Consumption in Hospitals.

When it comes to be considered that one out of seven die of consumption, the disease becomes appalling. It is spreading because it is contagious. A consumptive spits on the floor or in the street and when the sputa dries, the germs are liberated to blow through the air into any lungs. It can and must be stamped out as leprosy was in England by preventing the sick from contaminating the well persons.

There are thousands of poor people who, getting consumption, are neglected by their friends, deprived of necessities almost, and hustled into a corner as incurable, yet staying with them to spread the awful disease through lack of knowledge to prevent or cure.

At the last meeting of the state board of health Dr. V. C. Vaughan presented the subject showing the need of a state hospital to care for these unfortunates, where by care, they may be cured, and where, by attention to sanitary regulations, all sputa and excretions may be destroyed,—thus preventing the spread of it. He showed how much more necessary this is than an asylum for the feeble-minded, who are harmless people, while a consumptive is a menace to the community.

Medical science is making rapid advancement and is now closely studying preventatives to disease, for that is better than the cures. There is no better place for such a hospital than in Ann Arbor, in connection with the University, where the best doctors in the country can make special studies of consumption. It is believed that one of the faculty has even now discovered a way to arrest the awful and hitherto incurable disease.

The state of Michigan has taken the lead of the world in her University. She should now come forward to make the first advance to cure and to stop the most contagious and deadly disease, which threatens mankind. There is the land here, owned by the state, for such a hospital building, and here are the best physicians and surgeons, employed by the state. All that is needed is a suitable building. The matter will be put before the next state legislature and we may expect to see some very satisfactory results from the establishing of a hospital for consumptives. Surprising as it may be, there is a profit to the state now over and above all expenses, from the University hospital. Such a hospital as is spoken of above, may be made to pay its expenses, besides being a great help to the students, and at the same time a blessing to thousands of poor consumptives.

Detroit Bank Stockholders.

Ann Arbor citizens are pretty well represented as stockholders of Detroit banks. For instance, take the Peninsular Savings Bank, with the following list and the number of their shares: Pres. Angell and wife, 10; James L. Babcock, 155; Minerva E. Bliss 50; J. E. Beal, 15; S. W. Clarkson, 40; Emmett Coon, 5; Henry Cornwell, 10; Alpheus Felch, 55; F. S. Gaige, 15; C. S. Gregory, 50; est., H. C. Gregory, 15; Geo. P. Glazier, 20; M. F. Howard, 5; Clara C. James, guardian, 5; Dr. McLachlan, 10; Mrs. O. M. Martin, 10; Evert H. Scott, 10; John V. Sheehan, 25; Thos. S. Sears, 60; Mrs. A. Z. Treadwell, 10; est. of John M. Wheeler, 35; L. D. Watkins, 40; John A. Watling, 10; C. S. Wortley, 30; Wm. Wagner, 10; James C. Wood, 20; James H. Wade, 30; D. Zimmerman, 20. These include several in Ypsilanti, Chelsea, Dexter and Manchester, and total about 800 shares, or nearly $100,000 worth in value owned in Washtenaw. There is as much more owned by our people in other Detroit banks and insurance companies.

E. W. Mitchell, general superintendent of the United States Express Co., is in town to-day making arrangements for opening their office May 1. They have rented the store in the Masonic block now occupied by Blake's picture store, next the American Express Co. The new wagon will be here in a few days, and it is likely that Fred Huntton, the U. S. Express agent at Ypsilanti, will be the new agent. Joseph Jacobus will be the driver. The coming of the new company is welcomed by all the people of Ann Arbor as it promises increased facilities and better rates to all shippers as well as to all receivers of goods.

Has Washtenaw Any Basis?

The board of supervisors of Lenawee county appointed a committee to draft a schedule of prices as a basis of taxation; and at a recent special meeting of the board that committee made the following report which was adopted:

- Good sound farm horses, $65.
- Colts, 3 years old, $45.
- Colts, 2 years old, $30.
- Colts, 1 year old, $20.
- Cows in three grades: 1st grade, $30; 2d grade, $25; 3d grade, $20.
- Fat cattle, per pound, 3c.
- Stockers, per head, $15.
- Sheep, per head, $1.50.
- Swine per pound, 4c.
- Wheat per bushel, 50c.
- Carriage and buggies kept for pleasure, 1-2 to 3-4 per cent.

The values mentioned to be considered the price of an average article of different classes.

How about Washtenaw county? Is there any basis by which her supervisors govern themselves in making assessments? Or are the rolls made out by guess and by golly?

Would it not be wise for the board of this county to hold a special meeting and adopt some standard to go by??

Mrs. French-Sheldon Friday Evening.

The Ladies' Library Association have been extremely fortunate in securing the services of Mrs. French-Sheldon F. R. G. S., the remarkable traveler and explorer, who will lecture Friday evening April 27, at 8 o'clock at the School of Music, the subject being: "Sultan to Sultan, The Wonders of Africa." She is a brilliant lecturer with something to say, and her lecture will be illustrated by stereopticon views.

This wonderful woman in 1891, penetrated 1,000 miles into unknown Africa, attended by a band of 200 native men and women, herself the organizer and leader of the magnificent expedition, and the only white person in it.

Her progress was perfectly marvelous. Through hostile and barbarous tribes she passed, as an elegant lady would, superbly dressed, luxuriously surrounded, welcomed and feted at the courts of savage kings, with the American flag floating at the head of her triumphant procession, and "Good will to men" her password and safe conduct.

Some of our Ann Arbor people met and heard her at the World's Fair, almost all saw her magnificent traveling equipment in the Transportation building; all these will be glad to see her again and hear her exciting adventures.

The lecture will be given in the School of Music building and the tickets must therefore be limited. They will be placed on sale at Sheehan's, Brown's, Wahr's and in President Angell's office, and with Miss Goodrich.

Opportunity for a Kick.

The securing of the United States Express company for Ann Arbor, is another one of the many benefits the motor road has brought to this city, despite its unfair treatment by the city. The Ann Arbor & Ypsilanti road proposed to bring between 300 and 400 people a day to Ann Arbor, but the Main street merchants rose up and petitioned the council to keep them away. If the motor had been allowed to come to State street it would have been a great help, and could have injured no one. So the farmers are shut out because of the extra fare down town, and they are disgusted at such a dog-in-the-manger action. As a result, all the farmers along the line now do their trading in Ypsilanti, while the people of that neighboring city, who had begun to come here to trade are now practically shut out, and stay at home. To be consistent, the merchants should rise up and try to shut out the express company from coming in. Probably if some person would start a petition the rest would all sign it. Now is the chance for the kicker to hurt his town again.

The T. & A. A. R. R. War.

Although the Toledo, Ann Arbor & Northern Michigan road is in a bad way financially, it seems to be a prize worth making quite a fight for, as was shown last week in Toledo. The fight was mainly between the bondholders and the stockholders. The bonds were defaulted, but their holders did not want to go through the long, expensive process of the courts to get possession. So they went in to buy up a controlling interest of the stock. The Ashleys went with John J. Astor, who, with his friends held the bonds, while the Delaware-Lackawanna railroad people, as stockholders, were trying to secure the Ann Arbor road for a feeder and outlet. With the latter was T. C. Platt, the president of the U. S. Express Co. The stockholders at first had a majority in the election, but being out-generalled they withdrew in the election without a regular chairman or the court inspectors, thus being apparently illegal. The road by the push of the Ashleys had been built up through a country which has a future, and with its valuable connections, its 300 miles or track and valuable terminal facilities, it must become in time a road doing a profitable business.

Physical Culture in Boston Schools.

ANN ARBOR, April 24, '94.

