McKINLEY'S LATEST.

Gov. McKinley spoke at the Nebraska Chautauqua last week to over 10,000 people last week and made one of his best speeches. Paying attention to the democratic platform he riddled it completely with his strong arguments. After showing that this last democratic platform was a broader recognition of free trade than any other in the past, he continued as follows:

"The democrats," said Gov. McKinley, "denounce republican protection as fraud and robbery, and declare congress has no constitutional power to enforce and collect tariff dues protective in their nature. The constitutionality of a protective tariff has not been seriously questioned in more than a hundred years."

"The policy was recognized in the second act ever passed by the congress of the United States, which declared it to be 'for the support of the government, for the discharge of debts of the United States, and for the encouragement and protection of manufactures.'"

"If a protective policy is in violation of any constitution it is not that of the United States, but of the constitution of the confederate states. Possibly that is what they mean. Happily for us, however, we don't recognize that instrument, and are not operating under it."

"Free trade gives to the foreign producer equal privileges with us. It destroys our factories or reduces our labor to the level of theirs. We cannot have free trade in this country without free trade conditions. To introduce them here will bring widespread discontent, revolutionize values, and will take from the people who work for a living heart, hope and home."

"The protective tariff, on the other hand, cheapens every manufactured product, not by cheapening labor, but by securing from labor its highest efficiency. Substantially everything which protection directly affects has been reduced in price except labor."

"Under the new tariff old industries have been stimulated and many new ones have been started, and it is a fact well established by reports from all countries, that at this time, while depression and anxiety exist all over the world there is prosperity in the United States alone."

"Tried by any test, measured by any standard, we lead all the rest of the world. Protection has vindicated itself. It cannot be helped by eulogy or hurt by defamation. It has worked out its own demonstration and presents in the sight of the whole world its matchless trophies."

WORLD'S FAIR BILL.

That the record may be kept of the action of the parties in reference to the World's Fair Appropriation, the following is given:

FOR THE BILL. Republican—53. Democrats—78. Alliance—0.

AGAINST THE BILL.

Republicans—0. Democrats—75. Alliance—9.

Not recorded as voting—Gorman, of Michigan.

Mr. Harry, the chairman of the democratic national committee, will not resign the office held by him to accept of the chairmanship duties. When Senator Quay was made chairman of the republican committee four years ago, he had the honor to resign the office Harry now holds. That's the difference between men.

Protection music: The hum of American industries.

Canada may bluster but retaliation with her is impossible, and she is not large enough to fight."

The McKinley bill now states facts to the people. The tin peddler and tin-plate liar are counted out in this campaign.

The republican state ticket can truly be termed a young man's ticket. The majority of candidates upon it are young men.

"The prophet and the ballot box—both stuffed—is the war cry of the democrats," as Tom Reed wittily put it the other day.

Never, in the history of America, would $1 buy as much as it will today in any of the household necessities. Protection has caused it.

Will some of the calamity croakers please tell us if there has ever been a time when laboring men could earn as much money as they can today? If so, when?

There must be some wealth in the upper peninsula, for Houghton county, with a population of but 30,000, has an assessed valuation of $40,000,000, the third largest county in the state in this regard.

The present congress has passed bills aggregating $44,000,000 more than the much talked about "billion dollar congress." And then the World's Fair only received $2,500,000 aid. But the southern rivers and harbors fared well.

The people of this nation—the working people of this nation—think too much of their homes, their families and the workshops and industries that support them, to give up the protective policy. That's why the republicans will win in this campaign.

The Industrial World, published in London, Eng., under date of July 15, 1892, says: "Wages in America are at present about double what they are in England. But if America adopted free trade they would probably be reduced by one-half, and become equal to the wages paid in England." That's the solution of the free trade problem every time.

The shortage of the late secretary of state, Daniel E. Soper, is announced as $1,172, which amount Auditor General Stone has demanded of Mr. Soper. The question is: "Will he get it?" The prevalent opinion is that he will not get it. That shortage is a trifle, however, compared with the shortage in honesty and common decency of the squaw-back legislature.

Prohibition is not a success in Hillsdale county, where the people voted in favor of local option recently, it is to be judged by this from the Hills-Democrat:

"The business of making drunkards goes merrily on. The sheriff says he will arrest anyone found with liquor on his person. It might be a good idea to arrest some of the dispensers of the stuff. It would doubtless be a great surprise both to them and the public; but the latter, at least, could stand the shock."

The "canals" some astronomers profess to have discovered on Mars, as signals the inhabitants of that planet dug to attract the attention of the inhabitants of this earth, has caused consternation in the democratic ranks. Grover Cleveland, while looking through a glass (darkly) the other evening was sure he observed a salt mist arising from said excavation, and he immediately tumbled. It was a new route up Salt river.

The New York Herald, a Cleveland democratic organ, says: "One big strike drives more American money into bonds and securities than all the transatlantic tourists take to Europe in a year. This very money might otherwise have gone into industries and increased wages of skilled workmen by creating competition in the labor market. When two or more employers are bidding for the same man, that man makes his own terms. Strikes are costly."

Hon. Don M. Dickinson, of this state, has been named as chairman of the democratic campaign committee, a sub-committee of the national committee that has considerable work to do in the campaign. Mr. Dickinson would have been an excellent chairman of the national committee. He has the interest of Mr. Cleveland at heart, and would make a gallant fight for the man of his choice. The republicans of Michigan are satisfied, however, to have that gentleman in the background somewhat.

All American travellers returning from Europe agree in telling of the great interest there over our approaching election. McKinley and his bill are cordially hated, especially throughout England and Germany, and they are cordially hoping for Cleveland's election, so that they may again see our markets thrown open to their surplus goods. We have before us a copy of the London Times, of July 20, 1892, which has over a column editorial on our elections, and it closes with these significant words: "Englishmen can feel little sympathy for either of the parties engaged in this ignoble struggle, but undoubtedly our interests as a trading community must make us wish success to the democrats, who now for the first time go to the polls as the avowed champions of free trade, rather than to the authors and defenders of the medieval McKinley tariff." There is a great deal for Americans to think about in those wishes of our commercial rivals over the water. Why should we be in haste to do just what they want, against our best interests?

Mr. Harry, the chairman of the democratic national committee, will not resign the office held by him to accept of the chairmanship duties. When Senator Quay was made chairman of the republican committee four years ago, he had the honor to resign the office Harry now holds. That's the difference between men.

"Where is He at."

Our friends of the other side are just now in quite a quandary about their congressman. They dare not turn Gorman down for a nomination, and at the same time they realize him to be the weakest man they could put up to run. He has made no record, except on free silver, which is a bad one for him; he has had no influence, except with the house committee on irrigation, where his extensive experience in "irrigating" has been useful; he has done nothing, so that this district has practically been unrepresented in congress. He has been in his seat so seldom that when he did go he had to ask: "Where was I at?"

Concerning his renomination the Washenaw Post says: "A great stone in the way of the renomination of Hon. James Gorman for representative in congress in the 2d district of Michigan, is his ideas on free silver coinage. In his voting upon such a law in the house of representatives at Washington he voted with the silver cranks, and acted directly against the platform of the democratic party. There are among the democrats of this district, especially in Washenaw, Monroe and Jackson counties, very few who favor the free coinage swindle, therefore the action of Mr. Gorman is incomprehensible to us. Perhaps he does not care for a renomination."

Right No Longer on the Scaffold.

