THAT'S IT EXACTLY.

For the last few weeks there have been two lady milliners stopping at one of the hotels in the city for the purpose of doing business in Ann Arbor. They go from house to house soliciting work, charging small price for new goods and for making over hats, bonnets, etc. From some ladies the succeeded in getting work, but whether they gave satisfaction or not is not known. Feeling somewhat interested to know if these milliners paid a license to do business in Ann Arbor, I made inquiry and found they did not. Now is it right for strangers to come into the city and take from our home milliners, who pay taxes, who patronize our merchants, our markets, etc., etc., what rightfully belongs to them? It certainly does not and the first thing our city fathers should do is to pass an ordinance protecting home industries. If a person is to come here for a few days and pick up all the money he can in selling merchandise, he should be obliged to pay a license and a big one, too. The ladies who patronized these strange milliners, in my opinion, ought not to have done so, as there are so many ladies in Ann Arbor engaged in the millinery business who do good work at reasonable prices and always give satisfaction. Patronize your own towns people. This is the way to build up a town.—Ann Arbor Democrat.

The Democrat is advocating republican principles. It better look out. The democrat platform, which the people have just ratified, asserts that "protection is unconstitutional."

All barriers should be torn down. The whole world should be invited in to our choice markets, and money should be sent abroad to foster foreign industries and pay foreign workmen, instead of our own.

It is astonishing that the Democrat should advocate such undemocratic ideas.

It is the republican party that believes that our home markets should be protected, that America is for Americans, and that those who come from abroad should be made to pay for the privilege of trading here.

The republicans of Livingston county have done nobly. They have redeemed the county and elected the entire republican ticket with one exception.

And even Ohio came in and registered a vote for the people's choice.—Argus.

That item was like many others from the same source: premature.

A pure and business-like administration does not seem to count with the people.

Editor Chas. A. Dana has been heroically rescued from "negro domination."

The way the democrats are jumping into the band-wagon now is making it very dangerous for the springs.

The snawbuck legislature and the theft of senatorial seats by the democratic party has been rebuked in this state, as it deserved.

Rev. Sam Jones says that the way to be a Christian is "to keep your mouth shut." But the Rev. Sam fails in preaching what he preaches.

Who dare question Tammany Hall's democracy now?—Mt. Clemens Press. No one. But the price, my dear boy!! How much did it cost?

Grover Cleveland intends to be a conservative man, but he will have his hands full with the cranks and visionaries who have been chosen to the house and senate.

The fight for postoffices and federal appointments is on in every little hamlet in the country. It is fun for the republicans to watch the hustling, even now, before the result has been fairly announced.

The Courier is receiving the attention of its democratic contemporaries not only in this county, but in many sections. This is complimentary. Our democratic brethren are not of the kind who strike at nothing.

The republican party is proud of this fact. There is not one act of President Harrison's administration that they would change if they could. It has been honest, pure, clean, upright. No president ever gave a better one. Hurrah for Harrison!

The people do not know how to let well enough alone. They never had a better president than Harrison, and never will have. After all, it is the flappadoodle politician, of the "you are a liar" sort, that appears to take with the majority.

The populists and prohibs who are gleefully announcing the desintegration of the republican party are chasing rainbows. The republican party has not ended its mission. There are vital questions yet to be settled in this country and settled aright. And the republican party will be called upon to settle them.

"We shall have the government now for a hundred years," was the remark of a frey southerner the other day at Washington. And Senator John Blackburn, of Kentucky, says: "The democratic party will never stay its hands until every vestige of war legislation is wiped out."

Some people do not know when they are well off. The laboring men who voted to elect Cleveland, and force free trade, or even a revenue reform upon this country have committed suicide as far as their interests are concerned—that is if Mr. Cleveland and his party dare legislate on the line of their party's platform.

When northern republicans can go into any of the southern states and speak their views freely, the same as southern democrats do at present throughout the north; when the ballot of every southern citizen shall be counted as cast the same as it is in the northern states; when every citizen entitled to the ballot shall be as free to cast it throughout every state in this union as he is in Michigan; then and not till then, will the republican party have ended its mission.

The splendid republican victory in this state is something for the party to feel proud over. It is the grandest victory since the days of Zach Chandler.

Although the party workers all over Michigan are entitled to praise, yet to the head and its excellent management is due a great deal of credit. Senator McMillan, as chairman of the state central committee deserves the congratulations of the party. He has been an indefatigable worker, a systematic organizer, a fearless pusher, and to him is due much of the praise for victory. And we believe that the rank and file of the republican party throughout the state will all join in giving him three rousing cheers.

The democratic party has profited by the immense influx of foreign immigration. In many places in this country besides New York and Chicago these people are made voters almost as soon as they have landed, and every one of them vote the democratic ticket. They have no more idea of this government than a Tammany politician has of religion, and while the scheme may be considered a shrewd one, it is a dangerous one to the liberties of the republic. The law is lenient enough and should be obeyed. The truth is, foreigners ought to remain here as long as native born citizens before being allowed to vote. There is no reason why partiality should be shown in this respect to a person who is imported. Home grown voters ought to be placed on an even footing at least, with the foreign raised article. Generosity often leads people to ruin. It will lead a nation the same way.

Tammany now controls the nation together with the solid south—and what are you going to do about it?

Will the democratic party carry out its platform? We most sincerely believe it will not.

It dare not carry out its platform, either in regard to free trade or wild cat banks.

