on the grounds of St. Thomas' parsonage, to be given by the ladies of that church. The Sunday School picnic of Bethlehem Lutheran church is to be held in the grove of Mr. Schafer, on the Dexter road, on the 27th inst. Mary Todd, has filed a bill for divorce from Marcellus Tedder, the grounds being drunkenness, abuse, and failure to support. The parties are from Ypsilanti. Five new houses have been started on what is known as the old Bower property, in the 3rd ward, on Cherry st. Five different individuals will own the houses when completed. F. M. Hamilton has started to build a brick addition to his store at the corner of State and William sts. He will have a good looking corner there before he gets through with it. Allmendinger & Schneider received the first sample of new wheat Monday. It was raised by W. H. Pease, of Saline, has a plump, nice berry, and denotes that this year's wheat crop will be a fine one. The state press association at its recent meeting in Kalamazoo, resolved to take a southern trip this winter, and previous to taking it, to gather together in Ann Arbor. It is needless to say that they will be welcome. The employees of the T., A. & N. M. R. R. have been getting restive under the continual cutting down of salaries by the management, and constant lopping off of good men, etc., and rumors of a strike to-day have been rife. Soldier boys from different parts of the state have been passing through here for Whitmore Lake since Monday. They are the advance guard of the main body, sent ahead to get things in readiness for the grand encampment. The latest law firm in the city is that of Cramer & Cramer. The junior member, Seward, graduated at the law department with the class of '91, and is a painstaking and pleasant gentleman, and will have the good will of the Ann Arbor bar and the Ann Arbor people for success. James Webb, of Pittsfield, furnished the seasoned cherry timber, and Herman Krapf, of this city, has turned and trimmed 100 canes for the members of the G. A. R. post, of this city. The sticks are very pretty ones and will be taken to the grand encampment at Detroit next August, by the boys of Welch post. About twenty uniforms have arrived for about fifty boys belonging to the Light Infantry, and now the puzzle is to make them go around, so that all the boys can go to camp to-day. Thomas Matthews and John Gow, the printers who are under arrest for the villainous offence of rape, were held by Justice Pond Saturday for trial in the circuit court, bonds being fixed at $1,000, which Matthews furnished. Gow was returned to jail. The new sidewalks being put down in various parts of the city attest the efficiency of our Board of Public Works. No greater improvement in the looks of the city could be made, and nothing could be more beneficial to the smooth running of a pedestrian's mind, than good sidewalks. The plan for sewerage proposed by Prof. Greene, and for which he has drawn plans, are the same as Kalamazoo has had in successful operation for several years. It will be no experiment, but will be successful from the start. The right of the city to empty its sewerage into the river is the same that Kalamazoo has. Steamboat Thompson, colored orator, bishop, pension agent, lawyer general theatrical manager, and all around subscription agent, especially for the 'Grover Cleveland Chapel,' is down on the boards for an oration to be delivered at Dowagiac, on July 31st, before the reunion of the 103d regiment United States colored troops. S. B. will get there—if they send him money enough. 'Cleanliness is next to godliness,' and cleanliness in a city is a necessity of good health is to be taken into consideration. The only way to secure these blessings in Ann Arbor is to construct sewers. It is worth all it will cost to any person in the city in the purification of the air. In some places at least 400 different disagreeable smells greet one's nostrils. Sewers would do away with them. The International Homeopathic Medical Congress, recently held at Atlantic City, adopted a resolution compelling all Homeopathic colleges in this country to adopt a four year's course of study, with a uniform entrance examination, except in case of persons who have a diploma from a high school or from some reputable college. Dr. McLauchlan, of this city, was appointed on a committee whose business it will be to draft a uniform schedule of study to be adopted by all colleges next year, the report to be adopted at the next meeting of the national association at Washington, D. C., in June.

