Considerable excitement has been created in Exeter township, Monroe county, by the reopening of the Gierman case. A year ago Henry Gierman, township treasurer of Exeter, was robbed and his wife shot dead in bed. An effort was made Monday to reimburse him for the amount of which he was robbed. This failing, a resolution was adopted offering a reward of $1,000 for the conviction of the murderer. This action it is said will be legalized by the township board at its first meeting.

Roland I. Bell died at his home in Dexter village, March 29th, aged 94. He came to Lima to live in 1846. He had been married three times, and leaves a wife and nine children.

What? Republican? Manchester republican? Well, where am I? Shades of the immortal hickory Jackson, what's the matter with Manchester? One of our local nimrods while duck hunting recently saw a whole band of mallards in a cove on Vineyard lake. He crawled a half mile on his hands and knees to get a good shot, and blazed away, but not a duck or a feather flew. The decoys were there for the day.—Enterprise.

The codling moth has made its appearance now, that the frost is coming out of the ground. The best way to catch them as well as customers, is to use printers' ink. Girdle the tree with ink, it is better than tar.—Enterprise.

Those who are in a position to know claim that it has been several years since the Dexter merchants did as good a business as they are doing this spring.—Leader.

S. E. Woodworth, of Battle Creek, writing to the Grange Visitor says: "In regard to the wide tired wagon I have used one on the farm for twenty-two years. Fourteen years ago I had all my lumber wagons made over into four inch tires and have used them ever since. I consider them a great benefit to both farm and road. I can draw fully one-third more on a wide than on a narrow tire, and it is less work for the team. If all farmers would use the wide tire wagon it would not cost one-quarter what it does now to keep the roads in repair. I would exempt the four-inch tire from one-half of the road tax, the six-inch tire from all road tax. I believe there ought to be a law passed to compel people to use the wide tired wagon."

Herbert are expected here next week to put in the foundation for the Soldiers' Monument. By the way, where is the best place for it? Wouldn't it be a fine thing if ground for it could be had in the orchard just east of the Grand Army lot, which must some day be added to the cemetery, and where an entrance would naturally be? Then it would be in front of the lot and in view of such entrance. When the monument is located the time to locate it right.

The codling moth, which is so injurious to the apple crop throughout the state, has already made its appearance in the vicinity of Flushing. Farmers there are not worrying over what to do, as they are catching them as fast as they make their appearance. They have girdled every tree with printer's ink, and when the female comes out of the ground and crawls up the body of the tree she gets caught in the ink and is killed. The ink is not injurious to the tree, like tar is. The moth makes its appearance as soon as the ground begins to thaw.

A BARBAROUS CUSTOM. And One That Should Be Speedily and Good Naturedly Dropped.

Perhaps I am over fastidious, but I believe I voice the sentiment of the average citizen of Ann Arbor when I say that a custom among market-men prevails, which is extremely disgusting and barbarous; I refer to the display of slaughtered animals in front of their places of business.

Washington street is destined to be the most attractive street of our city; it already has many fine fronts and windows than any other thoroughfare here, but it is made unclean and repulsive, nearly every day by the dead bodies of headless calves; hidden sheep dangling with heads and hides on, with throats cut and blood dripping from the wound and their mouths. This is certainly never seen in other cities, and would not be allowed there. The writer has often heard visitors remark on this, as being to say the least, in very bad taste on the part of the business men. I contend it has a bad effect upon children, the tendency being to make them cruel; and the sickening sight of such a display, does not arouse pleasant emotions, nor is it appetizing. In the interests of humanity, and our city, will the editor please insert this article, and lend his influence to uphold the refining side of life. Market-men, make your viands tempting, by clean and tasteful windows; take your meats in at the rear door, and have no air of the slaughter-house about your business.

FION. A Curious Case.

The late Henry Osborne who was buried yesterday, had a younger brother committed to the insane asylum, at Brattleboro, Vermont, being sent there about fifty years ago, by his father before there were any asylums of the kind in the western states. Henry Osborne, after the father's death, maintained his brother there at an expense of several hundred dollars per year, until he failed in business some three or four years ago, when he was unable to longer pay for the keeping.