Ed. Courier:— A special committee on Physical Training, of the Boston Board of Education, reported June 10, 1893, as follows: "It is their unanimous opinion that the first thing to be attended to is the introduction of a proper system of gymnastic exercises which can be carried on in the ordinary school-room with little or no apparatus. They are convinced that an exercise by the children in the school-room of ten or fifteen minutes, near the middle of each day's session, regularly continued not for a month or a year, but throughout the entire school life of each boy and girl, will be productive of important results. Such exercises so carried on will take little time from the lessons of the day. They will be attractive to the pupils of all ages. They will prove a great relief to the nervous tension. They will not only be restful to the body, promoting proper circulation of the blood, keeping the entire physical system in a vigorous condition, but they will promote good humor, cheerfulness and a natural, easy and healthy tone of mind. In short, these exercises will add much not only to the health, but also to the happiness of teacher and pupils." And after investigating all systems, the committee summed up as follows, that:

1. The time has fully arrived when gymnastics, as a branch of school-culture, should be introduced into all the public schools in this city.
2. The Ling or Swedish system of educational gymnastics is in all respects the best adapted for use in these schools.
3. Such measures should be taken in the introducing of this system as will best insure its efficient and permanent practice.
4. To this end special instructors, thoroughly trained in the system, should be employed to instruct teachers and to supervise the practice of the system in the schools in all the grades, and it should be the duty of the supervisors in their official visits to the several schools to see that this branch receives proper attention.
5. Not less than ten minutes nor more than fifteen minutes should be used for these exercises during each school session.
6. These exercises should be conducted under the direction of the regular teachers in the different school-rooms.
7. For the purpose of efficiently carrying on the above plan, your committee recommend the appointment of one director of physical training and four assistants.

This is submitted for the public. Physical culture is now an established branch of education in the best schools, and it should be one of our next steps in Ann Arbor.

W. B. STICKNEY, A. M.

A Powerful Experience.

Where are we at? yells the Pinkney Dispatch. That depends. If one of the Ann Arbor P. O. candidates is referred to, the question is easily answered. He is between heaven and hades. His name having been sent to the senate by President Cleveland has caused delightful and heavenly sensations to permeate his whole being; But! Congressman Gorman is making it so overlastingly hot for him, that every breeze wafted from the National Capitol has a brimstone fragrance to it, and so between joy and fear he is experiencing the sensation portrayed by Holmes: "Beholding Heaven and feeling hell."

The Dowagiac Times is for sale. Who bids?

The public debt was increased $13,754,422 in March—the only democratic gain reported this week.—N. Y. Sun (Dem.)

The Chesaning Argus has come out with a new head and a new dress, and is now as neat and tasty a paper as can be found in the state. Glad to note its deserved prosperity.

Some of our candidates for office who have been frozen to death by President Cleveland can give the authorities at Washington pointers on how to deal with Coxe's army when it reaches there.

The many friends of Col. C. V. R. Pond, in this city will be pleased to learn of his appointment as chief clerk in the state department at Lansing, the position formerly filled by the late Capt. Spencer, of Ypsilanti.

The supreme court has decided the inheritance tax law, passed by the legislature of '93, unconstitutional. The courts of New York held it good. So there are two states whose supreme courts do not agree on constitutional law.

It is understood that the democratic state convention will be held in Detroit on July 10. Then will the tribes gather and the war paint be donned and Daned. Don't forget time and place! There will be no postponement on account of the weather.

The Leslie Local has grown tired of being mum on political questions and will hereafter howl for the republican party. Always howl the truth brother, and you need have no fears.—Plymouth Mail.

How could he do otherwise and publish a republican paper, pray tell?

The Adrian Press says that Ex-Speaker Reed "attends to his business," "lights every point," and "scores a victory every day," "through the indifference, carelessness laziness or treachery of democrats." 'Twas ever thus. You can not depend upon the democrats, "nohow."

If all southern "gentlemen" are as bad as "Phil" Thompson, Breckenridge's counsel, says they are, there is no doubt but that Willie will be "vindicated Ee Gad, sah!" by his admiring Kentucky constituents, and returned to congress, there to disgrace a seat in what should be a body of honorable men.

No democrat will defend the present administration unless he is in receipt of pap, or expects it.—Adrian Press.

How sad! And it was only two short years since the Press was crying: "Grover, Grover, Four years more of Grover! Then we'll be in clover!" or words of similar import. We have Grover. But where, oh where's the clover?

David Dudley Field who died in New York last week, went to that city with nothing but ten dollars and a Bible. He died with a national reputation and an estate valued at $1,000,000. We have a Bible and if we had a ten, the temptation would be strong to follow Mr. Field's example.—Fenton Independent.

The first part of the Independent man's assertion should be accompanied by an affidavit. The chances are that the Bible really belongs to some member of his family, and that he can borrow it if necessary.

OBLIVION FOR BOTH.

The verdict in the infamous and nasty Leskeni case, recently rendered at Washington, D. C., where the complainant, Miss Pollard, received $15,000 will be endorsed by every decent man in the Union.

Nevertheless every decent man and woman, every father and mother especially, will be glad to forget the wretched case.

Breach of marriage is, or ought to be, dead; dead to the world that exacts manhood in a man, fatherhood in a father, loyalty in a husband. His constituents in Kentucky may return him to congress, but he should be and will be dead just the same.

The woman in the case is likewise dead. And she ought to be. The sympathy of the thoughtless which has been wasted upon her has been a bad thing to public morals. In the eyes of some people she has attained the dignity and station of a heroine. She has been discussed and pined, but her name has been almost, if not quite, forgotten.

In the cool moments of reflection, however, now that the case is closed, this woman's demoralizing influence upon the minds of the young can be properly gauged. Her penalty seems to be sympathy, elaborate personal descriptions in newspapers, a certain degree of general admiration, and a verdict for $15,000. This is what the penalty seems to be. And there-in is the danger.

Heedless men and women only see those things which lie upon the surface. Back of the verdict, and Miss Pollard's ephemeral notoriety, however, is death, disgraceful, inevitable death.

Miss Pollard can't restore herself. There is no place for her in literature. No stage, even if it were made of oak and riveted with iron, is strong enough to support her. The public is done with her. Oblivion is her actual penalty, and oblivion is cruel, remorseless, and retributive.

The two are inseparably linked together by fate, and the public will certainly and surely bury them in the same grave of eternal oblivion. It is a cruel fate, but it falls with justice.

And now some prophet of evil has arisen and prophesies that the continent of Australia and the islands of New Zealand are to sink out of sight in a little time. This fellow is simply trying to encourage the wool growers in America. It won't work. Nothing will help them but the killing of the Wilson bill.

The "czar" of Maine is finally triumphant. The men who abused him and called him every name their active and voluble tongues could utter, have at last accepted his business rulings in a previous congress as right, and the democrats in the present house have finally adopted his quorum-counting rule, in substance and in almost the same form. Once more the reluctant democratic jack-ass has been dragged forward against his most dismal protests and tethered in a better place than he would ever have reached if left to his own devices.

Vermont believes in the principle of when you get a good thing keep it, and in that way it has had more influence in congress than many of the larger states. It has kept Senator Justin S. Morrill in congress since 1855, and in the senate since 1867. The senator celebrated his 84th birthday on the 16th inst., by a reception to his friends at Washington, and he is said to have appeared younger and more vigorous than many of the younger statesmen present.

The suicide of Miss Jones at the University is not the first instance, and will not be the last. The fact is that the female constitution is not fitted for the "co-education," that is offered in colleges and universities worth the name. A great majority of girls entering may live to get through, but those who fall by the way, are the choicest of the whole who enter.—Ypsilanti Sentinel.