New York Times: In a fair contest for just wages there is no occasion for force and no justification of violence. If strikers find it necessary to resort to force or violence in order to maintain their ground, it is proof that their ground is wrong. If they were right they could maintain it by merely standing firm and proving that their places could not be filled without coming to their terms. They make a serious mistake when they assume to take virtual possession of the property of employers and dictate the terms under which it can be used. Such a proceeding can never be tolerated in a civilized community. The owners of the property have a right to hold and to use it and defend it against trespassers. The objection of workmen to the employment of a special force of protection of property that is liable to be attacked is founded on no sound principle. The real evil is not the employment of men to protect property, but its liability to be attacked. No employer would go to the expense and trouble of employing Pinkertons, or any other special force of men, if striking workmen showed no disposition to force or violence in making their contest. Men do not like to take the risk of having productive property destroyed simply because they can call upon the public authority for protection after an attack has been made and get reparation in the course of time by litigation. Nor are they legally obliged to take that risk.

The greatest mistake of all is for workmen to resist public authority, even when it is supported by an overpowering armed force. It puts them on the wrong side of the law, and forfeits the sympathy of law-abiding people. It is further evidence that they were in the wrong at the outset. It leads them into a contest that is sure to fail, and it makes negotiations for the settlement of their disputes out of the question until they have yielded obedience to law. These various mistakes have apparently been illustrated in the Homestead difficulty, though it is not yet settled whether the workmen were absolutely wrong in their contention or not. They have themselves prevented the settlement of that question thus far.

Rev. Thos. Dixon, of New York City, whose scathing exhortation of Tammany was recently published in the Courier, was at Bay View the other day and in an interview published in the Resorter, said:

"What did Tammany do with me? Oh, they dropped the prosecution quick enough when they found I was ready to stand trial. You see it was in the course of a defense of Dr. Parkhurst that I made the statement that Richard Oke, the re-appointed excise commissioner, was a criminal who ought to be in the penitentiary and who would be if he had his just deserts. Of course Mr. Coke was righteously indignant and had me arrested the next day and made a great hullabaloo. Probably thought because I was a minister I would back water and apologize. Did I? Well, I guess not. I told Mr. Coke I was ready to stand trial and would bring evidence to prove that he ought to be in the penitentiary. I could have done it, too. The district attorney would have been in a pretty situation, prosecuting me for what he knew Oke was guilty of and of which he himself had the evidence! Mr. Coke continue the prosecution? Dropped it like hot cakes. It wouldn't have been safe for him to have continued it."

Is it not a shame that the good citizens of New York are obliged to suffer the disgrace spoken of by Dr. Dixon? With evidence in their hands and in the hands of the prosecuting officers to prove the rascality of officials, yet Tammany is so powerful that nothing can be done to mitigate the evil. There are certainly enough well-minded people in New York, if they would only rise up and throw off the terrible incubus, to do so. And they will some day, even as the people of France did in the terrible days of '48.

Accommodations for Women at the World's Fair.

The board of lady managers have been desirous to carry out the design of congress in creating it, and the intent of the national commission in prescribing its duties. The commission said in defining the duties of the board, "The board shall have general charge and management of all interests of women in connection with the Exposition." In conformity with this, Mrs. Palmer called a meeting of all the lady managers resident in Chicago, to consider what could be done for the great army of women that will visit Chicago during the Fair, especially those known as "industrial women," "wage earners" and "working girls."

It was felt that after reduced travelling rates had been secured, the next duty would be to procure for these women good, clean, safe homes at reasonable rates. The plan is to erect buildings adjoining the Fair grounds capable of sheltering 5,000 women, the rooms to be furnished with comfortable beds and toilet conveniences. These dormitories will be presided over by refined motherly women who will have a watchful care over unprotected girls who may come singly or in groups.

In order to accomplish this work a stock company has been formed and shares are issued at $10 per share. These shares will be taken at any dormitory of this association in payment for lodging bills. Only two persons will be allowed to come at one time on a single share. These shares will be transferable, and if the face value is not used by the holder during her stay, it can be made over to another who can use the balance.

After the ten dollars have been used, the share still stands on the books of the association credited to the holder and she will be entitled to her pro rata share of the profits if a surplus remains after the enterprise is closed.

"THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN LIMITED," AND "THE BIG 5."

TWO GRAND TRAINS DAILY BETWEEN THE WORLD'S FAIR CITY AND THE FOOTHILLS.

ONE NIGHT OUT OR ONE DAY OUT. TAKE YOUR CHOICE. BUSINESS DEMANDS IT AND THE PEOPLE MUST HAVE IT.

The popularity of "The Great Rock Island Route" as a Colorado line—it having long since taken first place as the people's favorite between the Lakes and the Mountains—has compelled the management to increase its present splendid service by the addition of a train that is one night on the road from Chicago to Denver, Colorado Springs or Pueblo. This train will be known as the "Rocky Mountain Limited," and will be put in service May first. Leaves Chicago daily at 10.45 a. m., arriving at the above cities in the afternoon of the next day, earlier than any of its competitors. Special equipment has been built for this train, with the view of making it a limited in every sense of the word, and best of all, there will be no extra charge. The route of this exceedingly fast train is by the Rock Island Short Line, and a few of the larger cities through which it passes, are Davenport, Des Moines, Lincoln, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Beatrice, Fairbury, Belleville, Phillipsburg, Colby, Smith Centre and Goodland. This makes it the most desirable route, and particularly interesting to the traveler.

Another point: The popularity of our dining-car service is still on the increase, and no money spared to make this service what our patrons always say, "the best."

Our "Big 5" will continue as usual, leaving Chicago at 10 p. m., and arriving at Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo the second morning, being but one day out, and this fast and popular train goes through Omaha. Our No. 11 will leave as heretofore at 6 p. m., arrive at Kansas City at 9 a. m., and will reach Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo the second morning.

JOLLY TAR CHEWING TOBACCO CATCHES THEM ALL

READ THE FOLLOWING. "I CHEW JOLLY TAR because it gives me more good, solid Tobacco for the money than I can get in any other brand."

The Carpenter. "JOLLY TAR suits me and I mean to stick to it. It is the largest and best piece of Tobacco I have ever been able to find."

The Bricklayer. "I KNOW a good thing when I see it. JOLLY TAR fills the bill. It gives both quantity and quality."

The Blacksmith. "WHEN I chew I want the best. I have tied to JOLLY TAR and could not be induced to change."

The Engineer. "I AM of the same opinion as Bill. JOLLY TAR is king of them all."

The Fireman. "WE fellows want the most for our money always. JOLLY TAR gives it to us in good Chewing Tobacco. It is our stand-by."

The Printer. AND THUS THEY ALL SAY. JOLLY TAR IS A GENERAL FAVORITE.

ESTATE OF ADALINE KELLY.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Washtenaw, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Washtenaw, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Ann Arbor, on Tuesday, the twelfth day of July, in the year one thousand, eight hundred and ninety-two. Present, J. Willard Babbitt, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Adaline Kelly, deceased. On reading and filing the petition duly verified of Adeline L. Noble, praying that the Court adjudicate and determine who are and who were at the time of the death of said deceased the legal heirs of said deceased, and the shares or portions which they are entitled to inherit. Thereupon it is ordered that Tuesday, the ninth day of August next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate Office in the city of Ann Arbor, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted. And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Ann Arbor Courier, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county, three successive week previous to said day of hearing.

The Ann Arbor Commandery started for Denver last Saturday from this city on a special train of three coaches. Two of the coaches were filled here and one at Ypsilanti. There were about 200 people down to the station to see the pilgrims off on their journey, and as the train pulled out at about half-past 2 o'clock, they were greeted with the waving of handkerchiefs and shouts of "good-by." The day was a pleasant one and the journey to the City of the Plains was made without any unpleasant incidents.