The case is a curious one, and the Vermont authorities are in quandary over what to do with the patient. He has been in the asylum about fifty years, being sent there before he was twenty-one years of age. After his brother failed and could no longer pay for his care, then he became a public charge, but to what county? that was the question. The boy had no residence here because he left here before becoming of age, and being an inmate of an asylum he could gain no residence there. The attorney general of Vermont has been taking the case under advisement, but what decision he has come to is not known. The authorities there dare not send him here without authority to do so, as that is a serious offense.

Judge Harriman who is familiar with the case, and a Vermonter also, thinks that the patient will eventually be sent here as a county charge. He thinks, however, the Vermont authorities will present a bill for Osborne's keeping, to the board of supervisors here, and in that amicable way get a decision from the courts as to who shall care for the patient.

It is a rare case, a similar one, it is said, never having been known in our courts of law.

Peach Yellows and Black Knot

Mr. J. Ganzhorn, one of the peach yellows and black knot commissioners has gone through the city the past few weeks to inspect plum and cherry trees for the disease known as black knot; and as a result has found the disease at 381 different places. Nine hundred and eighty-five plum trees were affected with the disease, more or less. Some of them were so far gone that the whole tree had to be cut down. When taken in time the tree can be saved by taking out such branches that show the disease. When left to spread, about three years will use up the entire tree. The black knot is just beginning to develop on cherry trees. Mr. Ganzhorn found 296 trees already affected with the disease. The law requires the commissioners to see that these black knots are removed in cases where the owners neglect to do it themselves, but in such cases there will be some expense to the owners. Every good and law-abiding citizen will comply with the instructions of the commissioners; it is for their own good and benefit. No one desires that fruit culture should go down. It is a valuable industry but it cannot be maintained in the future unless destructive diseases are kept down. A combined effort will accomplish much to this end.

Death of Henry Osborne.

Henry Osborne, known all over this section as the man who built Osborne's Mills, on the Huron river, a few miles west of Ann Arbor, died this morning at 5 o'clock, with pneumonia. He had been ill, however, for a long time, and was an easy victim of the dread disease that took away his life.

Mr. Osborne was born in New York Feb. 2, 1822, consequently had just passed his 73d birthday. He received his education in his native state, removing to this county in 1837, and immediately erected the mills that have always borne his name. In '54 Mr. Osborne married Miss Catharine Casement, a native of the Isle of Man, of English descent and had one daughter who now resides in Detroit.

The funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence.

Mr. Osborne has been one of the prominent men of the county, and one who has always been highly thought of, his sturdy honesty commanding for him, even in business reverses, the greatest respect of everybody. The county loses one of its most famous pioneers in his death, and his family a kind and loving husband and father.

The contest over the will of the late Zachary Roath has been discontinued in the probate court, and John R. Miner has been appointed administrator of the estate.

Titus Hutzel is moving his family into the residence of E. K. Frueauff next door on W. Huron st., preparatory to erecting a new residence for himself, on his lot.

Hon. John F. Lawrence proposes to make the city a present of a lot in Lawrence's addition, 7th ward, on which to erect a building to be used for ward purposes, caucuses, meetings registration, election, etc.

Supervisor Donnelly of the 4th ward walks with a more majestic tread now that he represents his constituents in the county legislature. It is expected that his laugh will win the votes of the country members.

Up in Chicago the people voted the republican ticket so numerously that the majorities are liable to be rolling up for a week or ten days yet. The cigarette habit is becoming an unbearable nuisance, every little boy and a good share of the big ones, that one meets on the street has one of these deadly little rolls of tobacco in their mouth. It is acknowledged by every one that they are injurious to both health and mind, and if people choose to smoke them it is their own lookout, but they should go out in the alley or some other byplace and not compel people who come into stores and other places to inhale the villainous smell which comes from the smoke of these things. There is a cigarette law in this state that boys under 18 cannot buy them. Why not enforce it, 't would help some.—Eaton Rapids Herald.

The salary amendment never should have been submitted at a time when the country is so depressed in a business way. It was unfortunate. The salaries should be higher. There is no question about that, but this was not the time to ask the people for a raise. When the country is prospering then there may be some hope for favorable action thereon, but not when it is clear down at the heel. Our friends at Lansing were warned that the amendment would be snowed under, and what is more unfortunate for the people of Lansing and Ingham county, the amendment to give them another circuit judge has gone down with it. At least it looks that way. Had that been submitted alone it would have carried without the least doubt.