Let the democratic party have full sweep. Let it be held responsible for the management of this government. Let it legislate according to its platform if it dare, and then see what the verdict of the people will be four years from now.

The president has issued his proclamation for Thanksgiving, Thursday, Nov. 24, just as if nothing had happened. Well, the dish of crow we've been "feasting" on since Nov. 8th, will be finished by that time, so that turkey or chicken will taste very well, indeed.

It is not probable that the sun will cease shining; that the moon will hide its face permanently; that the earth will give up its diurnal revolutions; that some great convulsion of nature will put an end to all things, simply because the republicans have and to give up the reins of the government.

The dear old song: "Michigan, my Michigan," is dearer to the hearts of republicans this year than it ever has been before. It is the greenest spot in the great Sahara of democratic triumph in the union. The wool was not pulled over the eyes of the people of Michigan. The nomination of Rich was not a mistake.

When rich men are republicans they are termed "plutocrats" by the democrats, but when they are democrats they are merely "well-to-do plebians." It is a fact, however, that there are more wealthy democrats in the country to-day than there are wealthy republicans. But they don't count in the bugaboo business of the democratic party.

Detroit reports on an average a murder a day, of late. If the students or town boys here at Ann Arbor have a little lark, it is reported all over the country in flaming headlines, and a lesson in morals is preached to us. But murders are so common in cities now that but little is thought of them; and the crimes are passed by with merely a line or two.

The populists will hold the balance of power in the U. S. senate after the 4th of March next, according to the figures last made. The result in regard to the House will be a democratic majority of about 75 instead of 147 as at present. A handsome republican gain—a very handsome gain considering the result on president.

We lived four years under Cleveland when he had a balance wheel in the shape of a republican senate to prevent the theoretical fallacies of the rainbow statesmen from enacting any measures they chose. It is to be hoped that they will give full vent to their ideas. A taste of free trade is what the people want evidently, and that is what they ought to have.

One of our business men received a letter, after the election, from a prominent New Yorker, who hits the nail on the head in this way: I have heard the result of the election held yesterday, and wonder at the choice of the American people. Few can stand prosperity, and the vote of the naturalized citizen has deprived Americans of their choice. A change in the policy of a nation disturbs business and prospective plans; calls a halt and often makes a wreck."

This is a complete speech in a nutshell.

Will any of the wealthy men of the nation be any poorer now that the democratic party has been successful? Will Mr. Whitney, or Senator Brice, or Gov. Flower, or the Rockefeller, or the Vanderbilts or any other of the "plutocrats," as the democrats have been pleased to term the wealthy people, give up any of their accumulated fortunes?

Will any of the poor men become richer? Just think it over my friend, you who have voted the democratic ticket because the demagogues made you believe that the success of the republican party fostered and encouraged the accumulating of large fortunes.

Hon. Don M. Dickinson is the shrewdest democratic politician in the western states. While his state has gone against his party, and every democratic politician in the state (Chapman and Johnnie Moloney excepted) is buried so deep that it will take the showers of next April to find their remains, he is out from under the debris and happy as a king. He drew out of Michigan after placing his democratic rivals in responsible positions. Campaign aspired to the senatorship. He was chairman of the democratic state central committee. Where is Campaign to-day? Has anyone seen him?

Where are the democrats in Wayne county who fought Dickinson? Will they ever be resurrected? Never. Where is the Hon. I. M. Weston, of Grand Rapids? Has anyone heard from him recently? But Mr. Dickinson is on earth. He is the dispenser of Michigan's patronage.

He is monarch of all he surveys. To him all democratic knees must cringe; all heads must bow; or they are "not in it."

If there has ever been sharper or more shrewd political moves than he has made, we should like to know when, where and by whom?

Brenner's administration of the office of sheriff will give the lie to the false and anonymous circular gotten out against him in the last days of the campaign.—Argus.

If the Argus refers to the circular giving the amount in dollars and cents it has cost the people of this county to take care of its criminal business, tramps, etc., for the past few years, we defy that paper to prove a line of that circular false. Mr. Brenner will no doubt give the people a good, clean administration of the sheriff's office, for he is a good, clean man, but when figures are taken from the published proceedings of the board of supervisors, the Argus will have a hard time proving them false.

Mr. Cleveland scored a great victory in Ann Arbor, the town where Michigan University is situated and where Major McKinley made such a how-de-do over his scheme of engraving republican ideas in the minds of college students. McKinleyism has shown itself particularly unpopular in the seat of learning.—Chicago Herald.

It is no doubt true that the desire of many college professors, assistant professors, tutors, etc., to secure cheap foreign books, coupled with a craving to have books written by themselves published in London, or Paris or Berlin or other foreign cities, because of the "tone" of the thing, have led many of those gentlemen into the advocacy of free trade ideas, and so into the democratic party. It is to be hoped that the democratic party will now gratify their desires to the fullest possible extent.

The people who attended the M. E. church last Sunday evening, and listened to the address of Rev. Wm. Dawe, D. D., before the Wesleyan Guild, upon "Wyckliffe, the Morning Star of the Reformation," will carry with them as long as they live, a happy impression of that event. As a rhetorical effort the lecture was nearly as perfect as any pulpit orator of the day could have made it; as an historical review it was grand. It was inspiring, thrilling, eloquent. The lecturer had the sympathy and consequently the closest attention of his audience from the beginning to the end, and although it was late when he closed, yet everyone seemed filled with regret thereat, and would have been pleased to remain much longer and listened, and deep down in his heart tendered the eloquent divine a vote of thanks for the words and thoughts of that evening. The first lecture of the Wesleyan Guild this season can be put down as one of the most successful in the history of the organization.

