Hutzel's Water Back!

A very important invention which will be hailed with delight by every body using a stove or range for hot water circulation. After years of experience we have succeeded in producing a simple and perfect WATER BACK.

It overcomes all the present troubles of extracting lime and other sediments which accumulate in water backs, often making them useless and in great many instances becoming dangerous.

The outlay of dollars is reduced to dimes. No household using a range can afford to be without it.

No more trouble by using city water for hot water circulation.

Can be used in any stove. Ask your stove dealer for Hutzel's Water Back.

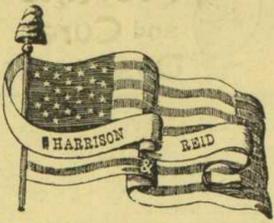

Mason & Davis Co.'s ranges for sale at C. Eberbach are provided with our improvement.

Everybody call and examine this useful invention.

ANN ARBOR PEOPLE UP NORTH.

The Petoskey Daily Resorter Tells of Them, and Where They Are.

H. V., Mrs. J. A. and Miss E. E. Ames, of Ann Arbor, are now at Wequetonsing.

Misses Jennie M. Eddy and Lottie M. Erdman, of Ann Arbor, are at the Bay View House.

The Daily Resorter, published at Petoskey, has many items that will interest Ann Arbor and vicinity people. From its columns we find the following:

Mrs. Dr. Dunster and her daughters the Misses Bessie and Dixie Dunster, who are among Ann Arbor's most popular society ladies, are at Old Mission for the summer.

Chas. R. Whitman, from Ann Arbor, regent of the U. of M., and state R. R. commissioner, who is at his cottage in Charlevoix, was viewing Petoskey's sights yesterday.

Dr. R. B. Pope, formerly of Ann Arbor, will be in his cottage this week, after which he leaves for Ohio to fulfill important lecture engagements. He will return to Bay View later, and rejoin his wife at Bay Breeze cottage.

Mr. C. W. Wagner, one of the leading clothiers and haberdashers of Ann Arbor, called at the Resorter office yesterday. He is with his family at Wequetonsing, but will go back to business in a day or so, possibly returning to spend August in this delightful latitude.

Prof. J. V. Seyler, of Detroit, who is one of the finest piano instructors in the country, arrived yesterday morning and will organize his class in the University at once. Prof. Seyler will have charge of the piano department of the Mehan conservatory of Detroit, next year.

Prof. Daniel Putnam, who for 20 years has filled the chair of psychology and pedagogy at the state Normal school, at Ypsilanti, will teach these subjects in the University this year. He will offer ten lessons in psychology and ten in pedagogy, and latter will be planned to meet the special needs of all in the class, and no teacher ought to miss this opportunity.

The many friends of Harry M. Joy, who has passed so many years at Bay View, and whose rich base voice has added so much to the concert entertainments there, will be pleased to know that, having just graduated with high honors from the medical department of the University, has received the appointment of house physician for the U. B. A. hospital at Grand Rapids. His mother has returned to Grand Rapids to make that her permanent home.

Dr. James C. Wood, professor of obstetrics and the diseases of women, and children in the Homeopathic Medical school at Ann Arbor, is spending his vacation at Bay View. The doctor is engaged in writing a text book on the diseases of women, and came to the quiet of Bay View to accomplish his work. His family is with him. He is spending the summer with his family at the Preston cottage and made his first fishing trip Monday to Oden. The fish in that vicinity are making hasty preparations for a summer sojourn of a few weeks, that is as long as the Doctor stays around here. However, he springs a sort of a surprise on them last Monday, and hauled out about 30 pounds of the pike type before they were aware of what was around. Four or five large black bass were among the victims.

Dr. Garner, of Ann Arbor, is at Harbor Point.

Bay View: The family of Mr. I. Waterman, of Ann Arbor is again seen on the grounds.

Mrs. J. H. Murfin, and son James of Ann Arbor, are occupying the McCorkle cottage this season.

Petoskey: Mr. J. C. Babcock and mother, Mrs. E. T. Babcock, of Ann Arbor, are in the city for the summer, and are stopping at the Cushman House.

Ex-Gov. Alpheus Felch and daughter Mrs. E. H. Cole, and grandchildren Miss Cole and L. T. Cole, were at the Arlington yesterday. They are on their way to Manistique and Marquette, where they will spend a month. Gov. Felch has been one of the most prominent and useful men in the state. He was a member of the state supreme court from 1842 to 1845; auditor general of the state in 1845; governor from '46 to '47; and U. S. senator from '47 to '53. He said he had seen Michigan when this country was all forest and none but Indians thought of living here; but that now it was greatly developed and was rapidly and deservedly becoming one of the most noted of summer resort regions. Questioned as to the political outlook, the Governor said: " * * * It seems now-a-days as if office holders try to see how much of the people's money they can get away with. It was not thus always." "Do you think Cleveland can carry New York?" "Yes, for I think Hill is too clever a politician to try to defeat the people's choice. But, as we grow older we lose much of our partisanship in politics. Generally you will find that old men look more to the candidate's views and aims in his past office holding and want honest men to be put in office irrespective of party. We need more of this spirit in all our minds; when we possess it we shall have better officers and administrations."

A POINTER FOR THE GIRLS.

Petoskey at present contains a gentleman who is one of those peculiar conditions that we hear of once in a great while. Generally these cases are in some far off state or city, and the story reads so much like fiction that we are reluctant to believe it. But this time our victim—for such I think you will no doubt agree he is—resides right here among us. He is the victim of a man's will and caprice; will in both mental and legal aspect. And that man was a bachelor uncle, who had an ample amount of this world's deceptive circulating medium. But with all his where-wahs this peculiar old uncle did not enjoy that elysian bliss that arises from the altar of Hymen's devotees. And although in good old German and Hebrew his name—Luther James—signified "the warrior" and the "supplanter" he was neither by tactics nor stratagem able to secure for his arms that which his heart most longed for. He sternly decided that his namesake and nephew should not suffer these pangs of single cursedness, and when he died—for die he did—three and one-half years ago, he calmly but promptly put his mental predilections in his legal will, which he made to read: "I here devise, bequeath and bequeathments, real and personal, to Luther James Babcock on the following conditions: provided he taketh unto himself a wife within five years after I bid farewell to this mundane sphere, he shall come into full possession of all my acquired property for his benefit and that of his heirs; but, if he persisteth in living alone in bachelorhood, he shall only inherit one-half of the aforesaid estates and the other half shall go to my other heirs." So far Mr. Babcock has lived in defiance of his uncle's mandate, and lived in full-handed ease, for his uncle settled upon him $50,000, for his faithfulness to him for several years before his death. If Mr. Babcock mends his ways and before the end of the next eighteen months woos and wins some dear idol for his heart, he will receive immediately a cool $300,000. Ah, how strange and mysterious are the paths of Fortune! How many of us there who have been working these many years to acquire a few thousands of paltry ingots, and have not received more than her smile, and here she stands ready to burst out into a full-blown laugh upon a being who only needs to lead us to the altar (another thing some of us are literally craving to do) a "mayden faire." Of course Mr. Babcock's relatives discourage his marrying, for his wedding is their funeral financially. But here is a chance such as mademoiselles maritables may look for decades without meeting such another. The wary will keep their eyes broad open.

Death of Kate E. Jacobs.

The still messenger, Death, comes silently into our homes, takes the fairest and dearest of the family circle, and leaves us bowed down with sorrow. Into nearly every family this unseen foe of all mankind has left the fearful impress of his dread work, and the only alternative remaining to sorrowing friends is to bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

These thoughts are called out by the sad announcement of the death on Thursday night last, July 14th, of Miss Kate E. Jacobs, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Jacobs, of this city, after an illness of only a few days with bilious fever.

