Marshal Murray Suspended.

The following is the correspondence as published in the Daily Times yesterday, between Mayor Thompson the Council and Marshal Murray, relative to the suspension of that officer from duty as marshal:

Mayor's Office,
Ann Arbor, Oct. 24th, 1893.

By virtue of the power and authority vested in me by the charter of this city I do hereby order, direct and declare

1. That James R. Murray, marshal and chief of police, be and is hereby suspended from said office.

2. That James R. Murray, marshal and chief of police, be and is hereby removed from said office, provided a majority of the common council consent thereto.

Said James R. Murray is removed from office as marshal and chief of police for cause. I hereby charge him with

1. Neglect of duty.
2. With disobedience of orders.

Specifications under charge 1, neglect of duty:

(a) That said James R. Murray, well knowing that on Sunday, the 8th day of October, 1893, a large number of persons were in the saloon kept by one Joseph Dennison, in this city, and that one of such persons while in said saloon on that day committed a felony and was afterwards arrested, and on Monday, the 9th day of October, was convicted of such offence, he, said Murray, wholly neglected, until ordered to do so by the mayor, to make complaint against said Joseph Dennison, for keeping open said saloon contrary to the provisions of the statute.

(b) That said James R. Murray having been informed by Joseph Dennison that a building kept and occupied by him as a saloon in the city of Ann Arbor was on the 8th day of October, 1893, feloniously broken open and entered by a number of persons, who then and there drank the beer and smoked the cigars of said Joseph Dennison, he, said James R. Murray wholly neglected to make complaint against any person or persons for feloniously breaking and entering said saloon, although he well knew the persons so charged with the commission of said offence.

Specifications under charge 2, disobedience of orders:

(a) That said James R. Murray having been informed and knowing that the saloon kept by one Joseph Dennison in the city of Ann Arbor was open on Sunday, Oct. 8, 1893, and that a large number of evil disposed persons were congregated therein on that day, drinking, carousing, committing robberies and other offences, he wholly neglected to report to the mayor any of such facts and information, in violation of the instructions which he had heretofore received to report promptly to the mayor any violation of the statutes or ordinances coming to his knowledge.

B. M. THOMPSON, Mayor.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, ANN ARBOR, Oct. 24, 1893.
JAMES R. MURRAY, ESQ.,
Marshal and Chief of Police:

Sir.—I have the honor to inform you that I have this day suspended you from office and also that with the consent of the council I have removed you from office for cause upon charges specifications. A copy of the order of suspension and removal and of the charges and specifications are hereto annexed.

Yours respectfully,
B. M. THOMPSON, Mayor.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, ANN ARBOR, Oct. 24, 1893.
To the Honorable the Common Council:

Gentlemen.—I have the honor to report to your honorable body that I have this day suspended from office James R. Murray, marshall and chief of police, and also, that with the consent of the council, I have removed said Murray from office for cause upon charges and specifications hereto annexed and to which your attention is called.

Yours respectfully,
B. M. THOMPSON, Mayor.

Where Can This be Equaled?

The people of this community are offered a remarkable series of entertainment courses for the winter. Here is the list: Choral Union, 6 concerts; Lecture Association, 10 entertainments; Inland League, 20; Unity Club, 22 evenings, and the University School of Music 10 recitals. The season tickets for each is $2, except for the latter, which is one dollar, making 68 entertainments for $9. Where is there another place offering such advantages as Ann Arbor has?

What a grand chance Vice President Stevenson has to make a great stroke for popular applause by entertaining a motion for closure of debate in the senate! It is in his power to do so, and in no other way, as things stand, can it be done. A country suffering in part from the effects of distrust against the purchase of five tons of silver per day, has been horribly outraged by the actions of the senators and the vice president could stop it, but he does not. Why not?

The supreme court of the state, by unanimous voice, has decided the law giving the right of suffrage to females unconstitutional. The decision is only what was expected and creates no particular excitement.

Here is a truth that will be quite generally recognized: "Every man knows a good use to which some other man might put his money."

ELEVEN MONUMENTS

Will be Erected by Michigan on the Battlefield.

(From the Chattanooga Times, Oct. 21.)

Gen. Fullerton and party of Michigan veterans, who a day or two since went to the Chickamauga National Park to mark the positions for the Michigan monuments, returned to the city last night.

The Michigan troops will have 11 monuments and the task of selecting ten of them was completed by the general and his able assistants yesterday. It was definitely decided last night that the monument commemorating the engineering corps of the First Michigan Infantry should be placed in Chattanooga.

The locations will be decided upon to-morrow although it is probable that it will be put at the foot of Market street, as it was at that spot that the old pontoon bridge was built by the corps.

The Times man had a pleasant chat with Capt. Belknap last night at the Read house.

Capt. Belknap, formerly mayor of Grand Rapids, Mich., is an enthusiast on the Chickamauga Park and is gratified that Chattanooga is to have one of the monuments erected by his state.

He stated that the Michigan legislature would make such appropriation as to insure handsome monuments both at Chickamauga and at Chattanooga. Among the distinguished party are the following:

Gen. Fullerton, of the Chickamauga National Park; Gen. John G. Parkhurst, prevost marshal general of Gen. Thomas' army; Col. P. V. Fox, colonel of First Michigan engineers; Col. H. S. Dean, colonel of 22d Michigan infantry; Lieut. August Bachman, assistant superintendent police, Detroit, Mich.; Capt. John McCrath, of Grand Rapids, Mich. Capt. McCrath was for many years a resident of Chattanooga and has many friends among the older citizens of this city.

Several of the party will remain in Chattanooga for a few days to visit again the old fields of conflict.

Douglass at University Hall.

Frederick Douglass, the colored orator, who held forth before the S. L. A. last Thursday evening, is a man 76 years old, but he is well preserved, and considering his age, gave an excellent lecture. There were those in the audience who had listened to him 25 or 30 years ago, who noted the lack of fire and eloquence that he then had. He would occasionally look up from his manuscript, stand up erect, and give the audience some idea of Frederick Douglass in his palmy days, when he held the platform with Wm. Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, Anna Dickinson, and other great orators, and never came out second best. What he had to say Thursday night was presented in language more scholarly perhaps, than when he used to thunder forth his anathemas against slavery and slaveholders, but his voice did not have sufficient strength to fill the hall, and it was very difficult for those at one side to hear many things he said. He should have become more familiar with his manuscript before appearing before an audience. It is strange that so few lecturers who come here realize the magnitude of University Hall, and make the necessary effort to be heard by all the audience present.

The Michigan Central R'y will sell round trip tickets to Chicago for one fare for round trip, good on all trains except limited and Nos 5 and 6, each day up to and including October 30th. Tickets good for 10 days.

On Washington st., near the bridge in Brooklyn, is a printer by the name of Kick, his sign reading, "Kick the Printer." This is an invitation not often extended by the printer himself, but there are times when most advertising men would thoroughly enjoy kicking the printer whose composition has ruined some good bit of display.—Weekly Journalist.

Praise for St. Andrew's Choir.

A gentleman signing himself "A Chicago Churchman," in a communication to The Church, has these pleasant words to say of the vested choir of St. Andrew's church and its trainer, Prof. Houghton:

Very seldom does one have the pleasure and opportunity of hearing a thoroughly well trained boy choir, such as I had the good fortune to hear last Sunday evening, at the Church of St. Andrew, Ann Arbor. Though the choir of that evening contained only 16 boys, they sang in a manner far superior to that of any choir in the large city churches I have visited. The volume of tone was much above the average large choirs of 50 voices, in Chicago for instance. The boys sang with perfect ease, and did not seem in any way to strain their voices when singing the upper tones, which were most clear and resonant.

I was especially struck by the manner in which the Psalms were chanted. The phasing was excellent. Not one word failed to reach the ears of the congregation—in fact that was the case with everything they sang. It seems a great pity that this choir is not the property of some large city church. The choir also has a very clever boy soprano, who sings with great expression, and possesses a strong, silver-toned voice, showing marks of the highest cultivation.

Very much credit is due to the training, and as a devout churchman and an old choister, I only regret that there are not more choir masters like the one of St. Andrew's church, who are willing to give such energy to bring about such a faithful rendition of the beautiful services of our church.

One word might be said, although by no means the least important, in regard to the behaviour of the boys, which in every way was reverent and devout. I have traveled extensively through both American and English cities, but I must honestly confess that it has never been my good fortune to be in a church where the choir behaved in a more devout manner, not even in far famed English Cathedrals. One, therefore, feels that one cannot express in too strong language, the thorough praise such excellent work deserves.

The County Funds.

The several banks of the city made their bids this morning to the supervisors for the county funds, and they were as follows:

The Ann Arbor Savings Bank offered 5 per cent. interest on deposits, and asked 6 per cent. interest on overdrafts up to $10,000, and above that amount current rates.

The F. & M. Bank, 3 1-4 per cent. on deposits, and charged 6 per cent. on overdrafts.

The 1st National Bank bid 3 1-2 per cent. on deposits and 7 per cent. on overdrafts.

The State Savings Bank 4 per cent. on deposits and 7 per cent. on overdrafts.

The supervisors accepted the bid of the Ann Arbor Savings Bank as being the most advantageous to the county.

If he is a public benefactor who makes two blades of grass grow where only one had grown, what is he who makes a tree grow where none was to be found? Cutting down trees has been the work of our farmers too often. Now they have grown wiser and have learned that trees have a value in themselves. Nut and fruit trees are well worth the trouble of setting them, and with each year they bring in larger returns. Considering trees merely as a matter of dollars and cents, the farmer does well to have some on his place; and when beauty is regarded, the weight is all in favor of tree planting and growing. The nut crop is being gathered now and seems almost clear gain, the cost of raising being so small.

Soup kitchens are the latest means of feeding discharged workmen. How thankful the people should be to the democratic party for soup factories in place of closed industries.—Howell Republican.

Isn't it a little cowardly in the republicans of Detroit to abandon the first congressional district of the state without making any nomination?—Hillsdale Leader.

The Leader is not aware, then, that the republicans of that district propose to hit them hard, with a Stone?

State Oil Inspector McMillan reports that there has not been a single explosion of coal-oil since the test was increased from a minimum of 90 to 120 degrees. This is a remarkable vindication of the wisdom of the act of the last legislature restoring the test.—Manchester Enterprise.

Gen. Alger has come to the aid of the newsboys of Detroit, once again. This time he is to take them all to Chicago, give them one whole day at the Fair, and then bring them back again. This is indeed a generous act on the part of a gentleman who has always been noted for generous deeds.

The following thirteen states hold their elections this year in November: Iowa. Kentucky. Maryland, Massachusetts, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Virginia and Wisconsin. It is an unlucky number for the democrats.—Hillsdale Standard.

A contemporary very wisely observes that the cigarette goes right along in its work of killing off the addled pated dudes who suck them to the annoyance of a patient and long suffering public. The young men who have formed such a habit are usually good for nothing. No business man cares to employ them or even have them about.

It is said that the author, Wm. Dean Howells, favors the anarchists, and is to write a novel incorporating his thoughts on that question therein. The best thing Howells can do is to don't. He should remember the fate of Spies and his companions. Emma Goldman, too, who was recently justly sentenced to one year in prison for talking too much on that subject.

Boss Croker has made out his Tammany ticket for the voters of New York to ratify, and of course they will do it. It doesn't matter how many votes the republican opposition may poll, the Boss's ticket will be returned elected. That's a way they have in New Yawk. The election of Maynard, however on that ticket—by any means—will be a deep and humiliating disgrace to the Empire state.

The new election law is a stinger on the dishonest politician. It provides that if any person elected as a delegate to any caucus or convention, accepts or receives any money or valuable thing as a consideration for his vote as such delegate, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, which is punishable by fine not exceeding $1,000, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

WHO THE TARIFF TINKERS ARE.

According to the government statistics the amount of capital invested in the manufacturing industries of this country is $5,000,000,000! The annual value of the products is $9,000,000,000! The number of persons directly employed by these industries are 6,000,000! This will make about 25,000,000 or 30,000,000 of men women and children of this nation, depending upon its industries for support.

The magnitude of these industries can not be excelled by the industries of any nation on earth.