On Thursday last James Wm Hayley, of this city, and Miss Anna May Bearn, of Elsie, were united in marriage, at the home of the bride's brother in Ithaca. Washington st. Their residence will be at No. 17 Geddes ave. The couple have many friends in the city who wish them a happy and prosperous journey through life.

So far City Treasurer Beakes has received only $15 for the fire sufferers at Bay City. Of this amount $10 was given by an elderly lady who stepped into his office, handed out that amount and refused to allow her name to be given, saying that it was from a friend. The remaining $5 was from a gentleman who is always foremost in works of charity, Thos. J. Keech. It is not to the credit of Ann Arbor that so small a sum should be sent to Bay City. Ann Arbor ought to raise at least $200, and there is no doubt but much more than that would be cheerfully given if the matter was brought to the attention of our citizens. Many of the fire sufferers at Bay City were poor people who owned the homes that were burned and have lost everything. This is charity at home that ought not to be neglected.

A FIGHT FOR LIFE!

I am getting rather old, and live more in the past than in the future, but I have knocked about so much, and met with so many strange adventures during my life, that this must be my excuse for the love I have of every word and then taking up a pen and jotting down some of my recollections, when I seem in a manner to live my life over again.

I was always of a roving disposition, and could never rest very long in one place, so that I have visited most parts of the inhabitable globe, leaving home sometimes at a day's notice, intending to be away for months, and then as suddenly changing my mind and returning home again. I hate plans and arrangements made long beforehand, and I generally act on the spur of the moment. Although this habit, as the following story will show, has sometimes placed me in awkward positions, yet, on the whole, I am none the worse for my way of proceeding.

About twenty years ago I suddenly left London in the height of the season on one of these unpremeditated voyages. I was weary of the eternal round of London life, with its dinner parties, dances, and drums, and so determined to be off at once, not caring where so long as I had a change.

Four days afterward I found myself seated at the table-d'hôte of the Croce de Malta Hotel at Genoa. But here, too, I was bored, and I began to wonder what had brought me. I knew no one in the place, and, hating sight-seeing, what was I to do?

After dinner I lit my cigar and strolled down to the port, looked at the many curious and varied picturesque groups of sailors from all parts of the world. While lounging about I came across a lot of rough-looking Italian sailors, dressed in blue jerseys and jelly-bag scarlet caps. They particularly attracted me, for, being a bit of an artist, I have an eye for color, so I stood watching them for a minute or two, while they were talking eagerly together, and I caught the words Garibaldi and Caprera. I said to myself that I am given to sudden impulses. One of these now seized me. Why not go and visit this hero in his native home? True, I did not know him personally, but I had always heard that he liked Englishmen and received them hospitably. I was one of his most ardent admirers, and here was an opportunity of making his acquaintance and of seeing his strange home.

Half an hour before I had no more thought of Garibaldi than of the man in the moon, and now I found myself suddenly agitated by the idea, as if a visit to Caprera had been the dream of my life. But how was it to be managed? I walked up and down for a minute or two, thinking, and then determined to speak to this group of sailors. I am a good Italian scholar, so had no difficulty upon that score, although sailors' patois is rather different from the language used in polite society.

I approached the group, and addressing myself to a tall, broad-shouldered fellow with a long, shaggy black beard, I asked him if he knew of any ship sailing for Caprera and willing to take a passenger. Italians are an inquisitive race, and the fact that I, a stranger had spoken to one of them, brought all the group, who had dispersed, close together to hear what I had to say.

The man I addressed, after looking at me and then at his companions, said, "Ah, signore, it will be a difficult matter to find a ship going to Caprera, for there is but little trade with the island, and it is rather out of the way for coasting vessels. I am only a common sailor, but here is Bartolo; he is the owner of a felucca which trades between Genoa and Leghorn; he may perhaps be able to tell the signore what he asks. Eh, Bartolo, what do you say?"

Bartolo, thus addressed, came up to me with his hands in his trousers pockets and a pipe in his mouth. He was a short, wiry-looking man, with a black mustache and a dirty, unshaven face. He had a most evil expression of countenance, with a squint in his right eye, and when he intended to smile he seemed rather to frown. Altogether he was about as unattractive-looking an individual as I ever met.

I repeated my question to him. "Well," he said, "I don't often go to Caprera, for it isn't worth my while; but to-morrow night I am sailing for Leghorn, and as times are bad, if the signore likes to make some arrangement with me and my cousin, who goes with me, we might manage to leave our regular course and land the signore on the island; but I must first consult with him, as he is part owner of the craft."

The plan seemed as if it might answer, so I sent him off for his cousin to a neighboring wine-shop and they soon returned together. He was a very different looking man from Bartolo, and I rather liked his appearance. A tall, stout looking sailor, with a bland smile, but I noticed that he was entirely under Bartolo's thumb, and agreed with him in everything he said.

"Well, here is Antonio," said the latter. "He thinks that we might accommodate the signore; but the ship is not a fine vessel, so perhaps the signore had better see her before he decides. True, it is but a short journey of twelve or fourteen hours so that a little discomfort will not much matter, especially as, this chance lost, it may be some time before another presents itself. Of course the signore understands that we are poor men, and shall require some good inducement to make us lose time by going out of our way; but if the signore will pay us one hundred lire (54) down and give us a small 'buona mano' on arrival, we will take him."

The price did not seem extravagant, but it is always necessary to bargain with Italians, or they take you for an "imbecille" who can be easily robbed; so, bearing this fact in mind, I expressed astonishment at their asking so much, and told them it was quite out of the question. At last, after a deal of haggling, we agreed that if next day I liked the looks of the craft, I would pay them eighty lire down, and give them another ten lire on their landing me safely at Caprera.

It was now getting late, so we separated, on the understanding that I was to meet Bartolo at the same place in the morning at eight.

I was there at the appointed hour, and found him waiting for me. His cousin, he said, had gone on board, and was getting things in order, as they were to sail at six that evening.

After walking a mile among a sea of masts and sails of all colors and all shapes, we at last got to Bartolo's ship. She was a small coasting felucca with a large lateen sail, of the kind so common in the Mediterranean. Antonio and the man I had first spoken to the night before, were busy stowing away a miscellaneous cargo of grain, fruit, and bacca, or dried stockfish, which it is to be hoped tastes better than it smells.

I stepped on board and was shown my cabin, if such it could be called. It was in the forepart of the ship and close to the mast. I entered it through a narrow, dark hatchway, and down a ladder of six or seven steps; and when I got to the bottom I had to bend almost double, as it was simply a square box about four feet high and six feet wide. Bartolo had certainly not lied when he made me understand that I should have to rough it. In one corner was a wooden bunk, with a dirty sheepskin laid over it. Furniture there was none; there was a horrid smell of bilge-water about the whole place, and the only light came through the open hatchway. Altogether it was a most uninviting place; but, reflecting that it was only for one night, and that the weather being fine, I should probably pass most of the time on deck, I settled to sail with them, and to be on board again at half-past five. I now went on deck for a look around. There were three separate hatchways. In the middle one they were stowing away the cargo, and the one aft was used by the crew.

I walked to the town and killed some time by looking into the different shop windows. I was much attracted by a gunmaker who displayed a great variety of arms. I don't know what first put it into my head, but while gazing at these weapons, the thought suddenly struck me that as I knew nothing of the men to whom I was trusting myself, it might perhaps be as well to have some weapon of defence about me. True, in my travelling-bag I carried a life-preserver given me years ago, which had slept there harmlessly ever since; but still a revolver would be more useful in case of accidents; so I walked into the shop, and after looking several of them over, ended by purchasing a small one, with a packet of cartridges.

I now went to the hotel to pack up my traps. I wished only to take what would go into my travelling bag, so turned out everything I thought useless. In doing so I came across the life-preserver; I was about to chuck it aside, when I thought I might as well take it, and replaced it in the bag.