Deaf for a Year Caused by Catarrh in the Head

Catarrh is a CONSTITUTIONAL disease, and requires a CONSTITUTIONAL REMEDY like Hood's Sarsaparilla to cure it. Read: "Three years ago, as a result of catarrh, I entirely lost my hearing and was deaf for more than a year. I tried various things to cure it, and had several physicians attempt it, but no improvement was apparent. I could distinguish no sound. I was intending putting myself under the care of a specialist when some one suggested that possibly Hood's Sarsaparilla would do me some good. I began taking it without the expectation of any lasting help. To my surprise and great joy I found when I had taken three bottles that my hearing was returning. I kept on till I had taken three more. It is now over a year and I can hear perfectly well. I am troubled but very little with the catarrh. I consider this a remarkable case, and cordially recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all who have catarrh." HERMAN HICKS, 30 Carter Street, Rochester, N. Y.

HOOD'S PILLS are purely vegetable, and do not purge, pain or gripe. Sold by all druggists.

COUNTY AND VICINITY.

A saw mill is one of the new enterprises of Pinckney. There was a good deal of crow in last edition of the Ypsilanti Sentinel. Wm. Bacon, of Chelsea, has shipped 18 car loads of poultry to New York city this fall.

The registration in Ypsilanti showed a net gain of 167 new names. The city is growing. Burglars have been attempting to rob Saline stores but were too noisy at their work and failed.

There were only five ballots thrown out as defective at the Manchester polls, although 557 were cast.

Concerts, lectures, church socials, etc., now fill in the time of the people of the country evenings. It's the gay season.

Prof. B. L. D'Ooge, of Ypsilanti, is an official visitor to Albion college; and Prof. A. Lodenman to the German-American seminary.

Anthony Rinshed, of Detroit, and Miss Mattie Dresser, of Ypsilanti, were married Nov. 8th, at the home of the bride's parents in the latter city.

The Picket is advocating electric street lighting for that place. That's the light the people never consent to part with after they once obtain it.

The News is pleased over the fact that the ranks of the bachelors at Dexter are growing beautifully less. Every new family, you know, makes a new subscriber.

There were 485 ballots cast in Scio township. Of these two were blank and 11 defective otherwise. The democrats had 249 straight, republicans 138 straight, prohibitions 12 and people's 1.

Harry Kies has formed a company of cadets consisting of about 25 school boys and is drilling them. The business men have clipped in to buy the boys some uniforms.—Manchester Enterprise.

Geo. Higgins, of Dexter, is gathering a collection of curios, and his next curiosity will be an alligator, it is said. If the weather is not warmer than this, the animal won't hurt anybody.

And now the girls in South Lyon have caught the brass band fever. We have it from good authority that the girls mean business and probably an organization will be perfected.—Picket.

The grangers are going to cluster around C. M. Bowen's on Friday, Nov. 18th, and settle the question of foreign immigration as effectually as election has settled the tariff question. All come.—Chelsea Standard.

The farmers have been busy since the windstorm, topping out their hay stacks and repairing their windmills.—Chelsea Herald. Some of our politicians have been busy since the cyclone, in trying to find out where they are at.

Reports of sheep being killed or worried by dogs are coming from almost every part of the county. What is to be done with the dog-gone nuisance, anyway?—Dexter News. Amputate the dog's tails just back of their ears. How would that do?

The damage to oats and wheat in Michigan by smut this year is estimated at $1,000,000. The experimental station at the Agricultural college has published a circular recommending the dipping of the seed in hot water as a remedy.—Chelsea Herald.

Wm. Stevens, who is well known to a great many of the citizens of the county, died at his home in Dexter, on Friday afternoon, Nov. 4th, aged 61 years. He was born in Ireland, on Christmas Day, 1830, and came to this country when 17 years old, and had lived at Dexter for thirty years or more.

What the learner has by his own observation has become an actual possession, which he is able to explain in his own language.—Stockbridge Sun. Quite a number of gentlemen who observed something on the 8th inst., have not yet been able to explain it in their own language.

Some of the Dexter boys seem to be doing a "land office business" in Chelsea. Scarcely a week passes but a visit from some of them "on business." Wonder what that "business" is?—News. Weren't those visits made during the time that the dynamo was burned out, at the electric light works and the moon was in its first quarter? And all was darkness on the streets?

Sheep dogs are evidently constantly at large. Amos Phelps' fine flock of sheep were worried one night last week, as also a nice flock of coarse wool lambs belonging to D. E. Hoy, who found one dead and several mangled, some hiding under the barn and in by nooks. In Mr. Phelps' flock were ten registered American Merino sheep recently purchased at the Ball-Boydson sale. How to stop this kind of work is a question farmers should soon solve.—Dexter Leader.

The legislature gives a bounty on sparrow heads, why not on worthless curs as well.

Eight hundred and twenty-four votes were cast in this township, 14 of which did not count for the reason that the voter did not properly mark his ballot to show his intent.—Dundee Reporter.

Had it not been for the much welcome rain, which has come in abundance during the past few days, no doubt the wheat crop in this part of the state would have been a slim affair next year. As it is the prospect for a large yield is very encouraging.—Fowlerville Observer.