The card of thanks custom will soon be a reminiscence. A Milwaukee paper has referred to it as "a peculiarity of the people of little country towns to publish cards of thanks in the local paper after any bereavement, the notice being made to include all who contributed in any way to the alleviation of their misfortune. The Milwaukee paper ironically refers to one recent notice found in a country paper in which the undertaker was thanked for the prompt and satisfactory performance of his duties. The absurd practice of writing and requesting the publication of poor and almost meaningless verses in connection with the announcement of a death, is also related to the card-of-thanks inflection and is referred to as a country custom that designation will bring both customs to a sudden end. That which remonstrances and advice from newspaper editors could not do will be done by the reference to "country town peculiarities."—Cadillac News and Express.

China will undoubtedly be a large purchaser of silver after the war ends. This is one of the reasons why that metal is advancing, and another reason is the general improvement in business. There is a chance that the increased prices will lead to increased production, in which case another drop may take place.

A recent writer suggests that if there is anything in the law of averages or historical precedents, it is about time for the United States to have another war. The average period between wars heretofore has been about twenty-five years, and thirty years have now passed since the civil war. Never before in our history, that is to say, has there been so long a period of profound peace as the one through which we are now passing; and if history is going to repeat itself, a war must soon ensue.

China has succeeded in inducing a nation one-tenth as large to grant an armistice, pending the conclusion of a peace which is certain to give Japan money, lands, and ships which formerly were Chinese. It is only about eight months ago that the Emperor of China, the "Son of Heaven," who is too wonderful and mighty a potentate to be seen by ordinary mortals, commanded his generals and viceroys to expel the "pestilential pigmies," as he styled the little islanders, from Corea. Seldom in history have arrogance and vain self-confidence been changed more suddenly and completely to fear and defeat and abject supplication for mercy.

The announcement that the sales agents of the little group of companies which control the production of anthracite coal in this country have decided to limit the output of the mines for April to one-half of the ordinary June production, may not mean as much as it appears to on the surface. These regulators of a great monopoly meet and agree to pluck the public in certain ways but it usually turns out that the conditions fixed for the anthracite coal industry are not observed, and that there is more coal and cheaper coal for the masses than there could be if all the monopolists did as they pledge themselves to do. One thing which mitigates the evils of monopoly, strange to say, is the slipperiness of many of the monopolists, and their disloyalty to one another. Their "understandings among gentlemen" are sometimes very weak and useless compacts, fortunately for the public.

The famous case of Mrs. Florence E. Maybrick which created so much interest in England and this country some years ago, is being again agitated by friends who believe the woman innocent, and there are thousands who do, and another appeal is being made for a new trial. There was not evidence enough to convict any one brought out in the first trial, and it was only the prejudice of the infirm and enfeebled old judge who soon after was obliged to retire because of imbecility, and the other members of the court, that ever convicted her. No American court would ever have convicted on the evidence presented by the crown's attorneys. It was a conspiracy by the family of Mr. Maybrick to prevent his wife, who is an American, from receiving the benefit of his property. There is evidence upon evidence to prove that Maybrick took arsenic continually as a tonic, he sprinkled it upon his bread the same as pepper, and if he died by slow poison, he died by his own hand. And yet the woman who became his wife, an American woman, is slowly dying in an English prison, accused of poisoning him. How will such fearful wrongs as this ever be righted?

STATE LABOR STATISTICS.

Interesting Facts from the Annual Report of the State Labor Commissioner, Chas. H. Morse.

The report of the state commissioner of labor, Chas. H. Morse, has just come to hand. It contains a great deal of interesting and valuable information. It treats largely of farm labor and farm interests, although various other economic questions are treated. Part one of the volume is devoted to statistics relative to male farm laborers. Part two is taken up with facts relative to domestics. Part three is composed mainly of statistics gathered from farm proprietors. Part four is devoted to miscellaneous agricultural statistics gleaned from the United States and state censuses. Part five treats of local strikes including the one at Ironwood and that of the A. R. U. From the standpoint of the A. R. U., J. W. Bryce, of Battle Creek, has given a history of the strike. The general managers of the state give their side of the controversy. In part six is devoted to statistics and deductions relative to prison labor.