My arrangements were soon complete. I called the hotel keeper and told him I was going away for two or three days, and proposed to leave the remainder of my baggage in his charge. I then dined, paid my bill, and, bag in hand, strolled down again to the port.

All on board was ready for sailing. Bartolo came up at once and asked me for the eighty lire which I had agreed to pay in advance, as he said they had to complete some purchases before leaving.

At six o'clock sharp we left the harbor, with a fair wind; it was a beautiful evening, not a cloud was to be seen, and soon after dark, a glorious moon rose out of the sea. I sat on deck smoking my cigar and enjoying the tranquillity of the scene while being fanned by the soft sea breeze.

The crew consisted of Bartolo, his cousin, the tall man named Beppo, and a boy called Gigi.

For Italians they were not a sociable lot. I tried several times to get into conversation, but they seemed rather to avoid me, and continually whispered to each other in a mysterious way. This somewhat disquieted my mind, and I could not help reflecting that I had perhaps done a foolish thing in trusting myself to their tender mercies. No one knew of my expedition. I had paid them in advance, and they were sailing out of their course to please me. What was to prevent them from murdering me and throwing me overboard, and then continuing their regular journey without anyone being the wiser?

I am not nervous, nor do I believe in presentiments; but the longer I sat there the more would these lugubrious thoughts creep over me, until, feeling rather chilly, I went down into my cabin.

It looked an awful place at night, and more like a vault than anything I could think of. I undid my bag and caught sight of my revolver, which

I had forgotten until now. This somewhat reassured me and I loaded it carefully. I then pulled out the life-preserver, and, placing these two friendly weapons by my side, I lay down on my bunk without undressing.

Looking up, I could see the broad lateen sail, through the hatchway, with the moon shining brightly on the white sheet. All was perfectly still, and I fancied that two of the crew must have gone down to sleep, leaving the third man at the wheel and the boy to look out.

I tossed about, but could not sleep; the more I thought it over the more risky did my position seem, for, as I said before, no one knew where I was.

I had been lying down about an hour when I saw the shadows of two men reflected on the sail. I strained my eyes and ears. They were talking in low tones, but I caught the words "Dorme," then "Sara presto finito." What could this mean, if it did not refer to me? They were evidently preparing to murder me in my sleep, and my worst fears were about to be confirmed. A cold sweat covered my brow, and I seized my revolver, determined to sell my life dearly. The shadows had now moved away. All was still. I stepped out of my bunk, and, taking my life-preserver in my right hand, and the revolver in my left, I sat in a crouching position to await events.

Oh, the agony of these moments! I could neither stand nor sit, and I feared that before long I should be seized with a cramp; yet it was imperative that I should keep quite still if I wished to take my assailants at a disadvantage.

It was not very long before the shadows on the sail again reappeared, and this time I noticed that one of them was armed with a long kitchen knife. The thought of the cold steel made me shudder, and my heart stopped beating for a moment. I felt my revolver to assure myself that it was all right, and then saw that the hatchway was darkened. I had no time for further thought. One of the men was coming down the steps into my cabin. I could see him distinctly, but I was in the dark, so he was unable to see me. I noticed a gleam of steel in his hand, and the second man was following close behind him. Now was my time. I brought back my right arm for a good cut at him with the life-preserver, as soon as he should come within reach. A second later I had felled him with a fearful blow on the temples. I rushed over his prostrate form, and fired my revolver at the second figure, now retreating up the steps. The man uttered a cry of pain, an oath, showing that I had hit him, but still he ran on. I followed quickly, rushed up the hatchway, and again fired at him just as he was picking up a crowbar. This time he fell on the deck, and I now saw the third man and the boy, thoroughly scared, making for the further hatchway. In a moment I made up my mind what to do. I followed them, and having with difficulty placed the heavy lid on the hatch, proceeded to cover it with everything I could lay hands on, on the deck. Luckily there was some pig-iron lying about, and with these bars and various other articles on the top of them I was sure that they were safe prisoners.

I now had to look to the other men, to see that they were incapable of doing further mischief. The one I had shot on deck was Bartolo. My two bullets had taken effect, one in the left arm and the other in the leg. I drew him to the side of the ship and lashed him there with some rope, and I told him that if he attempted to get loose, I would shoot him dead; then looking into my cabin, I saw Antonio lying where he fell.

I repeated my tactics of covering up the hatchway to prevent his getting out, and then went to the tiller, thoroughly exhausted after all I had been through, both physically and mentally, but thankful for my narrow escape.

Soon, however, I saw that if I had got out of one danger, it was only to fall into another. I knew nothing of navigation, and was not even aware in which direction to steer. I might run the ship to ground, or a sudden squall might swamp her. I did not know how to shorten sail, and was afraid to interfere with the ropes.

What could I do? The moon had now gone down, and it was pitch dark. There was no lamp or light of any sort about the ship, so far as I could see. With the help of a match I looked at my watch. It was two o'clock.

I thought of calling the man and boy out of the hold and threatening to shoot them if they did not navigate the ship properly, but I myself felt so tired and exhausted that I did not dare trust them, in case I should fall asleep.

On the whole, it was best to leave myself in the hands of Providence.

Oh! the dreariness of those hours of darkness, and the joy with which I hailed the first streak of dawn! Every now and then Bartolo would give a curse and a groan, and that was the only sound to break the silence of the night. I had placed some water by his side and asked him if he wanted anything, but he only swore at me. I left him alone.

At last the sun began to rise, and I scanned the horizon for the welcome sight of land or a friendly sail. There was nothing to break the dull mass of water, and I was still miles away from rescue. The pangs of hunger were beginning to make themselves felt, and I had nothing to eat. If this state of affairs continued much longer, I should be obliged to call up the man and boy, and I may weak state I felt I should be entirely at their mercy.

I was beginning thoroughly to despair after so many hours of constant watching and straining of my eyes, when about eight o'clock I saw a speck on the horizon. My heart leaped with excitement as I instantly turned the helm in that direction. The speck grew bigger and bigger, until at last I made out the form of a brig sailing towards me. Soon I could make out a flag—the American Stars and Stripes. I tied my handkerchief to a stick and made signals of distress. For some time she took no notice, and seemed about to pass me. My heart sank. The thought that I was so near rescue, and yet could not attract attention, was awful. At last, to my joy, she dove to and lowered a boat. In a few minutes it was alongside, and an officer and crew boarded the felucca. The sudden relief to my strained nerves was almost more than I could bear, and it was some seconds before I spoke.

There was an expression of horror on the men's faces as they looked round on the scene of bloodshed, the wounded men, and then scanned my face for an explanation. Did they take me for a madman or a common murderer?

At last I found my voice. They crowded eagerly round me to listen to my story, and when I had finished all congratulated me on my narrow escape.

The officer, who was the captain of the brig, hospitably invited me on board his ship. He was sailing to Marseilles, and would gladly give me passage. Needless to say, I jumped at his offer.

We removed the covering from the hold, and called on the men to come up, but could get no answer.

The captain was in a hurry to continue his course, and would not wait any longer.

As I was stepping into the boat I asked him what we should do about the felucca and its crew.

"Well, stranger," he answered, "you are well out of it, anyhow; and I guess we'll now let them alone, to go to the devil their own way, and the sooner they get there the better."

I never heard anything more of them. I went straight back to England, and it was some months before I left home again.

Drunkness or the Liquor Habit Positively Cured by administering Dr. Haines' Golden Specific.