They are worth fostering, are they not?

* * * *

Quite naturally, if you owned a large farm, which was well tilled, and brought in a fine income when properly cared for, you would secure the services of some man who was familiar with farming to take charge of it, would you not?

You would not hire a professor, or a mechanic, or a sailor, but a farmer. That would be considered practical business sense.

* * * *

Now let us look at the men in the House of Congress, who have practically been given control of these great industries of the nation. In whose hands depend their life or death.

* * * *

In the first place there is the Hon. Wm. L. Wilson, of Charlestown, W. Va., a place of 2,287 inhabitants. In the several counties which Wilson represents there are not as many factories as are to be found in our neighboring city of Ypsilanti alone. Wilson himself is a book worm. He knows nothing about manufactures, or the practical side of life. He imagines that all things should take care of themselves, just as the cattle and swine and sheep do in the mountain "farms" that compose his district. He is no more fitted to be at the head of that committee than James L. Corbett would be to teach Christianity in a Sunday School.

* * * *

Then comes the Hon. Benton McMillin, of Tennessee. He hails from Carthage—not ancient Carthage—but a great mart of trade and hive of southern industry, containing 478 souls! (That number includes McMillin himself.) Is he a fit man in whose hands to entrust the industries of this nation? What do you think about it?

* * * *

Hon. Henry G. Turner. What! Never heard of Turner? Well, he comes from that teeming center of industry in Georgia, known as Quitman! A place of 1,868 inhabitants, except when Turner is in congress, then it contains only 1,867! He is another member of the committee into whose "fostering" care is placed these great industries.

* * * *

"Any more like them?" me thinks I hear you inquire. Yes. Hon. Clifton R. Breckenridge, representing that hustling center of Ar-kan-saw manufactures and industry known as Pine Bluffs, Ark. To be sure his district is more noted for the foul and cold-blooded murder of Congressman Clayton, a few years since, than for anything else under heavens,—except perhaps Breckenridge himself, who profited by Clayton's death, but he is one of 'em, just the same.

* * * *

Then there is our own Justin R. Whiting, of St. Clair. He has an interest in a salt block and owns a lot of small boats that ply on the lakes, and comes the nearest to knowing something about the needs of the nation's great industries of any of these men on the committee. And he was probably placed on that committee because of his great fight made a few years ago against progress in lake navigation, known as the deep water ways project. From that fight he was supposed to be in favor of stagnation in all things.

* * * *

Last of those who compose a majority of this important committee, but not least, by any means, is that great mouthpiece of Tammany Hall, Bourke Cockran; famed in this country particularly for the prophecy he once made in Chicago, that Grover Cleveland never could be elected president—and Grover was elected. He cares no more for the subject than does the average Tammanyite about the truth.

* * * *

And these are the men to whom are intrusted the welfare of thirty millions of our people dependent upon the manufacturing industries of our nation. (Not including our wool industry.)

What do you think about it? Are you pleased with the outlook, my business friend? Are these the sort of men to handle this subject? Are our industries safe in their hands? It is not a travesty upon justice and right, to place such men in charge of such a subject? They are all good enough in their place, no doubt, but their place is not at the head of affairs with which they are as unfamiliar as is an anarchist with good sense.

* * * *

It is on a par, however, with placing a man like Hoke Smith, the son of a rebel officer, in charge of the pensions of Union soldiers.

ABANDONS DEMOCRACY.

Holyoke, Mass., Oct. 19.—The Holyoke Daily Free Press, which has been one of the ablest and stanchest democratic organs in the whole state, has repudiated the democratic party and has come out flat-footed for protection and the republican party. Its action has carried consternation into the ranks of the democrats and the republicans are correspondingly elated. It is looked upon as the forerunner of a wholesale defection from the democracy on account of the present crippled condition of the industries reared and prospered under republican administrations. In its editorial, explaining the reason for its change of politics, the Free Press says plainly that it "has lost faith in the democratic party, and that it firmly believes that the present industrial stagnation, financial stringency, and general distress, existing throughout the land, is the result of democratic supremacy." In further explanation it says:

"One year ago this country was enjoying a prosperity such as had never existed before. There was not one idle mill in Massachussetts. In this city there was not a water wheel that was not turning, not a spindle idle, not a loom that did not send out its pleasing hum on the breeze; not a paper machine that stopped from Monday morning till Saturday night at midnight. All was life and activity in this, the greatest paper producing city of the world. There was not a large mill in the city of Holyoke that did not run overtime, so great was the output of paper, cotton, woolens, silk and machinery, that the railroads kept a double force of men at work, with extra locomotives, all night as well as all day, handling the enormous output of manufactured goods that were being shipped to all parts of the known world. And this condition of affairs existed from sea to sea and from the Canadian line to Mexico. The whole world looked on and wondered at such prosperity. Such was the condition of affairs one year ago."

After recounting its expectations of what would follow the sweeping democratic victory in the presidential election last fall, the Free Press makes this deduction of what the result actually is:

"The democratic party has now had absolute control of the affairs of the nation for seven months, and the result is the most sorrowful time the nation ever saw. Business paralyzed, industries shut down, wages cut down, a financial panic, such a stringency in the money market that bank after bank, business house after business house, has had to close their doors, hundreds of thousands out of work. A year ago every mill in this city was rushed with orders. They could not produce fast enough for the demand. To-day there is scarcely a mill in the city that is running full time, and of the large mills there is but one that has not gone on half time, or cut wages 10 per cent. or more. An awful change for a year!

"This frightful condition of affairs appeals thoroughly to the American citizen, who has a powerful weapon in his hand—the ballot. It was the ballot that brought about this great change from prosperity to poverty; from industrial activity to industrial stagnation; from financial ascendency to financial depression. The present industrial stagnation is without any doubt the result of the free trade plank that was inserted in the democratic national platform of 1892. That platform denounced the protective tariff policy under which the nation has grown and developed from a child to a giant, and declared that if the people intrusted the offices of the nation in its hands it would wipe out every trace of that policy."—N. Y. Press.

Those who groan under the amount paid for pensions should note the following facts: In 1870 the per capita interest on the national debt was $3.35 and in 1890 only 58 cents. During this period the per capita payment for pensions has increased from 73 to $1.71 in 1890—less than a dollar. The per capita wealth of the country has increased from $780 to over $1,000, from 1870 to 1890, while the combined per capita of pensions and interest has decreased from $4.08 to $2.29. From now on the pensions naturally decrease and there is no burden on any one.

The rulers of the great nations across the ocean bluster and talk fight a great deal, but when it comes down to business none of them care to enter into a fight. A European war now would mean serious business, and the wiping out of existence of some of the nations now existing. The present maps of Europe would be of no value after the termination of such a war, and these rulers know and feel this fact. Therefore, no matter how much they may bluster, they will not fight unless compelled to.

A practical man—Dr. Mary Walker.
A consuming rage—Hunger.

THE SAME OLD PARTY.

It is a curious coincidence that the democratic party occupies upon its return to power very much the same critical position before the country as it is occupied when it went out with James Buchanan. It is confronted by an issue vital to the nation and to its own existence. And it is prepared to meet it in the same way it met the issue of 1860. It is split in three factions, each at war with the other two, just as it was when it came out of the Charleston Convention and continued to be until national calamity followed its indecision and bickering. As a minority it has proven itself strong, alert, resourceful, combative; as a majority it is again weak, vacillating, disunited. It is afraid of its own shadow.—N. Y. Herald (Dem.)

The Bulletin of the American Iron and Steel Association prints the following table, showing our production of tin plates and terne plates by quarters during the two fiscal years ending June 30, 1893, from the official statistics furnished by Col. Literary Notes.

Marion Crawford opens up a new line of thought in his article entitled "Rome, the Capital of a New Republic," appearing in the October Cosmopolitan. It is not likely that the October number will have the success which attended that for September. The extraordinary spectacle was presented of a 12 1-2 cent magazine selling for 50 and 75 cents, and many hundreds were even sold at $1.00 each. Probably the record remains without a parallel, in periodical sales, of a number proving so interesting, that, after 211,000 copies had been sold, the News Company had orders for 50,000 more than they could supply, while dealers in various parts of the country, discovering the esteem in which the magazine was held, immediately raised their prices to double, treble, quadruple and in many cases to eight times the regular price.

Altogether, Worthington's for November, is a magnificent number. As the season draws near when the large army of magazine rreaders will decidee the question "What magazine shall we take another year?" it is well for them to keep an eye on Worthington's, and, whatever else may be taken, add it to the list. It is second to none in choice, high quality of matter and attractive illustrations, and it is very much more entertaining than many of its rivals. Its low price brings it within the reach of all. A. D. Worthington & Co., Hartford, Conn. $2.50 per year.

Zoology, electricity, education, hygiene, philosophy, mathematics and meteorology are all represented in the November Popular Science Monthly, education leading in number of titles. Henry L. Clapp contributes a thoughtful essay on The Scientific Method With Children, in which he maintains that schemes of scientific teaching constructed for college students are useless for children, as they do not take account of the child's standpoint, nor of his way of thinking.

The November St. Nicholas contains the first one of a series of stories of India and the jungle, by Rudyard Kipling. When Rudyard Kipling was a boy, he and his sister used to fight over their St. Nicholas when the new numbers came to them in India, and now he takes his turn at interesting the readers of to-day. An elephant story by Mr. Kipling, which will appear in the December St. Nicholas, is said to be one of his strongest efforts.

Catarrh Cannot be Cured

with Local Applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.

MINISTERS TELL IT.

We Have Our Pastors' Assurance of These Facts.

THE WORD OF MINISTERS TAKEN AS THE STRONGEST PROOF.

There are no words so strong as those spoken by the true minister of the gospel. One knows and feels instinctively that such words come from the heart and are prompted only by the earnest purpose of doing good to humanity.

We do not wonder, therefore, at the great influence with which the public of the strong and ringing words of praise which the eminent divine, Rev. C. D. R. Meacham, gives that most wonderful of medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. When he was run down in health, weak in nerves, prostrated in strength, and with his blood badly impaired, he was restored to sound and vigorous health by this marvellous health renewer.

Here are the exact facts in his own words:

"I am very glad to say in regard to Dr. Greene's great remedy that when my blood was badly impoverished by an old scrofula humor, and my nervous system was greatly impaired, Dr. Greene's medicine gave me wonderful relief.

"At the present time my health is as good as at any time in my life, and my confidence in Dr. Greene's remedy is constantly increasing."

Rev. C. D. R. Meacham,
Pastor Baptist Church, Townsend, Vt.

Doubtless the same heartfelt sympathy and great desire to see the sick made well inspired the Rev. Dr. J. W. Walker, Presiding Elder of the Methodist Church, Fort Dodge, Ia., to also recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, to the sick and suffering. He too, has used it himself; he, too, knows that it cures, that it is sure to make the sick well if they use it.

"I have given Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy a fair test, and am free to say that I consider it rightly named. I have recommended its use to several."

Rev. J. W. Walker,
Presiding Elder, Fort Dodge, Ia.

We have published the testimonials of vast numbers of people who were cured by the use of the great discovery, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, but we take more pleasure in giving to the world Rev. Mr. Meacham's own words and those of Rev. Mr. Walker in regard to the wonderful benefits they received from this valuable remedy, because we realize that the earnest words of a minister will have great weight with sufferers from disease, and everybody who reads their convincing words in regard to the sure and remarkable curative powers of this medicine will lose no time in securing a bottle and thus obtain a cure.

Most people need a medicine to invigorate the blood, strengthen the nerves and start up a healthy action of the liver, kidneys and bowels. Be sure and use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, and is kept by all druggists at $1.00.

Its discoverer is the well-known Dr. Greene, 35 W. 14th st., New York, who gives consultation and advice free to the sick, personally or by letter. The sick should use immediately Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, for it is not only the best remedy ever discovered, but those using it have the privilege of consulting Dr. Greene personally or by letter, concerning its effects their health, etc. This fact alone guarantees the assurance of cure. If you need a medicine do not fail to take this best of all remedies.