The county is overrun with traveling agents of one kind and another, with all sorts of schemes to fleece the unwary. Let the public be on the lookout and remember that you can generally buy from a reliable business man cheaper than of agents—and your purchase has sound backing.—Fowlerville Observer.

A woman coming from New York to Howell, was obliged to change cars at Durand. She was a ready conversationalist and said she came to Michigan because she heard there were so many rich and influential widowers here. Now is the winter of re widower's discontent made glorious summer by this maid of York.—Howell Herald.

Mrs. Middlestead's Palmyra dog sailed into a brace of young hunters, the other day. One of them, to save the shiner of his pantaloons, struck at the "critter" with his gun. The stock "busted," the gun went off and the dog was spry enough to catch the bullet, but it killed him. Deputy Sheriff Harrington held an inquest on the body of the dog and decided that death was due to a blessed providence, a dogmatic but sensible conclusion.—Adrian Press.

In listening to the sound by which a clock or watch marks the passing of diminutive portions of time, one might almost fancy that deductions so extremely small would never wear away the whole duration of a long life. But it has been by such minute lapses in never ceasing succession that the vast series of ages since the creation has passed away; it has been by the succession of instants that all our ancestors have completed their sojourn on earth, and by this it will be that we shall one day have arrived at the end of our mortal existence.

Each passing moment, then, may be regarded as having a relation to the end, and everything which hints to us that moments are passing, may be a monition to us to be habitually to the great work which ought to be accomplished against the period when the last of them shall come.—Taken from the Saline Observer.

It was evident to the election board Tuesday evening when canvassing the ballots that to some of the voters the way of stamping or preparing a ballot was not thoroughly understood, several ballots were found in a manner we believe, far different than was intended by the voters passing them.

There were found three ballots just as they came from the press, not a mark on them, another was marked with a cross under each the three headings, republican, prohibition and people's, making it to show three straight tickets, what was the voters intention? One ticket was marked with a vote for Gorman and no one else, while the first elector on the republican ticket of another, received a vote, the balance of the ticket being blank.

These are, no doubt, mistakes as few voters would vote for one man on a general election day and skip all the rest. We would suggest that voters study more carefully the directions given, that they may not lose their vote.—Saline Observer.

Ugly and Hateful. but I couldn't help it. Everything went wrong with me, and I thought I hadn't a friend in the world; dyspepsia caused this, and for months I couldn't eat anything, and just suffered in misery till I used Sulphur Bitters. Three bottles cured me. D. Lewis, 22 Bowdoin Street, Boston, Mass.

Keech having placed in my hands his resignation as a member of the Board of Public Works, I herewith transmit the same to your honorable body for your action as provided by the city charter. The resignation is self-explanatory, and is hereto annexed as a part of this communication. It is due to the associates of Mr. Keech upon the Board, as well as to myself, to say to you that we have labored long and earnestly for a reconsideration of the resignation, for we realize that the city is losing thereby one of the most faithful and competent of its unpaid servants. Our efforts having been fruitless, and presaging that your honorable body will accept the resignation as Mr. Keech requests, I have the honor to nominate, subject to your confirmation, Mr. Edward Treadwell as a member of the Board of Public Works for the unexpired term of Mr. Keech.

Thanking yourself, the Common Council, and the members of our Board for the courtesies received from all during the time that I have held the office, I remain, Respectfully yours, THOMAS J. KEECH.

Scandal. A woman to the holy father went, Confession of sin was her intent, And so her misdeed, great and small, She faithfully rehearsed them all: And, in a catalogue of sin, She owned that she a tale-bearer had been, And borne a bit of scandal up and down To all the long-tongued gossips in the town. The holy father, in his wisdom, Granted the absolution asked of him, But while for all the rest he pardon gave, He told her in his office was very grave, And that to do fit penance she must go Out by the wayside where the thistles grow And gather the largest, ripest ones, Scatter the seeds, and that when this was done, To tell him his commands she did obey, He told her to be back again another day, The woman thinking this a penance light, Hastened to do his will that very night, Next day but one she went the priest to tell: The priest sat still and heard her story through, Then said, "There's something still for you to do; Those little thistle seeds that you have sown, I bid you go together every one." SOME LITTLE FOXES.

"Dear me! there comes Grandma Jarvis!" sighed pretty Mabel Lee, as she looked out of the window and saw an old lady coming across the lawn—a very queer looking old lady in a plain gray gown, a dark purple shawl, and an old-fashioned silk calash over her thick ruffled cap.

"Mabel!" said her mother indignantly. "Oh, I know it, mammy dear. I'm an awful sinner; but Grandma Jarvis is so good, and sensible, and so forth, I always feel as if I were a poor little nut in the jaws of a steel nut-cracker when she is about."

"She generally finds out and brings out the good in you," said Mrs. Lee, smiling, but she said no more, for Mrs. Jarvis turned the door-handle at that moment and came in.

You saw at once, if you saw her face, that she was a person of keen insight and judgment; perhaps less lovable than a gentler and more gracious nature, but yet a woman to be thoroughly trusted and relied on.

Mabel was a lady-like, bright girl, spoiled, to be sure, as children are apt to be when there is but one in a family, and resenting, like any spoiled child, her grandmother's sharp comments and sensible advice. At heart, however, she respected her, and perhaps a little more than that old lady was rich and generous, and young people, even the least mercenary and grasping, feel kindly towards the hand that brings timely and costly gifts.

