PROOF OF THE PUDDING.

Brag vs. Facts and Figures—How the Ann Arbor Weeklies Cater to Their Readers.

Several times one or two of our contemporaries have had items in to the effect that they gave more reading matter than any other paper in the county. An assertion that was of course mere brag, and could not be borne out by the facts. Any person reading all the papers would know better, but many people take only one, and so do not have an opportunity to judge.

The last issue of the Argus, for instance, had this item, which has a decided squint at "the best paper" racket:

The Argus is the only paper in the county this week which is all set at home, except the electrotyped advertisements. So that every reader should read the inside pages. Our original resume of this week's demotic and foreign news is a new feature, which we think worthy of notice.

That the people may know something of the amount of reading matter each paper gives, we will take the issue of last week of each English weekly as a fair guide for knowledge about the matter. The amount of reading matter given by each of the four English weeklies last week, measured by the printer's standard, was as follows:

Register, - - - - - -	67,970 ems.
Argus, - - - - - -	75,300 "
Democrat, - - - - - -	77,420 "
Courier, - - - - - -	113,980 "

A slight difference, it will be noted, in favor of the Courier.

Of the above amount of reading matter the various papers set at home:

Democrat, - - - - - -	29,560 ems.
Register, - - - - - -	41,740 "
Argus, - - - - - -	73,450 "
Courier, - - - - - -	79,200 "

Another difference in favor of the Courier. In fact the Courier sets at home more matter than the Argus and gives several columns of interesting reading matter besides.

Take another method. The Argus in its personal column, gives 113 lines to the column, while the Courier gives 160 lines. The difference being made by the Argus' using leads liberally.

Again: The Argus gave 58 separate items among its personals, the Courier 144.

The Argus gave 57 items in its local column, the Courier, 59, each making three columns, the Argus' items being separated by two leads and a dash rule, the Courier's items by two leads simply; in other words, there were 409 lines in the Courier's items and 350 lines in the Argus' items. Other departments of the two papers will bear out the same ratio.

The Courier gave three columns to the concluding chapters of what has been an exceedingly interesting story, also one column of excellent poetry, two good pictures of eminent people with short sketches of the same, one being that of President Balmaceda, of Chili, the other that of Lady John Macdonald, widow of the late Canadian premier, none of which features will be found in the Argus.

In making these comparisons, it is not intended to find fault with our neighbors. Not one among them but gives double the amount of reading matter they receive pay for, but they sometimes crow too quick over themselves.

In this week's issue will be found 121,960 ems of reading matter, of which 105,442 ems were set at home. A record hard to beat, is it not?

It is understood that someone is attempting to put up a job on this city, and get it bonded for $200,000, to build a system of sewers. Ann Arbor is now practically out of debt and ought to remain so. It is the biggest card possible, and gives her more good and more free advertising than can be obtained in any other way. Ypsilanti will this year pay $17,400 bonds and interest, on an assesment of $2,600,000. Supposing Ann Arbor should raise $20,000 on her assessment of $6,000,000? Would the burden be great? If the people of Ann Arbor are as wise in the future as they have been in the past, they will keep out of debt. The state Gazetteer, in speaking of Ann Arbor says: "Of late years an era of prosperity has come to the city, and it has grown steadily in population and wealth. It enjoys the distinction of having no debt, and the lowest taxation of any city in Michigan." Let a fearful epidemic get hold of the community some time and it may entirely spoil our good name.

TIDINGS FROM THE EAST.

A Beautiful Description of a Leaf-Embowered Temple of Justice.

Johnstown, N. Y., July 13th '91.

Editor of the Courier:—In the center of this old town, once owned principally by Sir William Johnson, there stands a modest, red brick, tile roofed Court House, with its recent coat—the beautiful and venerable elms that surround it. I am led to speculate whether the Washtenaw County Court House, with its recent coatings, will one day inspire a visitor to speak as one has written of the Johnstown Court House, which I enclose, as follows:

"They tell me this temple of justice is 119 years old. One hundred and nineteen! What does it mean? It means the coming down through four or five generations of people who have lived, flourished and gone, but have more or less of their doings recorded here. It means the progress of the country from a wilderness, disturbed only by the howlings of the wild animals that roamed freely over the adjoining hills with no fear of disturbance, save from the long since departed Indian, who had equal undisturbed license along the shores of the classic Scandaga and the somewhat lesser Cayadutta. It means that among the records surrounded by those ancient walls may be found doings of men whose very bones have long since gone to decay and dust, whose works live after them, preserved as riches to govern and guide those who might come and search for wisdom here. It means that among the dusty records here preserved, may be found a history of the many legal battles which throughout those long years, have taken place within these walls; presided over, directed and decided by wise men, men feared in the law, it may be to a greater degree than those who are directing things in these walls to-day. It means, in short, that the works of men, although temporary and transient, yet sometimes live long after those who were active in the construction are gone and forgotten. No living being is living now, who witnessed the erection of these walls so fresh and sound, and we may well wonder at the laws which allow the works of man to stand for so many generations, but that there are no certain penaceas for the ills of life, and no way yet discovered through which he can escape the ravages of death and the certainty of leaving much of his works behind him. But such is the will and the order of the Great Ruler, a mystery to man, but evidently His great plan."

"TRAVELLER."

There is on our desk a specimen tin shingle, made of American material, by American workmen, in the American city of Philadelphia, by the American firm of Taylor & Co., with American capital. It is a shingle to be proud of, very proud of. It doesn't cost any more than the Welch article did, and is warranted to be exactly as good an article or the man who purchases it may return it to the company and get his money back. The billion dollar congress passed the law that made this result possible. The McKinley bill provided for it. The tin industry will furnish employment to thousands of men, and these men will keep the farmer's plow moving. Republican legislation did it.

The Courier understands the constitution as well as the Argus, and the republican party has always obeyed the constitution, but the last legislature either did not know that there was such a document in existence, or did not care anything about it. The law passed by them, consolidating the boards for the reformatory institutions of this state makes the governor a member of the new board, not a member ex-officio, and gives each member $1,000 per year and expenses. Of course, the law is unconstitutional, and so are a large number of other laws passed by the infamous squawbucks.

A lady in Clifton Springs, N. Y., a few days since wrote Supt. Fall, enclosing $1 for a package of Ann Arbor street car tickets, which were duly sent. In acknowledging the receipt of the same she says: "I want to compliment the company on having the only artistic tickets in Michigan."

Stephen Adams desires us to announce that he has no connection with the coming 3d of August Emancipation celebration in this city, either directly or indirectly, and that his name has been used by the management without his consent.

The cleansing, antiseptic and healing qualities of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy are unequalled.

TOM AND GEORGE.

An O'er True (Fish) Tale, Thrilling and Somewhat Blood Curdling.

Two of Ann Arbor's old officers of the law loaded up—(their pockets and lunch baskets)—and started for a day's recreation in fishing at Mud lake, the other day. They had several bites—of lunch, etc.—during the morning, and were met by an occasional demand for blood—from mosquitoes—which they reluctantly and nervously complied with. It did not appear to be a good day for fishing, and luck had clearly deserted them.

Along toward night one of the desperate anglers had lively evidence that he had caught something. He went to hauling in his line, but it soon became apparent that he must have assistance. He was sure he had a whale. Tom took hold to help him, and swore it was a whale. Finally the two managed to get their catch in the boat, and what was their astonishment to find it only a little black turtle about five or six inches across the back.

Tom prespired freely and George was paralyzed. To their credit be it said that neither one swore, (they probably couldn't, were too overcome.)

The turtle had swallowed the hook, and in attempting to get it out, George got his finger in its mouth. Tom whipped out his knife and cut the turtle's head off, but in executing the job, the turtle attempted to haul its head into its shell and by so doing the end of George's finger was neatly amputated.

They were in a sad plight. Lunch, etc. all gone, no fish, and the end of one finger off.

When they started for home Tom took the turtle's head and put it in his pocket. George saw the act and mistrusted something. So he took the amphibian's carcass and put it in his pocket.

On the way home neither said a word to the other, but Tom all the time wondered what George was going to do with the carcass, and George mused over Tom's intentions respecting the head. Upon reaching home they bade each other good night and parted.

The next day the story leaked out. Tom took the head to City Clerk Miller and demanded the sparrow bounty on it. He told Miller that the bird was about his house destroying property and he had killed it and salted its head. The city clerk eyed the head suspiciously, when Tom chimed in with: "I know this is not a common sparrow; it is a new, mammoth species, that is very destructive, in fact this head ought to bring ten cents." At this the clerk "caught on," and handing Tom a nickle, he said he would keep this specimen in his private museum of curiousities, or donate it to the county pioneer society.

George hunted up Town Clerk Chas. Parshall and throwing out the headless turtle told Charlie that he would like 25 cents for that.

"Why?" asked Charlie, very much surprised. "Because that's a woodchuck scalp, don't you know."

Charlie looked at the "scalp" a moment, turned on his heel and departed and George has not seen or heard from him since. It is feared the shock has had a fatal effect.

Regents Meeting.

The regents at their regular meeting last Saturday, did considerable business.

The contract for the new law addition was let to Lane & Morris, Detroit, they being the only bidders for $31,132, and the addition to the engineering department to the same firm for $13,186. Out of both of which contracts the firm backed out, and new proposals will be received. Wm. Biggs took the contract for the addition to the President's house for $7,156.94.

Prof. J. W. Langley was retained as lecturer upon metallurgy; Dr. Breakey was reappointed lecturer on dermatology, with $300 salary; Dr. J. A. C. Hildner, of Detroit was appointed instructor in German and given $900 per year. Dr. Gibbes was given an assistant at $600 per year.