Part one reveals the fact that there were 5600 from farm laborers canvassed and they were scattered over all the counties of the lower peninsula. Among those canvassed, 57 per cent. were American born; 13 per cent., German, less than 3 per cent. English, about the same Canadian; Irish, 3 per cent.; other nationalities, 12 per cent. The average age was 30.6 years; 2,468 were married, 2,964 single, 148 widowed. Five hundred and forty-three families had no children; 1,945 had children. Average number of children per family, 2.6. Total number supported by the 5,600, 13,156.

The average wages of those working by the day was 92 cents; of those working by the month, $17.84. A large number of those included had extra compensation in the way of house rent, fuel, etc.

There were 3,568 who reported decrease in wages during the past year, and 3,395 reported a decrease during the past five years. The average per cent. of decrease during the past year was 13 per cent.; during the past five years, 15.7 per cent. Two hundred and forty reported increase in wages during the past year, 335 during the past five years. The average rate of increase during the past year being 9.3 per cent.; during the past five years, 13.4.

The average yearly earnings for the 5,600 was $181.85; 2,284 say they cannot earn enough to support their families; 2,572 report that they did not save any money during the past year.

Two hundred and sixty-eight report an increase in the cost of living during the past year, the per cent. of increase being 9.1; 1,592 reported an average decrease in the cost of living during the past year of 10.7 per cent.; 4,532 report harder times than one year ago; 3,901 do not own their own homes, 531 of them being encumbered, with an average per cent. of 6.6 paid on the incumbrance. 3,466 say that immigration injures their present occupation, 1529 say that it does not. 1099 say conditions are better here than their native land, 337 say they are not. 3,298 do not belong to any fraternal organization, only 828 do belong to such societies.

DOMESTIC LABOR. Two thousand three hundred domestic laborers were canvassed, 62 per cent of them being American born. The average age is 23.3 years, some being 14, others being 70. The average wages of those working by the week is $1.85; of those working by the day 59 cents. Only 9 per cent say that they receive extras beyond their regular wages.

THE FIGURES.

The Board of County Canvassers Declare the County Republican.

The board of canvassers met at the court house today and canvassed the votes polled in the various precincts of the county last Monday.

The footings of the various officers, are as follows, the first mentioned in each instance being republican, the next democrat:

WATCH THE RECORD.

It is well that Americans should keep before them the facts concerning our imports of foreign goods, comparing their values under the McKinley Tariff with their values as now received under the Gorman Tariff. We reproduce the totals for each month at New York City, as far as the record goes:

Table with columns for months (September, October, November, December) and years (1893, 1894, 1895) showing values in dollars.

New York's Free-Trade Increase. $40,608,515. During six months of the Gorman Tariff, New York's imports of foreign goods exceeded $232,000,000; during the corresponding six months a year earlier they were less than $192,000,000. The increase under the Free-Trade Tariff at New York City alone was $40,608,515 for half a year only, or at the rate of over $81,200,000 a year. Every dollar increase represents less work for American labor.

THE STATE IS VERY POOR.

Lots of Places for Money and Not Much Cash on Hand.

Secretary Wade has returned from his visit to Lansing, where he appeared before the ways and means committee of the house and argued the cause of the University. He says it is hard to say when the committee will act upon the bill. "We found the committee not entirely animated by a spirit of hostility toward the University," he said. "There are two sides to the matter. They look at it in this way. There are requests now before the committee for $4,000,000 in appropriations. That some of the bills must be cut is quite evident. The amounts asked are twice what the legislature has been called upon for in the past few years. The Normal school appropriation was cut below its usual amount and they were refused an appropriation of $30,000 for the establishment of a manual training school. The mining school appropriation was also cut, and as we are not only asking for our regular amount but a good deal more, you can easily see how they feel towards us.

"The real state of the case is that the state treasury is empty. The Winans' administration received federal monies amounting to $400,000 and by putting this in the general fund the rate of taxes was lowered. Each succeeding administration has been forced to keep somewhere near the rate of that administration, with the result that the treasury is almost always depleted. Our second installment for this year came in yesterday overdue and the first was paid only three weeks before, long overdue. The reason is that the auditor general can not get the money from the treasury. When I was in Lansing and in the auditor general's office, he showed me requisitions for over $100,000 and there was only $33,000 in the state coffers to meet it. You can see some reason for the legislature's cry for economy even toward an institution like this."