Miss Jacobs was born in Ann Arbor 22 years, 5 months and 3 days previous to her death, had always resided here, and had called about her a circle of friends that but few could have attracted. Gentle in disposition, unassuming in manner, kind and pleasant in speech, with always a pleasant word for everyone, it made her loved not only in the family circle but universally, and her death sent a chill to many hearts.

Miss Jacobs had developed a fine mezzo-soprano voice, and had given much attention to its training and the cultivation of music, having spent a greater portion of the years '90 and '91 in Germany studying with the masters there. But before her education was completed, she was forced to relinquish study because of declining health, and returned home. She had traveled quite extensively in this country, having frequently been the traveling companion of her father to various parts of the Union. Funeral services were held at the family residence on Monroe st., Saturday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, conducted by Rev. J. W. Bradshaw, of the Congregational church.

The casket was of steel grey, and was almost enveloped with flowers that sorrowing hands had placed about the inanimate form of her whom they had loved while in life.

The pall bearers were John Dowdigan, Elmer Beal, Raleigh Nelson and Clark Hawes. The remains were borne to Forest Hill cemetery, where the grave prepared for its reception was literally covered with flowers which hid the earth from sight for some distance around. And so this life faded away from mortal view, surrounded by the sweetest fragrance and most delightful bloom that Mother Earth could produce, to burst into the life eternal, a beautiful flower itself, with sweetness and love and purity that shall never fade or die.

Arrangement for the Denver Conclave.

Jefferson S. Conover, of Coldwater, R. E. Grand Commander Knights Templar of Michigan, and William P. Innes, of Grand Rapids, Grand Recorder, were in the city Monday in conference with Past Grand Commander Wm. G. Doty, relative to the transportation of the Grand Commandery of Michigan to the 25th Biennial conclave K. T., at Denver next month. For the 3d consecutive conclave the Michigan Central Railroad and its connecting lines has been selected to convey that Grand body. The Grand Commandery will rendezvous at Kalamazoo Aug. 5th, and depart from there on the same day via M. C. R. R., and Chicago & Alton, for Denver, arriving there at 7:30 a. m. the following Sunday.

The headquarters of the Grand Commandery are at the Hotel Albany where the latch string will be out for all Michigan friends.

Mr. Joseph Hall, representing the Michigan Central, and Mr. Drysdale representing the Chicago & Alton, attended the session of the committee and were active in suggesting every possible arrangement for the safe and pleasant conveyance of the passengers over their superb lines. The committee are highly pleased with the courtesy and liberality extended by the Central and Alton railways.

The local commandery leaves Ann Arbor by special Palace Vestibule train one day later than the Grand Commandery, i. e., Aug. 6th, at 1:30 p. m., arriving at Denver Monday morning. Their headquarters are in an elegant modern stone dwelling on 13th st., near the business center of the city.

WHAT A CONGRESSMAN LEARNED.

There is one person at least on the congressional investigation committee now at Homestead who is learning something. That person is Representative Boatner, of Louisiana. When he was shown a tabular statement of the wages paid the Homestead iron workers, he exclaimed in astonishment: "Well, those are the highest wages I ever heard of." Mr. Boatner's experience, we presume, has been chiefly with the cheap colored labor of the south, and naturally enough he was surprised when he was shown evidence of the high wages paid in a protected industry. No statistics demonstrate more clearly the value of protection to domestic industry than those of the wages paid to American iron and steel workers, as compared with the wages paid for equivalent labor on the continent of Europe. We give the following comparison, taken from the sixth annual report of the federal commissioner of labor:

	United States	Europe
Blacksmiths	$ 2.56	$.51
Catchers	3.78	.98
Engineers	2.16	.58
Finishers	3.46	.91
Heaters	5.54	1.29
Heaters' Helpers	2.66	.70
Machinists	2.39	.62
Puddlers	3.40	.92
Puddlers' Helpers	3.10	.84
Roll turners	6.35	1.9
Rollers	7.39	1.9

These are not theoretical wages, but the actual daily earnings of employees in the several occupations during the time actually employed. They represent just what the employe received, not the rate per day at which he was paid. The difference between American and European wages, it will be noticed, is extraordinary. And it is not wholly due to the larger efficiency of American labor. There is a considerable element which may be legitimately referred to the conditions of American industry which are maintained by the protective tariff.

Mr. Boatner's ignorance of the wages paid in the steel industry is refreshing. He is one of the democrats who want free trade in this country, and yet he does not know the facts about one of the most important industries we have. That is characteristic of free traders. They are chuck full of theories, but the facts are not in them. It is to be hoped Mr. Boatner will profit by his lesson.—Detroit Tribune.

Thomas H. Carter, of Montana, a republican who has the reputation of being a western hustler, has been chosen as the chairman of the national republican committee. He is a Carter that will roll in victory.

"Now for a free trade campaign."—N. Y. Standard. (Henry George's paper.)

The ten-years-old Coldwater Sun is a luminary that dispenses bright rays of news to its readers.

At the present writing it looks as if Hon. John T. Rich would be nominated for governor at Saginaw on the first ballot.

"The free trade plank in the democratic platform will turn every factory and workshop in the land into a republican campaign headquarters."—Senator Hill, of N. Y.

"With Harrison and Reid as the candidates for protection and Cleveland and Stevenson as the candidates opposed to it, this is to be a free trade campaign."—Henry George.

A vote for Grover Cleveland means a radical change in the financial policy of this government, a change from a protective tariff to free trade. Are you ready for such a change?

Hon. George L. Yaple, "the boy from Mendon," as he is generally known, is said to have come out squarely for Weaver for president and in support of the People's party.

The New York Tribune has compiled a list of all the millionaires in this country, and it foots up at only 4,226 instead of 30,000 or 31,000 as the croakers, such as Jerry Simpson et al. assert.

Hank Platt was happy. So were the postmasters. So undoubtedly is Senator McMillan. Great is the boss, great is the machine in Washtenaw.—Argus.

The "machine" referred to isn't the one that the editor of the Argus endeavored to construct for himself two years ago, of course.

Capt. Allen, in his speech before the republican county convention, paid Congressman O'Donnell, of Jackson, a handsome compliment, and stated that in his opinion this district gerrymandered as it is, would be represented in the next congress by a republican, and that Mr. O'Donnell would be the man.

In the district vacated by Roger Q. Mills, in Texas, J. M. Barber, an alliance man, and backed by the republicans, has been elected to congress over his democratic competitor by some 400 majority. A revolution threatened in Texas! Shades of Jackson!

"We remember '84, when we put him there before," remarks a Buffalo bard in a Cleveland campaign song. You also—and more vividly—must remember '88, when he got there all too late. After November you can sing, we remember '92, when he met his Waterloo. Let the campaign proceed.—N. Y. Tribune.

The air is full of rumors hereabouts that Gov. Winans will not receive the nomination by his party for governor this year, without a hard fight. In this county, Attorney General Ellis, who by the way, is an able man, has many warm friends, and on the contrary Gov. Winans is supported by some of the very best democrats in the county. The convention bids fair to be one full of life and spirit.

"It is a curious fact and one worthy of careful consideration," says the Industrial World, "that every civilized nation on the globe, except the United States, has emigrants, while the United States, has immigrants by hundreds of thousands." And yet this country, according to the "reformer," is the one where the poor workingman is taxed out of house and home for the benefit of the "robber barons."

The men who struck at the works in Homestead were receiving all the way from $10 to $20 a day. It was the skilled workmen whose wages were graded upon a scale of work turned out, and the introduction of labor-saving machinery had sent their wages up beyond the ability of the company to pay, and beyond reason. The great mass of the laborers there, however, will have to suffer because of the greed of these few men who would not listen to their employers and were determined to force them to give greater compensation than the business would permit.