The Associated Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom held their autumnal meeting, Sept. 27, at Plymouth, England, and the president, Sir Albert Rollit, LL. D., M. P., in speaking of "confidence returning" to English trade and commerce, is reported in the Western Morning News of Plymouth to have said:

Notably in the United States the early repeal of protection will be followed by an effort for the tariff reform. The biters have been bitten and even reciprocity has proved a failure .McKinleyism is doomed. (Applause.)

Thus are thee efforts of the English free trade party in the United States to shift prosperity from this to the other side of the Atlantic being ever watched and appreciated abroad.

THE DOG DIDN'T FORGET.

The Book Agent Found This Out at the Cost of a Quarter.

The man was a book agent, says the Boston Journal. There was no use in denying that. Any person in his right mind would have known that he was a book agent. His trousers were frayed out at the bottom, his hat was knocked in at the top, and his general appearance savored of many miles walked and few shekels gathered.

He ambled along the deserted street a few rods and then stopped undecidedly before the gate of a yard which surrounded a small cottage house. He was weighing in his mind the probability of a sale. Before he conclued to enter the yard a savage-looking hound put in an appearance on the inside of the fence and made efforts to reach the book agent's trousers through the palings. Not succeeding in this diversion, the dog sat down to await the time when the man should open the gate to enter the yard.

The book agent had made up his mind that he could sell an "Autobiography" if he could but reach the front steps of the house. But the dog was determined that the agent should not reach the front steps under any condition. "Good doggy" and "nice fellow" failed to make the least impression on the canine. He only howled defiantly on his side of the fence. His howls brought a man from around the corner of the next house. He was an exceedingly lean and hungry appearing man. He took in the situation at a glance and came over to where the book agent was vainly endeavoring to conciliate the dog. He thrust both his hands deep into his empty pockets and drawled out:

The book man must have thought that the chances of a sale at that particular house were extra good, for he drew out the fourth part of a dollar and handed it to the stranger. That individual carefully sounded it on his teeth, and, being convinced of its genuineness, he dropped it into his capacious pocket.

Then, drawing his slouch hat down over his eyes and turning up his coat collar, he assumed a highly dramatic attitude and in stentorian tones hissed forth: "Tige, Tige, I say! Thou coward and thou brute, know'st thou that thy master lies captive in yonder wood and dost thou linger here? Begone! Begon-n-n-e, I say!"

The dog glanced up with a half curious look, and then turned shamefacedly away, and putting his nose to the ground he slunk quickly from sight.

"Yer see, pardner," exclaimed the hungry-looking man, "that dog an' I use ter play in high tragedy, an' he an't forgot his cue yet. An', by the way, I don't believe yer'll sell a book in that house, cuz the folks has gone off to-day on a family picnic. They left the dog to look out for the house. Hot weather, an't it? So long."

A Deadly Tree.

The cannibal tree of Australia grows in the form of a gigantic pineapple, seldom reaching a height exceeding ten or twelve feet. Its height, however, is not a criterion to its diameter, as the reader will imagine when told that one eight feet in height may be five feet through at the base. The "leaves" resemble broad planks and are frequently fifteen feet long, twenty inches broad and one and a half feet thick at the base. These board-like leaves all put out at the top and hang down so as to form a sort of umbrella around the stem. Upon the apex of the cone around which these leaves concentrate are two concave figures, resembling dinner plates, one above the other. These are constantly filled with an intoxicating honey. A bird may light upon the edge of these or a man or an animal may walk up the leaves to indulge in stolen sweets; but death is the penalty for such rashness. The instant the honey receptacles are touched the leaves close like a trap and squeeze the life out of the meddler. After awhile the leaves will relax their vise-like grasp, the horrid tenacles will slowly unfold and nature has set her trap for another victim.

Troublesome Neighbors.

The wild Cossacks, living away down in the southernmost part of the Russian empire spend most of their time harassing the Turks. They are peculiarly savage in appearance. Their uniform is the Cossack coat, full trousers, scarlet undercoat hooked up to the neck, big boots, and as an overcoat they wear a bourka, a circular cloak made of coarse felt with long, shaggy hair on one side of it. This cloak is big enough to cover the rider and much of the horse. The most distinctive point in their dress, however, is the cylindrical hat of black astrakan which they wear at all seasons. The top is of cloth or velvet. They form part of the Russian cavalry and live principally on plunder, stealing during their raids into Turkey anything they can find, from a chicken to a child.

People Who Ought to Be Swimmers.

The seemingly strange suggestion is made and strongly pressed in England that the men who man the navy should be taught how to swim. Ordinary sailors are instructed and expected to qualify in swimming, but the marines, firemen and engineers are not, and it is a fact that a large portion of the latter large body of men who serve on warships cannot swim. It is said that many more men would have been saved from the Victoria but for this fact; also that many sailors who were good swimmers were undoubtedly dragged down by the men who were not. The matter has been taken up in parliament, and it is probable that swimming will be insisted on as a part of the training of every man serving aboard ship.

SNAKE CHARMING.

A Talk About the Art and Its Dangers by a Professional.

"Snake charming has become a common thing nowadays," said a professional snake handler to a Philadelphia Times man after reading the account of "Dot" Sonwell's mishap, "and the danger about the work is just sufficient to attract some people. Yes, there is always danger unless the poisonous fangs are extracted. It is almost impossible to charm, or rather drug some species of snakes so that they can always be depended upon. They are a treacherous set, and more so when they have the poisonous fangs in their mouth. They know right away when these fangs have been extracted. They seem to lose their pride and ferocity, and they will try to sneak away rather than to offer defiance. I have known the fiercest diamond-back ever brought from Florida to cool down as tame as a lamb when the poison fang was taken out. Most of the snakes handled by charmers on the stage are harmless so far as poisoning anyone is concerned. It should be a crime, too, to let those with the fangs in be exhibited.

"What are the secrets of snake charming? Oh, well, they are simple—simpler than most people imagine. In the first place the snake has to be handled gorged with food so that it is sleepy and quiet. Then it is drugged so that its senses are dazed and quiet. Sometimes they are put in boxes containing ice and the cold puts them into a semi-torpid condition. In either case the snake is very gentle and only half in possession of its senses. Then the snake charmer uses certain motions in handling the reptile, and by dint of dexterity and strength the snake is easily passed from hand to hand and allowed to coil its slimy lengths over arms, legs and body. The exhibitor, however, must be constantly on the alert. When the snake becomes too lively it is time to replace it in the box. The hand must always grasp it at certain places where the head can be guided and held from the body. This is the hardest thing the charmer has to learn, but it comes with practice. If handling a reptile with the poisonous fangs in one must be strong and in perfect health. Any nervousness or temerity might cost him his life. The grasp and movements must be precise and accurate. There is no room for hesitancy or uncertainty, and the strain on one's system during the performance is great. The charmer is really toying with death—and death in one of its most horrible forms."

BIG LOBSTER POUND.

A Million of the Toothsome Shellfish Shipped from It Yearly.

There is a lobster farm—or pound, as it is called—twelve acres in extent at Southport, Me. The Boston Globe describes this pound, the most successful on the coast, whence one million lobsters are shipped each year. The pound is formed by building a solid dam across a tidewater cove. This dam does not quite rise to high water mark, but across the top is placed a fence of iron rods, permitting a daily change of water, and preventing the lobsters from escaping. In the spring and fall business is most brisk. When the fishermen bring the lobsters to the pound the "fish," as they are called, are hoisted to the dam, measured, and those which are more than ten and one-half inches long, the legal limit, are thrown in. If a lobster is clever his life in the pound may be long and full of joy. If he is stupid he will be fished out with a drag seine and packed in a barrel, with a piece of ice for a pillow, and sent to Boston. The seine is made of stout twine and is weighted at the bottom with a heavy chain. Along the top is a row of corks, which sustain the weight of the seine while the chain drags on the bottom of the pound. A single cast of this seine will bring up lobsters enough to fill eleven barrels. The chain as it sweeps along the bottom stirs up the lobsters, which immediately shoot backward into the slack twine. In taking them out the men wear heavy mittens, though even then they are often nipped. In the pound the lobsters are fed on salt herring, men rowing about in skiffs and pitching the herring overboard. This is called "feeding the chickens," and it takes about six barrels to make a light luncheon for the flock. There are said to be a number of old hard shells in the Southport farm which for years have evaded the casts of the drag. Two of enormous size have become quite tame and crawl about in the shallow water. The age of the lobster is a debated question. The small marketable specimens are generally supposed to be from four to six years old, but some lobsters are believed to live to the green old age of twenty-five years.

Moon Myths.

People the world over have used the dark lines and spots on the face of the moon as a basis of conjecturing all sorts of fanciful pictures. To some they appear as an aged man, bearing a bundle of sticks or fagots on his back; to others they represent the face of a beautiful woman. The one hundred and one other moon myths cannot be considered in this "note," which is solely intended to explain Indian belief. The red men, who inhabit the whole western continent between the Rocky mountains and the Cascade range, believe that the spots on Luna's face represent the form of a gigantic toad.

A Quaint Superstition.

At race tracks persons desiring to bet on the result frequently manage to touch the hump of a hunchback, believing that this will bring good luck. According to the beliefs of ancient Arabians and Germans, hunchbacks were the pets of fairies. The latter frequently removed or increased the humps, and hunchbacks who had thus been treated by the fairies were supposed to possess some mystic power. They were supposed to bring good luck, and this might be imparted to persons who came into contact with the humps the fairies had given them.

THE TONGUE AND SPEECH.

Imperfect Articulation Rarely Impedes a Man in His Work.

For making the s and z the tongue has to be partially applied to a portion of the palate next the teeth. Not only, however, must the contact be incomplete, but its place is indefinite—may be half an inch farther back. To make sh and zh the contact has to be made not with the tip, but with the upper surface of the tongue, and must be an incomplete contact. Though for making the liquids the tip of the tongue and the sides of the tongue are used, yet the requisite is not any exact adjustment of the tip, but an imperfect contact with the palate, says Herbert Spencer, in the Contemporary Review. For the th tip is used along with the edges of the tongue, but no perfect adjustment is required, either to the edges of the teeth or to the junction of the teeth with the palate, where the sound may equally well be made. Though for the t and d complete contact of tip and edges of the tongue with the palate is required, yet the place of contact is not definite, and the tip takes no more important share in the action than the sides.

Anyone who observes the movements of his tongue in speaking will find that there occur no cases in which the adjustments must have an exactness corresponding to the extreme power of discrimination which the tip possesses; for speech this endowment is useless. Even were it useful, it could not be shown that it has been developed by survival of the fittest, for though perfect articulation is useful, yet imperfect articulation has rarely such an effect as to impede a man in the maintenance of his life. If he is a good workman, a German's interchanges of b's and p's do not disadvantage him. A Frenchman, who in place of the sound of th, always makes the sound z, succeeds as a teacher of music or dancing, no less than if he achieved the English pronunciation. Nay, even such an imperfection of speech as that which arises from cleft palate does not prevent a man from getting on if he is capable. True, it may go against him as a candidate for parliament, or as an "orator" of the unemployed (mostly not worth employing). But in the struggle for life he is not hindered by the effect to the extent of being less able than others to maintain himself and his offspring.

The Scimitar Snake.

There is a little reptile belonging in Madagascar known as the scimitar snake—that is, the curling sword. Running along the back from head to tail is a blackish, horny substance, which bends with the convolutions of the snake's body as readily as would a well-tempered steel spring, and throughout its entire length it bears an edge as hard as flint and sharp as a razor. They are not poisonous, but when one of them springs on a man, which he is very likely to do, he will soon have a leg off unless cracked on the pate. Some snake specialists claim that the presence of this reptile on the island is the reason that there are no large quadrupeds to be found there at present, the curling sword in back ages having taken off legs faster than they could be created.

The Books of Confucius.

The Chinese scriptures or sacred books were compiled and partly composed by Confucius himself. They are divided into five books—viz.: 1. The Yi-King, which treats wholly of cosmogony. 2. Shu-King, the acts and wise maxims of Yaoa, Shun and other Chinese kings and philosophers, who are now held in great veneration. 3. Shi-King, which contains 311 sacred poems. 4. Ke-King, or "The Book of Rites," which is a repository of maxims and directions for everyday life of all sorts and conditions of people. 5. Chun-Tsien, which is a history of the time of Confucius. These books, taken collectively, are usually referred to in lists of "Bibles of the World" as "The Five Kings." The word "king" in this connection simply means "book."