The Sentinel's conclusions are not warranted by the facts. In all the years the University has been open to women, this has been the first case of suicide occurring in the ranks of the students of that sex, while within the same length of time there have been several suicides, three of which can be recalled while writing this paragraph, among the men students.

Another thing, Miss Jones' suicide was not the result of over-study. She had a bright mind and was not obliged to exert herself to keep pace with her classes. Her education had nothing whatever to do with her sad death. That was the result of despondency resulting from the straightened circumstances the family were in, in which to her mind appeared worse than they really were.

This incident can not be tortured into an "argument" against the education of women. The history of that "experiment" in the University of Michigan proves that the female students are as healthy, as studious and as well qualified mentally, physically and every other way for an education as are the male students.

FACTS ABOUT THE CENSUS.

The following, in reference to the appointment of census enumerators, has been furnished the press of Michigan by Washington Gardner, secretary of state. It contains information that many are anxious to secure:

The state census is to be taken in June of this year. The law seems to be very explicit, but as it is not in the hands of everyone, there is much inquiry as to its provisions. The inquiries relate mainly to the appointment of enumerators, and are all answered by the first section of the census law, which is act 178 of 1893. It provides:

1st. That enumerators and assistants shall be appointed after the annual township meeting, and on or before the first Monday in May.

2d. That they are to be appointed by township boards in townships and common councils in cities.

3d. That if not appointed before the first Monday in May, the appointment is to be made by the governor. And

4th. That enumerators are to be appointed for each assessment district.

2d. Appointments by any other than township boards in townships and common councils in cities is illegal.

3d. Appointments after the first Monday in May can be made by the governor only. Enumerators and assistants are to be appointed before the first Monday in May. In case a sufficient number of assistants are not appointed before that date, the additional number required must be appointed by the governor.

4th. Enumerators and assistants are to be appointed for each assessment district. If a township, a city, or a ward is divided into more than one assessment district, each district is to have one chief enumerator, and such number of assistants as may be necessary to complete the census within the time prescribed by law. Neither an incorporated, nor an unincorporated village, can have an enumerator unless it constitutes a distinct and entire assessment district. In other words, where the township forms one assessment district, there will be one chief enumerator for the entire township, including the villages within such township. An assistant may be appointed to take the census of the village or villages under the supervision of the chief enumerator, or the chief enumerator may take the census of the village, and the assistant take the census of the country.

The division of territory in townships may be made by the township board, and in cities by the common council, but in case it is not so made, then it is the duty of the chief enumerator to make such assignment of territory.

Why Editors are Poor.

It is a lamentable fact that the rewards of the country editor are not always commensurate with the labor expended. I was about to say with his deserts, but the reason he does not prosper, except in growing grace, is because of his poor business methods. One of the most baneful proclivities of country publishers is the habit of free puffs. So long as a merchant can get his name in the paper, in the local columns at that, every time he buys a new box of goods, or make a sale, and so long as the editor announces from week to week that Mr. So and So, our wide-awake and enterprising dry goods dealers, are doing this or doing that, just so long the said dealer will have no use for business locals at five cents per line. Every notice that advertises or promotes business should be charged for. Every card of thanks, every notice of an entertainment, where an admission fee is charged, should also be paid for. There is at least one newspaper office in Michigan where the above is carried out, and where tickets are not current for show advertising. If editors would charge and collect pay for what they do, there would be more well-to-do newspaper men.—C. C. Vaughan, in the M. P. A. Bulletin.

Mixed Up the Two Websters.

During Daniel Webster's visit to England, he was taken one day to see Lord Brougham. That eminent jurist, however, received him with such eagerness that Mr. Webster was glad to get away, and took his leave at the first opportunity. The friend saw him to his rooms and then returned to Lord Brougham, and in some anger said:

"My lord, how could you behave with such unseemly rudeness and discourtesy to so great a lawyer and statesman? It was insulting to him and has filled me with mortification."

"To Daniel Webster, of the senate of the United States."

"Great Jupiter, what a blunder!" exclaimed Lord Brougham, realizing the mistake he had made. "I thought it was that fellow Webster who made a dictionary and nearly ruined the English language."

Then, it is said, the great chancellor sought out Mr. Webster and excused his conduct, which the latter generously accepted, and it is added, having other tastes in common besides law and politics, they made a royal night of it. All of which is probably true enough to found a story on.

The latest swindle being worked on the farmers is this: "A smart business fellow learns who is contemplating using paint, and represents himself as agent for an eastern paint factory. He agrees to send ten gallons of paint to be paid for in ten years. The farmer signs the order and pays the note when due.—Chelsea Standard. Any one who would be fool enough to expect to get ten gallons of paint on ten years time ought to be mulcted $10 or more.

A Boon to the Hungry.

An Index of these hard times is the number of seedy men and boys who gather about the fruit wharfs on the arrival of a vessel carrying bananas. The fruit is put aboard when green, but on long voyages many bunches become ripe by the heat of the hold. In this condition, rough handling breaks the bunches apart, and as the wholesale dealers will not accept the fruit in this condition, a large part of it is thrown away. Persons to whom satisfactory meals are few and far apart, have learned that bananas are most filling, and as the broken bunches may be had nearly always for the asking, they have grown to await the arrival of fruit steamships in order to satisfy their hunger.—New York World.

Literary Notes.

With the end of the present academic year, President Eliot, of Harvard, will complete his twenty-fifth year of his service, and President Charles F. Thwing of the Western Reserve University, himself a Harvard man, has written for the May Forum an appreciative review of his long administration of Harvard.

Commissioner Theodore Roosevelt has written a letter on "The Common Sense of Civil Service Reform," which will appear in the May number of the Century. He expresses the wish that the plain, sensible people of the country, those who are interested in decent politics, and not in office mongering and office jobbing, would make some of the congressmen who declaim against the civil service law, understand that it is not safe always to pander to stupid or dishonest voters.

Blind, Deaf and Dumb.

The resources and possibilities of modern methods of intellectual training have found another marvelous instance in the case of Helen Keller, an instance fully as wonderful and conclusive as that furnished by the famous Laura Bridgman. The interesting child is now about 14 years old. She became deaf, dumb and blind in infancy, and yet she has been educated up to such a point that she was enabled, at 12 years of age, to write, by means of her own typewriter, a sketch of her having been led forth from darkness into the light of knowledge. Her sketch is beautifully composed, and is said by the editor of the paper in which the composition has been published, to have been free from errors of spelling and the like.

In view of the child's dreadful afflictions, the mere mechanical work of the achievement is remarkable enough; but when to this is added a distinctly fine quality of literary skill the mental attainments acquired by the girl are quite amazing. We can not resist the temptation to quote a portion of her recital of her first preception of the sea.

"Suddenly we stopped," she writes, "and I knew, without being told, the sea was at my feet. I knew, too, it was immense! awful! and for a moment some of the sunshine seemed to have gone out of the day. But I do not think I was afraid; for later, when I put on my bathing suit, and the little waves ran up on the shore had kissed my feet, I shouted for joy, and plunged fearlessly into the surf. But, unfortunately, I struck my foot on a rock and fell forward into the cold water.

"Then a strange, fearful sense of danger terrified me. The salt water filled my eyes and took away my breath, and a great wave threw me up on the beach as easily as if I had been a little pebble. For several days after that I was very timid and could hardly be persuaded to go into the water at all; but by degrees my courage returned, and almost before the summer was over I thought it the greatest fun to be tossed about by the sea waves.