Of Wonderful Value, and Free.

Tired bodies, pale and sunken cheeks, haggard eyes, sleepless nights and weak nerves, are ruining our lives and killing our people. No wonder these poor sufferers bless Dr. Greene for his great offer. He is the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, and the discoverer of that wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. He has established a system of letter correspondence at his office, 35 West 14th St. New York City, by which all can write him about their complaints, and by mentioning the symptoms they suffer from and telling him how they feel, they will receive an answer from him, free of charge, giving a complete description of their case and telling just what ails them. He gives most careful attention to every letter, tells just what to do to be cured perfectly and permanently, and makes all understand exactly what their complaint is. And all this costs nothing. No journey to the city, no doctor's fee, the best medical advice and consultation in the world, and nothing to pay. The doctor makes a specialty of treating patients through letter correspondence, and it is successful. Write him at once, reader, and you will almost certainly be made strong and well.

Wonderful Progress. "It is wonderful what progress has been made in the way of machinery," remarked Mr. Figg. "I see that there has been a machine invented that can make a complete pair of shoes in sixteen minutes. Why, that is even faster than Tommy can wear them out."—Indianapolis Journal.

NO NEED OF IT.

Homes Filled With Weak and Nervous. No Need to Feel so Weak, Tired and Nervous.

Eminent Physicians Give Assurance of this Fact.

And Tell How to Overcome this Terrible Weakness.

Now is the Best Time to Get Strong and Well.

That there is no need whatever for a person to be weak, tired nervous—the three great curses of our people—seems now a certain fact.

Eminent physicians affirm the truth of this welcome news, and ample proofs demonstrate the reliability of the information we are able so gladly to give.

It is certainly a godsend to those of our people who have weak nerves and tired bodies, who feel exhausted in strength and vitality, who cannot eat or sleep well, and who are run down and debilitated, to know positively that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is a sure invigorator and strength giver, and will invariably make a person strong and well. Particularly is it a blessing at this time of year, for in the spring almost everybody feels languid, nervous and out of order and needs this best of all spring medicines.

Doctors are enthusiastic in their approval and endorsement of this remedy. They heartily recommend and advise its use, and many of our best known physicians are loud in their praise of its wonderful curative powers.

Dr. B. D. Bickford, of Wolcott, Vt., one of Vermont's eminent physicians, states: "I have used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy for some time, first trying it on myself, and I found it did me so much good that I now recommend it to my patients. The fact that I have used it in my own case shows that I know what I am talking about. As a tonic and invigorant it is the best of all to build up a person."

Dr. Robert W. Lance, of So. Woodbury, Vt., than whom there is no more eminent physician in the State of Vermont, says: "I have known about Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and the good results in cases, as a tonic, after hard sickness and the cure of nervous females. They have received great good from its use. I do not hesitate to recommend it."

Dr. Willard H. Morse, F. B. S. Sc. of Westfield, N. J., the great expert on medicines, says of this grand discovery of Dr. Greene: "The true remedy for nervous diseases is Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and nerve remedy. It acts by affecting the organs of nutrition, and entering into the formation of new nerve tissue, which generates nerve force. This means the making of new nerves. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is the American nerve tonic."

The well-known Dr. Emil Neumer, superintending physician of the N. Y. Lodge and Association Hospital states: "We are using Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy at this Hospital for our patients, with good success."

This enthusiastic endorsement by physicians, stamps this remarkable medical discovery as the greatest tonic and restorative of nutrition, and entering into the formation of new nerve tissue, which generates nerve force. This means the making of new nerves. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is the American nerve tonic. In fact it makes all who take it strong and well. One reason which gives the people so much confidence in it is the fact that it is the discovery and prescription of Dr. Greene, of 35 W. 14th St., New York City, the well-known and probably most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, and to the further fact that he can be consulted free of charge by anyone, personally or by letter.

Hutzel's Water Back!

A very important invention which will be hailed with delight by every body using a stove or range for hot water circulation. After years of experience we have succeeded in producing a simple and perfect WATER BACK.

It overcomes all the present troubles of extracting lime and other sediments which accumulate in water backs, often making them useless and in great many instances becoming dangerous.

The outlay of dollars is reduced to dimes. No household using a range can afford to be without it.