In the afternoon the board appointed Nathan D. Abbott, of Boston, lecturer in the law department, together with Judge J. W. Champlain, of Grand Rapids, and Edwin F. Conley, of Detroit.

Prof. Harrington, the new chief of the weather bureau, was granted a leave of absence for one semester; and W. J. Hussey was given charge of the observatory during his absence. B. A. Finney was made assistant librarian; and Sec'y Wade was authorized to appoint an apothecary for the university hospital.

NETTY SEAGRAVES SCHOOL.

BY HENRY MANN.

"I dont' think she will stay at teaching very long about here," remarked Mr. Jonathan Coles, one of the members of the school committee of Burrilltown, to his associate, Dr. Miller, as they started for their homes on a crisp December evening from a meeting of the committee.

After a long and inharmonious discussion the committee had resolved, by a vote of three to two, to begin the next term with a new teacher, a graduate of the State Normal School, instead of the old teacher, nicknamed "Boozie," whose dissipated habits made him unfit to lead children in the way they ought to go. Mr. Coles and Dr. Miller were the minority. "Boozie" was a distant relative of Coles, who adhered to him with unreasoning obstinacy, when his shortcomings and dissipation alienated all who had the interests of the school children at heart, and Dr. Miller voted with Coles because he was his family physician, and was aided by his fellow committeeman in procuring other practice, especially among the town poor.

The new teacher, Miss Nettie Seagrave, began her work after the Christmas holidays. It was her first engagement, but she had graduated very creditably from the Normal Institution, and there could be little doubt that, with a fair degree of encouragement, she would be successful in conducting the little crossroads school at Burrilltown Corners. Trained and educated in the city, the little home on the banks of West River, near the ruins of an old factory, had a lonesome, chilling air under the somber winter sky; but Nettie repressed the feelings which swelled her heart, and determined to do her best, mindful of the widowed mother to whom her darling's welfare was life itself.

School opened on Monday. It consisted only of two classes, one mainly composed of the larger and the other of the smaller boys and girls.

The worst boy in the school was Sam Coles. Not that he was naturally bad, but his erratic, slovenly disposition had been fostered by his former teacher, on account of the father's support as committeeman, and, knowing his parent's antipathy to the change, Sam set out to make things as unpleasant as possible for the new teacher, who was "nothing but a girl," as he remarked scornfully to his schoolmates. Sam might have acted differently had his mother been alive to direct him.

With all her softness and beauty of feature there was a good deal of character in the steel grey eyes of Nettie Seagrave. She had come there to teach that school, and meant to be a teacher while she remained. Therefore, when after two admonitions Sam Coles indulged in loud conversation for the third time, to the disturbance of the other scholars, and even to the evident annoyance of the girl to whom he addressed his remark, he was promptly summoned to the desk.

Sam stepped forward with an air of independence and defiance. The command, and especially the imperative tone in which it was delivered, had taken him by surprise, but he was resolved to brave out the issue and prove to the others that he could browbeat the new teacher.

"Hold out your hand, Samuel Coles!" said Miss Seagrave, calmly and firmly.

"You're not going to hit me, air you?" asked Sam in genuine astonishment, for he was truly astonished that any teacher should have the temerity to whip the son of the committeeman.

"Hold out your hand, I say!" was the only answer, in the same tone, but emphasized by a gleam in the eyes that did not fail to impress Sam that the teacher meant business.

Slowly and reluctantly Sam held out his hand.

"Sam Coles," said the teacher in a gentler voice, as with a woman's tenderness she hesitated to inflict the punishment she felt to be deserved, "you know that you deserve a whipping, but if you promise me on your word that you will behave yourself hereafter I will give you another chance."

Sam looked up at the sweet, young face bending tenderly above him. He caught the glance of the steel grey eyes, and he read in those eyes only kindness and good will. He promised.

Sam Coles went home a different boy. His father was surprised and not altogether pleased to hear him speak well of the new teacher. But Mr. Jonathan Coles was both surprised and pleased to observe, as time passed, the change that came over his son. He began to show evidence of knowing something besides bird hunting and rabbit catching. And he was willing to do his share of the chores, instead of leaving all that, as in times past, to his father and the hired man.

One day Mr. Coles heard his son singing a temperance tune as he sawed away at the fire-wood.

"Where did you learn that?" he asked, with considerable interest.

"The new teacher taught us," answered Sam; "we have a singing class now."

"I must go down and see the new teacher," said Mr. Coles. "I had determined never to go near that school again when 'Boozie' was turned out, but I guess I'll take a look in, for once, at any rate."

"It's examination day next Friday," said Sam, "and that might be the best time to visit the school."

The father assented and Friday at 1 o'clock in the afternoon he stood at the entry of the school house in his Sunday-go-to-meetin' attire.

It was with charm, as well as dignity that Miss Nettie Seagrave welcomed Mr. Coles to a seat on the platform. He had heard a good deal from Sam about the new teacher's attractions and attributed much of it to boyish susceptibility. Now he was convinced that Sam had not exaggerated.

There was as marked an improvement in the scholars as in the teacher since the old days when "Boozie" wielded the ferrule with trembling grasp; and Mr. Coles' cup of satisfaction was full—ere he thought it was—when Sam, as leader of his class, declaimed a piece of elocution with merit and effect.

That evening Mr. Coles visited the new teacher at her residence. As usual at the end of the term the scholars had a week's vacation, and Miss Seagrave's mother came from the city to spend a few days with her daughter.

Mr. Coles was not a homely man. His forty years rested lightly upon him, for he had always lived moderately and temperately, and though not educated he was far from ignorant. He made a favorable impression on Miss Seagrave, and she gave him a sincere invitation to call again. The calls were oft repeated, until at length it became a matter of gossip that "Coles was a-courtin' the school teacher."

The summer passed, and autumn and the Christmas holidays wrre approaching again. The subject of engaging the teacher for another year would have to come up at the next meeting of the committee. It was not without evident nervousness that Mr. Coles alluded to this, one winter evening at the teacher's home.

"You've trained Sam so well that I should hate to have you go," said Mr. Coles, figiting in his chair.

"I'm glad you are satisfied with the boy's progress," replied Miss Seagrave demurely, "I am very much interested in him."

"Ah—hem—well" uttered Mr. Coles, catching at the remark as a long sought peg to hang his suit upon, "perhaps you're interested enough in Sam to take charge of his education alone. Hem—well—you know what I mean."

Miss Seagrave was too sensible a woman to pretend not to know.

"I thought you told me the new teacher would not stay very long at teaching about here," remarked Dr. Miller, jocosely, when he met Mr. Coles soon after the wedding.

"And I am happy to be able to say that she didn't," was the beaming reply of Mr. Coles.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

[OFFICIAL]

COUNCIL CHAMBER,
ANN ARBOR, July 20, 1891.

Regular meeting.

Called to order by Pres. Cooley.

Roll call:

Present — Aldermen Mann, Wines, Herz, Martin, Allmendinger, Fillmore, O'Hearn, Ferguson, Taylor, Rehburg, Kitson and Pres. Cooley. 12.

Absent—Alderman Hall. 1.

Minutes of previous meetings read and approved.

PETITION AND COMMUNICATIONS.

CITY OF ANN ARBOR,
Mayor's Office, July 14th, 1891.

To the Honorable, the Common Council.

Gentlemen:—I herewith return to you with my disapproval so much of the proceedings of your honorable body at your special session held July 13th, 1891, as relates to the following resolution and your adoption thereof:

"That Prof. Greene's Report on "Ann Arbor's Suggested Sewerage System" be made a part of the Council proceedings and be published in full in the official papers: And also bids be received by the Clerk to have 3,000 copies printed in pamphlet form."

My reasons therefor are as follows:

First. Because the said "report" does not appear in the record which it is my duty to examine for approval or disapproval.

Second. Because, aside from its own creative "fiat" the resolution provides no method or agency for "making" the said report "a part of the Council proceedings."

Third. Because the principle is not tolerable that the official press shall print as official copy of the Council proceedings, matter which the original record does not contain.

Fourth. Because compliance with the terms of the said resolution involves an expenditure of public money, and the resolution provides no means of ascertaining by its context how much matter might be printed under the title "Prof. Greene's Report on Ann Arbor's Suggested Sewerage System." "The Arabian Nights," "The History of England," or "the Revised Statutes" might be accommodated with that title and a large bill for public printing be the result.

The principle involved is vital, and as the Mayor's knowledge of the proceedings of the Council is based upon its written record, as the intelligent and responsible exercise of his functions is dependent upon that knowledge I must insist upon such careful method in in framing legislation as will secure the integrity and completeness of the Journal of your proceedings submitted for my inspection.

Respectfully,
WILLIAM G. DOTY,
Mayor.

The veto message of the Mayor, relative to resolutions pertaining to the printing for distribution of Prof. Green's report on sewerage having been read, and thereupon Ald. Martin moved that the vote by which such resolution was passed be reconsidered, which motion prevailed. Whereupon the President stated the question before the Council to be "shall the resolution to print Prof. Greene's report pass, notwithstanding the objection of the Mayor, and such resolution was not passed by Yeas and Nays as follows:

Nays—Aldermen Mann, Wines, Herz, Allmendinger, Fillmore, O'Hearn, Ferguson, Taylor, Rehburg and Kitson. 11.

Yeas—Aldermen Martin and President Cooley. 2.

SPECIAL ORDERS.

The time having arrived at which the matter of laying out a street from Beakes to Detroit Streets was set for hearing, and such special order having been announced by the President. Therefore the Clerk stated that he had caused to be served notices of this hearing on all persons interested therein and due proof of such service was on file at the City Clerk's Office.