The next union services will be at the Presbyterian church Sunday evening, Rev. Dr. Rust will preach the sermon. Musk-rats appear to be leaving their wonted river homes, and taking up their abode in the city with the aristocratic rats. The fire department were again called last Monday night by some burning rubbish in the rear of Werner's store, on S. Main st. Ladies will not be excluded from the camp at Whitmore Lake, but they will have to find lodgings outside the camp, says Gen Robinson. Mr. Goodspeed has bought the two houses and lots at the corner of N. Ingalls and Catharine sts., and will erect a handsome residence on the corner lot this summer. The barn of Marcella A. O'Connor, of Northfield, was burned on the 8th inst. The contents were insured in the Washnetau Mutual for $400. The origin of fire unknown. The Stockbridge Driving Association announce its annual races for July 23, 30 and 31st. The meeting has always been very successful, and the coming meeting will not be an exception. Wm. Taylor, colored, who is charged with assaulting the well known 'Jeff' Davis, of this city, about two years ago, but who escaped, returned here again Monday and was promptly arrested and placed in jail. The Printers' Ink, a paper published for the 'art preservative,' gives the Allmendinger Piano and Organ Co., of this city, credit for having attractive advertising, but points out one on Lew Clement, just the same. Daniel Pomeroy, who died at Northville last Saturday, aged 93 years, settled in Salem township in 1840, where he lived three years before removing to Northville. His son Mr. A. B. Pomeroy, married Miss Jennie, daughter of Hon. D. McIntyre, of this city. At midnight Saturday, the alarm of fire was caused by the burning of some rags in the sheds of Louis Rhode, on W. Huron st., near the T., & A. R. R. crossing. The fire department boys were there on time, and thus initiated their new hook and ladder truck. No particular damage. E. F. Mills & Co. adopted a plan last year that gave such general satisfaction, and brought so much pleasure to all concerned, that the firm has concluded to make it a permanent arrangement. On the 1st of July, Mr. Mills gives to each employe in the store, a ticket on which is written, 'your vacation will be from July 1st to July 15th,' or whatever date it may be convenient to allow the employe to be away, in each instance two weeks being allowed. Pay goes on just the same, the remaining clerks in the store doing the work of the absent ones. The plan is not only a pleasant one for the clerks, but a humane, and altogether a profitable one for the proprietors. It gives to each a short relaxation from duty, without feeling that they are doing what they cannot afford to do, and helps cement a bond of friendship and good feeling that works advantageously to all concerned. The treatment of Capt. Manly, as commandant of the Soldier's Home, by the democrats upon the board of control, has been simply disgraceful, but tallies well with previous treatment he has received from this same political party. Capt. Manly was made commandant on the condition that he appoint as quartermaster one Shank, an uncle to one Dr. Shank, a democratic member of the board. This uncle Shank appears to have been a catspaw to kill off Capt. Manly, or a fellow who imagined that by virtue of his relationship to the board he could run the institution as he saw fit, so he attempted his airs and promptly got his discharge, as he ought. Then the uncle goes boohooing to Dr. Rush J. Shank, his nephew, who takes up the battle for him and sets down on Capt. Manly. Of course Manly resigned; there was no other honorable course for him. The board accepted his resignation and commended looking for another commandant. One will probably be found who will permit himself to be a figurehead merely, while the two Shanks will run the thing to suit themselves. Great are the Shanks! But the democratic party never did have much use for an honorable, upright old soldier like Capt. Manly. Special Rates to Whitmore Lake. The Encampment of the Michigan State troops will be held at Whitmore Lake July 15th to 20th, and to enable everyone to visit the camp and enjoy its many attractions the T. A. & N. M. R. will sell excursion tickets on July 15, 16, 17 and 18 at one and one-third fare (55 cents) for round trip. But on July 19th and 20th, which will be the most important days of the Encampment, the fare for round trip will be 40 cents. Wheat Crops. In a circular issued by Henry Clews, of New York, the situation of foreign wheat crops and their large shortage is discussed as follows: This very important crop question is now assuming measurable dimensions. As eminent English authority on grain statistics, while anticipating an almost average British crop of wheat, estimates the deficiency in France at 130 million bushels, and some French calculators place the deficit as high as 175 millions. The total European deficiency to be supplied from external sources, the English estimator places at 380 millions of bushels of wheat; or, if we were to accept the figures of the French statistician for France, the total European deficit would be about 430 million bushels. Seemingly, therefore, it may be assumed that Europe will have to import about 400,000,000 bushels of wheat. Such a demand implies a higher price for that cereal than has prevailed during late years; and, were the price estimated at the confessedly low figure of $1 per bushel, it would follow that Europe will have to pay $400,000,000 for other parts of the world for this cereal; which is an amount almost without precedent. Our own crop is variously estimated between 500 and 550 million bushels; and, as prospects now stand, 550 millions is perhaps a fair estimate. Estimating our domestic requirements for various purposes at 360,000,000 bushels, we should have, at this rate, a surplus of 190,000,000 bushels for export, assuming the home stock to remain at its present quantity, whatever that may be. According to these estimates, we are in a position to furnish to Europe close upon, or possibly fully, one-half of its total required imports of wheat. This means that this one item of our exports will amount to something near $200,000,000. To the United States, this is a very exhilarating prospect; but to Europe it is a very gloomy one. Even were the European nations in a prosperous condition, such an extraordinary necessity to buy bread from foreign countries would be appalling; but, coming after an enfeebling financial crisis, on the heels of a large drain of gold into Russia, and at a time when industry is contracting and foreign trade is languishing,—what may be the possible result of these short harvests to Europe? It is useless to predict; and it is imperative to wait for consequences. The present attitude of expectancy assumed by Wall Street is the only safe and wise one under such circumstances. It is not likely that we shall be permitted to reap this advantage of a great crop without some sort of drawback, and it is wise to wait and see in what form that drawback is likely to come. Europe will find it impossible to pay us for our wheat without making some sacrifice. She will offer her products to us at low prices, or consign them for sale at what they will bring; if we accept them freely, our wheat will be so far paid for in goods instead of gold; if we buy only our usual quantity of imports, then Europe will be compelled to pay us largely in our securities there. The annual meeting of the Washnetau county medical society was held yesterday at the Hawkins house in Ypsilanti. Dr. Gibbs, of this city, was made president; Dr. Taylor, of Ypsilanti, vice-president; Dr. Darling, of Ann Arbor, secretary; and Dr. Owen, of Ypsilanti, treasurer. The school board at their meeting last evening elected Miss McGilvray as teacher in the 1st ward, Miss Marska in the 2nd, and Miss Hamilton to take Miss Wines' place in 4th ward. Miss Clinton and Miss Feiner were elected cadets. The board decided to have German taught in 2nd ward next year by Miss Gundert. The board also decided to have a sewer built connecting with the new University hospital sewer. Marriage Licenses. No. Age 1254. James C. Partridge, Superior, 44 Rachel Bryant, Superior, 42 1255. The Observer thinks that "the Ann Arbor boys had other business," is the reason they did not materialize for the proposed game on the 4th of July. If it was only better business.
Aurora Whitehead, of York, has a dog that appears to be worth its weight in coin. A tramp who called there recently, and went to making himself familiar and abusive, was taken care of by this dog in good shape.
You may know that it has been quiet in town the past few days when we announce that one of our business men has twice fallen asleep in the day time and his cigar burned holes in his pants.—Manchester Enterprise.
A Chelsea doctor apologizes, in a letter to the Herald, in this way: "I try to avoid having my name appear in the public papers." The Herald ought to assist him, instead of giving up a half column to his use to puff another doctor who is to take his place temporarily.
A conductor says that female tramps are on the increase. They are not as daring as the men in jumping on or off trains, but they are found hanging all over a freight car, on the trucks or clinging to the truss rods by hands and feet. In fact in a good many dangerous places that a male tramp would never think of getting in.—Observer.
A lady enquired of us this morning what gang of rowdies it was that came into town about one o'clock this morning, whooping like a lot of Comanche Indians. We informed her that they were no rowdies, but some of the boys of tent 300, K. O. T. M., who had been up to Salem to visit the Bees there and had a royal good time.—Plymouth Mail.