Here is what the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers said in their memorial to congress protesting against the passage of the Mills bill: "Some will argue that our employers will reduce our wages anyway, even though the tariff remains as it is. We ask you to leave that to us, and we will endeavor to take care of ourselves. As is customary in all branches of business, we have our little family quarrels, but we dislike outsiders to interfere in the settlement thereof. We ask a respectful hearing, to the end that we may be allowed through the medium of protection, against foreign competition, to maintain decent living wages."

The 70 cent dollar received its quietus in the House of Representatives last Wednesday, the Stewart bill, passed by the senate, being defeated by a vote of 154 to 136.

There were 117 democrats who voted for free coinage and 60 republicans who voted for honest money. Among the democrats who voted for the free coinage of silver and consequently a debased currency and cheap money, was Representative Jas. S. Gorman, of this district. With him were Messrs Wendock, Whiting and Youmans. These men thus defy the platform of their party on which Mr. Cleveland is running for the presidency.

It isn't always an easy thing to get a congressman on record. But Mr. Gorman is.

There is victory in the air. The republicans scent it from afar.

The Argus talks glibly of tissue ballots. On that subject its party is an expert.

The "improvements" on the state capitol building at Lansing are so "loud" that they are heard all over the state.

This year the railroads of this state pay $534,256.51 taxes. This is $55,000 more than the roads ever paid before.

The Chicago Herald would thought even anarchy if by so doing it upheld a vote could be made against the republican party.

The republicans seem to be in a quandary regarding the selection of a chairman of their national committee.—Daily News.

How about the democrats? Are they in a quandry or a quagmire?

This is the way Henry George interprets the democratic tariff plank: "It puts the democratic party in the field as committed to the policy of sweeping away every shred of protective duty."

The Home Rulers, under Gladstone, have won a great victory in England, and the grand old man will once more return to power. When he does a magnificent life's work will be rounded up.

The Argus accuses Senator McMillan of having a hand in the last republican convention in this county. He had about as much to do with it as the editor of the Argus did, just about, and no more.

When the republican party gets so it has to adopt the unit (or gag) rule to nominate a presidential candidate, (or any other candidate) then it might be in good taste for the Argus to yell "machine!"

It is estimated that of the 1,099,000 veterans now alive, that not over 50,000 will be in existence in 1900, eight years hence. Surely the people of this nation can afford to pay them all the pensions they are receiving.

The convention was the most shameful piece of machine work ever put up in Washtenaw county.—Argus.

The editor of the Argus is respectfully referred to his own speech delivered in the democratic nominating convention two years ago. Crow!

The chairmanship of the national republican committee was tendered to Senator McMillan of this state, but he thought his first duty was to the party in his own state, and so he declined it, and will apply all of his energy to the campaign in Michigan.

When there is a division in regard to whom shall hold an office, it is amusing to hear the opposition cry: "Machine!" "Machine!" against the ones coming out ahead. Whoever comes out ahead in a convention, they have to listen to this whine from someone. It has got to be quite sickening.

The democratic state nominating convention will be held at Grand Rapids August 17. Gov. Winans expressed a preference for Detroit, but did not object to Bay City. Upon the announcement of which Chairman Campau of the state committee, took occasion to remark that "it made no difference what Governor Winans had to say on the matter. It should have no bearing on the chance of location." Eh! Ah? What's the matter with Winans?

The spirit and enthusiasm shown by a republican convention in Michigan this year augurs well for republican victory this fall. The party is fully awake, and will see to it that their shall be no repetition of the disasters of two years ago. The squawbuck gerrymander, the squawbuck oil, the squawbuck election, bill will never be repeated in Michigan, and squawbuck incompetency and general cussedness will not be allowed to impose upon the people of this commonwealth another two years. The earnestness shown by republicans in their conventions this year is a sure death knell for democratic supremacy in this state.

There seems to be an impression among some republicans which is a false one, to the effect that those who favor the candidacy of Mr. Rich do so through personal motives, and consequently hold bitter personal feelings against Mr. Pingree. Such is not the fact. Mr. Rich receives the support of his friends because they believe him to be the best candidate for the place at this time. He is an honest, capable, fearless man, in whom the great masses of the republican party, the agricultural portion especially, have the utmost confidence. He was defeated for the nomination two years ago because he felt that it was out of place for him to put forth personal effort to offset the wire-pullers who worked to defeat him, believing that if the people wanted him they would choose him for their leader.

As far as Mr. Pingree is concerned this paper has yet to hear a disparaging word against him. It is generally conceded that he is a strong man, of great force of character, and would make an ideal state executive; he is young yet and there are bright fields for political preferment before him, if he will only keep his friends from ruining him by indiscrete talk. The Courier could cheerfully support Mr. Pingree for governor, and in so doing believe that it was doing an excellent thing for the republican party of the state, but this year it believes that it is for the best interests of the republican party that Mr. Rich should receive the nomination.

That is the situation in a nutshell.

However strikes are settled in this country, it is certain that the laboring men will go on receiving higher wages than they do in Great Britain and Europe.

Gresham wants to be president pretty bad, but he rather not try for it in the party of visionaries. Gresham is a smarter man than some of the People's party leaders took him to be.

A correspondent writes to know if the "K. G. C." sometimes placed after "Adlai, the Tired's" name stands for "KEL Grover Cleveland? That is not a bad translation. But in war times those letters stood for "Knights of The Golden Circle."

Hilarity or Highrarity or Moriarity, or some such name, of Pennsylvania, is now at the head of the democratic procession as chairman of their national committee. He will have a nice time between the free silver and anti-free silver, free trade and anti-free trade members of his party. To say nothing of the mug-wumps.

President King, of the Erie Railroad, one of the most widely-known democrats in business and financial circles, has announced that he will support President Harrison and vote for his re-election. His reasons are that the administration of President Harrison has been so clean, safe and able that nothing can be gained by a change at this time. Mr. King is a thoughtful conservative man and the voices of the sentiments of thousands of substantial citizens in both parties when he says in effect "Let well enough alone."

The Courier says that there are still a few Judas Iscariots. Two years ago there were just about 15,000 among Mr. Rich's supporters.—Daily Times.

The above conveys a wrong impression, and is not true in fact. A man who secures his own selection to a place by falsely representing himself to be what he is not, may correctly be termed a Judas. It is very doubtful, however, if a man may be termed a Judas by exercising his right to vote as he pleases at the polls, no matter what party he may belong to. That is a right that belongs to every citizen of this nation. Mr. Rich is no more to blame for some 15,000 republicans staying away from the polls in Michigan two years ago than was Mr. Pingree or Senator Palmer.

The labor troubles at the Carnegie works have culminated to-day, in the calling out of the entire state militia, 8,500 men strong. Mr. H. C. Frick, manager of the works, whose portrait we bring to-day, has declared that he will look entirely to the state for protection, as the county authorities seem to be powerless to act. Carnegie himself is staying in Scotland at his castle and has left everything in Frick's hands but this gentleman is not endowed with much tact. If he had treated the labor leaders with less haughtiness, every thing would probably have come out all right.

A Weather Prophecy.

Wm. T. Foster, "weather prophet" in June sent out the following prophecies: "First frosts in the fall will be late, and there will be an abundance of time for late crops to mature. The greatest danger to crops, as long ago announced, will be drouth in various places south of the 40th degree of north latitude. June, July and August will be warmer than the average of these months, and the storm centers and severe local storms will take routes well to the north."

Michigan, Indiana, Ohio and Illinois are considerably south of the 40th degree of north latitude, and if any portion of those big states are suffering from drouth we would like to know it. Also, if June, and the position of July already passed, has been warmer than usual. It looks as if Foster's weather predictions had been completely knocked out in this latitude by some band of unknown rain makers.—Michigan Farmer.