No more trouble by using city water for hot water circulation.

Can be used in any stove. Ask your stove dealer for Hutzel's Water Back.

Mason & Davis Co's. ranges for sale at C. Eberbach are provided with our improvement.

Everybody call and examine this useful invention.

The sermon of Rev. C. M. Coburn, at the M. E. church Sunday eve. in answer to Robert G. Ingersoll, was a fine thing. Mr. Ingersoll ought to have heard it. If he had done so, it is altogether probable, as an honest man, he would revise some of the statements he makes, and get them nearer the truth. Dr. Coburn proved his ground by facts that are so well known that they ought to have come to the ears of Mr. Ingersoll before he wrote or formulated his lecture.

It is a pleasure to be able to state that the High School secret societies have taken the sensible and wise course and have resolved to disband.

in regard to the members of these so-rules of the school, and testing in the courts the right of the school board to pass such rules and regulations as might in its judgment be deemed best for the government of the schools, came from those who liked to talk,

and not from the members of the societies themselves. The high school will certainly be benefited, and the standard of scholarship elevated by the new rules, and by the dismemberment of the societies.

When the democrats first got control of the council some years ago, the Courier put in a bid for printing
the city reports and all work needed,
which was lower than any other bid,
but its representative was informed that if the Courier would agree to do the work for nothing it could not have the job, "for," said the official
"to the victors belong the spoils," and he asserted that a democratic office should have the work as long as the democrats held the majority in the council and he proved a true prophet. But when republicans get control of affairs then all work goes to the lowest bidder.

This item from the last Hillsdale to some of our readers: "Will Alford, the cripple, who ran a popcorn

Thursday enroute to his home in Allen. He is now able to walk squarely on the bottoms of his feet and the transformation that has taken place under the direction of Prof. Nacrede of the University, seems indeed remarkable. The professor pronounces that in the course of time he may discard the crutches and walk only with a cane or perhaps even without the feet have been straightened without the cutting of a bone. The entire cost of the treatment has been ferent dates of money, and the price

A FEMINE PROBLEM.

There were just two,
As neighbors knew,
Both fair into the slight;
Each had such grace
Of form and face
That compliments seemed trite.

Each had a chance
And learned to dance,
And also learned to play.
When either sang,
Her praises rang,
And man would each obey.

But one could speak
And fame would seek—
The other learned to sew.
The first one wrote
Some works of note—
The other liked a beau.

One talked at length
Of woman's strength,
The place that she now took;
But that was a right
The other thought—
She could reel the cook.

One learned the tricks
Of politics—
In that way sought her fame.
While she would roam
To make a home
Was all the other's aim.

With virtues rare
Each maiden fair
Was started, as here said,
Now which, think you—
Pray answer true—
Which one was sooner a wife?

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J.
Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract:
"I have no hesitation in recommend-results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pas-results." Trial bottles free at Eber-distressing nervous symptoms from which so many suffer.

Dear Sir—I began taking your "Favor-

said I got along un-

We think it saved me

done a world of good for me.

The way our friends, the enemy,
shout over the election of Mr. Walker, one would think they had done something wonderful. When the democrats did the same thing by Mr. Walk-democrats didn't crow a bit. It wasn't wonderful, at all. "Things has changed," since then.

A little bit of law will not come amiss just now, as the fishermen are anxious for a job at the big fellows going up stream. Here it is: "That it is unlawful for any person to take, catch or kill any fish in any inland stream or lake, with any kind of spear or grab hook, or by the use of jacks or artificial light of any kind, or by the use of set lines, under a penalty of a fine of $25 and costs or imprisonment in the county jail for 30 days or both." Under this law anybody may make the complaint.

Do you remember, says an exchange how pleased you used to be when your parents called at the school you were attending? Do you remember how you would study so as to be sure of a perfect lesson when your class was called on to recite before your father and mother? Well, you have children of your own now, who are attending school. Have you ever thought of visiting the school where your boys and girls attend? Remember the pupils of to-day are as well pleased to have their parents visit them as you were in your school days, and besides it encourages them to do better work and also convinces the teacher that you are interested in the work.

THE BEST IN THE LAND.

That is Dean Hutchins' Opinion of the New Three Year Course.