The Moons of Mars.

The most interesting of all moons are the two that attend Mars, each about sixty miles in diameter. That planet is just one-half the size of the earth; its surface is divided into continents and seas, having as much land as water; it has an atmosphere, clouds frequently concealing its face, and its seasons are about the same as here, though the winters are colder. Because one of the moons travels around it three times as fast as Mars itself turns, it appears to rise in the west and set in the east, while the other, really circling in the same direction at a speed comparatively slow, rises in the east and sets in the west. Thus both moons are seen in the heavens at the same time, going opposite ways.

Antiquity of the Peach.

The peach is an improved variety of the almond. The almond has a thin shell around the stone, which splits open and exposes the stone when mature. This outer skin has simply become fleshy in the peach, so that is all that gives it its specific character. It seems now clear from investigation in the history of ancient Babylon that in their gardens, now nearly four thousand years ago, the peach was cultivated then as it is now. It must have been many years before this that the peach was improved from the almond, and this fact goes to show the great antiquity of the fruit.

Climbing Fishes.

Although one naturally supposes to and generally does find the genus pisces inhabiting the water solely, there are curious exceptions to the rule. An instance may be cited in the species known as the "climbing perch," which not only travels long distances over dry land which separates one stream from another, but is likely to climb a tree whenever the opportunity affords. The curious creature has a peculiar arrangement of the upper part of the head, which is provided with water cells, the fish using this store of water to keep his gills moist on a traveling expedition or a climbing tour.

Light work—Breaking day.

WANTED TO CHANGE ONE WORD.

That Little Alteration, However, Made Quite a Difference in the Document.

Private John Allen, of Mississippi, had a case in the supreme court the other day, says a Washington correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal. It had been dragging along for a good while in the lower tribunals and when it was reached in the higher body the opposing counsel presented a brief history of the cause so far as it had gone. The justices had listened attentively to the lawyer, and when he had finished Mr. Allen was asked if the opposing counsel had stated what was strictly true.

"If your honors please," said the astute Mississippian, "I can best answer the question with a little story. Some time ago a sheriff of one of the counties in my state died. There was another gentleman residing in the county who thought he could fill the official shoes of the deceased to a nicety, so he proceeded to draw up a recommendation in his own behalf for appointment to the vacancy and then secured his neighbors' signatures to it. He recited in the document his numerous qualifications for the position, and stated, among other things, that 'Mr. Jones was strictly honest.' He carried the paper to old Judge Smith and asked him to sign it.

"The judge put on his specs and carefully read the paper over. Then he coughed and said:

"'Jones, I'll sign this here recommendation if you'll let me change one word in it.'

"Jones glowed with satisfaction, for the judge's signature was a power in the premises.

"'Cert'ny, judge, cert'ny,' he cordially remarked. 'One word can't hurt the paper. Now, what word would you like to change, sir?'

"'Well,' replied the judge, 'I just want to scratch out the word "strictly" where it precedes honest and insert the word "tolerably."'"

The grave justices laughed and the case went on.

To the ONE HUNDRED PARTIES sending us the next greatest number of SPEAR HEAD TAGS, we will give to each 1 LARGE PICTURE IN ELEVEN COLORS .....100 PICTURES.

Total Number of Prizes for this County, 226.

CAUTION.—No Tags will be received before January 1st, 1894, nor after February 1st, 1894. Each package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tags in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

DON'T SEND ANY TAGS BEFORE JANUARY 1, 1894.

"At 14 years of age I learned a bad habit which almost ruined me. I became nervous and weak. My back troubled me. I could stand no exertion. Head and eyes became dull. Dreams and drains at night weakened me. I tried seven Medical Firms, Electric Belts, Patent Medicines and Family Doctors. They gave me no help. A friend advised me to try Drs. Kennedy & Kergan. They sent me one month's treatment and it cured me. I could feel myself gaining every day. Their New Method Treatment cures when all else fails." They have cured many of my friends."

Dr. Moulton. Cured a years ago.

CURES GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED.

"Some 8 years ago I contracted a serious constitutional blood disease. I went to Hot Springs to treat for syphilis. Mercury almost killed me. After a while the symptoms again appeared. Throat became sore, pains in limbs, pimples on face, blotches, eyes red, loss of hair, glands enlarged, etc. A medical friend advised Drs. Kennedy & Kergan's New Method Treatment. It cured me, and I have had no symptoms for five years. I am married and happy. As a doctor, I heartily recomend it to all who have this terrible disease—syphilis." It will eradicate the poison from the blood."

Capt. Townsend. Cured in time.

15 YEARS IN DETROIT. 150,000 CURED.

"I am 33 years of age, and married. When young I led a gay life. Early indiscretions and later excesses made trouble for me. I became weak and nervous. My kidneys became affected and I feared Bright's disease. Married life was unsatisfactory and my home unhappy. I tried everything—all failed till I took treatment from Drs. Kennedy and Kergan. Their New Method built me up mentally, physically and sexually. I feel and act like a man in every respect. Try them."

The October Crop Report.

The wheat crop of Michigan this year as indicated by reports at hand is 23,690,693 bushels. This total is obtained by multiplying the number of acres in wheat in each county, by the average yield per acre in the same county and adding the products. The acreage is taken from the Farm Statistics as returned by supervisors last spring, and the average per acre from records kept by threshers, supplemented by a special canvass by correspondents.

The total area in wheat as shown by the farm statistics was 1,578,252 acres. The number of acres in the southern counties was 1,297,158, in the central 233,883, and in the northern 46,911. Of the total area the records of threshings include more than 168,000 acres.

The average yield in the southern counties is returned at 15.36 bushels; in the central counties at 13.99 bushels; in the northern counties at 10.40 bushels, and in the state at 15.01 bushels.

Wheat is of good quality and full weight.

The total number of bushels of wheat reported marketed by farmers in September is 2,277,635. At 35 mills and elevators from which reports have been received there was no wheat marketed during the month.

The total number of bushels of wheat reported marketed in the two months, August and September, is 3,526,504, which is 474,332 bushels more than reported marketed in the same months last year.

The average yield of oats as shown by threshers' records, is as follows: Southern counties, 27.57 bushels; central counties, 23.93 bushels; northern counties, 24.14 bushels; and state, 26.96.

Corn is estimated to yield in the state 48 bushels of ears per acre. The estimate for the southern counties is 44 bushels; central 56, and northern 58.

Potatoes are estimated to yield 56 per cent. of an average crop. The figures for the sections are southern 52, central 61, northern, 67.

Winter apples are estimated to yield one-eighth of a crop in the southern counties, and 22 per cent. of an average in the central counties and the state. The figures for the northern counties are 58.

The drouth, noted in the September report as having prevailed in the state since the 22d of June, was not broken in the southern and central sections of the state until September 12 and 13. On these two days there fell 0.29 of an inch of rain in the central counties, and 1 inch in the southern counties. The southern counties are here understood to include only the southern two tiers of counties, and the central counties the 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th tiers according to the divisions in the meteorological tables. After the 13th a number of light showers occurred in these sections, but no heavy, soaking rain. The average rainfall in the southern counties in September was 2.46 inches, a deficiency of 0.57 of an inch. The average in the central counties was 2.04 inches, a deficiency of 0.79 of an inch.

About one-fifth of an inch of rain fell in the northern counties and the upper peninsula on September 1. The average rain fall for the month in the former section was 2.92 inches, a deficiency of 0.46 of an inch, and the average in the upper peninsula was 2.02 inches, a deficiency of 1.04 inches.

The dry weather has greatly damaged corn and potatoes, delayed the wheat sowing, and reduced the wheat acreage.

We can hardly believe it.—A newspaper, in noting the successful career of a venerable man who has just died, makes the startling statement that "he was born without a shilling in his pocket."

UNIVERSITY.

Next Monday the U. of M. Republican Club will elect officers.

The Freshman girls give a spread at Granger's Hall on Friday evening.

The fall field day last Saturday was a pronounced success, and several college records were broken.

Profs. Demmon and Cooley are to help entertain the minds of the state teachers at Lansing on the 26—28 of December.

Cornell can sympathize with the U. of M., they were overwhelmingly defeated by Princeton Saturday by a score of 46 to 0.

On Friday evening next, Messrs. Riley and Sherley will entertain an Ann Arbor audience in University Hall under the auspices of the S. L. A.

The second number of that excellent humorous paper The Wrinkle, will be on sale Friday. It will be an improvement on No. 1. Watch for it.

The South Bend, Ind., Tribune of Oct. 20th, says that the Notre Dame foot ball team expect to meet the "redoubtable Ann Arbor eleven" this season.

President Angell went to Chicago last Friday to see if there was an opportunity of securing any additions to the museum from the World's Fair exhibits. It is hoped he will be successful.

All Ohio republican students who are voters are wanted at home on the 7th of November, and arrangements are being made to secure transportation at reduced rates for the occasion.

Only $150 has been offereed, so far, for the Michigan building, at the World's Fair. If it could be removed in sections, the state might better give it to the University to be used for the Rogers and Lewis collections until such time as a building could be erected.

James Whitcomb Riley is accompanied this year by a stalwart Kentuckian named Douglass Sherley, and they are said to make it mighty interesting for an audience. They will try it here on Friday night, at University Hall. The twain are engaged for six month's continued work in the "lecture" field.

If any one had any fear as to the ability and grace of President Wedemeyer as a presiding officer of the S. L. A., the neat way in which he introduced Hon. Frederick Douglass last Thursday evening ought to have been sufficient to banish it. He did his part well, extremely so, considering that it was his initiatory appearance in that capacity.

Adrian Press: "On November 4th, 'The Decline of Agriculture and Some of the Causes,' will be discussed before the students of the University by Populist Jerry Simpson, of Kansas. At the conclusion of the lecture it is expected that Jerry will roll up his pants and allow the audience a half-hour interview with his sockless shins. Jerry is no dude."

The foot-ball team went to Chicago Saturday with too much confidence and came back with a defeat credited to them, the score being 10 to 6. Not a bad defeat, but all Ann Arbor would have felt happier had the score been reversed. But it will probably have a good effect and make it all the more difficult for any other team to defeat them.

Walker Whiteside.

The contrast between the pure artist and the ordinary human, has in all ages become so marked that only the true disciple of art can fathom the high pressure, the extreme nervousness and utter absence of things earthly which the artist is endowed with. The ideal and poetic, with a thorough analysis of reality, make up their lives. The errors and blunders of their less favored associates strike terror to their souls. The hyper-sensitive may be ranked among the great actors who follow their calling for the true love of their art. A wrong reading, a careless make-up, or incompetency to them is as horrible as a discord would be to a musician. In the long career of Walker Whiteside, the tragedian, many things have occurred that, while amusing to others, have nearly placed him hors de combat. On one occasion he had an old actor in his support that in former years had been a tragic star, but lack of genius and the infirmity of years, had relegated him to the ranks. In the play of "Hamlet" the old gentleman was cast for the "Ghost." Mr. Whiteside noticed a mistake in his reading, i. e. "I am my father's ghost,"—called his attention to it and suggested the proper word, "Spirit" for "Ghost." "Good heavens!" ejaculated the old man, "Have I been saying 'ghost' for 'spirit'? It shan't happen again," he muttered. That night, however, he thunderd forth the same line, "I am my father's ghost." Instantly detecting the mistake, in the same tone of voice he said, "Spirit, be God, said ghost again didn't I?" While the audience roared, the sensitive nature of Mr. Whiteside received a shock, which called forth all of his vitality to conquer. Mr. Whiteside will appear at the grand opera house, Nov. 3d.

Old Age and Youth.