The last service in the old M. E. church was held last Sunday. Of it the Ypsilanti says: "It has for a long time served well both the Methodist congregation and the public generally. But it has grown old in the service, and its bent form and wrinkled brow tell plainly that its work is done. The congregation has long felt the need of a more commodious and attractive church edifice. It has really become a necessity."
C. J. Denison, a young man from Ann Arbor who is working at Hiram Martin's, south of town, met with a painful accident this morning. They were cutting rye and he was walking beside the binder occasionally pulling off a bundle when it became lodged, and as he stumbled against a stone and fell, his left hand was caught in the cog wheels which operate the bundle dropper. He was taken in a carriage and brought to Dr. Lynch's office where it was found that all the fingers had been badly bruised and the joints of the second and third fingers were broken. He had a bad looking hand and it took some time to fix him up. He will have some stiff fingers, undoubtedly.—Manchester Enterprise.
Though no celebration of the fourth was in Dundee, no lack of enthusiasm among those who remained at home during the day. The usual amount of fire crackers were used in making a noise, also various species of artillery. These not being loud enough, the iron cannon belonging to J. H. Cassidy was brought into use, and belched forth its thundering near the "central park." It was being fired by Jas. Van Nest and R. B. Davis and, it being loaded extra heavily, burst. One large piece first struck the ground near where it was being used then bounded into a tree on the park and from thence flew a distance of some 20 or 30 rods, striking the ground two or three times in its flight. Though many were standing near when the bursting took place, no one was injured. A miraculous escape.—Reporter.