Dean-Elect H. B. Hutchins, of Cornell, is in the city making arrangements for the law department work of next year and putting the three years' course in shape. A meeting of the law faculty was held last night to discuss Dean Hutchins' plan for the three years' course. The result was the adoption of his plan, with but few amendments. The graduate work of the department will be continued as under the two years course, and with practically the same work. Prof. Hutchins declares that with the new course Michigan will easily have the leading law school of the country.

The first year's course will include: Elementary law, two hours a week; elementary real property, two hours, under Prof. Hutchins; contracts, three hours, Prof. Knowlton, first semester, and Prof. Johnson with text book in second semester; Torts, two hours, Prof. Champlin; Domestic Relations, two hours, Prof. Angell; Husband and wife, two hours, Prof. Kirchner; Personal property, one hour, Prof. Griffin; Common law pleading, one hour. This will give the first year student, in lecture and text book work, twelve hours a week, during the first semester and thirteen during the second. In addition, he will have work with the quiz-masters, which will amount to two hours more.

The second year's work will include: Agency, two hours, Prof. Mechem; Partnership, two hours, Prof. Mechem; Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes, two hours, Mr. Johnson; Bailments and Carriers, two hours, Prof. Knowlton; Civil pleading and procedure at Common law, two hours, Prof. Griffin; Code Pleading, two hours, Prof. Johnson; Real Property, including Fixtures and Easements and Landlord and Tenant, two hours, Prof. Thompson; Equity Jurisprudence, two hours, Prof. Hutchins; Equity pleading and Procedure, two hours, Prof. Thompson; Corporations, two hours; Evidence, two hours, Prof. Griffin. This will give the second year student twelve hours a week and two hours additional quizmaster work.

The third year's work includes: Constitutional Law, two hours, Prof. Angell; Corporations, two hours, Prof. Champlin; Jurisprudence of the U. S., one hour, Prof. Griffin; Damages, two hours, Prof. Mechem; Extraordinary Legal Remedies, two hours, Mr. Johnson; Equity Jurisprudence, two hours, Prof. Hutchins; Wills and Administration, two hours, Prof. Mechem; Private International Law, two hours, Prof. Kirchner; Evidence, one hour; Assignments for the benefit of creditors and Fraudulent Conveyances, one hour, Prof. Knowlton; Suretyship and Mortgage, two hours, Prof. Thompson; The Science of Jurisprudence, two hours, Prof. Mechem. This will give the third year student in lecture and text book work, twelve hours a week. In addition he will have two hours of quiz work. The non-resident lectures, provided primarily for the post graduates will be open to seniors as under the present scheme.

This scheme includes a great deal of new work and it is without doubt true that Prof. Hutchins is right when he declares that the law course under this schedule will be the best one in the country.

The plan of having each subject end with the semester was adopted. "This plan," says Dean Hutchins, "has its advantages; but if it should be found to incommode the non-resident professors, an exception as to their subjects could be made. I think it would be well to set aside a week at the end of each semester for thorough written examinations upon all the work of the semester." The latter suggestion was also adopted by the faculty. Under the new scheme one additional resident lecturer will be necessary.

BIG CO-ED MASS MEETING.

Every co-ed in the University who could be on hand was present at the mass meeting Saturday in the gymnasium to discuss the best means for raising the needed $15,000 to complete their gymnasium. Addresses were made by Miss Winifred Craine, president of the Woman's League, Mrs. H. S. Carhart, Dr. Fitzgerald and President Angell. If the amount of money to be raised depends upon the amount of enthusiasm generated Saturday there will be a great deal more than the $15,000 raised. The co-eds, under the direction of the Woman's League, are going to campaign the state for cash. Subscription blanks have been arranged for beneficent people to fill out and the amounts required to be put down may vary from one to $10,000. Higher amounts will be taken under advisement. Already, without solicitation, $125 has come in for the cause.

ATHLETES ELECT OFFICERS.