"Oh, the happy, happy, hours I spent, hunting the wonderful shells! How pretty they were with their lovely fresh hues, and exquisite shapes! And how peasant it was to sit on the sandy bank and braid the sea grass, while teacher told me stories of the sea and described, in simple words that I could understand, the majestic ocean and the ships that drifted in the distance like white-winged birds!

"People sometimes seem surprised that I love the ocean when I cannot see it. But I do not think it is strange. It is because God has planted the love of His wonderful works deep in the hearts of his children, and, whether we see them or not, we feel everywhere their beauty and mystery enfolding us."—Illustrated American.

Notes and Queries.

Plaster casts may be made to look like ivory by soaking in melted wax. Moths are discouraged from their depredations in carpets if they are sprinkled with salt before sweeping.

All young meats should be well cooked. Veal cutlets are improved by a tomato sauce poured over them.

A new cotton dress, accidentally torn, may be mended so the rent will not show, by starching a piece of the goods and ironing it on.

Fish and eggs are the diet for spring as nature plainly intimated when she provided them in such plenty at this season.

Keep fish while scaling them in a pan of water; then the scales will not fly over you, and when done the water may be poured from them before they are put in the slops.

Garnish beefsteak, mutton chops or fish with sprigs of water cress; it will add an appetizing look as well as flavor to them. It is a better blood purifier than any medicine you can take.

You can sweeten and dry a damp closet by placing in it a pail half full of quick lime; it will slake slowly and may then be still useful if thrown on damp, sound land or on the compost heap.

Nothing will make a darn so nearly invisible as the use of threads drawn from the same material. So when you draw a thread to straighten the end of a tablecloth or napkin, save it and the piece cut off for mending places, and if neatly done it will take sharp eyes to find the spot.

Tuberose may be started inside for early blooming but the gladioli should be set directly in the open ground, and successive plantings will prolong the blooming season.

Here are some things you ought to have sure: Some Marguerite carnations, a dozen ever-blooming roses, an imomea leari vine, a cobaea scandens, a pansy bed, a row of sweet peas, and a wild garden of old-fashioned roses.

When the plants are removed from the window garden for more light and air as the weather becomes warmer, give the cacti all the sunlight possible. These curious plants are becoming more popular every year, and there are very few window collections in which they are not included.

About the Swine.

Give 'em a warm mash for breakfast.

Make the brood sows as comfortable as possible. All swine are noticeably sensitive to changes in the weather.

Pigs are better off to have something to do, and their time is not worth anything. They are healthier with something to do.

While fixing fence, fix the pig pasture. It will do more for your pork, if a good grazing field, than any other work you bestow.

Bristles has decided that he will get more money this year for the same weight of pork than it brought last season, as he will cure it and sell it in neater cuts and more attractive packages.

If you have made the pigs grow well over winter kill them this spring and start with more growers. Young pork should bring a good price, and there is more money in growing your pork than in making it on corn.

Shut in the young pigs early at night and keep them in late on the cold morning.

Now be on the lookout for choice pigs that will bring good litters next spring. Raise them on liberal feed, develop them and stint them early and you won't be far astray.

To increase the interest of the boys on the farm, give each of them a pig. Let them compete in feeding. Give them good books and papers on swine and in the fall let all pork be dressed at the same age. Invite neighborhood boys and let the youngsters stick and dress their own animals.

The Superiority. Of Hood's Sarsaparilla is due to the tremendous amount of brain work and constant care used in its preparation. Try one bottle and you will be convinced of its superiority. It purifies the blood which, the source of health, cures dyspepsia, overcomes sick headaches and biliousness. It is just the medicine for you.

Is milk for feeding rather short? Remember the virtues of wheat middlings five parts, oil meal one part, and water to make a rich gruel.

To cure a horse of worms give him a tablespoonful of salt and wood ashes mixed half and half daily for a week. Then wait a week and repeat. After this feed the horse two quarts of potatoes each day for a week. If the case should be old and obstinate repeat the operation from the beginning.

Caustic potash applied to the place where the horns are to appear will prevent their growth. Several parties sell a prepared potash for this purpose. Its superiority consists in safer application. It must not be smeared upon the animal nor touch the hands and clothes of the operator.

Galen Wilson, in the Practical Farmer tells how to have pasture for hogs; Divide your lot into two fields. Sow one to oats alone at the rate of three bushels to the acre, as soon as the soil will answer to work in the spring, and about the tenth of May sow the other to sweet corn, two bushels to the acre. About the last of June change the animals from the oat field to this corn. Then plow the oat field and sow to corn in the same way and change the hogs back when necessary.

If the number of hogs is rightly proportioned to area and fertility of soil, there will be green feed until winter. For this purpose sweet corn is worth about fifty per cent. more than common field corn.

A ewe that would not own her lamb was made to do so in this way: A rope was tied loosely around her neck; she was then tied to a partition so she could barely get her head to the floor when lying down. One hind foot was tied by means of a strap three or four feet long, to something behind her, and she could then neither move very far forward or backward. The lamb at once secured all the nurse it wanted, and there was no more loss of time and temper on my part, to say nothing of the grease and dirt encountered in holding the old sheep, now thoroughly broken and attached to its lamb, and have had no more trouble with it.

Recipes for Corns and Things.

Spring fever is avoided by a little care in dieting; stop off some of the butter, meat and sugar, and increase the amount of fruit and "greens."

Bruise cranberries and bind on your sore and aching corns for two or three days and see how it will remove pain, and if followed up will remove the corns.

A woman so stout that she has a pang for simply looking at weighing scales, can easily put herself in better condition in body and mind by reducing the quantity of bread eaten, omitting potatoes altogether, and taking mainly a diet of meat, fruit, and a few vegetables. Try it.

A highly recommended cure for corns is to place in a cup a dozen pearl buttons, squeeze the juice of a lemon over them and leave them until the buttons are dissolved and reduced to a pasty substance. This may take several days. Bind the paste on the corn for several nights until relief will be found by the corn coming out, not to return.

A small bottle of milk makes a valuable addition to the luncheon of school children. If milk alone is not palatable it may be made acceptable by adding half a teaspoonful of cocoa and letting it come to a boil, sweetening it to the taste. For a delicate child with small appetite the white of an egg shaken up with milk will be very nourishing.

Prevention of bed sores on an invalid confined to bed is easier than cure. Rub the exposed parts three or four times a day with a little alcohol, or a solution made by pouring just enough water on a lump of alum to dissolve it; when this has dried powder with fine French chalk; pull the sheet perfectly smooth and pin it so it cannot wrinkle. Once a day rub a little oxide of zinc ointment well into the skin before applying the powder. If the skin seems very dry omit the alcohol or alum water, and use the ointment alone until it is soft; when there is the slightest redness chafe the part gently till it disappears.

Guaranteed Cure. We authorize our advertised druggist to sell Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, upon this condition. If you are afflicted with a Cough, Cold or any Lung, Throat or Chest trouble, and will use this remedy as directed, giving it a fair trial, and experience no benefit, you may return the bottle and have your money refunded. We could not make this offer did we not know that Dr. King's New Discovery could be relied on. It never disappoints. Trial bottles free at Eberbach & Son, Drug Store, and Ger. T. Haussier, Manchester. Large size 50c and $1.00.

Floral Love Letters. When the petals of the great aurel magnolia are touched, however lightly, the result is a brown spot, which develops in a few hours. This fact is taken advantage of by a lover, who pulls a magnolia flower, and on one of its pure white petals writes a motto or message with a hard, sharp-pointed pencil. Then he sends the flower, the young lady puts it in a vase of water and in three or four hours the message written on the leaf becomes visible and remains so.

BARBARIAN SHREWDNESS.