After hearing T. D. Kearney, attorney for Mary A. Foley, and Henry W. Douglass, for the Ann Arbor Gas Co., and their statements having been heard.

Alderman Martin offered the following resolution:

WHEREAS, Application having been made to this Common Council to lay out and establish a certain street hereinafter described and due notice of the pendency of such improvement having been given to all persons interested in the lands and tenements required therefor, and this day having been assigned for the hearing of all persons interested therein, and all persons appearing having been heard and due consideration thereof having been had and it appearing therefrom that such proposed street is a public necessity, and that it is necessary to take and acquire certain lands therefor. Therefore be it resolved, and it is hereby ordered and determined, that a street be and the same is hereby laid out and established four (4) rods in width in this city of Ann Arbor, described as follows, to-wit: From Beakes street to Detroit street on the lines of Summit street, projected easterly.

2. It is hereby declared and resolved that the cost of the laying out and of the establishment of such street and also of the lands required therefor be and the same is hereby ordered to be assessed and levied against the owners of and on the lands and tenements benefitted thereby, and that all and singular all the lands, tenements, and taxable real estate situate in and within the following boundaries are deemed and hereby declared to be benefitted by the improvement so ordered as aforesaid, and the same are and are hereby constituted a special assessment district on against and upon which the cost of the said improvement so as aforesaid ordered shall be levied and assessed pursuant to law, that is to say: All of the lots, lands, tenements, and premises fronting on Summit street east of Main street, and west of Beakes street, on Depot street east of Main street, and west of Beakes street, excepting railway company's land, and on Beakes street north of Fifth avenue, and south of Summit street, on the west side of Detroit street north of North street and south of lot 15, in block 4, of Ormsby & Page's Addition to the city of Ann Arbor, also on east side of Detroit street north of Division street, and south of railway company's lands.

Alderman Fillmore moved that the 2nd part of such resolution be stricken out, which motion being put, passed by yeas and nays as follows:

Yeas — Aldermen Wines, Allmendinger, Fillmore, O'Hearn, Ferguson, Rehburg, Kitson and Pres. Cooley. 8.

The following communication from the Board of Fire Commissioners was received:

To the Honorable, the Common Council:

The matter of Firemens' salary and the reference of the subject to this Board by the Common Council, being under consideration. On motion of Commissioner Hutzel, a report thereon was ordered made to the Common Council, and the Board recommended that the salary in the fire department be fixed as follows:

Firemen for the first year of each man, service at the sum of $40 per month.

For the second year at the sum of $45 per month.

For the third year and thereafter at the sum of $50 per month.

Minute men at the sum of $8.00 per month.

Respecting the salary of the Chief of the Fire Department, the commissioners would repectfully recommend that it onght to be raised at least $10 per month.

The present chief combines with his duties that of city poor master, and as such has rendered efficient service to the city, for which he has never received compensation. It would seem just and proper that he should be paid $10 per month for this service the same to come from the poor fund, making his total salary $70 per month. All of which is respectfully submitted.

By order of the Board of Fire Commissioners.
W. J. MILLER, Clerk.

Received and referred to Fire Department Committee.

The following communication from the Board of Health was received:

To the Mayor and Common Council:

The board of health has instructed me to report to your honorable body that in compliance with resolution of the council, adopted June 6th, directing the board of health to supervise the cleaning of the water-works reservoir and mains, the members of the board visited the reservoir, pumping works, receiving basins and wells, on the 18th inst., and made a careful examination of the entire plant.

They found the main reservoir nearly empty, the water within less than three feet of the bottom in center and still less at edges.

The sides of this reservoir are loosely paved with stone, on which a small amount of sediment—chiefly insoluble in water—has deposited. Near the top of the slope a little grass was growing in the crevices between the stones, which the superintendent stated would be pulled out, as is done every summer as becomes necessary.

The water looked clear, considering the tendency to become roiled by work in emptying the reservoir and cleaning the receiving basins. The reservoir is protected by a high fence of pointed pickets 20 ft. or more from the water. The only gate in the fence is kept locked, and in the opinion of the board there is small probability of the water being made impure by the approach or access of persons not having business there.

The lower receiving basin had already been cleaned by removing some deposit of earthy sediment and grass from its walls and bottom, and workmen were removing the same kind of matter from the upper basin. The walls or slopes on two sides of this basin are not paved, and being in somewhat soft and peaty formation, some of the softer matters of the slope, and of the ground through which the outlet of the springs flow, finds its way into the basin and forms a slight sediment and seeds of grasses blow or drift into the basin and readily grow, a condition inevitable in any open basin. We were informed that this grass is pulled out several times during the year. The board recommended that this basin be paved on all sides and on the bottom, and that all water leading from springs be carried in pipes the entire destance. It should be remembered that both these receiving basins are also settling basins, giving better facilities for the water to become clear before it is pumped to the reservoir.

The most interesting sight perhaps, is the abundant flow of beautiful, clear water from the several pipes of the deep wells bored on the grounds of the Water Company. One of these wells alone—a six inch pipe—is estimated to flow 500,000 gallons in 24 hours. These wells are about 60 to 65 feet deep. Other wells are being bored and there is good reason to believe, that these deep wells, which now furnish a large portion of the water supply, will be adequate to supply the city with good wholesome water in abundant quantity. The only springs from which water is now taken are well protected from impurities, and we take pleasure in commending the water to public confidence.

The charter of the company gave it the right to take water from the river in emergencies of other insufficient supply for fire purposes. And it was understood that a pipe connected with the river for that purpose, and many persons believed that this connection still exists.

We deem it important to mention that the superintendent and officers of the company state that contrary to somewhat common opinion, there is now no connection between the water supply and the river. This is evidence of a better supply and better water.

At two subsequent dates the inspector of the board accompanied Mr. Hamilton in a tour of the mains, and witnessed the opening of all hydrants near dead ends usually opened for the purpose of testing the condition of the pipes, and the water. And he reports that the water was found clear and in good condition after running a few minutes.

An additional pump is being put in and the capacity of the pumps and engines seem ample for present supply. In the opinion of the board Ann Arbor may be congratulated on having a good water supply.

W. F. BREAKEY,
Health Officer.

The Clerk read four communications from Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids, Jackson, and Flint, in reference to swerage, the several communications were received and referred to Sewerage Committee.

The Women of Japan.

During my recent visit to Japan, says Henry T. Finck, several girls told me how glad they would be if they had the opportunity and means to go to America. They had probably heard of the United States as being the paradise of women, and felt that Japan was not exactly an earthly Eden for them.

Americans call pretty girls angels and adore them as goddesses. The Japanese, on the contrary, compare men with heaven and women with earth. Probably no "foreigner" knows the Japanese as thoroughly as Basil Hall Chamberlain, who has been professor of Philology at the University of Tokio.

"Most Japanese men," he says, "even in the very year of grace, 1890, make no secret of their disdain for the female sex. The way in which they are treated by the men has hitherto been such as might cause a pang to any generous European heart."

This contempt for women is shown in the minutest details of life, as, for example, in mourning etiquette, which prescribes that animal food shall be abstained from and mourning garments worn for 150 days in case of a paternal grandfather, but only 90 days in case of a maternal grandfather; 90 days for the paternal uncle, but only 30 days for the one on the maternal side, etc.

According to the "Greater Learning for Women" there are five feminine vices which four women of every five possess—disobedience, malice, slander, jealousy and stupidity—whence arises their inferiority to man. Even woman's four possible virtues are such as chiefly benefit man—gentleness, obedience, mercy and quietness.

A Japanese Budhist text says that "a woman's exterior is that of a saint, but her heart is that of a demon."

Every tourist who has visited Japan will agree as to the malicious falseness of these ungallant remarks on the gentle, courteous, sweet and graceful little women of the island empire.—Chicago Times.

Of the Bank of Waverly, Iowa, says: Sulphur Bitters saved my life. For ten years I suffered from Catarrh and Liver Complaint; I lost 45 pounds and was growing worse rapidly. A Very Close Shave.

One day the man at the wheel called my attention to a medium sized shark that was following in the wake of the ship, voraciously devouring the waste food emptied through the chute by the cook or the steward. When the sailor, Jack Donnelly by name, was relieved from his trick at the wheel he exclaimed as he passed me;

"Bad time to fall overboard, now sir."

"Why so?" I naturally questioned.

He pointed to the shark that had followed alongside the midships as we walked forward.

"What do you bait them with?" I asked.

"A piece of fat pork, mostly, sir; an' they rubs er bit a brimstone on't at night, so 's it shines like a bonito eye, an' ther old undertaker kin see it in the dark."

The next day was cloudy, but I trailed a pound of salt pork on the end of a hook and chain, and watched it steadily until dog-watch. At eight bells the day after, I lost sight of him altogether: so, after taking the sun and figuring out our latitude and longitude, I sat down on the port bitts abaft of the wheelhouse, where I soon became immersed in Dana's "Two Years Before the Mast." I had attached my shark line to a small handy billy, and had hooked the tackle to a screw eye on the bits. That which would have ordinarily have been the loose end or hauling part was also belayed to the bits, a circumstance that proved very fortunate for me.

The wind died down, and the sun waxed hotter and hotter as the yards creaked in the slings with the listless rocking of the vessel. The creaking acted as a lullaby to the rocking, and the sun put me to sleep.

I can never know the length of my nap.

When I was awakened it was with no gentle hand—not even a rough one.

I was being bumped over the monkey rail by the handy billy, in the slack of which my foot had caught, as I probably stirred it while asleep. My "Two Years Before the Mast" went a long ways abaft the mast, and made an addition to Neptune's nautical library. It probably did not take more than an instant to drag me over the ship's side. Yet I heard the man at the wheel cry out, "an ovMerboard!" and saw a life preserver pass over my head as the latter struck the bead of the vessel near the mizzen chains, where I wound up with a sharp jerk, more surprised than hurt. I hung by my foot, which was held by the round turn of the "haul in" of the handy billy. I was more surprised than injured, but I immediately became more frightened than I had been surprised.