Roll called. Present—Messrs. Keech and McIntyre.

Mr. McIntyre moved that the respective bids be transmitted to the Common Council, with recommendation that the bid of Henry Koch & Bro., at the sum of $475, for building Felch street culvert on Mill race be accepted, and, whereas, the appropriation is but $450, we would ask for an additional appropriation of $25 to build said culvert.

Yeas—Messrs. Keech and McIntyre. Mr. Keech moved that the City Engineer is hereby directed to give to the Street Commissioner notice of all sidewalks not built to the grade, and that the Street Commissioner give due notice to the property owners of all such sidewalks not built to the established grade to at once comply with such order.

In Favor of Women.

Ft. Mich.—The committee on resolutions at the republican state convention at Saginaw next week will be asked to consider a resolution something like the following which will be presented by Justice Stevenson of this city on behalf of the Woman's Suffrage Society of Ft. Mich. and Genesee county:

"Resolved, That as the number of students in the Michigan University is one-sixth women, the number of female professors shall be in like proportion."

"THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN LIMITED," AND "THE BIG 5."

TWO GRAND TRAINS DAILY BETWEEN THE WORLD'S FAIR CITY AND THE FOOTHILLS.
ONE NIGHT OUT OR ONE DAY OUT. TAKE YOUR CHOICE. BUSINESS DEMANDS IT AND THE PEOPLE MUST HAVE IT.

The popularity of "The Great Rock Island Route" as a Colorado line—its having long time since taken first place as the people's favorite between the Lakes and the Mountains—has compelled the management to increase its present splendid service by the addition of a train that is one night on the road from Chicago to Denver, Colorado Springs or Pueblo. This train will be known as the "Rocky Mountain Limited," and will be put in service May first. Leaves Chicago daily at 10.45 a. m., arriving at the above cities in the afternoon of the next day, earlier than any of its competitors. Especial equipment has been built for this train, with the view of making it a limited in every sense of the word, and best of all, there will be no extra charge. The route of this exceedingly fast train is by the Rock Island Short Line, and a few of the larger cities through which it passes, are Davenport, Des Moines, Lincoln, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Beatrice, Fairbury, Belleville, Phillipsburg, Colby, Smith Centre and Goodland. This makes it the most desirable route, and particularly interesting to the traveler. Another point: The popularity of our dining-car service is still on the increase, and no money spared to make this service what our patrons always say, "the best."

Our "Big 5" will continue as usual, leaving Chicago at 10 p. m., and arriving at Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo the second morning, being but one day out, and this fast and popular train goes through Omaha.

Our No. 11 will leave as heretofore at 6 p. m., arrive at Kansas City at 9 a. m., and will reach Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo the second morning.

Our Colorado service is made perfect by this new "Rocky Mountain Limited" and the "Big 5," and gives to the traveling public two flyers daily.

Manitou passengers should consult the map and time tables of our line, to fully appreciate the advantages in time saved by taking this route, when on their summer vacation.

LOCAL.

Talk about green grocers! Well, Ann Arbor hasn't any of that kind. Rev. Dr. Fleming, of Ypsilanti, occupied the pulpit at the M. E. church last Sabbath evening. The largest month's business ever done by the Ann Arbor Agricultural Co., was that of last June. This dust is the dustiest dust that ever choked a parched throat or filled the eyes of a weary pedestrian. About 500 people took in the A. O. H. excursion to Detroit last Thursday, and they had a splendid time. The pulpit of St. Andrew's church was very acceptably filled last Sunday by Rev. Wm. Galpin, of Ishpeming. The regents have elected Dr. Wil Ham Dunn to be assistant to the chair of surgery in the department of Medicine and Surgery. Mrs. Judge Lane, who has been chosen as a member of the school board at Adrian, is a sister of Prof. J. C. Knowlton, of this city. A remarkable change in temperature took place in this city Friday night and Saturday morning, when the mercury fell from 91 to 51 degrees. The shade trees on the high school square have been improved by pruning, but could be still further improved in the same way. Many of the limbs are too low yet. Lee Wing, the Chinaman who was run over by the street cars last week is said to be getting better, and it is believed that he will get well and save his leg in the bargain. During May and June there was nearly 16 inches of water fell in this vicinity. The average for a year is 31.24 inches. Thus making about one-half the average year's rainfall inside of two months. "Lucifer" Durand, who had his hair cut at Detroit, shortly after his escape from the boys here, after the "Prince" Michael trial, has concluded not to prosecute the ones who cut his hair, although he knows who did the deed. C. R. Van Gieson, of Weathersford, Texas, in a private letter to the editor of the Courier, is enthusiastic for Harrison. If his enthusiasm could only diffuse itself among other Texas republicans the record of the votes would have a different complexion next November. The Michigan Central R. R. has made arrangements for a special car from Ann Arbor for the excursion to the national encampment during the month of September. The stop over to see the battle field of Gettysburg can be made without extra charge. The train will run via Buffalo. Ypsilanti Sentinel: "What is the matter with our water works? The water wheels rumble most of the time and the engines are coughing night and day, to the distress of people living two or three miles distant, yet the supply of water is poor and the fountain dry. The council makes no inquiry and the commissioners gave no information. If the engine and water power are insufficient to supply water, what will be done now that dark nights are at hand and electricity must be turned on?"

"General" Adlai E. Stevenson, the democratic candidate for vice-president, passed through Ann Arbor Friday evening last. Hon. E. Duffy and Hudson T. Morton were the only Ann Arbor people who greeted him.

The supplement given our readers to-day is one that should be carefully read by every voter. It contains much matter that will interest the man who cares to cast his ballot understandingly at the coming election.

Some rubbish in the alley in the rear of Schuh & Muehlig's store was set on fire Saturday morning by a cigar or cigarette stub, and but for its being noticed in its incipientity by Moses Seabolt, would have soon caused an expensive snuff.

There are many people in Ann Arbor who will be interested in this item from the Ypsilanti Commercial: "Cards have been received which announce the marriage at the bride's home on July 6, of Mr. Marshall J. Pease, of this city and Miss Emma Gareissen, of Galveston, Texas.

The Lansing State Democrat had this item recently: "Jimmie Blythman, the smallest boy at the reform school, and who was always considered one of the toughest, entered Watchman Price's room where he was asleep, last Wednesday, and stole $5.50 from his pants pocket. Jimmie was made to own up and turn over the money."

Prof. Delos Fall, of Albion college, who Ann Arbor is proud to claim, as one of her boys, is now on a tour of inspection of chemical laboratories, with a view of making the McMillan laboratory at Albion, one of the very best in the land. He visited the Detroit laboratories last Friday and Saturday and from there went to the eastern universities.

Dr. and Mrs. J. N. Martin have just returned from Whitmore Lake where they have been spending a few days. They stopped at the Lake House and they were much pleased with the accommodations, and think Landlord Stevens should have first prize for making his guests happy and comfortable. Ann Arbor is fortunate in having so pleasant a resort so near.

The Bickett correspondent of the Musician Dispatch has this item: "Music in the air is wafted to us from all directions as the campers are more than thick at the lakes nowadays. Banjos and guitars are the most popular instruments at present and their sweet strains with the rich melodious voices of those Ann Arbor belles can be heard at any hour in the evening out upon the moon-lit waters rendering the old but popular air of "Comrades" and "What is Love?"

The welcome news comes from Germany that Regent Draper is recovering his health. The Detroit Tribune of Sunday had this: "Harry Tillman yesterday received a letter written by Harry Conant from Carlsbad and dated July 3d, which will gladden the hearts of many people in Michigan. Mr. Conant states that when he reached Carlsbad, there was but little hope entertained that C. Stuart Draper, who had gone there in hopes of restoring his health, would ever return home alive. Mr. Conant's letter, however, brings the gratifying news that Mr. Draper was rapidly recovering his health and vigor, and would be ready to start for home early in August."