The "Yankee nation" takes great credit to itself for its ingenuity, but a wider acquaintance with the world would probably lessen its pretensions. Wild animals and uncivilized men—all creatures, in short, who live by their wits—have almost of necessity the quality of shrewdness highly developed, at least in certain directions.

Capt. Lugard, the African traveler, quotes his brother as expressing the highest admiration for "the wonderful instinct" of the jungle tribe of Gonds, in India, with whom he had practiced tiger shooting.

"If you dropped a Gond from a balloon in the heart of a forest unknown to him, and then suddenly went for him with a thick stick, he would take the identical path that a tiger would adopt, and it would be found to be the shortest possible way out of the jungle."

Capt. Lugard bears a similar testimony to the ready wit of the Swahilis, natives of east Africa. He had occasion to build a fort with all speed, and for that purpose he needed poles. They were difficult to procure, but as he remarks: "The Swahili is a wonderful fellow when pressed, for 'making bricks without straw.'"

Not a tree was in sight, and there were only a dozen axes for two hundred and fifty men; but he sent all hands out after timber. Each man was to bring a log, or two men might bring one log, if it was exceptionally large, and only after that was done were they to be at liberty to collect their own food for the day. And the logs were brought. In Capt. Lugard's words:

"Tell a Swahili he has to produce a pole before he can eat his dinner, and though you cannot see a tree on the horizon, he will arrive with a pole before you have decided in your mind which is the best direction in which to start your search."

WHITE HORSES AND LUCK.

"The car behind me will carry three or four more passengers than I will," said a Fourth Avenue street car driver to a New York Herald man the other day, as I stood on the front platform on a down-town trip. We had just passed two young women who were standing on a corner and were evidently waiting for a car.

"They'll take the next car," the driver continued, "and between here and the city hall I'll pass one or two more who won't get on this car."

"What's the matter?" I asked. "Do they know the conductor and do not like to ride on his car, or what is it?"

"Why, it's the horses," was the answer. "Don't you see these nags are white? There are lots and lots of people in this town who wouldn't be hired to ride behind a white horse. They think it's bad luck, and no matter how big a hurry they are in they'll always wait for a car that isn't drawn by white horses."

I said something about "superstition" and the foolishness of persons who stopped to think about the color of a car horse when the driver interrupted me.

"I'm not so sure about that," he exclaimed. "I've been running a car more than ten years and never had many accidents, but whatever bad luck I have had has been when I was driving white horses. I know a dozen drivers who don't like to get behind such a team as this, and every one of them has good reason for it, too. There's lots of gamblers and men who bet on horse races who are like those two women—you couldn't make them ride behind white horses when they are going to the races."

ABOUT SAUCES.

A French Cook's Treatise Upon His Chosen Art and Profession.

"Man has created the culinary art; he does not eat like an animal, he breakfasts, dines and sups." With this quotation the author of a very serious French treatise upon cooking begins his book. He is particularly eloquent on the subject of sauces. "Cooks recognize four great sauces," he says.

"These are the foundations of all others. They are Spanish, Veloute, Bechamel and German. The Spanish and Veloute were known in the seventeenth century, and were modified in the eighteenth by the great masters (cooks) and by Careme, the Raphael of the kitchen."

"The Spanish is composed of juices extracted from a mixture of ham, veal, chicken and pheasant. Veloute is similar, but is not colored. Bechamel is Veloute to which cream has been added, and the German sauce is Veloute to which yolks of eggs have been added."

After telling how to prepare these the author discusses the "Theory of Sauces." Certain writers, it seems, have condemned the use of thickening of browned butter and flour in meat sauces. He contradicts them emphatically, and quotes Careme, who says, severely: "Now, I ask the writers of these ridiculous books in what respect butter mixed with flour is corrosive and incendiary? But of what consequence are these ignorant men? Let them blunder on; let them continue to disgrace their profession."

"Sooner or later an enlightened practitioner will arrive, one who will unyell the evil of charlatanism. He will avenge science, and will cause them to disappear from the face of the earth."

In the appointment of census enumerators, common councils and town boards should have a care and select men of sufficient intelligence and business ability to do the work well. The idea of giving the place to some incompetent person out of charity, is a mistake which has too often been committed, and the consequence has been that in such instances the census has not been properly taken. It requires intelligent, systematic work to perform the duties of census enumerator, and none but men of that class should be selected.

The grit of Mrs. Wm. Gerstner came near making one less tramp to prow about the country. A specimen of that order called at the home of Mrs. Gerstner on Miller ave., last Friday evening and demanded money. Upon being refused he used vile language, and she then presented a revolver and aiming it at him bid him go, and he went. She chased him for a distance and fired at him, but did not hit the mark, much to the regret of everybody. The next day Sheriff Brenner arrested a couple of tramps who were begging on E. Ann street, and one of them proved to be the culprit who had insulted Mrs. Gerstner, but as there was no charge except vagrancy brought against the fellow, he was only given ten days in jail by Justice Bennett, who would have been delighted to have sent him up for a long period.

ROBBED A LAWYER

"Six months with hard labor," said the magistrate, calmly, to the prisoner at the bar.

"It will be quits with you before long," said the prisoner to the solicitor for the prosecutor, as he turned to descend to the cells.

For Joe Renshaw felt hurt. That particular solicitor, Benjamin Timpany, (Joe made a note of the name, and registered a resolution not to forget it) had conducted his case with a zeal that seemed to border on animus, otherwise Mr. Renshaw's explanation as to his presence on enclosed premises at midnight might have been accepted.

Mr. Timpany heard the words. He saw the glance that accompanied them. It was not a reassuring glance. If one met it by the light of a bullseye at midnight! Ugh! Mr. Timpany shuddered.

"Cleverest crackman going, Joe," said the sergeant, in a tone almost of admiration. "Electric bells and all that sort of thing don't bother him a bit. He can get through an iron shutter as if it was brown paper."

Mr. Timpany's state of mind became less complacent than ever. He had done his duty to his client in insuring this desperado's conviction; but he began to wonder whether a man could not do his duty too well. He began to think how exposed his house was, how low the back garden wall, how close the balconies to the ground, how rusty the front door chain, and how insecure the window fastenings. There was, however, one consolation—he had six months' start of Mr. Renshaw.

Mr. Timpany's politeness to the policeman whose beat embraced his house, and who had once been seen kissing his housemaid, was surprising, having regard to the indignation he had evinced when some time previously he had been informed of the housemaid incident.

The six months of his incarceration did not speed quite so quickly for Joe Renshaw as for Mr. Timpany. Joe was averse to labor of any kind, more especially to the hard variety. He had, however, ample time and opportunity for meditation on what he considered the vindictive wickedness of Mr. Timpany and the means for his requital. Artist as he was in his own line, in the operation contemplated he meant to excel himself. He would not hurry over it, he would bide his time. Everything comes, he reflected, to the man who waits; he would wait—on Timpany.

At last came the hour when he stepped forth a free man—any way, for a time. He began to look about for occupation, not work; he had had six months at that, and if he had cared for honest work outside prison walls it would have been difficult to find.

One, two, three months since Renshaw's sentence had expired, and Mr. Timpany began to imagine that he had forgotten his promise and to sleep soundly of nights. He even ventured occasionally to bring home valuable documents of title and securities in his black bag and to once more believe in the truth of the adage that an Englishman's house is his castle.

But, one night, while Mr. Timpany was wrapped in gentle sleep and his pajamas, a thin streak of white light glimmered for an instant along his back garden. Bendigo, who slept with one eye open, fancied he caught a glimpse of something that ought not to be and emitted a deep warning growl. Much to his surprise, as if by magic, a piece of saucy horseflesh, just sufficiently underdone to suit the palate of so dainty a canine epicure, fell within a yard of his nose. With the snorting growl that was his usual expression of delight, the bulldog rose and sniffed it; then he licked it, and it tasted even more savory than it smelled.