Directly below me, within what I imagined was easy jumping distance, the white belly of a shark flashed beneath the water, and was followed by the appearance of its head below the surface. All of my anatomy between my throat and my knees seemed to leave me. I had just sufficent strength to reach upward and grasp one of the iron braces beneath the mizzen chains and lock my arm tightly around it. On glancing below I nearly lost my senses, but was reassured as I saw that the chain of the bait led into the shark's mouth. It was struggling to free itself from the hook instead of striving to make a meal of me. A grange whizzed by me, and a huzza arose on board as it entered his fish-ship.

"Hang on, boy—hang on!" I heard a cherry voice say. "Now, tip us your flipper, my hearty. Loose that tackle an' let go, my darlin's! Avast there! Pull him in tail fust, so's he can't bite. Did ye never land er shark, ye lubbers?" Then Jack's arm closed around my listless form as my numbed foot was released from its mooring.

"And that's ther bigeest fish ye ever cotched yit, sir. I'll quit plum duff ef 'tain't!" exclaimed a forecastle man when I opened my eyes on the main hatch a few minutes later and viewed the shark that was floundering on the deck with a handspike through his gills.

The next day the cook handed me the vertebrae of the shark strung on a wire, and during the voyage homeward, a year later, I scraped each vertebra until it shone with a luster equal to mother of pearl. On reaching New York, I had them mounted on a steel rod tipped with ebony and gold, and the interstices filled in with hard rubber. I carried it proudly until the centennial year, when some one mistook it for his own while I was dining in a cafe and appropriated it, leaving in its place an applewood stick, worth probably a dime; so I have nothing left to remind me of my mishap while catching a cane.—Frank Leslie's Magazine.

A Burglar Captured.

This morning about two o'clock, John Wood, the well-known plumber who resides on Main street, was awakened by hearing glass break. On getting out of bed he received a blow on the head. He immediately grappled with the burglar, and after a terrible struggle, succeeded in holding him until his wife obtained help. On being searched at the station, Mr. Wood's watch and wallet were found on his person. He gave his name as Robert Terry. The broken glass proved to be a bottle of Sulphur Bitters which had almost cured Mrs. Wood of rheumatism.—Exchange.

He Hated Bicycles.

From the Chicago Tribune.

"Gosh durn a bi-sickle!"

The immediate cause of the remark was the fact that Farmer Absalom Wycoff, driving to Chicago on his first trip to the big city in his own new spring wagon, accompanied by his wife, saw a wheelman in the road ahead of him going in the same direction.

If there was anything Farmer Wycoff hated worse than anything else it was a bicycle pronounced always by that distinguished agriculturalist as if it rhymed with pickle.

"If that fellow dont' get out of my way," he said to Mrs. Wycoff, "I'll run right over him, b' gosh!"

He whipped up his horse.

The bicycler, hearing the rattling of a wagon behind him, turned his head, caught a glimpse of Absalom's eye, recognized him instinctively as one of those beings known to 'cyclers as "road hogs," pressed his pedals faster, and began to lengthen the distance between himself and his pursuer.

Absalom lashed his horses to a higher rate of speed and yelled to the flying wheelman in front:

"Git down off'n that thing!"

A young man on a "pneumatic" safety whizzed by him.

"Look there, Absalom!" exclaimed Mrs. Wycoff.

"I see 'im!" said Absalom, grinding his teeth and making a vain effort to reach the 'cycler with his whip.

"The first one I meet, b'gosh, I'll down him!"

And Absalom, breathing out threatenings of slaughter, drove on.

"You'll get into trouble," said Mrs. Wycoff.

"Trouble!" he snorted, "I can clean out a barnfull of 'em!"

"There comes one now. Do let him alone, Absalom!"

"Let him alone? I'll paralyze him!"

He stopped his horses, climbed out of the wagon and stood waiting.

Presently he climbed into his wagon and drove ahead again.

The bicycler had proved to be a young woman.

"If I had a girl 'd ride one of them things," he snarled, "I'd horsewhip her!"

They were in a Chicago suburb now, and one of those broad, smooth boulevards that make the Lake City the paradise of wheelmen, stretched away in the distance as far as the eye could see. Absalom was about to invade the enemy in his stronghold, but his spirit was undaunted.

A pair of young bicyclers crossed the road a few rods ahead of him.

He took a potato from the bottom of the wagon and threw it at them with all his force.

One of the boys hastily dismounted, picked up the potato, returned it with surer aim, and knocked Farmer Wycoffs' hat off.

He jumped out of his wagon and ran after the boys.

But he stopped to pick up his hat first. Fatal delay! They were bowling down the street again at a rate of speed he could not hope to equal, and he could only shake his fist, shout vague and unintelligible but probably profane things, and look in vain on the smoothly macadamized road for something deadly to throw at them.

Rich Harvest for a Michigan Farmer.

I have suffered for years with rheumatism, loss of appetite and disordered blood, and after great expenditure of time and money had almost given up all hope of relief. Hearing of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, I grasped it as a last resort, and after using six bottles found almost entire relife. I am now able to work on my farm with ease, which I have not done in years, and I advise all persons suffering with rheumatism and other blood troubles, to try this medicine.

Where There are no Bad Indians.

The Sisseton Indian reservation at the eastern boundary of South Dakota and containing one million acres of choice farming lands, has just been opened for settlement and offers to the homeseeker inducements that cannot be equalled. The soil is very fertile, the country well watered, there being numerous small lakes within its boundary, and it is within a short distance of the northwest, St. Paul and Minneapolis, insuring good markets almost at the settlers doors.

This is not a frontier reservation, but is surrounded on all sides by an old, well settled prosperous country.

The reservation will be held for actual settlers, only homestead entries of 160 acres being permitted, and there is room for more than 6,000 farms. To get the best, however, come early: first come, first served. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway is the only road which runs directly through the reservation. To reach it from the east, buy tickets to Summit, S. D., Waubay, S. D., Wilmot, S. D., or Wheaton, Minn. Summit is within the reservation, the other stations on the border. All ticket agents in the United States or Canada sell tickets via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway.

A SCROFULOUS BOY

Running Sores Covered His Body and Head Bones Affected. Cured by Cuticura Remedies.

When six months old, the left hand of our little grandchild began to swell, and had every appearance of a large boil. We poulticed it, but all to no purpose. About five months after it became a running sore. Soon other sores formed. He then had two of them on each hand, and as his blood became more and more impure, it took less time for them to break out. A sore came on the chin, beneath the under lip which was very offensive. His head was one solid scab, discharging a great deal. This was his condition at twenty-two months old, when I undertook the care of him, his mother having died when he was a little more than a year old, of consumption (scrofula, of course). He could walk a little, but could not get up if he fell down, and could not move when in bed, having no use of his hands. I immediately commenced with the CUTICURA REMEDIES, using all freely. One sore after another healed, a bony matter forming in each one of these five deep ones just before healing, which would finally grow loose and were taken out; then they would heal rapidly. One of these ugly bone formations I preserved. After taking a dozen and a half bottles he was completely cured, and is now, at the age of six years, a strong and healthy child. MRS. E. S. DRIGGS.

SEWERAGE "CRITICISM."

For two years or more the common council and a committee of the Business Men's Association of this city have been studying up the important and to Ann Arbor, the pressing question of sewerage. One or two reports have been made, and much time expended in gaining information thereon, and Prof. Chas. E. Greene, who is considered at the head of his profession, has drawn plans and perfected details for a complete system of sewers in the city, which have been submitted to the council, and a long report of the same was officially published a year or so ago in the Argus, and yet that paper in its last issue says:

The sewerage question is one which demands the fullest and most com plete investigation. It is one on which no man or set of men should arrogate to themselves perfect knowledge.

How long must the question be discussed before it can be acted on? Has any one man or set of men ever arrogated to themselves "perfect knowledge" upon the subject? If so, who? Specify, please.

Further: "When sewerage does come it will be after many bright minds have given utterance to their honest opinions on the subject."

Is the true meaning of the above this?: "I have not had time yet to consider the subject."

Again: "The mere fact that such a proposition is criticised is no sign that the critic is opposed to sewerage."

Oh, no! Certainly not! You turn the hose on to increase the blaze, not to put it out.

"And sewerage will come in time. There is no doubt about that."

If the writer of that will go about the streets almost any evening, and take his nose with him, even he may be convinced that sewerage ought to be here now.

The people pay the taxes. They say whether or not the city will be sewered, and the people think for themselves."

Yes, sir, it is just that class of people who have been thinking for themselves. The ones who pay the taxes are the ones to be consulted. The Argus will find a good many of that class in the Business Men's Association.

"The people will exercise their right of free speech and free judgment and the only way to pass any public improvement is to consult the people."

Not all the people? Some of the people. The editor of the Argus and the city attorney, for instance.

"The chief value of a report does not lie in the names attached to it, but in the reasoning advanced in it."

Now, really, Bro. Beakes, does it not make just a little difference whether the proposition is "ours" or whether some one else conceived it? Just reflect upon that point a moment.

"The mere fact that a dozen of our best business men should announce themselves in favor of any proposition in which the whole people are interested, will not carry such a proposition unless the people understand it clearly enough to see that it is for their good."