If the Argus is any authority at all, one would believe it was almost necessary to call out the state militia during the recent republican caucuses and convention in this city. It is so greedy to manufacture discord in the republican ranks that it fairly devours itself, prevents the meaning of things said and done, and takes a speck no larger than a mustard seed and attempts to make a mountain out of it. The fact is the democratic party never held as respectable and quiet caucuses as the republicans did last Friday evening, and the convention the Tuesday following though full of life, was pervaded with a feeling of unity against the common enemy that bodes no good to the Argus and its party.

The printing house towel has often been the theme of prose and song in newspapers, but the printing house wash basin has been sadly neglected in that respect. There is, in the press room of this office, a tin wash basin that was purchased upwards of fifteen years ago, and has been in constant use ever since. The handle, which was a necessary appendage to all wash basins when this one was purchased, has long since departed, the rim in many places is worn to a thin edge, and it is estimated that there have been a dozen new bottoms placed in the dish, but it still survives, and does service in whitening inky hands. There is some talk of sending it to the souvenir department of the World's Fair, as an offset for the Argus office towel that is said to be walking there.

Mr. Burke, who was a student of the university last year, and organized the national league of college republican clubs, has been made temporary secretary of the national republican committee. The N. Y. Press of July 16, had this in regard to him: "Mr. J. F. Burke, of Pittsburg, who was official stenographer of the republican national convention and is president of the National League of Republican College Clubs, is at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. He will remain here until the republican national executive committee is organized on Saturday, when arrangements will be made to open headquarters here for the college club organization, with Mr. Burke in charge. This was decided upon favorably by the republican national committee at its recent meeting in Washington."

Rev. James E. Jacklin of the Michigan Christian Advocate, will fill the pulpit of the M. E. church next Sunday a. m.

The fact that nearly all kinds of fruit will be a failure this year has sent the price of raspberries up, and it is impossible to purchase any here now for less than 15 cents per quart, even by the bushel.

Xavier Kopl, the Italian tailor who lives at No. 44, S. State st., died very suddenly Monday night. He went to bed feeling usually well and expired about 10 o'clock, from heart failure, it is supposed.

If Judge Kingsley, to perpetuate whose memory the name of North st. has been changed to Kingsley ave., could rise up and gaze at the grass and weeds on some of the lots along its sides, he would groan in agony, for he was a man who believed in keeping everything neat and tidy.

The third annual meeting of the Woman's Press Association, will be held at the Chautauqua cottage lecture room, Bay View, July 20-22. Among those down for papers are Miss Emma E. Bower, of this city, the subject being "Woman in Journalism," and Miss Cora DePuy, of Ann Arbor, whose subject is "Woman in Political Journalism."

New telephone poles are replacing the old ones in this city. The new poles are higher and straighter than the old ones, and when they are all in place and the entire system overhauled, Superintendent Keech promises us the best telephone service in the state. There can be little fault found with the service in the past. Mr. Keech has always kept a weather eye on the business here, and has not allowed it to be neglected, or to run down. There are few cities in the state as well cared for in this respect as Ann Arbor.

Speaking of the prosperity of the northern peninsula Rev. Wm. Galpin, of Ishpeming, who is spending a vacation of a few weeks here at his old home, remarked in effect this: "Our prosperity depends largely upon the iron industry, and that is very quiet at present. I think that two of the mines have closed down since I came from there, and others have a supply of ore on hand that will last for a couple of years yet. The iron industry like many other things in this country has been pushed too rapidly and as a consequence the market is flat. The strikes at Homestead in my opinion are simply a result of this depression, and I fear the worst is yet to come. However, the activity of business may bring about better times for us."

How beautiful this city would be if the citizens would only consent to having the streets sprinkled! Did you ever think of the amount of damage there is done every year to the furniture in the homes of Ann Arbor people, caused by the dust that sweeps in the doors and windows, through cracks and crevices? This dust ruins not only the upholstered furniture, but begrims the carpets, spoils pictures, and is almost as bad as smoke in injuring everything in the house. The remedy is at hand and would be comparatively inexpensive. Let the residents upon every street signify their desire to have the street on which they live sprinkled, and a man with a street sprinkler hired, and the cost assessed against the property benefited. Or, let the Board of Public Works be empowered to see that the streets are kept sprinkled, and assess the amount against the property, the same as in sidewalk building. The cost would be slight to each one, and the benefits incalculable. There are many cities in the Union where this dust crisis is done away with in this manner. In some cities the residents of the streets are allowed to vote upon the question and where a majority favor it, the city authorities put a sprinkler on that street and the cost is paid by each resident. It usually costs each household or tenant from ten to 35 cents per week, according to length of frontage, or benefit derived.

"A lover," said an old married man, "should never go down on his knees to propose to his sweetheart, for if she should happen to accept and he should marry her, she will remind him of it 15 times a week. Whenever there is the slightest difference, or when he gives her the least cross word, she fires up in an instant and tells him: 'You didn't talk that way when you went down on your knees and begged me, with tears in your eyes, to marry you.' A man naturally gets tired of being reminded of his folly, but a woman never gets tired of reminding him, and that is what makes a kneeling proposal a peculiarly unpleasant reminiscence."

MOTHER'S COOKING.

The Plainfield boys always had the name of being smart, and Ingersh Lute Baker was just about the smartest boy the old town ever turned out. Well, he came by it naturally. Judge Baker was known all over western Massachusetts as the sage of Plainfield, and Lute's mother—she was a Kellogg before the judge married her—she had more faculty than a dozen of your girls nowadays, and her cooking was talked about everywhere; never was another woman, as folks said, could cook like Mrs. Baker. The boys—Lute's friends—used to hang around the back porch of noontimes just to get some of her doughnuts; she was always considerate and liberal to growing boys. Maybe Lute wouldn't have been so popular if it hadn't been for those doughnuts, and maybe he wouldn't have been so smart if it hadn't been for all the good things his mother fed into him. Always did believe there was piety and wisdom in New England victuals.

Lute went to Amherst college and did well; then he taught school a winter, for Judge Baker said that nobody could amount to much in the world unless he'd taught school a spell. Lute set on being a lawyer, and so presently he went down to Springfield and read and studied in Judge Morris' office, and Judge Morris wrote a letter home to the Bakers once testifying to Lute's "probity and acumen"—things that are never heard of except high up in the legal profession.

How Lute came to get the western fever I can't say, but get it he did, and one winter he up and picked out to Chicago and there he hung out his shingle and joined a literary social and proceeded to get rich and famous. The next spring Judge Baker fell off the woodshed while he was shingling it, and it jarred him so he kind of drooped and pined around a spell, and then one day up and died. Lute had to come back home to settle up the estate.

When he went west again he took a wife with him—Emma Cowles that was (everybody called her Em for short), pretty as a picture and as likely a girl as there was in the township. Lute had always had a hankering for Em, and Em never thought there was another such a young fellow as Lute; she understood him perfectly, having sung in the choir with him two years. The young couple went west well provided.

Lute and Em went to housekeeping in Chicago. Em wanted to do her own work, but Lute wouldn't hear to it, so they hired a German girl that was just over from the vine yards of the Rhine country.

"Lute," says Em, "Hulda doesn't know much about cooking."

"So I see," says Lute feelingly. "She's as green as grass; you'll have to teach her."