Sam T. Jack's latest combination the united Lilly Clay and Old Age and Youth burlesque companies, will appear at the grand opera house on Thursday evening, and guards may be needed to restrain the eager throngs which will clamor for admission. The new consolidation has, so far, been wonderfully successful. It gives a bright, lively show, full of merriment and humor, yet free from any trace of impropriety; the most popular performers, and the finest features of both the original companies are retained, a number of new specialties are added and a first-class entertainment is assured. First upon the programme is a gayly costumed burletta, bearing the Oriental title of "With the Effendi," and composed chiefly of handsome girls in Turkish costume and gay American minstrels, who invade the harem of an eastern ruler, spring all the latest jokes and witticisms, sing the newest topical airs, and incidentally get themselves disliked by ilirting with the odalisques. The whole piece is extremely laughable and winds up with the unlucky visitors in chains, as a punishment for perpetrating a joke which the Effendi had heard in Bagdad fifty years before. Various specialties, including everything from a musical team to a "mirror dance," follow, concluding with a novelty in the shape of a "march of all nations," wherein 20 well formed women, clad in costumes and armor of different countries, maneuver in well drilled evolutions, while the flags of every land wave high above and America's banner is planted in the center. It is a pretty march, and bears no resemblance to the customary "Amazon marches" of most burlesque companies.

Last, and liveliest, the ever successful spectacle of "Old Age and Youth." This brilliant comedy, first presented in Chicago, under Mr. Jack's own supervision, combines all the elements of the gayest farce and finest extravaganza. It depicts the adventures of one Malachrene, an aged sculptor, seeking the fountain of youth in fairy land, not only becomes rejuvenated, but wins the love of the fairy queen, weds her and gains immortality. Meanwhile, his companions, a German baron and an Irish count, meet with many strange mishaps, and are finally ejected from the mystic realms. There are many pleasing diversions woven into the action of the plot. A "polka dot quadrille"—something new in the dancing line—is executed, there are living statues, singing automatons, musicians, vocalists, and dancers in plenty, and the show ends in a perfect whirl of fun and merriment.

The Kalamazoo Gazette gives a paragraph on church etiquette that can be read with quite as much profit here in Ann Arbor as it can in that city: "Having entered a pew, move along; do not block up the end of the pew, as if you did not intend to have anybody else enter it, or as if you were holding it for some special friends. Do not rise to let others in, but move along and leave the pew invitingly open so that they will know they are welcome. If a pew holding four has already three in it, do not file out in formal procession to let a poor scared woman go to the other end, but move along, and let her sit at the end next to the aisle. It is not necessary to rush out and kill Indians, as possibly it was once."

A Hint to the Poets.

Love unto his bosom pressed her;
Hovering angels kissed and blessed her;
Morn in robes of splendor dressed her;
Roses formed a couch to rest her;
White doves gave their down to nest her;
Music-murmuring winds caressed her;
Jersey skeeters feared to pester,
And no babe can beat and best her—
There's your bloomin' rhymes for Esther!

It's ineffective, except for the moment—the ordinary pill. Because it upsets your whole internal economy, you needn't think it's doing you good. It only shocks and weakens your system.

Take something that's better. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets do good that lasts. They regulate the system, as well as cleanse and renovate it; mildly and gently, but thoroughly and effectively—no griping, no violence. They're the smallest and the easiest to take, purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and the best liver pill ever known. Only one little Pellet for a laxative—three for a cathartic. Sick or Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels are prevented, relieved and cured.

They're the cheapest pills you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for the good you get.

Can you ask better proof of the superiority of these little pills.

Report adopted.

Mr. Oesterlin from committee on public buildings made the following report:

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors of Washtenaw County:

In taking the inventory of the furnitures, books, fixtures, etc., in the different offices of the Court House, your committee on public buildings found that it is necessary to have the articles in each office appraised, so that in case of fire in any of the offices the loss could be proved to the insurance companies.

Your committee would therefore recommend that a committee of three be appointed to perform this work or that that the building committee be instructed to act as such appraisers.

EUGENE OESTERLIN,
M. J. HOWARD,
EDWIN BALL,
Committee.

On motion the report was accepted and the building committee was authorized to appraise the furniture, books, etc.

Mr. Gilbert moved that the committee on public buildings be authorized to at once notify the Washtenaw County Land Title Company to vacate the room now occupied by them inside of thirty days. Carried.

Mr. Case moved that the County Treasurer be allowed $50.00 for services since the first day of January. Carried.

LOCAL.

The woods are dressed in colors gay,
The straw hat is taken in.
The race horse is fed on musty hay,
The pool seller ceases to chin.

Half-fare to Chicago now on any trains except the limited.

It pays well to go nutting this fall, the woods and fields are yiedling a great crop.

The travel to Detroit, now-a-days, from this station, almost equals the travel to Chicago.

The World's Fair closes next Tuesday. Only a few days now to see the greatest show on earth.

The assertion that supervisors sometimes play poker is a base slander. They don't have time.

Now is an excellent time to clean up all rubbish, and to put your premises in good sanitary condition.

The work on the sewers is progressing again. The tile having arrived work can now be pushed.

The boys of Ann Arbor town can get pay for woodchuck scalps etc., at the court house, Saturday Oct. 28.

Clay Greene broke ground yesterday for his block of stores on E. Ann st., at the corner of N. Fifth ave.

The W. C. T. U. holds its 16th annual convention in the M. E. church at Chelsea, on the 26th and 27th inst.

A state Sunday School convention is to be held in Hillsdale, Nov. 14, 15 and 16. It is expected that it will be largely attended.

It being the 25th anniversary of the A. O. U. W. the local organization will assemble at their hall on Friday evening and celebrate.

Sixty years ago there were only three steamboats on the great lakes. What a change, my countrymen, in the lifetime of an individual!

Ah, the farmer is the boy
Who can quaff the cup of joy—
The golden corn is standing in the shock;
The turnips burst the ground
And the pumpkins ripe and sound,
And there's still a little cash in that old sock.

The holiday harvest for merchants is rapidly approaching. Now is a good time to sow "ads." They will be ripe for the reaper just about that time.

Rev. A. S. Carman, of this city, was elected president of the 11th annual conference of Michigan Baptist ministers, held at Muskegon last week.

Anton Gable, a justice of the peace at Whittaker, in Augusta township, presented a bill of $9 to the supervisors for four years' service as such officer.

John Baumgardner, of Ann Arbor, erected a handsome granite monument on the David Thomas lot in Vermont cemetery last week.—Chelsea Herald.

The make-up of the Michigan Farmer has been changed by its proprietors, and it is now a 16-page, 4 columns to a page. It is much more convenient.

The writer of this item met a ten year old boy bringing home a bag of nuts. The young chap spoke up in great glee: "Soft snap to-day, teacher is sick."

Don't forget that you can secure both the New York Tribune and the Courier for $1.25. The cheapest way to secure all the news that it is possible to obtain.

There were only 85 tickets sold from this station yesterday to the World's Fair. But the train had so many passengers that it had to go in two sections.

October has contributed a number of more perfect days to 1893 than any of her sister months. These days were masterpieces of Nature's handiwork, so to speak.

Sunday, Oct. 29th, will be observed by the pastors of various churches as Prison Sunday, in accordance with a request from the State Board of Corrections and Charities.

A powerful home mission sermon was preached last Sunday morning at the Presbyterian church by the pastor. The result was a collection of $78 for the good cause.

The women of the various churches will hold a prayer meeting next Saturday at the M. E. church, at 3 p. m., in anticipation of the arrival of B. Fay Mills, the Evangelist.

When the hall of the School of Music is completed, the Choral Union will hold its practice recitals therein. And all the members are anxious for the completion of that hall.

The first of the Hobart Guild Social Circle Receptions will be held on Friday evening, Nov. 3d. The entertainment committee promise unusually pleasant parties this year.

The members of the I. O. O. F. lodges of this city are invited to work and refreshment at Wyandotte on Oct. 30, by Lodge No. 10, of that place. Will they have a good time? You bet.

At the Young People's Vesper Services at St. Andrew's chapel next Sunday evening, the leader will be the city editor of the Courier, and his subject will be "The first of the Great Triad."

A slight fire at the Ann Arbor Organ Factory last Thursday night, damaged it about $100 worth. The fire caught from some lumber placed on the boilers to dry. It dried too quick.

Mrs. Clara Doty Bates has written an article for the November St. Nichlas on "The Children of the Plaisance" with pictures of most of the interesting children in the "Midway" at the World's Fair.

The rank show of the Boston Ideal Opera troupe caught a big house of society people in full dress last Thursday evening. They all suffered throughout the poorest performance ever given here.

Grand High Priest Bagg, and Grand Visitor and Lecturer Clark, will pay a visit to Washtenaw Chapter R. A. M., to-morrow evening, at the Temple, when the Royal Arch Degree will be worked.

The pupils of Mr. E. N. Bilbie will give a recital at McMillan Hall, Monday, Oct. 30th, at 3 o'clock p. m. Mr. Robert Luderer, who was so well received at the Unity Club last Monday evening, will assist.

C. B. Davison and family partook of tomatoes Monday last, that had been ripened on the vines in his garden out-of-doors. The vines are next to the walls of the Courier boiler room, and the frosts had not disturbed them.

The city treasurer is in receipt of letters from eastern houses asking if the city has any bonds for sale. It has been a long time since such letters have been received. Is it not an indication of an easier money market in our eastern money centers?

E. A. Wallace & Co. have bought out the stock of goods formerly owned by the Two Sams, and will carry on the business hereafter. Mr. Wallace is an Ypsilantian, a good business man, and will be a valuable addition to the business interests of the city.

Mr. B. B. Nagarkar, of Bombay, India, who was one of the prominent speakers at the World's Parliament of Religions in Chicago, will speak in the Unity Club course next Monday evening. Subject, "Religious Progress in India."

"Ann Arbor can now yell at New York, through a long distance telephone and ask her what she thinks now about the World's Fair being a failure, in the west. Praised be the name of science. Gotham is at last hitched to civilization!"—Adrian Preess.

Prof. Jas. A Craig, Ph. D., who teaches Semetic Languages and Hellenistic Greek in the University, will speak in the Presbyterian church next Sunday evening. His subject will be, "The Religion of the Ancient Babylonians and Assyrians, Interpreted from the Cuniform Monumental Records."

Because in some localities cherry trees are blossoming the second time, the pessimist comes forward with a prediction that there will be many deaths this season. Of course there will. How can it be otherwise? There are many deaths every season in a thickly populated community.

Dr. C. M. Cobern has an interesting article on the "New Life of Christ" recently discovered in Egypt, in the September Homiletic Review. It shows from these latest discoveries that the doctrine of Christ's divinity was believed as firmly in the ecarliest days as now.

Col. Geo. W. Bain delivered an excellent lecture before a crowded house at the Church of Christ last evening. The audience all felt better after hearing him plead for the right and for purity of life. It was the second of the Inland League course of lectures.

At the M. E. church next Sunday morning, Rev. W. Lenoir Hood, a New England clergyman, who has been very successful in work among young people, will occupy the pulpit. In the evening, Miss Clara Cushman, a returned missionary, will tell of her experiences in that field of labor.

There are some youths in this city who make a practice of carrying revolvers, which is an exceedingly dangerous practice, and one that the law is very explicit upon. The carrying of concealed weapons is not only unsafe for boys but for men, who are expected to use more judgment, and ought to be set down on.

About forty Ypsilantians attended the entertainment at the opera house in Ann Arbor last Monday evening, Rhea being the attraction. The motor runs at such convenient times that one can attend the entertainments at Ann Arbor and be from home but little longer than when we had an opera house here.—Ypsilanti Commercial.

There will be a graad concert given at the Bethel A. M. E. church on November 10th, by Mrs. Harriet Robinson assisted by Miss Josey Cox, for the benefit of the church. It is to be hoped that it will have the patronage of as many as possible. After the programme is over, there will be refreshments served. All are cordially invited to attend.

Mrs. Charlotte E. Cutler died at her home on Catharine st., on the 22d inst., and funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon, Rev. S. Haskell, of Kalamazoo, formerly pastor of the Baptist church here, officiating. She had been a resident of Ann Arbor for 28 years, and was a sister of the late Mrs. Catharine Cowles, who left her property to the Baptist church.

Robert Scott, aged 84, died at his home in Grass Lake, on the 19th of October. The remains were brought here Saturday for interrment in Forest Hill cemetery. He will be remembered by many as being janitor of the Union School several years ago, away back in the '60's, and known to the kids of that day as "Old Scotty." He lived to good old age, and many of the old school boys will regret to hear of his death.