No, a few members of the Business Men's Association, or some of the common council do not constitute the people, but they constitute a portion of the people, and a portion, too, who are exceedingly interested in this question, not only because of their own private interests, but because of the interests of the entire city, where all they possess is invested and at stake. They are men who do not go off on chimerical schemes, and men who would be as loath to engage in an enterprise that would lead the city into lawsuits and trouble as either the city attorney or the editor of the Argus, for it would be greatly detrimental to them, to have such a thing happen. They are men who believe in building up Ann Arbor in every way. They are men who are practical and not visionary. They are men who do not propose to sit quietly by and see any clique or set of men put up a job upon the taxpayers of the city. These sewers must be built honestly and economically, and no shrewd money-making schemers must be allowed to put their fingers into it, for their own private benefit.

Whenever a public improvement is proposed, there are always those who stand ready to throw cold water upon it, from different motives. Some because they did not propose the plan themselves, some because they think that another scheme might be suggested by which they could make money out of it, others because some of their friends oppose it, and they are willing to be used as catspaws, and still others who are to be found in every community, because they are on the off side of the enterprise.

The question of sewers is not a political question, in any sense, and the fact that the chairman of the council committee is not in political sympathy with the governing powers of the city ought not to make any difference, as it is intimated it does with some.

All the money would be expended by the party in power, so that there ought not to be any feeling on that score. In regard to emptying the sewerage into the river, the ground has been threshed over several times. It is not a new question, and the only thing to be guided by is precedent. What other places can do, Ann Arbor can do.

There is only one state in the union that prevents cities from running their sewers into rivers, namely, New Jersey. When Michigan becomes as thickly populated as that state, and has as many factories, then the same step may be taken here, but it cannot operate against cities that have already established their sewers. And then, too, there are various ways of disposing of sewerage. Some cities filter it allowing the liquids to flow away, while the solids are carted off or burned up.

The crying necessity at present is sewers, and the questions appertaining thereto can all be settled here as they are in all other places where they have been put in.

There are 250,000 different species of bugs, it is said, all of them after the farmer.

It costs $23.22 per capita to run the city of New York under the control of Tammany.

Free silver coinage lunacy and free trade idiocy will prevent the Campbells from being in it down in Ohio this fall.

Did one dollar ever buy more of the general necessities and conveniences of life than it does now? If so, when was it?

Ex-President Cleveland is now smirking and smiling, and casting amorous glances toward Tammany. Can he cut out D. B. Hill? Well, hardly.

The Australian parliament is seriously considering the question of female suffrage, and it is thought that women will be allowed to vote in that country.

Honestly, now, has the democratic party ever been known to establish or carry out any reforms, either great or small? If so, please enumerate some of them.

If there was a prohibitory duty on some kinds of yarns—democratic yarns about the health of the secretary of state, for instance—it would be a fine thing.

It is estimated by men in position to judge that Washtenaw county will be in debt for running expenses close on to $50,000 by next December. Is it economy? Is it good business judgment?

The American hog will now be admitted to France. This means the genuine American hog, and not its human imitators. The Yankee never fails in securing the right of way it will be noted.

Gen. Benj. Franklin Kelly, who raised the first regiment of loyal troops south of Mason and Dixon's line, and who served in the Union army all through the late war of the rebellion, died last Thursday, at Oakland, Md., aged 84 years.

The adoption of the authors' copyright law by the last congress has been celebrated by a congregation of authors in England. Lovers of books will now have to pay more to satisfy their thirst than they have had to heretofore. No more literary piracy.

The ratio of almshouse paupers in 1880 to the total population was 1 to 758. The census of 1890 made it 1 to 857. The paupers have not increased as fast as the population. Now let congress prohibit pauper immigration, and the country will be far better off, with a far lower ratio.

The Ohio democratic state convention at Cleveland, that renominated Gov. Campbell last week was a harmonious gathering, says the Free Press. Yes, the harmony was quite noticeable. It was the sort that secures democratic victories down in Mississippi, etc., the harmony of the shot gun.

The republican party, ever since it was born under the oaks at Jackson, has been successful in contending for a sound government, a sound currency, and a sound business basis for the entire country. Under the sound policy of the republican party, the nation has flourished as has no other nation in the world. Is it safe to change its policy now? Think about it.

At the fall election of 1890 most of the saloon keepers of Michigan contributed $5 each to the campaign fund of the democratic party, making a sum of upwards of $40,000. In consideration that party, if successful, agreed to reduce the liquor tax from $500 to $300. It did not keep its promise. Now the saloon keepers want to know what they contributed the funds for, and where the money is?

The colored people, through the National Emancipation Monument Association, propose to erect a supurb monument 74 feet high, in the Exposition grounds, commemorative of the emancipation of the negro race. The plans provide for a huge stone plinth surmounted by a negro soldier, and surrounded at the base by bronze statues of Lincoln, Lovejoy, John Brown, Garrison, Phillips and two or three others prominent in the emancipation movement.

If McKinley should happen to be defeated in Ohio it would drive the dismayed republicans into the Blaine camp. On the contrary, if McKinley should pull through he would be a stumbling-block in the way of both Harrison and Blaine. Much depends on the cast of the die this year in the Buckeye state.—Traverse Bay Eagle.

Ah, that "if." It has long stood in the way of democratic success, and still stands there. McKinley will not "be a stumbling-block in the way" of anybody, but he will be the next governor of Ohio, and will ride in to power over a Campbell also.

You may squirm and you may figger—
Do whatever else you will;
But the suggar bowl is bigger
Since McKinley passed the bill.
—Wheeling Intelligencer.

They appear to have changed from drug stores to jug stores, out in Kansas.

If Mr. Blaine would only die, what a source of comfort it would be to the democratic and mugwump press.

Did you notice the silence in Ohio, Grover? They didn't even mention your name. They were too busy harmonizing—"wid bullets."

The last legislature, chosen in the interest of "economy and reform," spent more money than any previous legislature ever did.

If the billion dollar congress had not been preceded by a two-penny congress, it would not have had such a load to shoulder.

Mrs. Gov. Campbell, of Ohio, is said to be a better politician than the Gov. enor, himself. And yet that may not be any great praise for her.

On July 1st there was $754,349,751 in cash in the U. S. treasury, at Washington, D. C. The "agin the government" liars should take some other tact.

Our export trade was to decline under the McKinley law, yet the exports of bread-stuffs alone for June, show an increase of $2,364,483 over the same month last year.

The last congress paid off $265,726,077.48 of the public debt during the two last years of its existence, over $10,500,000 each month. Please note that ye billion dollar howlers.

The customs receipts for the past year were $10,000,000 less than for the previous year. An act of the billion dollar congress, my dear democratic brother.

Parnell and the woman who is now Mrs. Parnell are coming to America to regain their standing. They will slip up. They better stay at home and keep quiet.

When we picked up the Wyandotte Herald the other day, it was with looks of surprise that we glanced over its columns. It has been completely metamorphossed. It is now an eight page paper and bright as a dollar.

Hon. James S. Clarkson, having returned from Europe says: "I am more convinced than ever that the McKinley tariff law is for us the best piece of legislation congress has enacted in many years."

Those who are acquainted with Capt. Manly, and know his personal habits, will never believe the assertion of Dr. Shank about his extravagance, and alleged false statements.

He has always lived an honorable, upright life, and has never been given to extravagance or misrepresentation in any line, except being perhaps too hasty sometimes. No one in Ann Arbor, not even those who personally dislike the Captain, will for a moment entertain any statements effecting his integrity and truthfulness. No, Dr. Shank, whatever else may be said of Capt. Manly, he is not a liar or a spendthrift. There are people in this city who know Shank, and if it comes to a question of veracity between the two, the decision will be made so quick that it will make Shank's head swim.

Commandant Manly says he removed the dead cats from the neglected corners of the Soldier's Home and kept the machinery clean. Was it this kind of reform that the democratic board of managers couldn't stand?—Detroit Tribune.

It seems as though Capt. Manly had been in that party long enough to know that to wash up would be fatal.

AN INTERESTING WOOL COLOQUY.

The Adrian Press a few weeks ago published an imaginary conversation between its editor and Col. March, of the Hillsdale Leader, which was copied into Hall's Grocer. Last week the Leader knocked Stearns off his perch, as follows:

Stearns—Hello, March. What is the price of wool up in Hillsdale?

March—A trifle lower than last year; 25 to 28 cents is about the going price.

Stearns—I thought the McKinley bill was going to raise the price!

March—Who said it would?

Stearns—I dunno! I—I—ahem—Who did say it?

March—I never heard it was going to raise the price, but hold it steady like, give the control of our markets to our own people instead of to foreigners. Our farmers are satisfied with the present price, and are making money on sheep; at the same time the "Poor man's blanket" hasn't been increased in price.

Stearns—That seems to be so, but d—n the McKinley bill anyhow.

March—What is wheat worth in Adrian?

Stearns—I guess about a dollar.

March—The McKinley bill raised the duty on wheat?

Stearns—Yes.

March—Before the McKinley bill passed, wheat was worth only 75 cts. in Adrian was it?

Stearns—75 to 80 cents I guess.

March—Did the McKinley bill raise the price of wheat from 80c to $1.00 per bushel?

Stearns—No! The McKinley bill didn't have anything to do with it; supply and demand——

March—"Suppy land demand?" Well, how about the supply and demand as affecting the price of wool?

Stearns—Oh! You see it don't work the same way on wool it does on wheat!

March—Why?

Stearns—I dunno, but it don't. That's the "infamous" feature of the darned thing. Good bye.

A GREAT CELEBRATION.

The Fourth of July in Mid-Ocean.