Hulda could swing a hoe and wield a spade deftly, but of the cuisine she knew something less than nothing. Em had lots of patience and pluck, but she found teaching Hulda how to cook, a precious hard job. Lute was amiable enough at first, used to laugh it off with a cordial bet that by and by Em would make a famous cook of the obtuse but willing immigrant. This moral backing buoyed Em up considerably until one evening in an unguarded moment Lute expressed a pining for some doughnuts "like those mother makes," and that casual remark made Em unhappy. But next evening when Lute came home there were doughnuts on the table—beautiful, big, plethoric doughnuts that fairly reeked with the homely, delicious sentiment of New England. Lute ate one. Em felt hurt.

"I guess it's because I've eaten so much else," explained Lute, "but somehow or other they don't taste like mother's."

Next day Em fed the rest of the doughnuts to a poor man who came and said he was starving. "Thank you, marm," said he with his heart full of gratitude and his mouth full of doughnuts; "I haven't had anything as good as this since I left Connecticut, twenty years ago."

That little subtlety consoled Em, but still she found it hard to bear up under her apparent inability to do her duty by Lute's critical palate. Once when Lute brought Colonel Hi Thomas home to dinner they had chicken pie. The colonel praised it and passed his plate a third time.

"Oh, but you ought to eat some of mother's chicken pie," said Lute. "Mother never puts an undercrust in her chicken pies, and that makes 'em juicier."

Same way when they had fried pork and potatoes; Lute couldn't understand why the flesh of the walloping, carnivorous western hog shouldn't be as white and firm and sweet as the meat of the swill fed Yankee pig. And why were the Hubbard squashes so tasteless, and why was maple syrup so very different? Yes, amid all his professional duties, Lute found time to remark upon this and other similar things, and of course Em was—by implication, at least—held responsible for them all.

And Em did try so hard, so very hard to correct the evils and to answer the hypercritical demands of Lute's foolishly petted and spoiled appetite. She warred valiantly with butchers, grocers and hucksters; she sent down east to mother Baker for all the famous family recipes wrestled in speech and in practice with that awful Hulda; she experimented long and patiently; she blistered her pretty face and burned her little hands over that kitchen range

—yes, a slow, constant martyrdom that conscientious wife willingly endured for years in her enthusiastic determination to do her duty by Lute. Doughnuts, chicken pies, boiled dinner, bayer cakes, soda biscuits, flapjacks, fishballs, baked beans, squasha pies, corned beef hash, dried apple sauce, currant wine, succotash, brown bread—how valiantly Em toiled over them, only to be rewarded with some cruel reminder of how "mother" used to do these things! It was terrible—a tedious martyrdom.

Lute—mind you—Lute was not willfully cruel. No, he was simply and irredeemably a heedless idiot of a man, just as every married man is, for a spell, at least. But it broke Em's heart, all the same.

Lute's mother came to visit them when their first child was born, and she lifted a great deal of trouble of the patient wife. Old Mrs. Baker always liked 'em; had told the minister there years ago that she knew Em would make Lute a good Christian wife. They named the boy Moses, after the old judge who was dead, and old Mrs. Baker said he should have his granpa's watch when he got to be twenty-one. Old Mrs. Baker always stood by Em; maybe she remembered how the old judge had talked once on a time about his mother's cooking. For all married men are, as I have said, idiotically cruel about that sort of thing. Yes, old Mrs. Baker braced Em up wonderfully; brought a lot of fried catnip out west with her for the baby, taught Em how to make salt rising bread, told her all about stewing things, and broiling things, and roasting things, and told her how to tell the real Yankee codfish from the counterfeit—oh, she just did Em lots of good, did old Mrs. Baker!

The rewards of virtue may be slow in coming, but they are sure to come. Em's three boys—the three bounding boys that came to Em and Lute—those three boys waxed fat and grew up boisterous, blatant appreciators of their mother's cooking. The way those boys did eat mother's doughnuts and mother's pies—wow! Other boys—the neighbors' boys—came around regularly in troops, battalions, armies, and like a consuming fire licked the wholesome viands which Em's skill and liberality provided for her own boys' enthusiastic playmates. And all those boys—there must have been millions of them—were living breathing, vociferous testimonials to the inapproachable excellence of Em's cooking.

Lute got into politics and they elected him to the legislature. After the campaign, needing rest, he took it into his head to run down east to see his mother; he had not been back home in eight years. He took little Moses with him. They were gone about three weeks. Gran'ma Baker had made great preparations for them; had cooked up enough pies to last all winter, and four plump headed, well plucked, yellow-legged pullets hung stiff and solemn like in the chill pantry of the kitchen, awaiting the last succulent scene of all.

Lute and the little boy got there late of an evening. The dear old lady was so glad to see them, the love that beamed from her kindly eyes well nigh melted the glass in her silver bowed specs. The table was spread in the dining room; the sheet iron stove sighed till it seemed like to crack with the heat of that hardwood fire.

"Why, Lute, you ain't eaten enough to keep a fly alive," remonstrated old Mrs. Baker when her son declined a second doughnut; "and what 'll the child?" she continued; "hain't he got no appetite? Why, when you were his age, Lute, seemed as if I couldn't cook doughnuts fast enough for you."

Lute explained that both he and the little one had eaten pretty heartily on the train that day. But all the time of their visit there Gran'ma Baker wondered and worried because they didn't eat enough—seemed to her as if western folks hadn't the right kind of appetite. Even the plump pullets, served only in a style that had made Mrs. Baker famed throughout those discriminating parts—even those pullets failed to awaken the expected and proper enthusiasm in the visitors.

Home again in Chicago, Lute drew his chair up to the table with an eloquent sigh of relief. As for little Moses, he clamored his delight. "Chicken pie!" he cried gleefully, and then he added in a soulful "wow!" as his eager eyes fell upon a plateful of hot, exuberant, voluptuous doughnuts.

"Yes, we are both glad to get back," said Lute.

"But I am afraid," suggested Em, timidly, "that gran'ma's cooking has spoiled you."

Little Moses (bless him!) howled an indignant, a youthful remonstrance. "Gran'ma can't cook worth a cent!" he said.

Em expected Lute to be dreadfully shocked, but he wasn't.

"I wouldn't let her know it for all the world," remarked Lute confidentially, "but mother has lost her grip on cooking. At any rate her cooking isn't what it used to be; it's changed."

Then Em came bravely to the rescue. "No, Lute," says she, and she meant it, "your mother's cooking has not changed, but you have. The man has grown away from the boy, and the tastes, the ways and the delights of boyhood have no longer any fascination for the man."

"Maybe you're right," said Lute. "At any rate, I am free to say that your cooking beats all the world."

Good for Lute! Virtue triumphs and my story ends. But first an explanation to conclude my narrative.

I should never have known the true story if Lute himself had not told it to me at the last dinner of the Sons of New England—told it to me right before Em, that dear, patient little martyred wife of his. And I knew by the look in Em's eyes that she was glad that she had endured that martyrdom for Lute's sake.—Chicago News.

Etymological Curiosities.

The word l'argot means a French silver coin, a dapple gray horse and a balsam poplar tree.

The new Greek Cabinet seems to have all the Greek symptoms. Such names as Tricoupi, Dragoumis, Theotakis, Simopoulis, Kossomakos and Tzamadros make it as easy of identification as Homer's catalogue of ship. Chalalougkong is the name of the king of Siam. His nephew, who is now visiting this country, is Prince Mom Rajawongse Pheen. The prince's father's name is Pravongteur Pod Ong Choe Seysonitwongse.

In the Greenland dialect a single word frequently answers for whole sentences in English. Mr. Whympier, a recent traveler, gives an instance. The sentence: "You must try much to get a good knife." Translated becomes: Sateveearreatoesoararlaronaroneatovek.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my Lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying, 'I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined I could not stay with my friends on earth. I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all, eight bottles; it has cured me, and I thank God I am now a well and hearty woman.' Trial bottles free at Eberbach & Son, and Geo. T. Hausler, of Manchester. Regular size, 50c, and $1.00.