It is manufactured as a powder, which can be given in a glass of beer, a cup of coffee or tea, or in food without the knowledge of the patient. It is absolutely harmless, and will effect a permanent and speedy cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. It has been given in thousands of cases, and in every instance a perfect cure has followed. It never fails. The system once impregnated with the Specific, it becomes an utter impossibility for the liquor appetite to exist. Cures guaranteed.

Faithful in All.

The late Dr. Thomas Hill gives a sketch of Tom, a faithful Irish servant, who seldom failed in being "true to his lights." His nice sense of honor is illustrated by a business transaction which Dr. Hill thus describes:

During an absence of a year I left a favorite cousin, Miss C., in charge of the place and family. In the summer she asked Tom if he could not find some one who would cut and carry away the grass, selling or using it in payment for the labor involved.

Tom undertook the work with a friend, and some days after the grass had been taken away, went to Miss C. and handed her three dollars.

"What is this for?" asked she. "For the grass, ma'am."

"But I told you you could have it for the cutting."

"Yes, ma'am, but when we got the hay made we found there was more of it than we thought. It was worth three dollars more than our work."

"But, Tom, you may have those three dollars. I made the bargain and I'll stand by it."

"Naw, Miss C., that wouldn't be right toward him that's away."

"Yes, it would," said the lady, "for he gave me full authority to act for him. My bargain is his bargain."

But Tom could not be induced to touch the money. He only shook his head and walked away, saying: "Naw, naw! That wouldn't be right toward him that's away!"—New York Independent.

WILLIAM F. HARRY, CHAIRMAN OF THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE.

William F. Harry, the democratic leader of Pennsylvania, has risen to prominence in the political world with phenomenal celerity. In two years, with little or no patronage at his command, he has risen from local to national leadership and now he has been elected chairman of the democratic committee. Mr. Harry is still a young man; he was born in Wilmington, Del., in 1850, and attended the public schools in that city. Afterwards he went to LaSalle College, in Philadelphia. He then began to study law and finally built up a nice law business. He became interested in local politics and soon came to the front. Cleveland made him postmaster of Philadelphia, and in his retirement from office, he was complimented by the leading merchants on account of his business-like administration. Lately he was the chairman of the Pennsylvania delegation at Chicago, and was there one of Cleveland's firmest adherents.

LITERARY NOTES.

"The City in the Valley," by Matthew Lester, in Outing for August, is a pathetic little pen picture of one of the deserted oil towns.

"The Shadow of Revenge" by Louise Dupree Mitchell, in Outing for August, is a weird treatment of the psychological theory that the spirit has the power to leave the body and work its will unaided. The number throughout is good, and the illustrations numerous and beautiful.

"Toilettes," for September is a super number of that elegant Fashion Journal. Each issue seems to be more beautiful than the preceding; it appears to be growing in size as well, for it has now 20 pages of choice engravings, instead of 16 as formerly, besides a handsome cover, yet the price, 15 cents for a single copy, or $1.50 per year, remains the same. It is quite evident the publishers are determined that "Toilettes" shall be the favorite Fashion Magazine in this country, and it is just as evident that our lady friends are of the same opinion, as they are all buying it. All first-class book and news dealers have it on sale one month in advance. Published by Toilettes Publishing Co., 126 West 23d Street, New York.

3 The New England Magazine for August contains three views of Walt Whitman, George D. Black writes of "Leaves of Grass" as a new force in literature; Sylvester Baxter is interestingly reminiscent of Whitman in Boston, and Walter Blackburn Harte deals with Whitman's democracy. Mr. Harte is also found, as usual, in a Corner at Dodsley's, this month's contribution being a study of the poetical works of Francis Saltus, who died in 1889.

A Million Friends.

A friend in need is a friend indeed, and not less than one million people have found just such a friend in Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. If you have never used this Great Cough Medicine, one trial will convince you that it has wonderful curative powers in all diseases of Throat, Chest and Lungs. Each bottle is guaranteed to do all that is claimed or money will be refunded. Trial bottles free at Eberbach & Son & Geo. J. Haussler's Drug store, Manchester. Large bottles 50c and $1.00.

BAD ECZEMA ON BABY

Head one Solid Sore. Itching Awful. Had to Tie His Hands to Cradle. Cured by Cuticura.

Our little boy broke out on his head with a bad form of eczema, when he was four months old. I tried three doctors, but they did not help him. I then used your Cuticura Remedies, and after using them eleven weeks exactly according to directions, he began to steadily improve and after the use of them for seven months his head was entirely well. When he began using this head was a solid sore from the crown to his eyebrows. It was also all over his ears, most of his face, and small places on different parts of his body. There were fifteen weeks that we had to keep his hands tied to the cradle and hold them when he was taken up, and had to keep mittens tied on his hands to keep his fingers out of the sores, as he would scratch if he could in any way get his hands loose. We know your Cuticura Remedies cured him. We feel sure in recommending them to others.

GENERAL JOHN BIDWELL.

General Bidwell, the nominee for the presidency of the prohibitionists, is an old pioneer of California and participated in all the troublous times during California's first colonization.

In 1849 he was a member of the first constitutional convention and in the following year was elected to the state senate. During the war he was a brigadier general in command of the 5th California Militia Brigade and was a member of congress from 1864 to 1867. In 1875 he was a candidate for governor on the non-partisan anti-monopoly ticket, but was defeated. General Bidwell's wealth is variously estimated as from one million to four millions. His early connection with the government of California gave him knowledge of land title and he selected the choicest soil in the state for his farm. Of course he planted grapes and for 20 years his name stood at the head of the list of California's wine and brandy producers. Some years ago General Bidwell married for the second time and his wife was a strong prohibitionist and through her influence he became a prohibitionist. All the vines which were distinctively for the bearing of wine grapes, he rooted out and now only grows table grapes.

Gen. Bidwell, in spite of his three score and ten years, is erect, tall, full of vigor and very popular.

"I am sorry to say," said I. M. Weston, proprietor of the Grand Rapids Democrat at the Richelleu yesterday, "that the election in Michigan is uncertain owing to the fact that the people's party is an unknown quantity. They draw more from the democrats than from the republicans. Last election the party polled 10,000 votes and the leaders claim twice the amount this year. I am surprised at their ticket. I thought I knew all the men of note in Michigan, but with the exception of one who is a Grand Rapids man, I don't know any of their candidates. Mr. Weston is a member of the Michigan World's Fair Board and is disgusted with the attitude of certain democratic congressmen toward the Fair appropriation. "I can not understand," he said, "what they are thinking about. I would not like to express an opinion as to whether it would hurt the party or not, but I had much rather things were different."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The New York World and the Durham (N. C.) Globe are both defending Mr. Cleveland's pension record. The Globe is more representative of the democratic party and Mr. Cleveland than the World. It says: "The pension fraud is a theft and we repeat that no man can honestly defend it. The south has been taxed to death to pay this grand army of rascals—these bottle-scarred bums who reach out the empty palm; and when Cleveland struck the beggars in the face he did a good business job. We hope to God that he may have a chance to hit 'em again. Vagrants and mendicants should be both vigorously slapped and kicked."

A. S. Dwyer, of Sheldon, Ill., who has been a democrat all his life, and one of their prominent speakers, came out for the republicans last week at a great rally held in that place. He says the democratic platform does not reflect democratic principles. He is not a free trader in any sense of the word.

THE DETROIT EXPOSITION.

Notes on Preparations for the Great Industrial and Agricultural Fair.

The interest taken by amateurs in the athletic events and bicycle contests at the Detroit International Fair and Exposition, has induced the directors of the association to set apart two days, instead of one, for these contests. Wednesday, Aug. 24, will be Wheelman's Day, when there will be a grand parade and ten bicycle races. The prizes offered aggregate $1,000 and some of the most foremost wheelmen in the country have signified their purpose to participate. Saturday, August 27, will be Athletic Day. Officers of the Central Association A. A. U., who will award the $1,000 in premiums offered, promise the best series of athletic contests ever seen in this country.