To the Editor of the Courier:

The sea-sick ones were gradually crawling upon deck and awakening once again to the fact that life had some pleasures and also responsibilities, one of the latter being a proper recognition of our National Birthday. When we first began to consider the matter, it seemed impossible to do anything worthy the occasion: there was such a dearth of material for decorative purposes, etc., but the ingenuity of the American, aided by the goodwill of the German, accomplished wonders and we finally had such a celebration as few cities of 20,000 in the U. S. did not see. With all deference to the patriotism and enterprise of Ann Arbor, we are sure you did not have its equal. Our colors for the day were made of a piece of red calico, a lady's blue veil and a bit of white muslin.

Our journey had passed with the usual accompaniments of an ocean trip, some rough weather and some rain, but as if in honor of the day, the sun favored us with his presence on the 4th, and we had a fine, warm day. The first program posted was as follows:

The Fourth of July comes this year on the 4th day of the 7th month, next Saturday, and will be celebrated, wind and weather permitting.

1st: From 1 to 5 a. m. the day will be saluted by the general snoring of the passengers. Passengers are requested, meanwhile, to practice snoring in squads, so to snore in concert. A competent instructor will be provided.

2nd: From 10 a. m., Children's festivities. General decoration of passengers and surroundings in red, white and blue. Gentlemen having noses already over-ripe, may omit the red ribbon, so as to give the nose a chance.

3rd: From 2 p. m. grand drill of the rag-a-muffin guards, the last remnant of our Revolutionary soldiers, on which occasion the "Daughters of the Regiment," who acted as Goddess of Liberty at Washington's Inauguration will appear as the Goddess of Liberty. She is now being kept on ice, especially for this occasion.

4th: After dinner fireworks and a balloon ascension, if the young men will volunteer to make the balloon.

5th: From 8 p. m. entertainment in the Dining Hall, consisting of music and speeches; national, patriotic and otherwise; story-telling, jig-dancing, etc. Gentlemen having extemporaneous speeches prepared or in pickle will be in readiness to fire them off.

NOTE.—Ladies must have their heads either covered or uncovered, or they will not be admitted. Dogs, when accompanied by their guardians will be excluded. Fog permitting, the fog whistle will be a feature of the day's entertainment. The piano used on this occasion is one of the Steinbock make, kindly rented on the installment plan.

This program was not carried out to any extent, it being deemed not worthy the occasion. We opened the day by a general salute with cannon, horns, tin pans, etc. In the morning, the steerage passengers had a march on deck, and the children were given bags of candy and nuts. In the aft, we had first a parade and every one ransacked his trunk for bits of color for the uniforms. The ship's band furnished the music and the sailors, some fantastic figures. Field day sports followed, and quite surpassed in merriment created, at least, Field Day at the U. of M. In the evening, an entertainment was given in Dining Saloon consisting of music and speeches. The following telegrams were received:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 4, '91, 5 P. M.

MR CHAIRMAN:
The afternoon papers contain lengthy accounts of the celebration of the glorious day now in progress on the steamer "Gilbert," and the people are waiting for fuller details with great interest. All are pleased to learn that you are being favored with excellent weather. The grand procession in the afternoon must have been intensely interesting. My best regards to Captain Kempf, his officers, and crew.

BENJ. HARRISON,
President of U. S.

BERLIN, July 4, 1891, 5 P. M.

MR. CHAIRMAN:
All Germany rejoices in knowing that many of her sons and daughters with native citizens of America, are, at this moment, celebrating your glorious Fourth of July in mid ocean. The newspapers are full of it. You will be welcomed at Hamburg, on your arrival with open arms, and, if need be, be escorted to your hotel, by a squad of police as guards of honor. There is nothing in Germany too good for you.
My regards to the Captain of the ship and his officers.

WILHELM II,
Emperor of Germany.

The toasts of the evening were: "Our Country," "Teutons and Liberty," "American Women," "German Empire," "The Day We Celebrate," "The Captain and Crew." The responses were made by clergymen, lawyers, physicians, supterintendents of schools, etc. We had not before known how much talent in that line we had in our midst. Afterward, we repaired to the deck, and the captain and crew treated us to grand display of fire works. The masts and yard arms blazed with red, white, and blue, rockets and roman candles lit up the black sky and taken altogether, it was a sight in mid-ocean that few of us again will be permitted to see.

To the Captain and crew of our steamer, to the "gemüthlichklit" of our German friends on board, and to our own ingenuity, we Americans were indebted for the pleasures of the day.

J. N. MARTIN.

Senator Peffer told the Hoosiers recently that inventors ought to be hung, and that the farmer was better off when he harvested his crop with a cradle and cultivated corn with hoes. When it comes to hanging people who are not wanted, Peffer himself could be spared without serious loss.—Iron Herald.

The newspapers of the state are saying some very mean things about the latest order issued by the Lake Shore railroad whereby employers are required to sign a paper holding the company blameless in case of injury. Some of the papers are unkind enough to predict that the next movement of the company will be in the direction of requiring passengers to sign a similar agreement.—Coldwater Republican.

They ought to, sure.

The special commissioner to Mexico, says that country will probably appropriate at the start $750,000 for the representation at the Exposition, and that it will most likely increase the amount to $2,000,000 later on. Mexico voted $400,000 at the start for the Paris Exposition, and spent $1,300,000 before it got through. Great enthusiasm is manifested over the Chicago Exposition, and Mexico will certainly excell all previous efforts.

Don't be discouraged about that eczema till you have given Ayer's Sarsaparilla a persistent trial. Six bottles of this Medicine cured the complaint for George S. Thomas, of Ada, Ohio, when all other remedies failed to afford any relief.

An exchange truthfully says: The secret of the growth of any place is mainly owing to the inducements and encouragements held out to strangers to settle in the place. Encourage active and worthy men whether they have money or not. Their labor alone is worth money. Stimulate every legitimate enterprise by giving it all the friendly aid in your power. Cultivate a public spirit and help your neighbor. Talk well of your town, of its growth, its prospects, its advantages, and, in fact, everything likely to promote its welfare.

The Great Benefit

Which people in a run down state derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla, conclusively proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting fictitious strength, but Hood's Sarsaparilla builds up in a perfectly natural way all the weakened parts, purifies the blood, and assists to healthy action, those important organs, the kidneys and liver.

The Little Seed.

A little seed lay in the carter's path;
A little shoot bowed in the strong wind's wrath;
A little shrub grew, but its roots held fast;
Then a stout tree braved all the winters' blast.
A little cough started—'twas only light;
A little chill shivered the hours of night;
A little pain came and began to grow,
Then consumption laid all his brave strength low.

Be wise in time. Check the little cough, cure the little chill, dispell the little pain, ere the little ailment becomes the strong, unconquerable giant of disease. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, taken in time, is a remedy for these ills.

Taut at sea—Ropes.
Just a line—Fishing.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's.

Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered."

Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

Now across the back-yard gate
Sounds the old domestic yell,
As Ophelia calls for Kate—
"Can't you make your jelly jell?

Two youngsters have been arrested for bathing in the race in the day time.

Did you see the very pleasant little notice of Capt. Manly in the last Argus?

Rev. W. S. Studley, of Evanston, will preach next Sunday in the Methodist church.

The electric light company substituted the incandescent light for the arc, in the audience room of the M. E. church.

The Postal Telegraph & Cable Co. has established a branch office on State st., in the shoe store of Bowdish & Lemmon.

The Maccabees hope to number 250 Knights in their ranks, from Arbor tent alone, to attend the Great Camp, to be held in Jackson, commencing Aug. 11th.

J. W. Billings, of this city, who is a postal clerk on the T., A. A. & N. M. R. R., was quite badly injured in the wreck on that road last week, north of Owosso.

The Argus states that five democratic candidates for sheriff have already placed themselves in the hands of their friends. It is the early plant that gets nipped by the frost.

The building on N. Fourth ave., owned by the estate of M. M. Green, and formerly occupied by him as a livery stable, caught fire last Thursday night about 7 o'clock, from a defective flue, and was damaged about $100. Covered by insurance in the agency of Beal & Pond.

Secretary Frank M. Howe sends the following notice: "Through the kindness of C. V. R. Pond, secretary of the executive committee of the National encampment to be held at Detroit, Court Room, No. 4, City Hall, has been engaged for Aug. 5th, 1891, as headquarters for the 20th Mich. Inft., where they will assemble at 9 a. m. sharp, sun time. Get to the front, boys, as you did in days gone by, and have the old 20th well represented."

The school board decided to build a sewer at a recent meeting, the construction of which will cost the taxpayers of this city at least $700, and then only one building will be accommodated. How much better it would be to put that $700 where it would benefit the entire city. Is not the dog in the manger policy, adopted by those who want to make a "stake," out of the city, unwise and dangerous?

Fifty-four years ago last week J. Volland landed in Baltimore from Germany, his native country. It took eight days to come up the Chesapeake Bay, a distance of 270 miles. He and his brother drove from Baltimore to Cleveland, with a team brought from the old country, and from there they took a steamer to Detroit. Mr. Volland relates what is quite a singular coincidence. His brother was a journeyman shoemaker, and in the old country at that time a man had to travel a certain number of years before he could be considered a master of his trade. While travelling in Switzerland he made the acquaintance of Conrad Krapf, a journeyman cabinet maker, who came from the same place that Volland came from. Still later he met Mr. Krapf in New York while both were travelling, and when he came to Ann Arbor he met him again, each time being accidental.

The lighting of the M. E. church is very fine indeed, since the incandescent lights have been put in.

Mrs. Haugsterfer, of Broadway, fell down cellar last Saturday afternoon, sustaining a broken ankle thereby.

The members of St. Andrew's vested choir will go to North Lake about August 10th, for an encampment of a week or two.

Twenty-one mills and elevators report 18,445 bushels of wheat marketed during June in this county and 548,396 bushels since July 1st.