Mabel even forgave the old-world dress, since that gray gown was heavy lusterless silk; the thick quilted cap-ruffles India muslin and thread lace; the purple shawl crape, covered with embroidery, and the white kerchief fastened with one great diamond.

Grandma Jarvis never thought of her clothes further than to have them comfortable, and not too outre. She knew very well the world was like Mabel, and would forgive the simple fashion for the costly material, and, with a grim humor, she always called her diamonds pin "Charity."

"It covers so many of my sins, my dear," she said. "I pass for a woman of sense with ninety people out of a hundred, simply on account of this big trinket. It blinds them so they can't see I am out of the fashion."

To-day, Mrs. Jarvis had a definite errand. She sat down on the sofa and took off her calash with deliberation.

"Mehetable," said she, fixing her eyes on the young girl, whose color rose to her fair face at the obnoxious name. "I hear you are going to be married."

Mabel blushed still more hotly, and looked straight out of the window. The tall-pane reflected a knit brow and unmistakably cross lips.

Mrs. Jarvis laughed. "You are rather startling, mother."

"I should think the fact was more startling than I am," dryly answered the old lady. "I got your note last night, Hetty, and I made up my mind to come over this morning and see about it."

"Yours are the first congratulations, mother. Nobody else knows it!"

"I haven't congratulated anybody yet," snapped Mrs. Jarvis. "I never do congratulate anybody till a year after their wedding day, and then I don't have to very often. I came to say, don't any of you give the child a tea-party. I want to do that myself. She's got my name and it ought to be gilt, or silvered or something, to console her for such an old-fashioned appellation, though she does top and tail it as if it were a gooseberry."

"O, grandma!" Mabel turned a pleased and pretty face away from the window now.

"Don't be overcome yet. Maybe you'll change your mind before the end, miss. I've got a bit of advice for you, and a promise to take first. The advice is to leave off the piano for six months, and take to the kitchen. Men can't live on love and waltzes, much less a man of the Selden tribe. I know 'em. If he don't have good food, he'll be sour first, and then he'll have dyspepsia, and then there'll be a sound of a going in the taps of the millinery trees, which things are a figure. But that's the advice."

"O grandma, I can make splendid cake, and nice pudding, too, and Charlotte, just as good as Cross!"

"Fiddle-sticks! You can't make bread, or boil a potato, or broil a steak."

"But anybody can do that."

Mrs. Lee smiled, and grandma turned a withering look at Mabel.

"Don't be a fool! There isn't one in a hundred can do either, and I doubt if you've got brains to; but you might try."

There rose up instantly a mighty resolve in Mabel's feminine soul to show Grandma Jarvis that she could do more than she gave her credit for, that she would learn her credit to cook in spite of this discouraging prophecy. It is just possible grandma knew who she was talking to.

"Then, as to the promise. I'm going to send you over a motto; one of these painted gimcracks everybody hangs up everywhere. I don't know why they call them illuminated, I'm sure, except by the rule of contraries, for they need extra spectacles and a calcium light to read them by; but you can read mine; I washed off the carlines; only promise to read it every morning before breakfast, or I can tell you you won't get the text."

"Oh, yes, of course I'll read it, grandma,—the idea."

"Well, well, if you read it, you'll think about it, I'll warrant. Now I must go home; and send John over with the things; and with a frosty little card to her mother's fair cheek, and a nod to her mother, the old lady went.

"Grandma kisses me just like a clam-shell," said Mabel, in half soliloquy as she sat down again by the window. Her mother could not help laughing, for the cool nip of thin lips, that was grandma's substitute for a kiss, certainly did suggest shells and clamminess. John came directly back with the package, and Mabel eagerly untied and unfolded it. The motto was printed in large German text, easy to read, though gay with gold and colors, and it ran thus: "Take us the foxes, and the little foxes that spoil the vines, for our vines have tender grapes."

Mabel stared.

"Mother, what on earth does it mean?"

Mrs. Lee smiled and sighed, both, as she read the legend over the girl's shoulder. "Look here, Mab," said she, slipping a flat gold hoop off her third finger, and the girl read inside, "Beware of little foxes!" and looked up freshly astonished, into her mother's face.

"I suppose grandma means me to tell you a story, Mabel, which she told me when I was first engaged. It hurt her bitterly to tell it, but it did me much good. I think she could not bring herself to tell you. You are not her daughter, and can't not love her as I do, and you never have had reason to pity her as I have. You never saw Grandfather Jarvis, Mabel."

"Why, I thought he died before I was born."

"No, he died ten years ago in Brazil. I never saw him myself, Mab; he never even knew he had a daughter."

"Mother!"

Mrs. Lee's lovely dark eyes filled with tears as she drew Mabel down beside her on the sofa.

"I have been told that grandma was a very beautiful, high-spirited girl at your age, dear, animated, brilliant, thoroughly satisfied with herself and her surroundings, especially when Johnathan Jarvis fell in love with her. Her father died when she was three years old, and her invalid mother adored the child, and spoiled her even more than I do you."

Mabel kissed the gift hand laid on her shoulder, and said it a willful little bite.

"Don't be horrid, mammy, or I shall eat you up. As if I was one bit spoiled!"

"If you were not my child, you would not need grandma's lesson. She was spoiled, as I said, and Johnathan Jarvis knew it, but he was bewitched by her spirit and beauty, and thought, as men are apt to think, that he could control and cure all that. She loved him, too, very deeply, after her fashion, and there was nothing to delay their marriage, but the day was scarcely fixed when her mother suddenly sank and died. Grandmother did not mourn so hopelessly that it was thought best to put off her marriage, though, out of respect to her mother's memory there was no wedding-party, and the 'happy pair' began their life at once in the old homestead, where grandma lives to-day."