The people of this city and this county know nothing of hard times and distress. If you want to find out something about that go to a community where there are great factories partially or entirely idle. The people of this entire county may well congratulate themselves upon their circumstances, they are in princely condition compared with other localities where business is at a standstill, and where the laborers have no money to buy even the every day necessities of life.

Nervous people who travel by rail will be pleased to learn that the Michigan Central R. R., has issued an order which is strictly enforced, that no train can leave a station until it has received notice that the train preceding it has left the station ahead. That makes these rear end collisions absolutely impossible. The M. C. has always been one of the most careful roads in the country. It has had fewer accidents, and enjoys the confidence of the people as but few other roads do.

Gives one a turn—The Ferris wheel.

"Man wants but little here below"
Will do to write in a book;
For he's always anxious to get all he can
By most any hook or crook.

If speech is silver, what is the anti-silver speech?

Home rule seems to be a dismal failure, as a rule.

Our readers this week are given two pages extra, of an interesting serial known as "The Proceedings of the Board of Supervisors," official. By giving these proceedings on time the Courier and Argus hope to confer a favor on both the public and the Board.

Rev. J. T. Sunderland will speak next Sunday morning on "Fifteen Years in Ann Arbor: A Retrospect and a Prospect." In the evening he will give the second sermon in his series on "Jesus and His Religion." Subject, "Was His Birth Miraculous?"

A fellow out west is advertising a remedy for husbands who are afflicted with the habit of forgetting to mail their wives' letters. If the cure be as represented the inventor will be gratefully remembered by every man with a wife who can write, for there is an unutterable feeling comes over him when a week or more after she has given him a letter to mail, he sneaks out of his place of business and straightens out the crumpled envelope preparatory to the stamping process, thinking all the time how he told the dear woman several days before that it was mailed promptly.

Here is a little paragraph going the rounds of the papers, the truth of which can not be questioned: "The farmer that is out of debt at the present time is in an enviable condition. Merchants and other business men have bills to meet and they are sometimes put to their wit's end to raise the money to pay. They can't wait until after harvest or wool time and if it is not convenient, until some other time more indefinite. They must pay their debts when due or fail, and if they fail a great majority of those who owe him will be prating about the dishonesty of the merchant who couldn't pay his debts."

The next attraction on the Inland League programme is Mr. Earle Wilfley, a talented young elocutionist. He was formerly with Booth and Barrett, and was on the stage several seasons as a star. As a reciter of dramatic recitations, he has few equals and his character impersonations are said to be equal to any. The late Henry Grady never lost an opportunity to hear him, and he said that he never listened to his superior. His rendering of the Chariot Race, recently excited no little favorable comment in New York City, and he attained some distinction in his rendition of The Raven. A number of fine musical selections will render the program of the evening enjoyable. Mr. Wilfley will appear Monday evening, October 30th.

Rev. S. S. Thompson's Experience

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills Prove Their Merit.

"I think I would have been in my grave several years ago had it not been for Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was a United States soldier; served three years in the Union Army and was with Sherman in his

March to the Sea.

While in the service I contracted asthma, bronchitis and catarrh, which have become chronic diseases. I find that Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills are are the best medicines I can use for these complaints. They have certainly prolonged my life. I earnestly recommend the medicines as just right for what they are advertised. I am satisfied they save many lives every year." REV. S. S. THOMPSON of the M. P. church, Atilla, Illinois.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA CURES

HOOD'S PILLS cure Constipation by restoring the peristaltic action of the alimentary canal.

THREE AGAINST TEN.

It was just sunset when suddenly around the bend of the Ocklawaha appeared a dugout paddled by ten stalwart fellows in a sort of homespun uniform, while a boy dressed as an officer sat in the stern. Five minutes before the crocodiles and cranes, water turkeys, bitterns and herons had the black oozy river all to themselves as it sluggishly made its way through the swampy palmettos and cypress.

The boat bumped along slowly, striking against cypress trees and fallen tree trunks. The paddlers looked anxious, for the chance of finding a comfortable camping ground was growing slighter and slighter before young Will Loring began to be sick of his escapade. He had left camp two miles away without orders and taken two of his company with him to do Indian scouting on his own account.

Little more than a year before he he had been a schoolboy, playing soldier in the streets of St. Augustine with other youngsters. When the Seminole war of 1835 broke out, sweeping with a wave of fire and massacre across the state, he ran away from home and joined a company of volunteers. His daring and coolness at the battles of the Withlacoochee and Alaqua in connection with the social importance of his family, had given him his epaulettes at an age when other boys of the same age were still in terror of the school-master's birch.

"Wall, lieutenant," drawled one of the men, as he peered wearily into the depths of the cypress arches, "we're in a 'orrid fix, I rekin. If we keep on, we'll run plum into a nest of them Injun devils, dead shore."

Both of the soldiers were cracker bred in the woods and swamps, good shots and skillful hunters, though their thin, slouching figures were not ornaments to a dress parade.

"Keep on paddling," said young Loring in low tones, but with an air of sternness which did not set well on his smooth face and mischievous black eyes, "and wait my orders." Then feeling that he had asserted his authority, he continued, with a burst of boyish confidence, "I tell you what it is, Scraggs, we'll have to get back to that hummock about a mile up the river, where we can find pine knots to cook supper, don't you think so?"

"Bless you, lieutenant, d'ye hanker to lose yer skelp? No supper to-night but a drink of swamp water and a chew of raw bacon. I'll bet there's a hundred of red varmints in two miles on us."

"You're not afraid, Scraggs, are you?" said the youngster with a lordly air; "a fellow who can bore a potato tossed in the air at a hundred yards with a rifle ball ought to have plenty of spunk."

"A leetle more skeery than I war forty years ogo," answered the cracker with a twinkle in his eye. "Howsomever, as men of my inches do, I reckin I've got as much clear grit as most of 'em."

This talk had gone on in half whispers. The darkness was increasing every minute. The boyish officer, in spite of his airs, was evidently uneasy, for his eyes shot continual glances ahead and on both sides into the swamp, as the dugout glided at a snail's pace. They were nearing another bend in the stream, when through the tangle of leaf and vine there was a red gleam like a huge firefly. Without waiting orders Scraggs whirled the boat back with a powerful paddle and turned to his officer with eyes almost starting from their sockets, shaking his head in warning.

"Injuns, Injuns, Lieut. Will, a dozen on 'em," he whispered. "I seed the hind ends of two canoes jiss roun' the bend. Thar must be a hummock whar they're camped. They're jiss got through eatin', an' 'dre stampin' out the embers. Sh—don't speak. I'll work the old scow deep into the cypress. We'll see what tricks they are up to, seein' we're hyar and can't get away very easy. But, by Jimmy, my skelp kinder crawls as if it would not be thar to-morrow mornin'."

Young Loring nodded, and the paddlers cautiously forced the boat fifty feet through the mouth of a black arch into the heart of the swamp. Hidden here they were nearer the savages than before, and could hear their movements.

It soon became clear that the party of Seminoles had no purpose of leaving their camp that night, and no suspicion of white men close at hand. One by one they dropped asleep, and their slumber chorus, which sounded not unlike the grunting of the alligators, in the swamp, was music to the prisoners squatted in their gloomy covert.

Three hours had passed, and the growing light that silvered the lagoon outside of their retreat proved the moon well up over the tops of the trees.

"Now is your time," whispered Scraggs, "to get outer this hole and paddle up stream for a safe landing place, and varmose back to camp."

Lieut. Loring answered not a word. His boyish mind was deep in thought—a daring thought which thrilled him with excitement.

If he returned to camp as he left it, there was sure to be a sharp reprimand, perhaps a court martial for absence without leave. The excuse that he was an irresponsible lad would alone save him, and at that fancy his heart had waxed hot with shame. But to go back as conqueror and hero—ah! that was worth risking his scalp for.

"Are ye asleep?" whispered Scraggs again.

"No," was the reply; "I am going to take these redskins back to camp with me. So, Scraggs, you can just tie your hair on, for it will soon be in peril."

The men jumped as if they heard the whizz of Seminole lead.

"You see, it would be a shame to sneak back empty handed. We can't exactly take their scalps, but we can take themselves as a present to the general," said the ingenious youth. "The Indians are fast asleep. We'll paddle up and take their canoes. Then I'll land on the hummock, you know, and pick up their rifles. Then in the morning we can order them to surrender on peril of being shot down, for we shall have loaded guns, and they'll have none."

The two crackers groaned over this piece of youthful strategy, but Scraggs responded, "All right, lieutenant; I s'pose we've got to die some time."

The dugout left its covert and glided silently as a shadow into the open stream. A few strokes brought him in full right of the Indian camp. The island where the savages lay was well shadowed by the trees, but their forms could be dimly seen stretched on the earth. Silently the little party detached the two canoes and towed them to a secure position, where they fastened them to a cypress tree fifty yards from shore.

As the boat approached the shore on its second and more dangerous mission, young Loring slipped off his boots and stepped into the ooze, regardless of moccasins and rattlers. Scraggs and his comrade, covering the advance with leveled guns, felt their stout hearts quake as their boy leader crept in among those sleeping figures of bronze.

A stumble or the snapping of a twig might make the difference of life and death. The lad moved as if he were a cat. The coarse hummock grass, armed with minute thorns, cut into his flesh, but he scarcely felt them. The sleeping redskins lay partly in the moonlight and partly in the shade of the trees which rose in the center of the hummock, each one with his rifle by his side, the fierce copper face chiseled as if in metal.

Had the Indians disposed of their guns as the whites do, by stacking or resting them against a tree, the task of securing them would have been less risky. But they had kept their arms within reach, and some even had their tomahawks loosened from the belt, as if for instant use. The Indian rarely sets a guard at night, unless in the immediate presence of an enemy. Here in the depth of a great cypress swamp, impassable to troops, a surprise would seem impossible. Yet even now the cunning and suspicion of the race had not forsaken them.

The nerves of the young officer were strung to the highest tension. One by one he stealthily lifted the rifles from the earth till he had what he could carry. These he bore to the low bank and passed to the men on guard in the dugout. No word was exchanged. Again he returned to the dangerous sleepers, a distance of about 100 feet from shore, for a second load. A brawny savage tossing in his dreams gave a fierce grunt and threw out a hand which touched the young thief's ankle as if to clutch it. The movement thrilled him with all the agony of discovery, but he stood still waiting for something further. It was a false alarm, but cold sweat poured from his face Another of the savages had his hand on the stock of his gun and the piece had to be gently slid from under his fingers.

Again, the third time he went back to complete his work. The moon was now high up in the sky, and poured a flood of light on the little island. The recumbent Indians were cut out like monstrous silhouettes against the ground. The boy's swimming head told him that his strength could not last much longer. But he resolutely went to his task, though his throat felt as if squeezed by an iron grip. He had gathered his last armful, when one of the red men in his dreams raised himself on his haunches and sat with his chin resting on his knees. The moonshine flickered on his face through the quivering foliage, and his sunken eyes appeared half open and following his white enemy. The watchful Scraggs, too, observed this movement, and his tanned cheeks turned white as chalk, as his finger was about to press his rifle trigger. But he waited and the savage sleeper made no further sign.

At last the work was done. The ten minutes had seemed a year. The lad staggered to the boat, shaking as if with an ague. "I must speak," he panted," or I shall yell. I thought twice I'd have to whoop or go into a faint. But Scraggs, I pulled through, didn't I? Help me in."

"Wall! You've got the guns, shore," said Scraggs, "and drat my skin if the biggest bully in Jessup's camp would 'a' done it. I've heered afore that pups o' your breeds wa'nt a skeered er man or devil!"

No time had been lost while Scraggs was relieving his mind; the dugout was skimming out into the stream with lively paddle strokes. The plan was boldly executed in the morning. With the coming of light, the Seminoles discovered the robbery of their weapons and rushed to the edge of the swamp with frantic yells, brandishing their tomahawks. But the marauders were far beyond the throw of an ax or knife, and sat with leveled rifles.