Mr. James E. Davis has resigned his position as secretary and Mr. T. F. B. Sotham has been chosen to the position, in addition to that of general manager. Mr. Sotham has been very fortunate in securing some of the most competent men in the country to act as judges of stock, men who could not be induced by a money consideration to undertake the duties of these positions but who consent to serve on account of the unexampled premiums offered and the high character of the entries.

Last year's electrical exhibit, which was a very popular feature, will be much surpassed by this year's display. The Commercial Electrical Company, of Detroit, will have a very large show of electrical machinery and appliances, and exhibits have also been secured from Chicago, New York and Philadelphia.

The latest addition to novelties in the way of races is the acquisition of a pair of moose which make a mile to harness in less than 2:40.

There is no other fair or exposition in the country that has anything like such accommodations for this year's Detroit exposition. At most fairs, no matter how far the site may be from the railroad freight depots, it is necessary to go to the depots in order to obtain rates or to bill freight for shipment. At the Detroit exposition there is an agent with an office adjoining the freight platform, where all inquiries and arrangements can be made. Here the lowest rates can be obtained and freight can be billed to any part of the United States or Canada, a facility which every exhibitor will appreciate, who desires to sell his exhibits or ship to some other fair before returning to the original point of shipment. The facilities for sending goods by express are superior even to those for shipping freight. The American, United States, Pacific, National and Canadian express companies all have offices on the grounds, where they will either receive or deliver packages. All express matter so marked in shipping will be sent direct to these offices. Transportation facilities are further improved by the establishment on the grounds of ticket offices for all the leading railway and steamboat lines, where tickets can be purchased at all points and at low rates.

In the main building there will be a branch postoffice, where mail will be received and dispatched several times daily.

Another business accommodation, which was first established at the Detroit exposition is that of banking. One or more of the city banks will open branch offices in the main building where accounts may be opened, checks cashed, drafts purchased, and in fact any kind of banking business transacted.

A telegraph office and telephone station complete the equipment for general business, and with these combined facilities, the visitor may conduct all his affairs on the exposition grounds.

The arrangements for the health, comfort and safety of visitors are also unsurpassed. They include ample restaurants and lunch rooms, a barber shop, wash rooms and parcel rooms and a fully equipped hospital with ambulance ready for instant call and competent physicians always in attendance. Added to all these there is a free bureau of information at the main office, where all inquiries will be cheerfully answered and directions given to places where board and lodgings can be obtained at reasonable rates.

For a general family enthrall we confidently recommend Hood's Pills. They should be in every home medicine chest.

An article that brings tears to the eyes—Ammonia.

TO WASHINGTON.

Information Relative to the G. A. R. Encampment of Interest to All.

The following is a General Order, issued by Department Commander, H. S. Dean, which is so full of information that it has been thought best to give it to the public. There will be hundreds of people going on this excursion who will desire to learn all they possibly can of it.

The outlook for a large attendance of Michigan veterans at the 26th National Encampment of the G. A. R., to be held in Washington, D. C., Sept. 19-24th next, is very flattering. Up to date 3000 have secured quarters in that city and quarters for 1000 more have been applied for. Not a moment should be lost in securing quarters by those who have not already done so, and intend to go.

In addition to the special train to be run over the T., A. & N. M. Railway from Frankfort to connect with the Headquarters train at Ann Arbor, the Chicago & West Michigan Railway will run specials from Benton Harbor and from Petoskey, concentrating at Grand Rapids with a special on the Detroit, Lansing & Northern Railway, running through without change, via Howell Junction to Ann Arbor and Toledo, connecting with the Headquarters train at Ann Arbor. The rate of fare will be at the lowest short line rate.

The L. S. & M. S. Railway will sell tickets from points on their main line and branches, via Toledo and the Pennsylvania road, thus enabling those who desire, to join the Headquarters train at Toledo. Parties taking this line should be sure to be in Toledo by 8:30 o'clock p. m., Sept. 17th.

The Grand Rapids & Indiana will also sell tickets and run trains via the Pennsylvania road, connecting with same at Fort Wayne, Ind.

The Cincinnati, Jackson & Mackinaw R. R., running from Allegan southwesterly through Battle Creek and Marshall to Toledo, will sell tickets, via the Pennsylvania road, and connect at Toledo with Headquarters train.

The Michigan Central Railway will sell tickets via its line through Canada. This road has declined to sell tickets from its Michigan stations via Ann Arbor and the Headquarters train. Persons desiring to go via this train, and lying on the M. C. R. R., should take other lines at nearest point that will sell tickets as they desire.

Those desiring Sleeping Car accommodations on Headquarters train should apply at once to these Headquarters and remit price with order; $3.50 for double berth, $7.00 for section. The Sleeping Coaches are nearly filled at this date.

Any reputable citizen can secure these accommodations by applying now, as the rates are the same for veterans and citizens on this grandest of all excursions.

Be sure that your tickets read via Pennsylvania Railroad from Toledo, if you desire to go with Department Headquarters Train. See that your baggage (if you desire to take other than hand pieces) is checked as you desire. Mark every piece, either PRINTED OR PLAINLY WRITTEN, with name, home address and State, number of Post or Corps, and the name and number of street you are to be located upon in Washington. Even your hand pieces should be thus marked, if then you lose them, your home address will enable you to be found.

All railroads to Washington are quite positive that they will enable you to reach that city on schedule time. Past experience shows that upon National Encampment occasions, the trains seldom arrive on time. No real blame can be attached to the railroad companies for these delays; they simply forget that when the veterans move, it is like their answer of years ago, "We are coming, Father Abraham, 500,000 strong." To avoid any disappointment because of delays, let every one go prepared for a delay, and with a feeling that disappointment and discontent will not add to their own, but will mar the pleasure of others.

Where Posts intending to go as such or where they intend to be grouped in County Battalions, it is hoped that the Post flag may be shown in the parade of September 20th. Let the Stars and Stripes be prominently displayed in the Michigan line. Posts will report to these Headquarters by September 1st, the number of men they will have in parade, and whether they desire to be assigned as Posts or County Battalions.

Uniform Posts provide themselves with dress corps or bands, there is liable to be a lack of music for our State contingent.

Aides-de-Camp, intending to accompany the Department Commander on parade in mounted form, should notify the Assistant Adjutant General at once, remitting the price, $7.50, which is the cost of mounts furnished by the Washington Committee.

Let every Michigan veteran Register at Department Headquarters, Arlington Hotel, Washington, as soon after their arrival as possible. Books will be open after 12 m., September 19th.

By Command of HENRY S. DEAN, Official Department Commander. C. V. R. POST, Assistant Adjutant-General.

Since the above order was issued the Assistant Adjutant General has received notice from Washington that the Committee on Homes has established a rate of $9.00 for horse with military equipments, which gave the ownership of equipments, after parade, to party using them. If the party did not care to own the equipments the price of mounts would be $5.00.

People go to Bay View, Charlevoix, and other northern resorts, it is alleged, for rest and quiet. A glance over the columns of the Daily Resorter shows that they have red-hot horse races, boat races, numerous theatricals, "Pygmalion and Galatea" for instance, lawn socials, swell parties, and all sorts of people lecturing to them; in fact it has the appearance to a person way down here in the quiet of home, that the "season" is in full blast up there, and that instead of quiet and rest it is but a round of gaiety and excitement.

But the world is full of misnomers, and the people of the world delight (sometimes) in professing but not practicing.

Important Intelligence From All Parts.