Bendigo bolted it, and seeing no more morsels lying about, turned to regain his kennel. But ere he could reach it, his limbs stiffened, and he rolled over without a groan—stone dead. A few minutes later a marvelous centerbit was running its way silently, but surely, through Mr. Timpany's iron shutters, just where a circular hole had been made without a sound in the window pane, by means of a glazier's diamond and a piece of paste-covered brown paper.

Before long the shutter had been quietly replaced, and Joe Renshaw was seated in the breakfast room, around which his bull's eye flashed was moving. The disc of light rested a moment on a small cabinet, the lock of which Mr. Renshaw leisurely proceeded to neatly pick.

"Tradesman's bills," he grunted, "all receipted; wot a spendthrift the chap must be, throwing away his money in paying accounts. Some folks never know the wally o' money. He earns his easier than I does."

Then, in his list shoes making not the slightest sound, he crept into a room which served Mr. Timpany for a kind of home office.

"This is better," chuckled the burglar, spying a safe in the corner; and, once again, the centerbit was called into operation.

But it was a tough job, and file and crowbar had to be brought into play, and Mr. Renshaw's brow was moist before the door showed the slightest signs of yielding.

"If I had the man as made this here," he growled, "he'd never make no more. The idea o' folks 'aving awkward furniture like this in their houses! It's only out of aggrivation to give people unnecessary trouble over their work."

But at last the hinges gave way to the brutal but silent attacks of the Jimmy where the file had bitten and gnawed, and Joe, quickly forcing the inner drawers, turned his bull's eye on the contents.

"Well," he said, and then he swore. "Arter all nothin' but a pile o' dirty parchment not worth a crown," and he angrily turned over the bundles of deeds which represented tens of thousands of pounds.

But as the last drawer slid open a chuckle escaped him. There lay a bundle of crisp bank of England notes which Mr. Timpany had received on the completion of a conveyancing matter after office hours, on behalf of his client, too late to pay into the bank.

Stuffing the notes into his pocket, he gathered up his tools and prepared to depart. To his great joy he saw upon the table a bottle of port wine and—a tumbler.

"Oh, ain't he kind," he soliloquized, "to perwidge refreshment as well as amusement? He might have left it in a tureen—an' really I don't like drinkin' port out of a tumbler. Reckon he's too thirsty for wine glasses, an' mops it up here on the qt."

Taking up the bottle, Mr. Renshaw placed it to his lips, and drank and drank—until he had drained it to the dregs.

Replacing the bottle on the table, he picked up his tools. He was a bit tired after his exertions, though he had not felt it so unmistakably as now.

He slid into a chair to rest for a moment. He felt quite sleepy. If there had been more than half a bottle of port he would have fancied he was drunk.

"This won't do," he muttered. "I must get back to the pony trap. Wasser marrer, so sleep-ee-ee-ee! Ahoo!" and he yawned loudly.

He essayed to ride, but could not. For a moment he felt a thrill of fright, but it died away in a deep and drowning slumber. His arms sank upon the table and his head between them.

There, five hours later, Mr. Timpany, trotting down in his dressing-gown, found him. For a moment he started, then he said,—

"My friend's a man of his word—I thought he was—though I began to give him up. To the glass bottles on the wall, the bull dog, electric bells, and the iron shutters all failed me. But my own idea, the drugged bottle of wine, which I left in this room ever since this gentleman's last sentence expired, has done its work admirably."

Then Mr. Timpany trotted up stairs for that patent alarm whistle, and woke up all the sleepers in that locality, except the burglar, who loyally for several hours more, and awoke to find himself seated on a hard deal board in a police station cell.

He is now commencing a term of twelve years' penal servitude, and his constant reflection is that it is "all through doing business with lawyers."—Waverly Magazine.

Rubies May be Cheap.

"A man came in here the other morning and took out a magnificent stone, which he put on the counter and asked me what I thought of it. Well, I thought it was a ruby worth about $700 or $800. The color was deep pigeon's blood, and while a magnifier showed little spots like bubbles in the stone, they didn't interfere with its transparency or brightness.

"What's it worth?" said I.

"Sixty dollars a carat," said he. I looked at him in amazement.

"Then it's paste," said I.

"Not a bit of it," said he. I tested it for hardness and it was all right. Then the man explained that, while it was a real ruby, it was produced by artificial means. A French chemist made it. Very few of these stones have come to this country, so far, and in most of those that have, there was no material that could be used for jewelry the crystals were so small. This puts a different phase on the business."

Artificial crystallization of alumina was accomplished several years ago. The color in the resulting mineral was superb, but the individual crystals were so minute that a microscope was needed to distinguish their angles. They were united by their bases to a crust of amorphous alumina, and sparkled like tiny red stars whenever the light played across them. The natural ruby doubtless took years, and very likely, centuries to form. The chemical ruby, which is made in a few weeks, is almost pure alumina.—New York Sun.

Dropping from the Clouds.

Robert V. V. Sewell, in the Artists' Association Series in The Century for April, describes his first and last balloon ascension.

It was in 1886 when Mr. Sewell was a student at the Academie Julian that he made his venture, taking advantage of a public ascension. When the artist and aeronaut entered the basket, the ropes were cast off.

We did not rise, and being informed that we must leave behind either a sand-bag or my heavy winter overcoat, I heroically sacrificed the latter. Standing in the basket, I tossed it to a friend, when, presto! he as well as the rest of the world sank out of sight. At that moment I sat down. I can still recall the howl of derision and delight which greeted this commonplace act.

The cries of the spectators were succeeded by a most profound silence, broken only by the fearsome creaking of the willow basket, as my companion leaned from side to side.

I was soon aware of another sound, to which my ears seemed slowly to become attuned—the low, muffled roar of the great city, which produced a continued note almost as pure as a musical tone, but lower in pitch than any note of the musical scale.

The barometer soon showed an elevation of half a mile, and, looking over the side of the car (I was still seated on the floor), I saw the whole of Paris pass beneath me—the public buildings, the Madeleine with its bright copper-green roof, the toy cathedral of Notre Dame on its little island. The distance was so great that all giddiness was gone, and the roar of the city was hushed. Throwing out much of our store of sand, we rose into great cumulus clouds.

The barometer indicated a height of two miles; the air had the pure but thin feeling of an Alpine mountain-top. There was no sight, no noise save the patter of the feet of two pigeons on the summit of the balloon. They had refused to leave us, and, after hovering like land-birds about a ship, had settled on our rigging.

In the utter silence of these heights the novice, awed by the sublimity of the situation, has no thought of danger. The vast, sightless, silent void in which the bubble hung self-poised impressed the mind with a sense, not of violence, but of calm. Yet danger there was, and that most imminent. Anxiously scanning the barometer, my companion announced that we were falling. Seizing a bag of tissue-papers, he threw a handful from the car. Instantly they disappeared, but above us. We were rushing down to the city at an angle of about forty-five degrees. Now the two pigeons left the balloon, and even this slight diminution of weight gave us a short respite. As we approached the earth we struck the ground breeze, which we saw would carry us nearly the entire length of the city. Quickly divesting ourselves of coats and waistcoats, we took a rapid inventory of the pitifully small remainder of ballast, with a view to keeping the airship aloft as long as possible.

To a novice who has ever gone down a toboggan-slide the horror of that rush over the spires and chimneys of the great city may be dimly shown if he can imagine his sensations increased a thousand-fold. Collision with buildings meant almost sure death, while the speed was so great that landing in a boulevard was an impossibility. The roar of one street as it grew distinct was quickly followed by the roar of the next, as the excited and interested Parisians watched our flight. Several times we avoided collision only by throwing out a coat, basket, or bottle, the balloon each time taking a slight bound, and clearing the obstacle.