Then came a shrill treble woice, demanding in Spanish the instant surrender of the little Seminole band, for at that time nearly every one in Florida—Indian, negro and white—knew something of this language. After considerable parley the red men agreed to throw their knives and tomahawks into the marsh. They were taken aboard in pairs and their right wrists tightly fastened together with stout strips of Scraggs' homespun shirt. The dugout towed the canoes up stream, while the young officer sat in the stern and guarded the captives with loaded pistols.

So the dare devil returned to camp the same afternoon, and instead of a rowing he was covered with praise and honor by General Jessup and his little army.

This boy afterward became a distinguished general—Major General William W. Loring—who led armies in the far distant east as pasha in the service of the Egyptian khedive, as well as in this country. But in his long career he never did anything more daring and heroic than the feat planned and executed by the boy of fifteen, the substantial facts of which were told me by the general himself. —G. Mutton Chops.

A few stakes about each young tree are neceessary to keep the sheep from barking them when eating the windfalls.

When pasturage is short sheep may be benefited by giving them a hilly range and feeding on the ground daily turnips, pumpkins, sowed corn, beets, grain etc. It is well to feed green crops at night, as they become wilted and stale sooner, if fed in the hot sun.

Worms kill more sheep than do dogs. Where their presence is suspected, allow planty of salt, and give the following once in two weeks: Salt, 2 lbs., sulphate of magnesia 1 lb., sulphate of iron 1-2 lb., powdered gentian 1-2 lb. Mix it well for eighty to one hundred sheep. Soot mixed with salt is also an excellent vermifuge. Whenever a sheep is killed, examination should be made for evidence of the presence of these parasites, for what is found to annoy one sheep will usually be true of all. To rid a sheep of tape worm give 1-2 a dram to a dram of areca nut, and 10 to 20 drops of oil of small fern. It is best administered in molasses and water, and must be followed the next day with a purge, like a gill of cotton seed oil, or raw linseed oil.

There is the most profit in lambs fattened when two or three months old, if got on the market early in the season and if the sheep raiser is near a large city. But under other conditions the most profit is in marketing fat lambs at from six to twelve months of age. Sheep can be fattened nicely on the old pasture of late summer and early fall. Feed corn and oats whole, morning and night. Keep quiet, give plenty of pure water, and keep troughs clean and dry.

All but late lambs may be weaned in July, on the meadow aftermath, or on the growth that comes up when old pasture is mown. The lambs should be put on immediately after mowing, being given some oats night and morning. A little bran or oil cake may be used also.

The joints and muscles are so lubricated by Hood's Sarsaparilla that all rheumatism and stiffness soon disappears. Get only Hood's.

Horse Talk.

Water your horse before you give him hay. Give him hay before you give him grain. Give the concentrated food last. His stomach is not large enough to hold all at once.

If you cannot stop your horse bolting his food by putting a handful of shelled corn in his manger, give him cut hay with ground feed. He will masticate that.

Begin now to give the little colts bran.

Why does not the average farmer keep a good breeding mare, not a scrub?

Never tie a horse so long that he can put his head on the floor. If he can put his head down he is sure to roll and get cast.

To stop a horse chewing his tie rope, steep it in cayenne pepper and water.

A good name for a choice baby colt.—"Prize Package."

No brush will take the dust out of a horse's coat and make it glisten like a stiff broom in the hands of a strong man. Its handle must be cut off to two feet. It seems to afford sufficient leverage so considerable power may be brought to bear on the coat.

Don't let the horses gnaw poor pastures and stay out too late.

There are several toads in my barn and carriage room and I am careful not to injure them. They are good friends to the horses because they catch hundreds of flies in a single day flies that annoy horses and make them grow thin and fretful.

Get the children a pony, and let them ride and drive. It will teach them to love the farm, and they can do no end of errands and get an idea of business, while they are having the very best of physical culture.

Bristles.

Any one who attempts to grow a large number of pigs should have a house especially for them, supplied with abundance of water from a good well or cistern near it. The house should be the center for all the pens, so that quite a herd can be fed without traveling over much ground.

Cheaper and healthier pig pork can be made from wheat bran and oil meal than from corn. Half a pound of oil meal and two pounds of bran will make three gallons of thick slop, which is a very cheap ration, a cent or less per gallon. A very small addition of corn meal to this ration will insure a daily gain of one pound or more per pig. This food is highly recommended by Waldo F. Brown, who has had long and encouraging experience with swine.

The gentle pig makes the most pork.

In buying a brood sow see that she is long, broad and deep, and with size of barrel, extending well back to the hind quarters. She must have a straight back upheld by well rounded hams.

Crowd the pigs you are feeding and get them to make all the pork possible before the severe weather. Cold retards growth, and makes necessary the feeding of a larger amount of grain matter per hundred weight of meat made than in mild weather.

Remember that sweet, home-cured salt pork, bacon, ham, sausage, headcheese, etc., are appreciated as much by wealthy townspeople as by yourself and family, and will bring an extra price if you find the right buyers. Will it pay to sell the whole lot of pork at whole-hog rates?

The value of charcoal and rotten wood in the trough can be scarcely over-estimated. Hogs that are fattening rapidly must not be overfed, nor allowed to get sour stomachs.

Don't feed nubbins too freely at first to hogs that have been kept on whey and grass all summer. Bring the use of this immature corn gradually or the pig's digestions will suffer and then growth stops.

Boiled potatoes, pumpkins and turnips may not have great fattening properties, but they are excellent appetizers and tonics. Salt the mush well. It will make the craving for corn greater.

A Comparison.

"Isn't that sunset perfectly beautiful," cried an enthusiastic and sentimental young lady one evening last autumn, when she was spending a part of her vacation with an old couple who lived on a barren little farm at the base of the White Mountains. "I never saw anything lovlier in all my life. See those lovely purple and crimson and scarlet tints! Isn't it lovely?"

Her landlady glanced carelessly toward the glowing western sky and said with some little show of enthusiasm:

"It is purty. There's no ardgin' that. It puts me in mind of the way my ole man's face looked last spring when he came so near dyin' of the airysipelas. 'Twas exactly them colors."

THE STREET CAR CODE.

A Practical Solution for a Much Vexed Question in Ettiquette.

The question of street car politeness or gallantry may be regarded as settled in Paris if the decision of one of the leading papers, the Figaro, may be taken as final. Inasmuch as we have had a great deal of discussion upon this same subject in this country, the views of the French journal and some of its fair correspondents may be interesting to New Yorkers. A correspondent asked the Figaro if a gentleman seated in an omnibus or a tramway, with all the seats occupied, should give up his place to a lady the moment she appeared at the door. The Parisian journal says that in a public conveyance each one should occupy the place for which he has paid. This, it says, is the opinion of the majority of our readers, and particularly the society ladies who never wear diamonds in an omnibus. They don't admit that ladies should accept the politeness, or rather the service, of gentlemen whom they do not know. One of them gives this opinion: "When a lady is contented with the cheap means of locomotion provided by the omnibus companies she accepts all the conditions. In all cities where there are omnibuses, tramways and other public vehicles a woman can see immediately whether there is room inside or not. If, on seeing that there is no vacant place, she nevertheless enters the car she takes a position which she ought to sustain. To permit a man to disturb himself for her when she might wait for another car if it was impossible for her to remain standing, would be an evidence on her part of a want of good breeding. It is very easy for her to thank the gentleman negatively and politely in a few short words, so that the incident may not be prolonged. Nothing can be more annoying for seated travelers than this mutual exchange of so-called courtesies, and congratulations which goes on at their knees and threatens their feet, perhaps more or less afflicted with corns. Remain seated, gentlemen, remain seated; the ladies cannot complain of that, without giving satisfaction to those men who reproach them for their want of logic. Since they insist upon equality before the law, with all the rights and privileges of men, they should put up with all that men have to endure. A woman in an omnibus should remain standing when there is no vacant seat, just as a man does under the same circumstances." Another correspondent says: "Remain seated, gentlemen; you can do it without a breach of politeness. When fine ladies with their diamonds take the omnibus or the tramway, do not disturb yourselves for them, for if you do you will only be a dupe; but if you see a poor woman carrying a child or a bundle then give her your place immediately. That is not politeness; it is simply duty, possibly charity."

AN ODD BEGGAR.

He Was a Dog, and a Remarkably Intelligent One, Too.

One afternoon, while strolling along the Calle Ancha, in Cadiz, I met several acquaintances at the corner of that street and the Plaza Constitution, says a writer in Harper's Young People. We stopped for a friendly chat, and were about to separate when my attention was attracted to a handsome French poodle dog at my side, seated on his haunches and looking up in my face. His comical little countenance expressed so much intelligence that I stooped and patted him on the head, when he commenced barking and violently working his forelegs after the manner of dogs who have been taught "to beg."

"What can he wish?" said I. "Surely not my cigar?"

But having seen dogs who were fond of tobacco I held my cigar toward him. As soon as he smelled it he snorted and bounded away, only to return immediately and resume his previous position.

I was now puzzled, but seeing several beggars in the neighborhood concluded that he belonged to one of them and desired a piece of money. Taking a large "copper" from my pocket I held it before his eyes. So great were his manifestations of delight that I was certain that I had divined his wants. I threw the money to him, which he caught in his mouth, and running across the street disappeared in a bakery.

To our astonishment he emerged from the shop in a few moments, bearing in his mouth a neatly wrapped bundle. One of my friends tried to take it from him, but he would not allow this, and insisted on placing it at my feet. I picked it up, removed the wrapper, and found a large bun dusted with sugar. This he ate with great relish. We remained for awhile to see if he would besiege another passer-by; but no, he had had enough for the present, and, coiling himself up in the doorway, settled down for a quiet nap. This exhibition of intelligence I think worthy of note, and particularly so for the reason that the dog was apparantly acting independently, there being no one near to prompt or direct him.

Confined Sound.

The intensity of confined sound is finely illustrated at Causbrook castle, Isle of Wight, where there is a well two hundred feet deep and twelve feet in diameter, walled and lined with smooth masonry. Although this is an unusual depth for a well even in the British isles, yet when a pin is dropped into it the sound of striking the surface of the water one hundred and eighty-two feet below can be distinctly heard. In a cast-iron water pipe of Paris, which forms a continuous tube with only two slight crooks, and those near its middle, the lowest whisper at one end may be distinctly heard at the other, although the pipe is three thousand one hundred and twenty feet in length. When some experiments in this line were being conducted a pistol fired at one end of the tube actually blew out a lighted candle held at the other end and violently ejected the shavings, feathers, paper, etc., which had been placed in the end of the pipe by the experimenters.

Hutzel's Water Back!

A very important invention which will be hailed with delight by every body using a stove or range for hot water circulation. After years of experience we have succeeded in producing a simple and perfect WATER BACK.

It overcomes all the present troubles of extracting lime and other sediments which accumulate in water backs, often making them useless and in great many instances becoming dangerous.

The outlay of dollars is reduced to dimes. No household using a range can afford to be without it.

No more trouble by using city water for hot water circulation.

Can be used in any stove. Ask your stove dealer for Hutzel's Water Back.

Mason & Davis Co's. ranges for sale at C. Eberbach are provided with our improvement.

Everybody call and examine this useful invention.

Mrs. Lydia Clark, of Ypsilanti, aged 83 years, died Oct. 17th.

The Dundee paper mill has commenced business again.

Francis J. Freeman, of Ypsilanti town, died Oct. 13, aged 61 years.

Rev. W. H. Shannon, of Salem, has been taking in the Chicago Expo. during the week.

At one of the swell weddings at Northville recently, a Black man was one of the best men.

Remember the Union Veteran's Union encampment at Howell to-morrow and next day.

Tecumseh feels awful big over the fact that she has brought out the innovation of female burglars.

Curtis H. Dillon and Miss Maud A. Kelsey, both of York, were married on the 18th, at the home of W. W. Kelsey.

The new law prohibiting fishing in the Raisin with dip nets and spears has been suspended by the board of supervisors.—Dundee Reporter.

The 86th birthday of Wait Peck, of Sharon, was celebrated on the 12th inst., by the gathering together of his children and grand-children.