A concert is to be given at Whitmore Lake on Aug. 4th, by the Business Men's Quartette, the proceeds to go to the M. E. church of that place.

The M. E. church ought to be well filled next Sunday morning to listen to their old pastor, Rev. Dr. Studley, who was universally beloved by his congregation.

Susie A. Halladay, nee Clark, has filed a bill for divorce from Louis W. Halladay, alleging extreme cruelty and intoxication. This is the second time this year proceedings have been commenced.

Of all the quiet Sundays Ann Arbor ever saw last Sunday took the prize. There was scarcely a vehicle or pedestrian on the streets. And yet the various churches had quite fair congregations, in the morning.

At the evening service at the Presbyterian church last Sunday, resolutions were passed by the congregation nine-tenths of those present rising, condemning the proposition to use wine at the G. A. R. banquet in Detroit.

F. B. De Forest is in the city, taking some excellent views of houses, groups, and out-door scenes. He made a picture of the Courier force which certainly is an admirable one, and denotes that he is a superior artist in that line.

All of the provisions of the new election law, together with a specimen ticket, to show the form, will be found on another page of this paper. The provision requiring all voting precincts casting over 500 ballots to be divided into two precincts, will effect the 1st ward of this city, and the townships of Sylvan, Saline, Manchester and York.

The treasurer reports that the net profits of the Art Loan were $2,198.49. The total receipts were $2,702.56, and expenses $504.07. The receipts from the various departments were: Admissions $1,599.81, refreshments $502.84, flowers $101.61, for advertising and sale of catalogues, donated by the Courier, $461, miscellaneous $37.30.

It is often said that no man can do two things at once, but Ann Arbor has a man who can, and do both things well. Dr. W. H. Dorrance can write with his right and his left hand both at the same time, in each instance the lines will run from each other, and the left hand writing will be like printer's type, wrong side to, but upon being turned so the light will show through the paper, it will be found to be as perfectly written as the right hand writing. In fact the Doctor appears to be quite as handy with one hand as with the other, and that is saying a great deal, for he is very skillful. He has been known to knock a man down with the science of a Sullivan, but unlike Sullivan he would not knowingly injure a human being or suffer others to do the same.

A dozen or more boys were arrested Monday for breaking open, on Sunday, a freight car, loaded with watermelons, standing on the M. C. R. R. tracks, and appropriating the contents. The boys had plenty of melon, but it bids fair to prove the most expensive feast they ever had. It is astonishing that young lads should become so lawless. As we go to press we learn that five of the boys who had been placed in jail, were found missing at about 2 o'clock this p. m. Some person from the outside evidently escaped the vigilence of the officers, unlocked the cage door and let them out. They were confined in the upper cells. At this hour they have not been found.

One of our citizens, who is a lover of the hook and rod, and who has lived in the region where brook trout are plenty, was out walking a few days ago and in crossing a small brook, thought he discovered some of the speckled beauties. Not a word did he say to the boys, but a day or two later with tackle in hand he strolled away from the busy mart alone and soon reached the brook and after awhile succeeded in landing a nice, slim, sleek chub.—Enterprise.

The committee on water-works had W. S. Parker, of Pontiac, here again looking up the Northrop spring, northwest of town, making a survey and getting the hight of the same. He finds the distance 4 2-5 miles and the elevation 105 feet above the crosswalk at the Berdan House. The water is of excellent quality and there is an abundance of it. There are no farm animals that are generally so universally handled as colts. Many of them have a bad bringing up, and early learn tricks of which it is very hard to break them. They are too often cuffed and buffeted about until their tempers are spoiled and they are afraid of their owners and handlers. No attempt is made to "break" them until they have fully established habits and dispositions of their own, and then an effort is made to do all at once what should have been done gradually through a course of years. If this has been your method in the past, we advise you to change it for a better one forthwith.

The following is said to be a good remedy for cabbage worms: "Two quarts of coal tar are put into an open vessel which is set in the bottom of a barrel, and the barrel is filled with water. In 48 hours the water is impregnated with the odor of tar, although the tar is not dissolved in it. The water is then sprinkled abundantly over the cabbage, and the odor penetrates every portion of the head, killing or driving away the worms. As the water evaporates, no satin or odor remains on the cabbage. The same quantity of coal tar can be made to impregnate several barrels of water.

The barn of Joe Feather was also struck, the heated fluid passing along the roof and down the corner post until it reached the watering trough and plunging into it knocked the bottom out. No other damage.—Saline Observer.

Some one asks why the date of the deed of the Methodist church is some years later than the building. The reason is this: Dr. T. M. Town assumed the whole responsibility of buying the lot and building the church. He held the ownership, though the people used it as if it was their own, until the society became strong enough to give him reliable obligations for payment, when the transfer was made and the deed given. For ten dollars the society could have repaired their old church, and would have done it, but Dr. Town was determined to bring the church out of "Canada," and he succeeded.

A Legend That Does Not Die.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

During the frequent visits I have made to Mexico," said a mining engineer, of Philadelphia, "I have come in contact with many of the Indian residents there and have heard some very singular stories. One, which all the Indians unite in telling, is that far in the interior exists an enormous city, never yet visited by white men. It is described as peopled by a race similar to the ancient Aztecs, who are sun worshipers and offer human sacrifices to their deity.

"The race is said to be in a high state civilization, and the Indians say that the city is full of huge structures which are miracles of quaint and beautiful architecture, and are situated on broad, paved streets, far surpassing those of the City of Mexico.

"One Indian, I recollect, assured me that he had seen the city and its inhabitants with his own eyes, but had been afraid of being captured and had fled. Of course, I did not believe him, but, all the same, it is not a little strange that the accounts of the Mexican Indians relative to the mysterious and magnificent interior city agree perfectly."

The Poor Dude Always Catches it.

The professor of natural science at Ann Arbor was discussing the process of fertilizing plants by means of insects carrying the pollen from one plant to another and to amuse them told them how the old maids were the ultimate cause of it all. The bumble bees carry the pollen; the field mice eat the bumble bees; therefore the more field mice, the fewer bumble bees, and the less pollen and variation of plants. But cats devour the field mice and old maids protect cats. Therefore, the more old maids, the more cats, the fewer field mice, the more bees. Hence old maids are the cause of variety in plants.

Thereupon, a sophomore with a single eyeglass, an English umbrella, a box coat and with his "trousers" rolled up at the bottom, arose and asked: "I sa-a-y, professah, what is the cause—ah—of old maids, don't you know?"

"Perhaps Miss Jones can tell you," suggested the professor.

"Dudes!" said Miss Jones sharply and without a moments' hesitation.

There was silence in the room for the space of thirty seconds, after which the lecture was resumed.—N. Y. Press.

GEMS IN VERSE.

Man.

I was born as free as the silvery light
That laughs in a southern fountain;
Free as the sea-fed bird that nests
On a Scandinavian mountain;
Free as the wind that mocks at the sway
And pinioning clasp of another.
Yet in the slave they scourged today
I saw and knew—my brother!

Vested in purple I sat apart,
But the chord that smote him bruised me.
I closed my ears, but the sob that broke
From his savage breast accused me.
No phrase of reasoning judgment just
The plaint of my soul could smother.
A creature vile, abased to the dust,
I knew him still—my brother.

And the autumn day that had smiled so fair
Seemed suddenly overclouded.
A gloom more dreadful than Nature owns
My human mind enshrouded.
I thought of the power benign that made
And bound men one to the other,
And I felt in my brother's fear afraid,
And ashamed in the shame of my brother.

—Florence Earle Coates.

Unforgotten.

As some sweet scrap of an old poem strays
Back from oblivion and gladdens me,
So steals upon my heart the memory
Of you and the old days.

An echo echoes back a song unheard,
Telling unwritten romances to me;
Idylis unsyllabled in poetry.
Of dates uncalendared.

A-maytime lilac blooms and hum of bees,
And birds' and breezes' myriad carolings,
And all the springtime's fugitive sweet things,
Commingling ecstasies

That once we shared, but ne'er again shall know,
Save in the vague, mysterious realm of dreams,
Where heart keeps sacred tryst with heart, and seems
Threading the long ago.

Today I know not where your footsteps wend;
The world is large: our ways, meandering
However deviously, yet never bring
Our paths to the same end.

Where'er you face your way winds to the heights
Beyond my reach; I keep the valley path,
And glean the sweet late summer's aftermath,
Fragrant with dear delights

That you would scarce count worth your gathering;
You, who must win upon your upland ways,
A hero's laurels and a poet's lays:
Yet, while I try to sing.

I wonder if, perchance, some fledgling song
Of mine may, one day, fluttering tremulously,
Warble in love spun lays ecstatically.
The words unvoiced so long.

And reach your heart, like a dove messenger,
And rouse regret and waken memory—
That song should be my dearest song to me,
My heart's interpreter.

Sometimes I think of you as one who passed
Beyond the shadows to a bourne unknown,
And then I dream you are my very own,
My very own at last.

In the dream realm there are no laws, forsooth,
And happily, lest in some wilding mood
The vagrant dreamer should o'erbend its code,
Or break it without ruth.

But from the trysting place in fairy lands,
The dreamer's yearning heart no trophy brings;
Not e'en the memory of a kiss that clings,
Or touch of loving hands.

And so I joy in thus remembering yet,
And sending after you this raveled strand
Of song, half honey sweet with memory and Half bitter with regret.

—Rosaline E. Jones.

The Dignity of Death.