Refused the Money.

The following odd incident is related of Conductor McKinney, who was employed many years ago upon a southern railroad:

One night in leaving Washington the conductor went as usual through the train to collect the fares. In one of the rear cars a passenger without a ticket handed him a bill. The conductor took it, glanced at it hastily and, seeing that it was of a large denomination, put it in his pocket, as conductors are apt to do, and informed the passenger that he would return with the change.

The purpose of delay was, of course, to afford the conductor an opportunity to examine the bill at his leisure in the baggage car to see if it was all right. When Mr. McKinney reached the baggage car and inspected the note he found to his astonishment that what he had taken for a $100 bill was a note for $1,000.

Of course the changing of a bill of such a denomination was out of the question. The conductor therefore passed back through the train to refund the money and obtain a smaller bill. When he had reached the car the passenger had shifted his seat. Going up to him, the conductor said that there was probably a mistake, as the bill given by him was for $1,000.

To his utter amazement the passenger disclaimed all knowledge of the bill. He had given a ticket, he said, and his seatmate confirmed the statement. The conductor expostulated, but the man was firm and could not be prevailed upon to accept the money.

Finally the conductor gave up in despair, not knowing whether he or the passenger was crazy, but inclined to the latter belief. At a station or two from Washington the passenger and his companion left the train and hastily disappeared. The next day Mr. McKinney handed in the bill to the company's office with an explanation.

The money was deposited on special account and the railroad officials awaited the coming of a claimant. Year after year passed, however, and no one ever turned up for the money, which in the meanwhile was steadily adding interest. Finally when Mr. McKinney retired from the service of the company the officials gave him the proceeds of the bill, which at interest then amounted to nearly $2,000.

No explanation was ever vouchsafed of the odd occurrence. The theory generally credited by the conductor and the railroad officials, however, was that the bill was given by mistake by some burglar, who upon discovering his error decided that it was safer to repudiate the transaction than to acknowledge the ownership of the money, the large amount of which he thought might render the conductor suspicious and lead to his arrest.—New York Herald.

Subjects for Thoughts.

All true manliness grows around a core of divineness.

Recreation is not the highest kind of enjoyment, but in its time and place is quite as proper as prayer.

Only as each man or woman performs his or her personal duty in any department of life can that department be lifted to a higher plane. The best of men who ever wore earth about him was a meek, patient, humble, tranquil spirit; the first true gentleman that ever breathed.

Great is he who enjoys his earthly reward as if he were plate, and not less great is the man to whom all his plate is no more than earthenware.

The fastidious taste will find offense in the occasional vulgarisms, or what we now call slang, which not a few of our writers seem to have effected.

Hath any wronged thee? he bravely revenged; slight it, and the work's begun; forgive, 'tis finished; he is below himself that is not above an injury.

There is in the human heart an inextinguishable instinct, the love of power, which, rightly directed, maintains all the majesty of law and life, and misdirected wrecks them.

The first duty toward children is to make them happy. If you have not made them happy you have wronged them; no other good they may get can make up for that.

When thy brother has lost all that he never had and lies languishing and even gasping, under the utmost extremities of poverty and distress, dost thou think to lick him whole again only with thy tongue?

If you want knowledge you must toil for it; if food, you must toil for it; if pleasure, you must toil for it. Toil is the law. Pleasure comes only through toil, and not by self-indulgence and indolence. When one gets to love his work his life is a happy one.

Springs are little things, but they are sources of large streams; a helm is a little thing, but it governs the course of a ship; a bridle-bit is a little thing but see its use and power; nails and pegs are little things, but they hold buildings together; a word, a look, a frown—all these are little things, but powerful for good or evil. Think of this, and mind the little things.

A Boy's Error

Going out hunting, a boy shot a bird, and another ran to secure the trophy. Coming near where it had fallen, he found a white owl, so sprawling in the grass as to present to his view only a head with staring eyes and a pair of wings attached. Instantly he shouted in dismay: "We're in for it now, Jack; we've shot a cherubim!"

About thirty people have united with the Dixboro M. E. church within the past few weeks.

At Wayne the young people will indulge in roller skating. The fad has never waned there.

Chelsea's first ice cream social of the season was a success. Ice cream seldom fails in succeeding.

The familiar Presbyterian bell, (of Milan) its nice, sweet notes again do well (it has been repaired.)

Mrs. John Nelson, of Manchester, aged 46 years, died April 13. She was a member of Comstock W. R. C.

Samuel Boyce is the superintendent of the Lyndon Sunday School, Miss Eva Leek secretary and A. J. Boyce treasurer.

A farewell social was given Rev. O. C. Bailey at the Town Hall, Chelsea, last evening. It was a pleasant affair.

A set of resolutions in the Chelsea Standard referred to "Almighty God," which probably has no reference to "I Gad."

Manchester township will pay woodchucks 15c, hawks 15c, crows 25c. There is a chance for the boys to make some 4th of July money.

The old building on the corner of County and Dexter sts., has been moved to the back end of the lot facing Dexter st. Look out for something to happen on that corner!—Milan Leader.

Burglars entered a Tecumseh meat market a few nights ago, but failed to find anything worth taking. Surely, a thief ought to find a steak in a meat market.—Hudson Post. Perhaps his teeth were poor.

Orla C. Gregory, of Dexter, the young man who planned and nearly executed successfully the Savings Bank robbery in that place, has been taken to St. Joseph's Retreat, at Dearborn. His mind is unbalanced.

The Epworth Leagues from Oakville and Azalia, will join with the London League in a union meeting at the London M. E. church on Sunday evening, April 29th. Miss Della Snell will lead the meeting.—Milan Leader.

The Wayne Review favors the division of Wayne county into two counties. The city to be a county by itself. In that event Wayne hopes to be the county seat, and flatters itself that it is in the center of what would compose the new county.

At a recent meeting of the Webster Farmers' Club, Mr. Wm. A. Nordman is reported as saying that he was unable to see the silver lining to the cloud that is overhanging the sheep industry. "The outlook," he said, "is far from bright. I would like to see the man who can raise wool at 10 cents a pound. We certainly can't compete with the Australian wool and the wool grown on the cheap lands of the west."

Fred B. Carr, son of James E. Carr, editor of the Dundee Reporter, was elected recorder of Dundee last week Monday, by 103 majority.

J. V. N. Gregory has received notice of his election to the presidency of the Bank of Perry, Oklahoma. The bank has a capital stock of $50,000 and is located in one of those brisk young western towns that has a great future before it.—Dexter Leader.

The village council of Saline, offers, free of charge, nice maple trees to all who will set them out in front of their premises, and, would you believe it? there are property owners, householders in fact, there who are too lazy to accept the offer! Raus mid'em.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Corey, of Manchester, had a golden wedding on the 17th inst., having been married 50 years on that date. Mr. Corey was 78 years old that day, and friends of the aged couple made the anniversary a happy and memorable one for them.

Our townsman, Thomas J. Farrell, has been in the livery business here nearly a quarter of a century, but he sold his barn and most of his livery stock to Chas. Kuhlenskamp of Freedom, on Monday. The deal represents upwards of $2,000.—Manchester Enterprise.

Harriet VanOrden asked the Chelsea council to pay her $5,000 for injuries which she received by falling through a defective sidewalk. The council didn't do it, but instructed the village attorney to fight the collection of it. Such a trifle as that shouldn't be fought over! A pultry $5,000! Just think of it!