People are obliged to move out of Salem village now, because there are no empty houses to live in. Everything chuck full and running over.

The Navarre quarry at Stony Point, Monroe county, shows the effect of the great glacial tramp, which in pre-historic times, so it is held,

The Salem Congregational church looks better than it did before it was renovated, repainted, etc., but the prayers of its worshipers are probably no more sincere.

The Leader estimates that 500 people have gone from Dexter to the World's Fair, spending on an average $50 each, making $25,000 taken out of that village this season.

The postoffice at Birkett has been discontinued, much to the displeasure of the people who have been in the habit of getting their mail there. But we must have economy(?) you know.

The Adrian Press says: "Let the people have all the silver dollars Uncle Sam can coin." Our sentiments exactly! We are the people!—Northville Record. That has the right sort of ring.

The Ladies' Library Association of Ypsilanti, announces a course of 14 entertainments, mostly lectures, for which it sells tickets at 75 cents for the course, or 50 cents where more than one is taken in a family.

A Tecumseh farmer claims to have realized $1.10 per bushel for his wheat by feeding it to his hogs. That may be possible this year, but pork will not always be as high as at present and wheat may be higher.

The M. E. church at Saline closed a recent Sunday because the society had run out of wood, and there was no fire. What was the matter with the preacher? Couldn't he make it hot enough for the congregation?

A good many cats are being dropped on the roads in Ypsilanti town, says the Ann Arbor Argus. It was noticed some time ago, that the Ypsilanti marshal had undertaken to purify the morals of the city. The good work is still going on, it seems.—Adrian Press.

As near as can be learned 492 special excursion tickets were sold for Chicago from the different passenger stations in this county last week. Adding to that number of regular tickets, and they are being sold every day, it will make close upon 600 Washtenawians who went to the World's Fair last week. Quite a drain of money.

The Grass Lake cemetery association contemplates an additional purchase of five acres. The village has always been credited with fair health but this contemplated cemetery addition looks as though there was to be a competitive rush between the quick and the dead, for supremacy in population.—Adrian Press.

Among the several things a level man should never do are to walk on a railroad track, to point a gun or pistol at another, to keep his savings in an old sock under the bed, to run for office when he has a paying business in private life, to call a bigger man than himself a liar, or neglect paying his subscription to the local paper when due.—Dexter Leader.

Remember there are two sides to all questions. Having heard your children's story, it will be well to hear what the teacher has to say before you condemn her. Before you pronounce the school worthless, it would be well to visit it. If tempted to call on a teacher while you are in a passion—don't. Wait till you have perfect control of yourself.—Dundee Ledger.

passed over a large part of North America, cutting off mountain tops and filling valleys and grinding and scratching the native rock. The uncovered rocks at Navarre quarry show unmistakably the grooves furrowed into the native stone by the granite boulders from the north which were scooped up and borne along by the tremendous energy of the ice.—Adrian Press.

This is just the time of the year that country path-masters ought to fix up the highway for the coming winter. That legally imperative duty, (always neglected) of picking up the loose stones in the road bed, should be attended to. There are also many ruts and chuck holes that need attention before the fall rains set in and winter follows. A little judicious work at this season would be well expended.

Big-A-little-a-ron Wilson, of Farmington, thought some son-of-a-gun had stolen his promising young colt one day last week and had several county sheriffs in the searching party. The colt was simply practicing the adage of, "a change of pasture makes fat cattle," and he was quietly grazing over in neighbor "Jim" Erwin's clover patch.—Northville Record. The colt's owner will probably display a little more horse sense about such things, hereafter.

While digging a trench for a sewer connection at Schaffer's grocery on Cross st., last week, the workmen came upon an oak stump, the top of which was about six feet below the surface. The stump was about two feet across and was as solid as it was when the Michigan Central road was built in the thirties, when it is probable this spot was filled to nearly the present level. The old oak was split up and many of the depot people have preserved pieces as relics.—Ypsilanti Sentinel.

Norman Wood will this year realize a fair profit from his apple crop. He has secured upwards of 300 barrels of marketable fruit besides the culls and cider apples. During the past few years this orchard like all others has been of little if any profit. —Saline Observer.

A flock of wild geese flew over town in a south-westerly direction, on Tuesday. They were taking a round about way to escape the World's Fair, no doubt.—Wayne Review. What geese!

The presiding elder of the Adrian district of M. E. churches, was in town last Friday and Saturday, and as a result of his visit the Milan church is no longer a part of a circuit, but is a charge all alone by itself, with Mr. Yager as pastor. London and Oakville have been set off with Azalia, from the Dundee circuit, and now forms a circuit with minister circuit resident at Azalia. The Milan circuit once embraced the churches at this place, Oakville, London, Azalia and Cone.—Milan Leader.

If you have any doubt as to the legality of your line fence, here is the law relative to that subject: "All fences four and a half feet high, and in good repair, consisting of rails, timbers, or stone walls, or any combination thereof, and all brooks, rivers, creeks, ditches and hedges, or other things, which shall be equivalent thereto, in the judgment of the fence viewers within whose jurisdiction the same may be, shall be deemed legal and sufficient fences. The overseer of highways of the several townships in this state shall be fence viewers in their respective townships."

This truthful description of a well known lad is given by a gentleman who is a close observer of human nature: "I have spent much of the last thirty-four years in farmers' homes, and have seen that boy—the country lad as he is. He rises early, he is acquainted and interested in all the stock and poultry; he knows all the country round; he is acquainted with every bug and worm, bird and animal, tree and flower, weed and cereal on the farm. He has a good appetite and good digestion, and his sleep is sweet and refreshing. He reads thoughtfully the great book of nature, whose leaves open before him day by day. He loves his father and mother, and calls them such, and he loves his sweetheart as no town boy does, and is loved in turn by her as no town boy is."

Life is Misery

To many people who have the taint of scrofula in their blood. The agonies caused by the dreadful running sores and other manifestations of this disease are beyond description. There is no other remedy equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla for scrofula, salt rheum and every form of blood disease. It is reasonably sure to benefit all who give it a fair trial.

OLD MEN IN JOURNALISM.

There Are Very Few Places for Them in the Newspaper World.

The most pathetic figure in journalism is the man who has grown old in its service, writes J. W. Keller in the Forum. Through no fault of his he finds himself without a vocation when he most needs it. In any other business his experience would be of value. The accumulated knowledge of years would command a prize commensurate with its worth. Here it is valueless, because in the first ten years of his journalistic career he has mastered the art of reporting, of copy reading, of any routine departmental work, and experience shows that celerity decreases with age after a certain period of years has been reached.

Journalism is essentially a business for young men. They rush into it by hundreds, they remain in it by tens. Ninety per cent. of the men who enter journalism leave it before they become old. They remain in it only long enough to make it a stepping stone to something else less exacting, less limited in remuneration, less insecure in employment. On the staff of the daily newspapers with which I am connected there is only one man over fifty years of age, and the average age of the employes in the editorial department is less than thirty-five. A canvass of other metropolitan newspaper offices will show but a slight variation from these figures. There are more old men doing messenger service for telegraph companies than reporting for the daily newspapers.

YOUNG OLD WOMEN.

It Is Strange That the Majority of Very Old People Are Women.

It is an acknowledged fact that a great age is attained by women oftener than by men. The true reason, probably, lies in the quieter and more regular life usually led by women, whose nervous systems and brains are, consequently, not worn out so quickly, as a rule, as those of men, says Pearson's Weekly.

One of the most famous female centenarians was the countess of Desmond, who lived to be one hundred and forty-five, and died in the reign of James I. from the effects of an accident.

This wonderful woman found herself, at the age of one hundred, so lively and so strong as to be able to take part in a dance, and when she was one hundred and forty she traveled all the way from Bristol to London—no trifling journey in those days—in order to attend personally to some business affairs.

Lady Desmond is, however, quite thrown in the shade by a French women, Maria Prion, who died at St. Columbe in June, 1838—it is said—at the wonderful age of one hundred and fifty-eight. Toward the end of her life she lived exclusively on goat's milk and cheese. Although her body was so shrunken that she weighed only forty-six pounds, she retained all her mental faculties to the last.

It is an extraordinary, but incontestable fact, that some women, at the age when most people die, undergo a sort of natural process of rejuvenation—the hair and teeth grow again, the wrinkles disappear from the skin and sight and hearing reacquire their former sharpness.

A Marquise de Mirabeau is an example of this rare and remarkable phenomenon. She died at the age of eighty-six, but a few years before her death she became in appearance quite young again.

The same thing happened to a nun o the name of Marguerite Verdur, who at the age of sixty-two, lost her wrinkles, regained her sight and grew several new teeth. When she died, ten years later, her apperrance was almost that of a young girl.

Utes and Navajos.

No one has ever been known to get the better of a Navajo Indian in trade. Navajos are as superstitious as they are shrewd and have a mortal fear of a camera. Nothing will induce them to pose for their pictures. The Utes are equally difficult to photograph.

"What are you going to do with that?" asked a handsome Ute on the San Juan river of a Salt Lake Tribune correspondent.

"We want some Ute pictures for the world's fair to put with the white man's and the Navajos."

"That's well enough for the white man and the Navajos," replied the Ute, "but it's bad medicine for us. As soon as a Ute has his picture taken he gets sick and dies. We do not want that tool in our country. It is bad medicine."

Nothing will induce a Navajo to touch a fish, much less eat it. Swing a fish in the face of a Navajo and the bravest will run. Who will explain?

An Exaggerated Bird.

The imperial woodpecker is an exaggeration of the ordinary red-headed woodpecker. It is nearly two feet long, its plumage black and white, with a gorgeous scarlet crest, its bill white. It lives in Mexico and in the Sierra Madre mountains. These birds are always found in pairs and are destroyers of trees, as they devote their entire energies to one tree for as long as a fortnight, injuring it so greatly that the tree dies. In Europe and Asia there is a gray-headed woodpecker. The largest European woodpecker is seventeen inches long, black, with scarlet crest. It is called the great black woodpecker. The little brown woodpecker of Ceylon is not five inches long. The white-headed woodpecker is a wise-looking little creature that lives in the pine woods of the Pacific coast. There are some two hundred and fifty species of woodpeckers, and they inhabit almost every part of the globe.

Customs as to Dining.

The Spaniard, however courteous he may be, never invites a guest to dinner; in Italy, too, the privacy of the family is seldom invaded at the dinner hour; the Frenchman is delighted to entertain, but prefers to do it at his club, while the Englishman is never so genial as when seated at his own table with company surrounding him.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, October 21, 1893

I hereby call a special meeting of the Common Council to be held Monday eve., October 23d, '93, at 7:30 p. m., to consider the report of the bond committee and all matters that would have come before the Council at its regular meeting, October 16, 1893.

B. M. THOMPSON, Mayor.

The chair ruled that the only business that could be transacted was to hear report of Bond Committee.

Ald Prettyman moved an appeal from the decision of the chair.

The chair was sustained by the following yea and nay vote:

Yeas—Alds. Herz, Martin, Snow, Wood, O'Mara, Ferguson, Manly—7.

Nays—Ald. Schairer, Wagner, Prettyman—3.

A recess of five minutes was taken.

After the expiration of five minutes the Council re-assembled, and Chairman Prettyman of the bond committee reported that the bond committe have examined the following bonds of liquor dealers; and would recommend their acceptance with the sureties named:

PRINCIPAL.	SURETIES
Martin P. Vogel,	Thos. F. Leonard. Gustave Brahm.
Frederick Walter and Gottlob Knapp,	Frederick Staeb. Adolph Kemper.

Ald. O'Mara moved that the bonds be accepted, adopted and approved.

Adopted as follows:

Yeas—Ald. Schairer, Wagner, Herz, Martin, Snow, Wood, O'Mara, Ferguson, Manly, Prettyman, Kitson—11.

Nays—None.

Ald. Manly moved to reconsider the vote on sustaining the chair's decision on the order of business.

Lost as follows:

Yeas—Ald. Schairer, Wagner, Manly Prettyman, Kitson—5.

Nays—Ald. Herz. Martin, Snow, Wood, O'Mara, Ferguson—6.

On motion the Council adjourned.

W. J. MILLER, Clerk.