"The outlook before these two was very fair; youth, health, competency, what seemed to be devoted love, made them an apparently enviable couple; but no sooner were these broken wills brought into daily contact, than trouble began."

"For may I laugh, Mabel, but their first dispute was about a coffee-pot. Mother preferred the old-fashioned urn, her husband the newer style of pitcher. Neither would yield in a mere matter of taste and this was the beginning of it."

"Silly? Yes, it looks wonderfully silly to us; but I think I heard a very warm discussion only yesterday on the proper style of riding hats for a lady."

Mabel colored to the waves of her dark hair, and tried to smile.

"They came to a compromise on this matter, agreeing to drink chocolate in place of coffee, but other small disputes followed; and they burned in on grandma's mind, but I forgot most of them, so slight and trivial were the matters of discussion, though they grew to active means of torment."

"A child was born, and Johnathan, in his sad and sore heart, thought that would bring peace, and his indignation and griefed wife hoped it also, for each blamed the other as combatants all; but the baby's eyes never saw their strife; it died, and the hope died with it. Little frets are what wear away love and life, Mabel. My poor father—and my poor mother! There was no kindly friend to say the judicious word to either. They showed a smiling front to the world outside, but grew more alienated daily."

"There was no real quarrel, no vital disagreement, but the hourly fret of undisciplined tempers, impatient natures, strong wills, and a self-consideration that forbade yielding, that cherished pride and petulance, that recognized no duty except as owed to itself."

"The end of these things hastened. Before the nameless baby had slept in its green cradle a year, father had set out for Brazil in a merchant vessel, leaving this short adieu to his wife:

"You can say I have gone south on business, Mehitable, he wrote, 'but you must know I shall never come back. I am tired of living in torment, and you will be glad to part with one who could never please you. So farewell. Yours to command, JONATHAN JARVIS."

"Mother was frantically angry at first. She raved in her own chamber over what she termed a mortal insult, but, as day after day came on, and her loneliness and weakness grew over her, she began to see things more honestly; and when news came that the ship had foundered at sea, and all hands perished, then she was entirely prostrated. As she told me, her past life rose up, looked her in the face, and struck her down."

"I was prematurely born, and a very long illness carried her to the gates of death. She recovered at last, a stren and saddened woman, with only one interest in her life; but she brought me up with strictness and care, tenderly as she loved me; and when I was about to take my life up for myself, told me this bitter story, and gave me this ring."

"If I had killed the little foxes," said she, sadly, 'I might to-day have a goodly vineyard of my own. Beware of them, Hetty. They have spoiled my life."

"And after all, Mabel, my father was not lost in that wreck. He was picked up by another vessel, and, under an assumed name, lived on in Brazil. In the grasp of mortal illness, he wrote to his wife, asking and giving pardon. It was from him that all her wealth came, but she has never forgiven herself."

"Poor grandma!" sobbed Mabel, "and I have been so horridly hateful to her!"

"It will console her for all your frets, my darling, if you only profit by her pitiful story."

The next time Grandma Jarvis came over, Mabel greeted her with a stringent hug and a heartfelt kiss, not at all of the clam-shell order.

"Gracious!" exclaimed the old lady, withdrawing herself a little to look at Mabel; but she saw the brown eyes fill, and her own grow dim.

"Go along, child, go along!" she growled under her breath. "And now you've got your lesson, don't forget it."

It would have been hard for Mabel to do so, when the exquisitely wrought tea set that adorned her table through all her married life, bore on every cover the sly and eager head of a tiny fox, and the very cream pitcher had for its handle the slender body of that treacherous animal, its eager head peering over the brim, and its long, bushy tail curving outward at the base. Many and many a time, when some trifling matter irritated her, and a quick or glaring word rose to her lips, a glance at the tea set shut her pretty mouth closely just in time; and when Grandma Jarvis came into Boston a year after Mabel's marriage, to eat her Christmas dinner at Mr. Selden's she nodded quinnly at the lady of the house as she said: "I congratulate you now Mehitable. I can do it with a clear conscience. It's been a good hunting year, I see."

Mabel colored and laughed, and her husband stared, but nobody explained the sybillic utterance; only Mrs. Lee gave her mother a loving and grateful look, and Grandma Jarvis wiped her spectacles.

And the moral is,—Let us all go fox hunting!

Rev. J. T. Sunderland will begin next Sunday, a series of six morning sermons on "Religion and Evolution." The dates and subjects of the series will be: Nov. 20, The Evolution of Man; Dec. 11, The Evolution of the Bible; Dec. 18, Evolution and the Idea of God; Dec. 25, Evolution in its Relation to Christ and Christianity; Jan. 1, Evolution and Immortality. Next Sunday evening he will speak on Thomas Paine, giving the second lecture in his evening series on "Some Great Skeptics."

Who is she? Does anybody know her? Read this item from the Ypsilanti Sentinel: "A letter addressed to Miss Florence Bartlett, from Lowell, Mass., is lying unclaimed at the postoffice. In a note from its writers to Postmaster Carpenter, great anxiety is expressed for its delivery. They write that she is the daughter of George W. Bartlett, a carpenter, who came to this city years ago, and that she married, but her husband's name is not known. Any person having knowledge of Bartlett or of Miss Florence will confer a favor upon the parties in Lowell (who are responsible business men) by giving Postmaster Carpenter such information as will lead to the delivery of the letter."