Don'ts for Wives.

Don't worry and fret your husband with detailed accounts of all your petty domestic annoyances. He has cares enough of his own.

Don't make his evening meal tasteless to him by telling him how saucy your servant has been and how trying the children are.

Don't whine. A whining woman is a blot upon the fair face of creation. It is not easy to be hopeful and bright and cheery all of the time, but don't whine.

Don't waste your husband's money and don't openly regret that you cannot have things he is unable to buy for you. Don't talk about how much better dressed Mrs. Blank is than you are and regret that your husband cannot make as much money as Mr. Blank makes.

Don't tell your husband that you wish he was like Mr. Jones or Mr. Smith. It will simply lower Jones and Smith in his esteem and perhaps make him wish Smith or Jones had married you.

Don't talk about how much freer and how much better times you had before you were married than you are having now.

Don't be lachrymose over trifles. Men hate tears. They'd rather be "jawed" at than "cried at."

Don't ask your husband to have too much care of the children. He ought to do much toward helping you care for the children and second your efforts to rear them in the fear and admonition of the Lord. But the husband is, or ought to be, the breadwinner of the family and he ought not to be both father and mother to the children.

Don't nag him about anything. Don't fret if he is a little careless about wiping his feet and hanging up his hat in the proper place, and don't "blame around" if he does "muss things up" some.

Don't scold if he occasionally brings a friend home unexpectedly to dinner or to tea. Men like to feel that they can take a friend home with them when they please. If they are not allowed to do so they may get to thinking that a club is better than a home.

Don't let your husband get to thinking that he was much happier and better off before he was married than he is now. Woe to you if you cause him to think thus!—Housewife.

Why "America."

The way in which America came to get its name is one of the features of a valuable old volume which has been secured for use at the World's Fair. The early names of the western world were "The land of the Holy Cross," "Atlantis," "Hesperides," "Iberica," "Columbia," and "New India." In 1507 a geographer of Frieburg received a letter from Amerigo Vespucci, detailing the manner in which the Italian claimed to have discovered this country. The geographer was so impressed with the letter that he proposed that the new world should be given the name of America, in honor of Vespucci, as Europe and Asia had been named after women. The geographies were the standard ones of the day, and were given official recognition by the duke of Lorraine, who assumed the title of King of Sicily and of Jerusalem. From that time since the name "America" has been invariably used. There are four or five copies of this ancient geography in existence, most of them being in the celebrated libraries of Europe. It is one of the rarest of these volumes that has just been secured for the World's Fair.

Eternal Vigilance

Is the price of health. But with all ways lurking about our systems, only waiting a favorable opportunity to assert themselves, impurities in the blood may be hidden for years or even for generations and suddenly break forth, undermining health and hastening death. For all diseases arising from impure blood, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the unequalled and unapproached remedy. It is King of them all, for it conquers disease.

Red Rain Fell.

In March, 1813, the people of Gerace, in Calabria, saw a terrific cloud advancing from the sea which gradually changed from a pale hue to a fiery red, entirely shutting off the light of the sun. Soon after the town was enveloped in darkness and the inhabitants rushed to the cathedral, supposing that the end of the world was at hand.

Meanwhile the fiery red cloud covered the whole heavens, and amid terrific peals of thunder, accompanied by vivid flashes of forked lightning, red rain fell in large drops, which were imagined by the excited populace to be drops of blood or fire. The strange shower continued to fall until evening, when the clouds dispersed.

Analyses made of the fluid showed that its coloring matter was a light dust of a marked earthy taste. Probably this dust was ejected by an active volcano, carried for a great distance by the wind and precipitated with the rain.—Washington Star.

There come times when it is most blissful to be all by yourself; that is, if you learn to appreciate just what that means. It means having a quiet time to think over your life, and whether what you are doing is right or wrong. It means deciding with yourself, as judge and jury, whether the words you have spoken have been the right ones at the right time. It means the thinking out of the influence that your friends have upon you, which one is bad. It means the planning out in your own mind of that which is good to be done.—Ex.

An Observant Horse.

The observation exhibited by a horse belonging to Prof. Romanes is both instructive and amusing. "I had a horse," the professor writes, "which was very clever at slipping his halter, after he knew the coachman was in bed. He would then draw out the two sticks in the pipe of the oat bin so as to let the oats run down from the bin above upon the stable floor. Of course, he must have observed that this was the manner in which the coachman obtained the oats. On other occasions, he used to turn on the water tap to obtain a drink, and pull the window cord to open the window on hot nights."

Winged Messengers.

A census of carrier pigeons and their owners has just been taken in Paris, in accordance with the terms of the army law of 1877. LITERARY NOTES.

There is nothing that reminds us more forcibly of the flight of time than the coming of the magazines, for the reason, probably, that they are dated a month ahead. For instance, here in the middle of July we have the August Quiver, so that before August is actually upon us, we feel its presence by this pleasant reminder. The number before us is quite up to the standard of this magazine. It begins with "My Experience as a Sunday-School Teacher," which will find an answering chord in the hearts of every Sunday-school teacher who reads it, for children are children in whatever part of the world you find them. There are a number of pretty short stories and poems; among the latter is one called "Baby," which will instantly win its way into every mother's heart.—Cassell Publishing Company, N. Y.

Worthington Co., 747 Broadway, New York, announce for immediate publication as No. 28 in their International Library, "The Heiress," by Henri Greville. Translated by Emma C. Hewitt and Julien Colmar. Illustrated with photogravures. 1 volume, 12 mo. paper, 75 cents. 1-2 Rox., $1.25. Unquestionably one of the liveliest of recent French novels from the pen of Henri Greville, one of the foremost writers of the century. The book possesses the remarkable qualities of purity, originality, imagination and knowledge of mankind, and while it is a delightful bit of fiction, it charms also by its style, for it is written with that surprising facility and freshness of expression which has made Greville's name a household word among cultivated readers. The character of the heroine, Marcelline Lematory, the daughter of a naval officer, is particularly attractive.

Worthington Co., 747 Broadway, New York, announce for immediate publication as No. 2 in their Fair Library, "The Hand of Destiny," by Ossip Schubin. Translated by Mary A. Robinson. 1 vol., 12mo., paper. A really captivating novel, light and dainty in touch, told with the same quaint humor, tenderness and skill that has made her "Asheim" and other stories so universally popular. It is a keen and truthful analysis of modern Roman society, and abounds in brilliant scenes in which breadth and vigor of treatment are harmoniously blended with exquisite delicacy of detail.

Nervous Extravagance.

"Do you know what an immense amount of nervous energy people waste continually, which might be stored up?" asked a physician. "A very nervous person is apt to have little tricks of manner which she fancies are a help to her and cover her confusion, whereas they are really an injury and loss. A habit of rigidity in your chair, of twirling something in your fingers as you talk, of biting your lips or tapping on the floor with your foot or a hundred other things, it would be a decided gain to restrain.

"Very few people realize how rare a thing it is to sit perfectly still or to do things composedly without wasting any effort. An oculist who was examining a patient's eyes placed a chair and told her to be seated. Then immediately he asked her to get up again. "Do you know that there isn't one person in a hundred who doesn't do that?" he asked. "Do what?" she said, thoroughly mystified. "Move the chair when sitting down. You moved it several inches and I wanted you in exactly that light."

"Probably you never noticed this, yet observation confirms it. Now, why should anybody, having put her chair where she thinks she wants it, move it in the act of sitting down? It is from a habit of irresolution and nervousness, a failure to do just what she meant to—to make her intention go straight to the mark. Probably it is quite unconscious with most people.