CONGRESSIONAL

A REPORT from the conference committee on the sundry civil bill was presented to the United States senate on the 25th. A resolution was introduced requesting the president to open negotiations to secure and maintain the uniform value of silver as a money metal throughout the world. In the house the conference report on the general deficiency bill was nonconcurrent in and a new conference was ordered.

IN the senate on the 25th the report of its conferees on the deficiency bill was adopted, leaving only the sundry civil bill to be disposed of. Mr. Hale's resolution as to the relative effects of the republican policy of "protection," and the democratic policy of "tariff for revenue only," was discussed. The nomination of Judge Shiras as a supreme court justice was confirmed. In the house bills were passed setting apart lands in Oklahoma territory for school purposes, and forbidding railroads to charge over three cents per mile on passenger fare in the Indian territory and Oklahoma. The conference report upon the deficiency bill was agreed to. The appropriations amount to $5,940,319, being $238,559 less than as passed by the senate and $1,061,087 more than as passed by the house.

THE anti-option bill was discussed in the senate on the 27th, a bill was passed to facilitate the enforcement of the immigration and contract labor laws of the United States and the following nominations were confirmed: Watson A. Sperry, of Delaware, to be minister to Persia; Truxton Beale, of California, to be minister to Roumania, Servia and Greece, and A. Barton Hepburn, of New York, to be comptroller of the currency. A resolution permitting foreign exhibitors to bring into the United States skilled laborers from abroad in connection with the world's fair was passed. In the house a motion to concur in the $5,000,000 world's fair appropriation made by the senate for the world's fair was carried, 117 yeas, 106 nays.

IN the senate on the 28th a motion favorable to the anti-option bill was passed and the house resolution for final adjournment was referred to the appropriation committee. An eight-hour law as to public works of the United States and of the District of Columbia was passed. In the house a favorable report was made on a bill providing $50,000 for the relief of the southern colored sufferers. Filibustering tactics were pursued to defeat the world's fair appropriation and a motion to adjourn sine die on the 30th was passed.

THE Hale resolution as to the relative merits of the republican policy of "protection" and the democratic policy of "tariff for revenue only" was discussed the entire day in the senate on the 29th. In the house Mr. Wheeler, of Alabama, read extracts from a people's party campaign book in which the charge of drunkenness against the floor was made, and Mr. Watson, of Georgia, the author, will have a chance to submit his proof before an investigating committee. The remainder of the day was spent in filibustering over the world's fair amendment.

Northville is to have a new refrigerator factory. New wheat is making its appearance in market.

A 1,000 lb. bell has been placed in the church at Roger's Corners.

Nissly's poultry farm at Saline is sending "goods" to Australia and Mexico.

Nearly every farm has its hay stack this year. Hay will be plenty.—Enterprise.

The best looking baby about Dundee will receive a prize at their fair this year.

The Catholic Library Association at Chelsea have leased the hall formerly occupied by the G. A. R.

A very severe storm passed over Fowlerville and vicinity last Wednesday evening, doing much damage.

Down in Wayne they have 4-legged rats that eat lemons, according to the Review. A pretty tart story that.

The Saline Observer says that "Edgar Rogers threshed out something over 1,000 bushels of wheat this week."

The extraordinary demand for whortleberries this season has kept the price up notwithstanding the enormous crop.

The Enterprise complains about bicycle riders running into pedestrians, women and children especially, on the sidewalks of that place.

After a month's vacation which he will spend in the east, Rev. Mr. Conrad, of Chelsea, will become pastor of the Baptist church at Salem.

The state teacher's institute for Livingston county commences Monday, Aug. 15, at Howell. Prof. DeLoe Fall, of Albion college will conduct it.

George S. Wheeler, of Salem, has taken the contract to furnish the troops at Island Lake with milk during the encampment, commencing August 17th.

Dogs without muzzles wandering about Pinckney will be promptly shot by the marshal. Pinckney people are not afraid of barks, but they don't want bites.

There is a great demand for harvest hands in the Dakotas, and the cheap rates made by the railroads from Chicago, will induce many young men to go there.

The state teacher's institute for Lenawee county will be held at Adrian commencing at 10 o'clock, a. m., Monday, August 15, and closing at 4 p. m., Friday, August 26th.

Five residents of the east side stepped upon the hay-scales together a few days ago and tipped the beam at 1200 pounds.—Manchester Enterprise. Evidently well-fed over that way.

The members of the school board in this district are putting forth every effort to make the Fowlerville Union School one of the best educational facilities in the state.—Fowlerville Observer.

The village has been unusually quiet this week—all because "the girls" are camping at Silver Lake.—So, Lyon Picket. If those girls don't give the man who wrote that item, a lively racket, it will be a caution.

Farmers in other parts of the state have discovered presence of a small fly which lights upon the heads of cattle near the horns. It is said that it is the fly that killed so many cattle in Ohio a few years ago.—Herald.

It has become the custom of farmers all over the state who are desirous of protecting the quail, now rapidly developing into toothsome breakfast to post notices warning hunters off their premises.—So, Lyon Picket.

The Stockbridge races have come and gone; and now many of our citizens are asking themselves, do they pay?—Sun. Those citizens evidently bet on the wrong horse.

A Danville farmer is the owner of a young colt that goes up stairs to a window, making a descent of 12 feet. What a circus horse he will make when full grown.—Williamston Enterprise.

The reopening exercises of the M. E. church at Pinckney will take place Aug. 14, we learn from the Dispatch, and several ministers will be present, it is expected. On Tuesday evening the 16th, the ladies will give an elegant tea.

Hon. Peter N. Cook, of Corunna, who is chairman of the committee from the board of regents which has charge of the University museum, is the husband of one of Dexter's former bright school girls, Miss Mary Rotan.—Dexter Leader.

There will not be many G. A. R. boys from this section who will go to Washington. Most of them were in that city on a big tramp once and they don't care to take another, and they couldn't afford it if they did.—Manchester Enterprise.

Brethren must dwell together happily in Manchester according to this from the Enterprise: "The ladies of the Methodist church will sell ice cream at the parlors of the Presbyterian church every Saturday during the summer, from 5 to 9 o'clock p. m."

There has been just as much improvement of late years in our farm stock as in the implements with which we cultivate our land, and it will pay the farmer even better to keep up with the modern progress in this line than any other.—Chelsea Herald.

Emil Ellis, who lives five and one-half miles west of the village, (our former supervisor) reports that his wheat crop for former years has averaged 30 bushels per acre for several years. This year his 90 acres averaged 18 bushels per acre.—Dundee Reporter.

This is the season when the farmer's wife is very popular. Her city relations remember her, and in return for a Christmas card, left over from the year before, and magenta toboggan caps sent to the children at holiday time, the city friends take up their abode under her hospitable roof during the coming weeks.

The name of W. M. Horton, of this place is being mentioned as a candidate for nomination for state senator on the republican ticket from this district. Mr. Horton is an agriculturist, a practical business man and a staunch republican, and should he receive the nomination his popularity in this county would aid him in rolling up a very large vote.—Fowlerville Observer.

An exchange tells how to secure a premium at the coming county fair, as follows:

"Select a large variety of tomatoes and after the fruit has begun to swell some, pinch off all fresh sprouts. Thin the fruit to about three specimens to the bush, keep the ground clean and water twice a week with liquid manure. Squashes and pumpkins can be treated in the same manner."

A Harrisville man answered the old chestnut advertisement of a "sure death" potato-bug exterminator. He sent his $1 and got in return two blocks three inches square with the following directions: "Lay the potato bug on block A, seize block B firmly with the right hand and bring it down upon block A with sufficient force to kill the bug. Remove the bug, procure another and proceed as before."