The Hausfreund, edited by Mr. Paul G. Suckey, the democratic county treasurer elect, pays its "compliments" to the Ann Arbor Democrat and the Ann Arbor Courier, in its last edition. Which is in accord with a remark its editor is reported to have made some weeks ago: "I shall not say anything now, but you just wait until after I am elected, and then I will give them a—!" He has evidently done so in his best Italian-Germanic. What a difference there is in men! Take a broad, sensible, level-headed gentleman, for instance, and if he is successful in any undertaking, he is always kind and magnanimous in his treatment of those who have opposed him, thereby making for himself friends for the future. But the little fellows are sure to fly into a rage, strike, spit and flap their jaws, reminding one very much of a bantam rooster on a compost heap.

The Christian Union, which is made up of members from the various Young People's Societies of the city, held a union meeting at the Presbyterian church last Sunday evening. Not far from 1,500 people were present, and the exercises were very instructive and entertaining, conducted by Pres. H. L. Walker, Mr. F. A. Manney, Mr. Bowen and Misses Buck and Eberhard. With a choir of over a hundred singers, accompanied by the large organ, the singing was excellent, especially when Mr. St. James rendered a charming solo in the song, "Throw out the Life Line, followed by the grand chorus. The B. M. Q. rendered the Lord's Prayer in their usual impressive style. These young people have become a power, not only in the church, but outside of it, by the amount of Christian work they are accomplishing. There are now 1,300 church members in the University.

The more one attends any doings at Newberry hall, the more he is impressed with the totally inadequate facilities for entering or leaving the hall. Should anything ever occur to create a panic, there would be no possibility of saving a life. The stairs leading down are narrow and crooked, and when the two streams of humanity meet at the main entrance, it is crushing, even on ordinary occasions. Of course there may never be a stampede in the hall in its history, then again there may be one within a short time—there is no telling. If there should be one, it would bring sorrow to the homes of Ann Arbor in a fearful way. The cost of furnishing a large and commodious exit and entrance would probably be considerable, but whatever the cost might be, it would be nothing compared with the loss of human life that certainly would occur in case of a fire on the lower floor, or an alarm of any kind. Could not a rear stairway leading directly out of doors be arranged so as not to interfere with the architectural beauty of the building, and make the hall a safe one for the people to congregate in?

PERSONALS.

Mac C. LeBeau was a caller upon Ann Arbor friends Saturday. G. M. Monroe has been home for a few days visiting his family. Bert Fall spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Fall. Col. C. V. R. Pond has returned from a trip to his home in Coldwater.

Mrs. E. B. Pond and daughter Miss Louise, are spending a few weeks with relatives in Detroit. Mrs. L. D. Hubbard, of Saginaw, e. s., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Monroe, of Felch st. Cashier Fred. H. Belsler, of the F. & M. Bank, has been confined to his home by illness for a few days.

Miss Grace Curtis, who has been visiting the family of Henry Matthews for a time, returned home to Lansing Monday. Prof. Fred W. Stevens, of Hyde Park Ill., was in the city Monday. He came to attend the funeral services of Mrs. H. Randall.

Miss Lou D. Giles returned home from Toledo Saturday. She reports that there were five inches of snow on the streets of Toledo Saturday, but that no snow could be seen this side of Dundee.

Mrs. Herbert Randall.

Death has come to our city once again and taken one who will be sorely missed by her loss seems a personal one in many a home. Mrs. Herbert Randall died on Saturday last, at her home on South Division st., after an illness extending over many weeks. Although not unexpected, yet the death of this estimable lady was none the less hard for her friends to bear.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Schoff, and was born in this city thirty-seven years ago. She has passed from infancy to womanhood in our midst, and the simplicity of her life, her unassuming and Christian character, endeared her to so many that her loss seems a personal one in many a home. She was a graduate of the high school, was a student of unusual mental capabilities, had attained a great deal of proficiency in music and was an artist of more than ordinary ability. Her husband and parents have the deepest sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Henry Tadlock, at the family residence, on Monday, at 2 o'clock p. m. The pall bearers were Hamilton Douglas, of Detroit, Prof. Chas. S. Denison, Chas. S. Miller and Julius E. Beal, of this city, and Mr. J. J. Goodyear supervised the arrangements for the family. The hands of loving friends provided numerous floral offerings, among which were some of great beauty from Chicago. The offering of the employees of Mr. Randall's store consisted of a cluster of thirty-seven roses, each rose representing a year of the life of the one for whom they mourn. At the cemetery the grave was entirely covered with evergreens, over which were strewn in great profusion white and pink roses, so emblematic of the pure and sweet life of her whose light has gone out forever.

The Choral Union series of concerts is to be opened next Monday evening, at University hall, by the Theodore Thomas orchestra.

The new quiz masters in the law department are: R. F. Thompson, M. T. Kendig, F. M. Wells, F. A. Sheldon, J. W. Dwyer.

A thief or a gang of thieves is operating about the city, stealing overcoats, hats, etc., from halls. One young lady had bicycle stolen.

On Saturday the 2d U. of M. eleven defeated the Michigan Athletic Association team by a score of 12 to 4, on the Athletic grounds in this city.

The uproariousness of the laws in attempting to hold class elections is so great, that the faculty is talking about entering a stay of proceedings.