The Pinckney Dispatch observes that a man who spits tobacco juice on the school room floor ought not to be allowed to vote at school meeting. True! Before being vested with the privileges of full citizenship, the great American hog should first be divested of his disgusting habits of filthiness.—Dexter Leader.

Some mischievous boys put a tic-tac on the door of the new clothing store in the Cheney block, and by the aid of a fish pole dropped some old rags in the chimney above, which caused a smoke that nearly suffocated the slumbering occupants before they could get to the door and ascertain the cause of the smoke.—Wayne Review.

A number of young maidens of the village are sighing for bicycles. They say that the boys spend their money for bicycles instead of livery horses, and they almost never get a ride.—Manchester Enterprise. The girls should remember that it is hard work to drive all the time, and offer to help them out, don't you know. Then perhaps the boys will come around for them oftener.

The Ledger has every reason to believe that the new council stands in favor of electric lights, and that in a short time Dundee will have taken a stride toward being modernized. We use the last word advisedly, because anyone must acknowledge that the absence of electric lights have long been a detriment and an injury to the advancement of our village to the rank warranted by her population and location. Let us have our streets and business houses lighted by electricity, and then, if the most veritable old moss-back doesn't acknowledge an improvement, he may have out hat for a foot ball.—Dundee Ledger.

It isn't necessary to state that the Adrian Press man wrote this paragraph, for it has his unmistakable ear marks: "He that runneth with patience the race that is set before him, the same is sure to be at last rewarded. Now there is Gus Peters, the populist of Scio,—he missed election for congress, but he did not sit down and suck his thumbs—not he. He was willing to accept anything from congressmen to corduroy pantaloons, and this spring finds him the proudly triumphant choice of Scio, for member of board of review. It is the steady pulling on the hair that puts the insect in the fire."

This amusing little story comes from Fenton. In that nice little city in northwest Oakland, lives a blue eyed damsel whose mouth is abnormally large. It is the custom of the maiden to sleep with a horse shoe under her pillow, imagining that it brings her luck. The other night she went to bed with the horse shoe in its accustomed place. Before she went to sleep she removed her false teeth and placed them beside the shoe. The next morning she put the horse shoe in her mouth and did not discover the mistake for two days.—Northville Record. Don't believe the story. Fenton is noted for having the prettiest girls of any place in Central Michigan.

The Dexter Leader comes to the rescue of the girls in this way: "A man who goes to see a girl twice a week and takes her to places, is legally engaged to her, according to a recent decision, whether he says anything to about marriage or not, and she can recover suit for breach of promise. We hope the girls will take advantage of this decision and force the young men to marry them. Young men have a habit of loafing about a girl's house for years and then drifting off without saying a word about marriage. While a young man is loafing around a girl's house he probably keeps some one away who would talk business."

Death of a Former Ann Arbor Boy.

The following notice of the death of James Herman Wagner, formerly of this city, is taken from the Plainwell Enterprise, of April 18:

"It is with a deep sense of personal loss that we announce to our readers this week, the demise of James H. Wagner, senior member of the firm of J. H. Wagner & Bro. His health had not been good for several years, and the last sickness, of Bright's disease, was of many months duration, during which it was understood that the end might come at any time, but to no one is ever really prepared for the death of a friend, and the sad news always comes as a painful shock. The deeper the friendship, the more will one hope when even hope gives no encouragement.

"For two weeks past his physician has said that his hours were numbered, and at ten o'clock Monday forenoon he breathed his last. He died surrounded by his relatives and friends.

"Herman, for it was by that name his friends knew him, was between 39 and 40 years of age, and unmarried. His birthplace was Ann Arbor, where his aged parents yet reside. He has always, as far as we are informed, been engaged in the mercantile business, first as clerk and afterwards as head of a concern. In 1877 he, in company with his surviving brother, opened a dry goods store in this village—in what is now the opera house block. By their vigor, foresight and by so conducting their business as to win the confidence of the people, a large trade was built up. In a few years the firm bought the fine three-story brick block on the corner of Main and Bridge streets, and moved their stock there, uniting it with another already in the building. They also started a clothing store, of which John D. Wagner took charge Herman overseeing the drygoods branch. Under his wise management the business grew to such a magnitude that there were only one or two larger houses in the county. In March, 1889, the dry goods store was sold and the deceased has not since engaged actively in business, though still retaining his interest in the clothing store that bears his name. His health was then failing and he spent some time in travel, visiting California, Colorado, Florida and other parts of the south and west.

"During the 17 years that he has been identified with the business interests of Plainwell, he has been highly respected by all who knew him for his sterling manhood, unimpeachable honor and genial disposition. His fellow citizens have several times shown their trust in him by choosing him to offices in the public service and private corporations and societies. He was prominent in both Masonic and Odd Fellows' lodges of the village. An unusually large number of friends will follow him in spirit to his distant burial place while mourning sincerely his loss.

"The deceased leaves a father (84 years old) and mother (81), one brother, John D. Wagner, of this village, a half-brother and half-sister.

Death Finally Overtook Old Sam.

Old Sam Wooster has passed over to the majority and will never be seen more about our streets. He was a queer character, evidently lost to all pride or sense of refinement, and roamed about this and adjoining counties, making his headquarters for many years at the Livingston county poor house, where he died recently, having burdened the world with his presence for 90 years. He had been in this and adjacent counties as far back as the memory of the oldest inhabitant extends and was probably known to more people than any other man who had abode among us. He was once a bright young man, well educated, of good intellect, but there is a tradition that disappointment in love in early life made him despondent and for all those years he has led the life of a tramp.

The Ypsilanti Commercial has this to say of the new telephone exchange which is being put in in that city: "The automatic telephone exchange receives a hearty welcome from the people here who have long tired of the extortions of the Bell telephone interest. The exchange will be in operation in a short time, and Ypsilanti will be the initial point of operation in this state. Ann Arbor will be speedily included in the same exchange, and it is intimated that we may ultimately have Detroit on the same terms. It is a wonderful thing, that a subscriber may go to his instrument and ring the number of any subscriber, and so come instantly into communication with that subscriber and with no one else, without the intervention of any operator, the whole operation being entirely automatic, and no central office, more than a self-acting switch board, being required. The rentals are a third lower than those of the old line."

May Festival.

The following notices refer to one of the soprano soloists, who is to appear in the grand concert to be given by the Choral Union, in University Hall, May 18th and 19th next.

MISS ROSE STEWART,
BLENDING the American and European in her studies and career, has been enabled to win commendations for her vocal abilities from the very highest sources. Her triumphs abroad have been testified to by the critics of the press in Paris, Leipzig, and other centres. She has received enthusiastic plaudits from Liszt, Rubenstein, Verdi, Saint-Seans, and many other masters. Gerster and Nevada, among her sister vocalists, have gladly joined in acknowledging her merits. Miss Stewart's musical studies were completed in Paris with Mr. Marchesi, whom Patti has called the best teacher of singing in the world. So brilliant a European reputation is but prophecy of equal success in America.

See the following notices:
The soprano soloist of the afternoon, Miss Rose Stewart, sang first a display piece with flute obligato, in which her clear tones and flexible execution were put into sharp competition with the notes and trills of the flute. Few voices could stand such a comparison, either in the matter of melody or facility; but the fairy soloist—for such the little woman seemed—bettered the flute at every point, suffering not at all by the comparison.—Springfield Daily Union, May 7, 1891.

At the Marchesi concert, in Salle Erard, last evening, Miss Rose Stewart achieved a great artistic triumph. Her beautiful voice, which she has under the most perfect control, fairly played with the difficulties of the mad scene from Lucia.—Paris Figaro.