Here lies a common man. His horny hands,
Crossed, meekly as a maid's, upon his breast,
Show marks of toil, and by his general dress
You judge him to have been an artisan.
Doubtless, could all his life be written out,
The story would not thrill, nor start a tear.
He worked, laughed, loved and suffered in his time,
And now rests peacefully, with upturned face
Whose look belies all struggle in the past.
A homely tale; yet, trust me, I have seen
The greatest of the earth go stately by,
While shouting multitudes beset the way
With less of awe. The gap between a king
And me, a nameless gazer in the crowd,
Seemed not so wide as that which stretches now
Betwixt us two—this dead one and myself.
Untitled, dumb and deedless, yet he is
Transfigured by a touch from out the skies
Until he wears, with all unconscious grace,
The strange and sudden Dignity of Death.

—Richard E. Burton.

Youth and Age.

When all the world is young, lad, and all the trees are green,
And every goose a swan, lad, and every lass a queen;
Then hey for boot and horse, lad, and ride the world away;
Young blood must have its course, lad, and every dog his day.

When all the world is old, lad, and all the trees are brown,
And all the sport is stale, lad, and all the wheels run down,
Creep home and take thy place there, thy early friends among:
God grant you find one face there you loved when all was young.

—Sidney (N. S. W.) Bulletin.

We Reap as We Have Sown.

We shape ourselves the joy or fear
Of which the coming life is made,
And fill our future's atmosphere
With sunshine or with shade.

The tissue of the life to be
We weave with colors all our own,
And in the field of destiny
We reap as we have sown.

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION—
To give cities the right to amend their own charters by vote of the people.	YES
	No

Printed by Authority.

The foregoing is the form, somewhat restricted it is true by the omissions for the purpose of shortening it, of the official ballot which citizens of Washtenaw county and the state of Michigan generally will be called upon to cast in future elections—and this whether these elections be state, congressional or municipal. It is the latest modification of what is known as the Australian ballot, and the law providing it together with the various other changes in the election law, was passed by the Michigan legislature only a few days before its adjournment and was promptly signed by Governor Winans.

MAKING NOMINATIONS.

As only official ballots can be voted, a description of the method of recording nominations so as to get them printed on this official ballot will be of interest as here given. The new law provides that hereafter there shall be in every county a board of county election commissioners, made up of the judge of probate, the county clerk and the county treasurer. For townships, the township boards act as election commissioners for local elections, and in cities the board is composed of "such persons as shall be elected therefor by the common councils of the various cities and villages in the state." The duty of these boards is to prepare and distribute the ballots and stamps for the election of all officers that are voted in state and county elections. They must print on one ticket the names of all candidates nominated by any convention and received not less than 20 days before election. When these names are sent in, the convention must daopt a vignette to be printed at the top of the column of the list of names; to imitate such vignette is made unlawful. The list of candidates of each party is placed in separate columns. A proof ballot must be filed with the secretary of state 20 days, and with the county clerk 10 days, before each election. Should a candidate die or resign between the time of printing the ballots and election day, the county clerk must provide the election boards of the precincts affected, with pasters containing the names of the new candidate or candidates; and these the inspectors of elections are authorized to put on the official ballots.

Should there be a constitutional amendment to be voted for, it is made the duty of the secretary of state to notify each board of the county election commissioners 30 days before the day of election.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS TOO.

By a separate act, passed a day later, the provisions of this general election law are made applicable to all local or municipal elections. But at elections where both state and municipal or local officers are chosen there will be two blank ballots for the voter to mark—the names of the municipa lcandidates being on a separate one, arragned, however, after the official form as given at the head of this article.

For municipal elections the manner of the candidates must be given by the committees of the various organizations to the board of the election commissioners of such municipality not less than seven days before each election, and the proof copy of the ballot must be open to the inspection of each committee at the office of the township clerk, and city or village clerk or recorder, not less than two secular days before such election.

AT THE POLLING BOOTHS.

When an elector comes to the polls, one of the inspectors of election will hand him one ballot, after having put his (the inspector's) initials on the upper left hand corner. The elector will then step into one of the booths provided, which screens him from the public, and there proceed to mark his ballot. He "may mark or stamp a cross in the space below the head of the party name printed at the head of the ballot. If marked thus such ballot so marked shall be counted for all the nominees of such party whose names appear on the ballot in that column, unless the voter shall have erased some name in the column, or marked against the name of a candidate in some other column for the same office, or written in a name under the name of any candidate, in which ease the name of such candidate shall not be counted as voted for by such ballot, but if the name of the candidate shall have been erased, such vote shall be counted for the candidate whose name in another column shall be marked or whose name shall be written in under the name erased."

He may indicate his preference in regard to the constitutional amendment by making a cross mark opposite the "yes" or "no." Then, before leaving the booth he must fold up his ballot so only the initial of the inspector can be seen. After which the ballot must be handed to the proper inspector, who will deposit it in the ballot box. Before the ballot is deposited in the box, the poll clerk must enter the elector's name on the poll book, and properly number it.

MUST NOT SHOW OR CARRY OFF BALLOTS.

If any elector shows his ballot, or any part thereof, to any person other than one lawfully assisting him in the preparation thereof, after thhe same shall have been marked so as to disclose any of the candidates voted for, such ballot will not be received or deposited in the ballot box. His name will be entered on the poll lists with a minute of such occurrence, and such elector will not be allowed to vote at that election.

No elector to whom a ballot has been delivered will be permitted to leave the room without voting the ballot or returning it from the inspector from whom he received it. Any elector who will attempt to leave the room with a ballot or stamp in his possession will be arrested on demand of any member of the board of inspectors, if he refuse to deliver the same upon request. If an elector spoils his official ballot he can get another by returning the spoiled one. If he mark more than one candidate for any office, then all marks for these particular candidates are null and void.

VOTERS WHO CANNOT READ ENGLISH.

When any English speaking voter swears that he cannot read, or that because of physical disability he cannot mark his ballot, or when such disability is made manifest to inspectors, "his ballot shall be marked for him in the presence of at least two of the inspectors by an inspector designated by the board for that purpose, who is not a candidate on said ticket. When any naturalized elector shall make oath that he cannot read English, that because of a physical disability he cannot mark his ballot, he shall have the right to call to his aid, a qualified elector, who may read the ballot to and mark the ballot of such naturalized elector in the presence of two inspectors of election."

Challengers from each political party are allowed inside the polling places, and they have the right and privilege of remaining during canvass.

NO ELECTIONEERING AT POOLS.

It is made unlawful for the board, or any person in the polling room or any compartment therewith connected, to persuade or to endeavor to persuade any person to vote for or against any particular candidate or party ticket.

RESTRICTION ON CANDIDATES.

No candidate can be an inspector of elections or gate keeper, and the last section but one of the law says:

"It shall not be lawful for any candidate for any elective office, with intent to promote his election, or for any other person with intent to promote the election of any such candidate, either

"1. To provide or furnish entertainment at his expense to any meeting of electors, previous to, or during the election at which he shall be a candidate; or

"2. To pay for, procure or engage to pay for any such entertainment; or,

"3. To furnish any money or other property to any person for the purpose of being expended in procuring the attendance of voters at the polls; or,

"4. To engage to pay any money, or deliver any property, or otherwisecompensate any person for procuring the attendance of voters at the polls; or,

"To contribute money for any other purpose intended to promote an election of any particular person or ticket, except for defraying the expenses of printing, and the circulation of votes, hand bills and other papers previous to any such election, or of conveying sick, poor or infirm electors to the polls."

COUNTING THE BALLOTS.

Immediately on closing the polls the board must proceed to canvass the votes, first selecting and counting the straight tickets, and giving the number to each candidate voted for on the straight ticket. In the canvass of the votes, any ballot which is not indorsed with the initials of the inspector as provided in this act, and any ballot which bears an undistinguishing mark, or mutilitation, will be void, and will not be counted, or ony ballot, or part of a ballot, from which it is impossible to determine the elector's choice of candidates, will be void as to the candidate or candidates thereby affected. However, all such ballots will be preserved, and kept separate from the others by being tied or held in one package by a rubber band or otherwise.

After the ballots are counted, they must, together with one tally sheet, be securely sealed in such a manner that it cannot be opened without breaking the seal.

After the count of the tickets or ballots has been completed, the result must be immediately publicly declared, and the number of votes received by each candidate or person on the ticket must be publicly declared by one of the inspectors.

OTHER PROVISIONS.

Other provisions of the law make it incumbent of the election commissioners to furnish uniform instructions to electors as to methods of marking ballots, limiting polling precincts to not more than 500 voters; forbids any electors except the one about to vote being inside the railing; make gate-keepers police officers; prohibit polling places in saloons and the introduction in any way of spirituous liquors into buildings used as polling places; give the inspectors power to fix the time (not nore than five minfix the time (not nore than five minutes nor less than one) which a voter may remain in a booth; direct the preservation of all unused or spoiled official ballots, and also forbid, under penalties, the giving out by printers, or any other persons than the inspectors as provided by law, of the official ballots.

Just Hear That Child Scream!

said Mrs. Smith to her sister, Mrs Davis, as the sound of a child's shrieks came across the garden from a neighbor's house. "What kind of a woman have you for a neighbor?" Does she abuse her children?" "No, indeed," replied Mrs. Davis, "She is one of the most tender mothers in existance. But you see, she believes in the old-fashioned styles of doctoring. When a child needs physic, she fills a spoon with some nauseous dose, lays the little victim flat on her lap, holds his nose till he is forced to open his mouth for breath, when down goes the dreadful mess. Then comes the yells." "No wonder," said Mrs. Smith, "Why doesnt' she use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets? They are effective without being harsh, and are as easy to take as sugar plums. I always give them to my children." "And so do I," said Mrs. Davis.

The evils resulting from habitual costiveness are many and serious; but the use of harsh, drastic purgatives is quite as dangerous. In Ayer's Pills, however, the patient has a mild but effective aperient, superior to all others, especially for family use.