The Choral Union will meet on Friday evening of this week, at 7:30 sharp. The change of date was made because next week is Thanksgiving vacation.

County Clerk Brown is the latest addition to the Freshman law class. We'll wager a bushel of peanuts that he will make the course in less than schedule time.

Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Breakey gave a very enjoyable reception to members of the senior medical class, at their home, corner of E. Huron and Division sts., Friday evening last.

Lehigh did not meet the U. of M. Saturday at Toledo, on account of injuries received in its game with U. of Penn. Stagg's Chicago University team played in their stead, and our boys won by a score of 18 to 10.

Wonder how some of the students who went from here to the University of Chicago like to be compelled to attend chapel exercises every morning? A thing that is compulsory there. It probably will be no injury to them.

The game of foot-ball between the Cornell and the U. of M., resulted in a score of 44 to 0 in favor of Cornell. Owing to the crippled condition of the eleven that result was very satisfactory to the friends of our boys.

A movement is to be made among the students to have the singers in the University meet Saturday mornings to practice college songs. The boys ought to go to the World's Fair and give them a specimen of a genuine college yell.

There is no doubt but that the article in the Daily Times of yesterday, respecting the rhythmic cheering at University hall is an article that should be listened to. The danger from that thing is very great, more so than any person can imagine.

The law students, who above all others should be orderly and obedient to all laws, are generally the reverse. They are the noisiest boys on the campus, and when they attempt to hold class elections one is reminded of a Tammany caucus. The education of a law student should not be to learn how to avoid the penalties of the law, but how to punish law breakers.

The Choral Union has received an invitation to sing at the World's Fair at such time as the Union may designate. That is just what this organization wanted. It would have been impossible to have accepted the first invitation, for the third week in June, as that is examination week. The famous chorus will now attend the great exhibition, and give the people of Chicago a specimen of chorus singing such as they never heard before. The chorus consists of 284 voices, the third largest in the west, Chicago and Cincinnati alone leading it in this respect.

"The College Fraternity" is the significant name of a new publication to be issued monthly. The October number is its initial appearance, and its field promises to be a wide one, as it covers all the Greek letter fraternities and societies, as well as all the university life from Maine to the Pacific coast. It will have papers on timely topics relative to college societies, selections from the various fraternity magazines and original articles from prominent alumni. It will be a good thing for all frat. men to read. Published by the Fraternity Publishing Co., 171 Broadway, New York, for $2.00 per year.

The audience that gathered at University hall last Monday evening to hear Remenyi, were not disappointed. They heard him, and they all rejoiced. There is no other Remenyi. He stands alone. He is peerless, a genuine diamond, with a luster so brilliant that it not only enraptures the senses, but at the same time impresses others with the fullness of ever attempting its equal. There may be other men who are masters of the violin, but they will find it difficult to impress an Ann Arbor audience with that belief. The vocalists with Remenyi were of the ordinary variety, and the pianist was very good. The concert was a success because Remenyi made it a success.

It has been many years since Theodore Thomas came to Ann Arbor with his famous orchestra. He comes now with an orchestra vastly superior—in fact it is admitted by all that his present organization is superior to any he has ever had—and appears not as the result of an unusual spirit of enterprise on the part of a graduating class—but as one of a series of concerts—including the finest artists now before the public and another orchestra which is the pride of musical circles throughout the entire country.

Every citizen of Ann Arbor and every student knows of the Choral Union Series, and they must take pride in the fact that it is, by all odds, the finest course of concerts given in the state. It seems hardly necessary to dwell upon the opportunity which this series affords of hearing the greatest artists and the most important works for less than gallery admission to the most ordinary entertainment in a large city. Neither are we obliged to refer to the admirable qualities of Theodore Thomas' leadership, the character and standing of the musicians making up the orchestra for nothing can be added to what everybody already knows. We would like to enforce the fact that this series of concerts is enormously expensive, and that a large number of Associate Membership tickets (at $2 each) is necessary to enable the Choral Union to have a balance on the right side at the end of the season. We append the programme which needs no comment, it is so characteristic of Thomas. Tickets may be obtained of canvassers at Ann Arbor Organ Co's store, and Calkins' Drug Store.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

The above represents the ex-president and the next president of the United States. The people decided by a large majority that he should be the man, and after the 4th of March next, he will again be president of the United States. Mr. Cleveland is not an extremist. He is conservative, and will not approve of radical changes in the policy of the government unless forced to do so by his party and its allies, the populists, who have contributed so much to his election. There is little danger of the country going to the bow-woos under Mr. Cleveland, if he can help it, but that the change of the tariff policy of the country, which the democratic platform demands, will cause widespread business disasters, there are few republicans who doubt.

A Great Attraction for the Opera House Saturday Evening.

The story of "The Kid" deals with a retired farmer, Ebenezer Newrick, who having become a millionaire through the discovery of coal oil on his farm, is straightway brought to New York by his ambitious wife and daughters, and, in his own words, "made to live like a regular swell." Contact with the gay element of city life transforms him into a "lively old boy." His wife is domineering and suspicious, and his youngest daughter, the "Kid," irresponsible and inquisitive. Consequently, when he becomes involved first with a blackmailer and then with a heavy burlesque actress, he is obliged to tell a series of picturesque lies to keep out of trouble. A strong organization of knowledgeable artists constitute the company, and many original and novel features in songs, duets, dancers and superior quartette singing and specialties will be introduced.