Literary Notes.
Here is the July number of Our Little Ones and the Nursery, chock full of pretty pictures and nice little stories for the wee ones. How mama will have to read these little stories over and over again for little tootsy wootsy. But they make her happy and teach her the ways of life. Get one for your little girl or boy only $1.50 a year.
Hon Carroll D. Wright will discuss The Value of Statistics in the August Popular Science Monthly, explaining how tables of figures should be used, and showing how they are sometimes made to give false evidence.

Outing for July contains a wealth of beautiful illustrations and interesting articles upon sport, pastime and travel. The record departments are also very complete.
In his article, entitled From Fetich to Hygiene, to appear in The Popular Science Monthly for August, Dr. Andrew D. White presents a terrible picture of the ravages of epidemics in the times when prayers and processions were the only means relied upon to check them.
The publishers of Outing made no idle boast when they announced that that John Seymour Wood's great story "Harry's Career at Yale," would delight the million, and Outing for July contains additional chapters of this fascinating picture of American college life, and a wealth of richly illustrated articles of fiction, sport, travel, etc.
"Teaching in Both Continents" is the title of a carefully prepared volume by E. C. Grasby, which is introduced to American readers by Prof. W. T. Harris, which will be published by the Cassell Publishing Co. It is a comparative study of our school system in connection with those of other nations. "In this book," says Prof. Harris, "we have the rare opportunity of seeing our educational system as it appears to one of our large-minded cousins from the opposite side of the world," and, he adds, "the very intelligent criticisms of Mr. Grasby will be read with profit by our teachers and school directors."
Just before her bereavement, Lady Macdonald, widow of the late Sir John Macdonald, completed her first ambitious literary effort in a series of articles for 'The Ladies' Home Journal,' the first of which will appear in the August number of that periodical. Last summer, Lady Macdonald, with a party of friends, traveled in her private car through the most picturesque parts of Canada, and in a delightfully fresh manner she describes her experiences on this trip, in these articles to which she has given the title of "An Unconventional Holiday." A series of beautiful illustrations furnished by Lady Macdonald, will accompany the articles.
An admirable full-page portrait of Oliver Wendell Holmes forms the frontispiece of the July Arena. A critical paper by George Stewart, D. C. L., LL. D., the well-known editor and critic of Quebec, treats of the life and literary labors of Dr. Holmes, in a manner at once scholarly and absorbingly interesting. Probably the most notable paper in this issue is Edgar Fawcett's "Plutocracy and Snobbery in New York." In it the weaknesses, foibles, and evils of high life in the metropolis are boldly dealt with in a masterly manner, while Prof. Buchanan's closing paper on "Revolutionary Measures and Neglected Crimes" strikes boldly at the very evils which Mr. Fawcett so vividly depicts.

LADY JOHN MACDONALD.

The parallel of resemblance between Lord Beaconsfield and Sir John Macdonald that continued throughout their lives, has not even terminated with death. Disraeli, declining the peerage for himself, accepted it for his wife; Sir John received no title of nobility in his own person, but the royal grace has been reserved for his widow, Lady Macdonald, who has been made a peeress by Queen Victoria. It was merely an acknowledgement of her husband's, the late premier of Canada, long and distinguished public service. This news was received by Lady Macdonald with great pleasure. It is said that she will be called Countess of Earncliffe.

The following, from the Coldwater Courier, rights a man before the people, who has been greatly wronged:

"Last week Thursday, Gov. Winans recalled and revoked the warrant he had issued against Col. C. V. R. Pond upon a requisition from Kansas. The Governor became satisfied that a gross outrage and wrong had been done our townsman, and that the charges were made by irresponsible parties, for blackmailing purposes. From letters received from Kansas by Judge Shipman and from every move that has been made by the parties making the charges against the Colonel, comes the strongest evidence that wholly irresponsible parties, beyond the reach of law, have attempted to destroy the character of, and cause heavy expense to, a man who is probably as well known in the County of Branch and in the State of Michigan as any other citizen, public or private, and against whom not a taint of dishonor has ever rested. That so great a wrong should have been done our fellow townsman is regretted by all, and the sympathy of a host of friends goes out to Col. Pond, who through the trying and embarrassing hours of the past few weeks has not even permitted the moments received to interfere for a moment with the great work imposed upon him as Secretary of the National Encampment, G. A. R. To those of us who have known the man for years it has been no surprise to find him sinking all thought of self in the terrible attack upon his character, and working day and night for the success of a movement that means benefit and pleasure to his fellows. The Colonel's attitude through the trying ordeal has won him many more friends."