"In learning to write or to draw you learn to steady your hand and draw lines which shall show no deviation or raggedness, but be always correct and firm. It is worth while to try to do everything in the same way, with no raggedness, no rambling off.

"But, as every nervous person knows, it seems almost impossible. You feel that if you are debarrated from 'letting off steam' you must go crazy, or jump up or down, or scream, or do something to horrify or shock people.

"Well, but try it. Keep perfectly still. Don't twiddle your fingers, or shake your foot, or jerk your shoulder, or giggle, or clear your throat, or say unmeaning things because you are afraid to be silent. Keep it up minute after minute. You will be surprised to find how long you can do it.

"Then when you cannot stand it any longer, make your escape and do some of the violent things you have in mind. You will find that you might have hysteria twice a week or break a window occasionally without using up half the nervous force that would leak out in these little unsuspected ways."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

GEMS IN VERSE.

A Scrawl.
 I want to sing something—but this is all—
 I try and I try, but the rhymes are dull,
 As though they were damp, and the echoes fall
 Limp and unlovable.
 Words will not say what I yearn to say—
 They will not walk as I want them to;
 But they stumble and fall in the path of the way
 Of my telling my love for you.

Simply take what the scrawl is worth—
 Knowing I love you as sun the soil
 On the rippling side of the great round earth
 That swings in the smile of God.
 —James Whitcomb Riley.

A City Courtship.
 The proper place for courting,
 By the story books' reporting,
 Is some lane or meadow pathway, out of sight
 of town;
 With the sweetness blowing over
 From the fields of beans and clover,
 And the skylark dropping nestward as the sun goes down.

But I've met my little Sally
 At the mouth of Dawson's alley,
 And we've walked along together tow'rd the dome of Paul's,
 'Mid the jostling crowd that passes
 'Neath the flaring lamps and gasses,
 And the shouting of the drivers and the news-
 boys' calls.

And the lily of the valley
 That I gave my little Sally
 Was the faded penny bouquet that a flower girl sells:
 She has never seen one growing,
 As it's easy to be showing,
 For its birthplace is the Dreamland that's beyond Bow Bells.

Oh, it pains me in our walking—
 All the oaths and shameful talking,
 And the folks that brush her passing, and the glances bold!
 But though evil things may touch her,
 They can never hurt or smutch her,
 For she turns the dirt to sweetness, as a flower does the mold.

Nay, it's not in country places,
 'Mid the jostling and simple faces,
 Out of sight and sound of evil, that a pure
 heart grows;
 It is here in London city,
 In the sin and shame and pity;
 For the pure heart draws its pureness from the wrong it knows.

When my Sally's sweetness found me,
 I was like the men around me—
 I was coarse and low and selfish as the beast that died;
 But her grace began to win me,
 And my heart was changed within me,
 And I learned to pray from gazing in my darling's eyes. —Frederick Labryndge.

Give Us Men of Brains.
 Yea, give us brains behind the plow,
 Behind the counter's hem;
 Set on the manufacturer's brow
 Like royal diadem—
 Yea, give us men of brains!

Of finer sense, of larger thought,
 Wherever manhood reigns—
 By all the pow'rs of learning fraught
 In might its kingship trains—
 Yea, give us men of brains!

For they survive when empires fade,
 When naught but dust remains:
 To tell of lordly accolade
 On time's incipient gains—
 Yea, give us men of brains!

Brains for the mind, brains for the mart,
 Brains for the home and hall;
 In consecration set apart
 For princely coronal!
 Yea, give us men of brains!
 —Woman's Work.

The Rival Minstrels.
 Harun-al-Rashid loved his harem's maids;
 He loved his garden, with their wending shades;
 He loved to watch his crystal fountains play;
 He loved his courtiers and his courtiers gay;
 He loved all royal sports that please a king,
 But most he loved to hear his minstrels sing.

And so it happened that his fame had brought
 Two rival singers to the caliph's court,
 Who pleased him best, full well each minstrel knew,
 Would be proclaimed the greater of the two.
 So well they pleased him that they found him lost.

To choose between them, for he loved them both.
 "Let all the nation judge," at length said he:
 "Who pleases best my people, pleases me."
 Through all the land the rival poets sung;
 Their names and music were on every tongue,
 Until at last they never reached a door
 Where fame had not sung all their songs before.

Ben Olaf sang of deeds the caliph wrought,
 The riches and the splendors of his court;
 The mighty warriors every nation boasts,
 And armies vanquished by the prophet's hosts;
 How Islam's valor was beloved and feared;
 And when he finished listening thousands cheered.

Mustapha's songs were all of simpler things:
 Forgotten was the pride of earthly kings.
 He sang to them of home and truth and love;
 How Allah watched his children from above.
 Close to their hearts the poet's music crept,
 And when he finished all the people wept.

For though Ben Olaf charmed them with his arts,
 It was Mustapha's songs that reached their hearts. —James G. Burnett.

Master of His Fate.
 Out of the night that covers me,
 Black as the pit from pole to pole,
 I think whatever gods may be
 For my unconquerable soul.

In the fell clutch of circumstance
 I have not winced nor cried aloud;
 Under the bludgeonings of chance
 My head is bloody, but unbowed.

Beyond this place of wrath and tears
 Looms but the horror of the shade;
 And yet the menace of the years
 Finds and shall find me unafraid.

It matters not how straight the gate,
 How charged with punishments the scroll—
 I am the master of my fate;
 I am the captain of my soul.
 —W. E. Henley.

Love's Meaning.
 I thought it meant all glad, ecstatic things—
 Fond glance and touch and speech, quick blood and brain,
 And strong desire and keen, delicious pain,
 And beauty's thrill, and strange bewilderings
 'Twixt hope and fear, like to the little stings
 The rose thorn gives, and then the utter gain—
 Worth all my sorest striving to attain—
 Of the dear bliss long sought possession gives.
 Now—with a sad, clear sight that reassures
 My often sinking soul, with longing eyes
 Averted from the path that still allures,
 Lost, seeing that for which my sore heart aches,
 I seek my own good at the cost of yours—
 I know at last that love means sacrifice.
 —Carlotta Perry.

A Queer Combination.
 What a queer combination of cheek and per-versity,
 Insolence, pride, gab, impudence, vanity,
 Jealousy, hate, scorn, baseness, insanity,
 Honor, truth, wisdom, virtue, urbanity,
 Is that whimsical biped called man!
 Who can fathom the depths of his innate depravity?
 Today he's all gayety, tomorrow all gravity.
 For blowing his own horn he has a propensity,
 Even under clouds of singular density.
 Oh, mythical clay bank called man!
 —Briekmaker.

TORTURING ECZEMA

Editor Iowa Plain Dealer Cured of Insufferable Itching and Pain by the Cuticura Remedies.

No Less Than Five Physicians Consulted. Their Combined Wisdom Followed Without Benefit.

I am sixty-six years old. In August, 1889, was troubled with the peculiar skin disease to which people of my age are subject, known among medical men as eczema. Its first appearance was near the ankles. It rapidly extended over the lower extremities until my legs were nearly one raw sore; from legs the trouble extended across the hips, shoulders and the entire length of the arms, the legs and arms greatly swollen with an itching, burning pain without cessation. Although the best medical advice attainable was employed, no less than five physicians of the place being consulted and the prescriptions being the result of their combined wisdom, the disease, though apparently checked, would recur in a few days as bad as ever; during its progress my weight fell away about twenty-five pounds. As an experiment I began the use of CUTICURA, following the simple and plain instructions, in a few days the itching and burning pain ceased, the skin soft and natural in color, the itching and pain entirely relieved. W. R. MEAD, Editor Iowa Plain Dealer, Cresco, Ia.