A story with a moral from the Dexter Leader: "Two pretty twelve-year-old girls induced one of Dexter's big-hearted citizens to row them up the race to the mill pond last Sunday afternoon for the purpose of gathering some water lilies. As they started out they looked the very pink of perfection; but when they returned, Oh my! they were loaded with water lilies and dripping from the effects of a ducking. That boat at ways upsets on Sundays."

You will never regret sending three 2-cent stamps to pay postage, to A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston, Mass., for a copy of Dr. Kaufmann's great Medical Work; 100 pages, colored illustrations; of great value to every family.

Which is Truthful. We submit two statements to the consideration of our readers and leave them to determine which of the two is truthful:

Democratic National Platform. We deny that there has been any increase of prosperity since the (McKinley) tariff went into effect.

Dun's Weekly Review of Trade, August 6, 1892. It is within the mark to say that the volume of trade in July, as indicated by clearing-house exchanges, was fully 15 per cent larger than last year, and greater than in any previous year. In spite of a decline of 5 per cent in prices since a year ago, importations enormous, exceeding last year's over 19 per cent, which is proof of great activity in domestic manufactures and consumption.

Ask Your Friends Who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, what they think of it, and the replies will be positive in its favor. One has been cured of indigestion and dyspepsia, another finds it indispensable for sick headache, others report remarkable cures of scrofula, salt rheum and other blood diseases, still others will tell you that it overcomes "that tired feeling," and so on. Truly, the best advertising which Hood's Sarsaparilla receives is the hearty endorsement of the army of friends it has won by its positive medical merit.

COUNTY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

August Meeting—Fruit Prospects—A New Raspberry, Etc.

None of the vice-presidents being present, Mr. W. F. Bird was called to the chair.

Messrs. O. R. L. Crozier, E. Baur W. F. Bird were appointed a committee to draw resolutions respecting the death of President J. Austin Scott and James D. Duncan.

Mr. J. C. Schenk, of the committee of transportation, reported that he went to Detroit, paid D. O. Wiley's man for last year's distribution and care of the Ann Arbor fruit car, and employed him again for this year. B. J. Conrad, chairman of said committee, stated that he watched one day last year the disposal of the Ann Arbor fruit car. If anybody should be paid it was the switch man who put the car into position early in the morning. D. O. Wiley's man took what was assigned to his house on that day, and had nothing to do with the distribution of the fruit car.

He had corresponded with Dwyer Vhay & Lichtenberg & Sons, who thought it unnecessary to have a special agent. But if the society wanted one they would furnish one gratis. He saw carloads of watermelons and whorlberries unloaded and assigned by the railway authorities without any special agent. He could not see why we should employ an agent of a special fruit house to take care of the fruit car. It was the business of the freight office at Detroit to distribute and handle our fruit carefully, and the men employed by said office were careful and systematic in unloading and distributing the Ann Arbor fruit car.

E. Baur stated that he had a report of the house he shipped to at Detroit, that his cases were badly shaken up by rough handling, berry boxes being only half full. He addressed at once Mr. C. J. Hupp, Ass't Gen'l Freight Agent, whether D. O. Wiley's man was responsible for the handling of the Ann Arbor fruit car. Mr. Hupp addressed H. MacMillen, the freight agent, who answered on July 29th: "Shipments in question are handled by my men and not by Wiley's. Crates are carefully handled." The freight office at Ann Arbor handled our goods in the very best manner and as carefully as any fruit grower himself could do, without a special agent; he could not see why we needed a special agent at Detroit, if that office did its duty there as well as at Ann Arbor, and Mr. Hupp would see to it, that it was done. He knew that Mr. Hupp was a very painstaking and obliging officer. The corresponding secretary was appointed to address Mr. Hupp whether any outside agent had anything to do with the distribution of our fruit at the freight depot at Detroit, to report at our next meeting in September.

FRUIT PROSPECTS.

J. Schenk: peaches, pears and grapes in my orchard better loaded than ever. B. J. Conrad: grapes, quinces and pears full crop, peaches fair. John Allmand: grapes, as big a crop as ever before, quinces good, Baldwin apples very fine. J. Schaefer: Grapes full crop. Blackberries very large crop, have not suffered from drouth; pears and peaches few, no apples except Baldwins. Mr. R. Smith, west of Dexter: Bartlett and Sickle pears look well, quinces fair, no peaches. Stephen Mills: grapes promising, pears very small crop, no apples.

C. J. Conrath showed a photograph of the Conrath's Early black raspberry, which originated in 1886 on Charles Woodruff's fruit farm, who sold the stock to Conrath. The yield from 2 1/2 acres of one year old plants was 75 bushels, sold at Detroit for from $4 to $4.75 per bushel. They hold their size well to the last picking. Those who saw them in full bearing speak in high terms of this prolific, jet black berry of good size. Mr. Conrath planted his berries seven feet apart, nipped them when 2-2 feet high, to send out side branches, so that every plant is a stocky small tree. His cultivation is perfectly clean, soil porous, would not do as well in a stiff clay soil. Plants of this variety were sent to different experiment stations.

W. H. P. Gladden, of the Experiment Station at the Michigan Agricultural College, reports, July 28th 1892: "Conrath's Early Raspberry—bush strong growing, healthy. First fruit ripe July 6. Berry large round, firm, jet black, quality excellent. It ripened with Souhegan, but the fruit was much larger and better and the bushes were more productive."

L. Troop, of Purdue University, Indiana, reports July 28, 1892: "The Conrath Early Raspberry was just beginning to ripen when I left Lafayette. It was among the earliest but not the earliest and in size and productiveness it seemed very satisfactory. Will give you a fuller report later."

Mr. Conrath planted 12 acres of this berry. He is one of the rising young fruit growers in this vicinity and will be an active member of this society. The fruit interest is growing stronger every year about Ann Arbor. It is worthy of note, that while peaches on the islands in Lake Erie and most places in and out of this state are generally a failure this year, the crop about Ann Arbor is very promising. Lots of school children find employment in this branch of industry during the summer vacation. The berry pickers generally are a happy and thrifty class. Their cheerfulness comes frequently out by their happy songs in the field. EMIL BAUR, Cor. Sec'y.

NEW APPORTIONMENT.

How the State is Now Divided into Representative and Senatorial Districts.

When the democratic members of the legislature came to assemble at Lansing last Friday, upon the order of Gov. Winans, (at $1,000 per day) they found that they lacked just one vote of having enough in the senate to carry through the disgraceful gerrymander that Chairman Campau and Secretary Horsford had fixed up and proposed to pass, whether it was right or wrong. Senator Holcomb, a Patron of Industry senator, declined to become a party to the disgrace, and they dare not, right on the eve of election, attempt the high-handed outrage of seating Senators Bastone and Winsler after those gentlemen had resigned and their resignations had been accepted. Consequently the legislature was forced into passing a just apportionment bill. It was not to the democratic manager's credit, however, for they never would have done it had the power been in their hands to have done differently.

The bill passed by the House is substantially the same as suggested by the Detroit Evening News of last Thursday, and was known as the Evening News bill.

The bill provides for representation as follows:

REPRESENTATIVE DISTRICTS.

SENATORIAL DISTRICTS.

Table with columns: District, Members, Population. Lists districts from First to Twenty-third.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

DEFINITIONS OF PLUCK.

Result of a Prize Competition by London Tit-Bits.

Some time ago the London Tit-Bits offered a prize of two guineas for the best definition of the word "Pluck." The winning definition is: "Fighting with the scabbard when the sword is broken." The following are some of the best definitions sent in: Moral backbone. Silent endurance coupled with cheerful energy. The power a man has to say "No" when he knows his wife wants him to say "Yes."