At the Athletic association election this afternoon the following officers were elected: President, James H. Prentiss '95 lit; vice president, Harry Y. Saint, '96 lit; financial secretary, John Condon, '95 lit; recording secretary, Marquis B. Eaton, '97 lit; treasurer, Walter Fritz, '95 lit; Board of directors, McCa-ley, medic, and Chas. Baird '95 lit. The following were elected: Holbrooke, Richards, Shields, Henninger, LeRoy, Bourland and Calkins. A few slight changes to the constitution were made and the retiring treasurer's report was read. The association had a cash balance April 5 of $1013.17. The receipts amounting to $5613.17 are divided as follows: Membership fees $990, subscriptions $180, Glee club benefit $130, Game receipts $4100, season tickets $210, incidentals $13.17, and the expenditures, coach $560, training table $440, tennis and track $100, printing $150 trips and foot ball expenses $3,350; total $4,600.

SENATE TROPHY CONTEST

The senate trophy contest of Saturday evening was very successful, although the number of contestants was rather small. The gymnasium was crowded, about 1,500 people being present. In the trophy contest there were four contestants, R. F. Flintermann, '95 lit, J. A. Bloomington, '96 law, and Ives and Martin. Flintermann won the trophy with a total of 29 points, Bloomington 21, Ives 7 and Martin 6. President Angell made the presentation speech. The judges were Mr. Studer, of the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, Detroit, G. W. Williamson and Fitzpatrick. The six events summarized were as follows: Work on parallel bars—Flintermann, first; Bloomington, second. Fence vaulting—Flinterman, first; Bloomington, second; Martin, of Iowa, third. Rope climbing, distance 35 feet—Bloomington first; Flinterman, second; time .09 1/5. Tumbling—Ives, of Tennessee. Running high kick—Martin, first; Bloomington, second; Flinterman, third. German horse—Flinterman, first; Ives, second; Bloomington, third. General development—Flinterman, first Bloomington, second, and Ives, third.

The other events were: Exhibition featherweight boxing between Hubbard, '97 lit and Purnort, '98 dent, no decision. Exhibition wrestling between Garrett, of Detroit, and Bradford. Forty-yard dash, sixteen entries—J. T. Hughes, '96 law, of Pennsylvania, first; Porter, second; time .05 1/5. Relay race, four men on a side—1,080 yards, won by '98 lit team over that of the medical department. Time, 1:59.

Following is the substance of a dispatch regarding one of the University's "mysterious disappearances": Carl Beardsley is engaged in business in San Francisco and does not evidence any interest whatever in his alma mater or any other incident in his school days or home life. Mr. Beardsley has formed a partnership with Lars L. Oie and is now engaged in the somewhat novel and incongruous occupation of cleaning wall paper. Mr. Beardsley is also a popular member of the local Y. M. C. A., which he joined upon his arrival in this city. He said: "My reason for leaving the University was simply that I lost interest in my studies and was determined to try my luck with the world. I first went east and traveled in search of a healthier climate and business opportunities."

Saturday's Game Shows the 'Varsity Nine to be in Good Condition.

The were about 600 people on the athletic field last Saturday afternoon to see the University win, 21 to 3 in the first base ball game of the season, between Albion and the 'Varsity nine. The latter team showed up in better condition than for the past three years at the first game of the season. This is largely due to the work of Sexton, who has infused plenty of life into the team. Only two errors were made on the 'Varsity side. Holmes threw over first base, and Shields let a ball get past him. McKenzie did good work at first, accepting twelve chances without an error. Three pitchers, Miller, Gallop and Watkins were put in, to give each an opportunity to work in. Gallop allowed only nine men to come to bat in the three innings he had charge of the box. Miller struck out seven in three innings and only one hit was made off him. Watkins pitched well and only three hits were made off his delivery. Albion put up a ragged game owing evidently to lack of practice. Following is the complete score:

CHRISTIANIZING CHINA.

What Rev. Y. K. Yen had to Say About the Great Undertaking.

There was a fair sized audience at St. Andrew's church yesterday p. m., to listen to Rev. Y. K. Yen, of Shanghai, China, who told them about the work of the church in his native country. Rev. Yen is a medium sized man, who still retains the Chinese wearing apparel, but has discarded the shaved head and cue, allowing his hair to grow quite long. He has the look of a student and scholar, and is evidently a very sincere and earnest Christian. He speaks English well, and uses choice words to express his thoughts, but has a hesitating way at times as if he was not quite sure what word would best convey his ideas to his listeners.

Mr. Yen told of the mission in Shanghai and the Orphan asylum there and of the progress of the work. He described the room he used for evangelistic work. It was built out to the street, and its walls were made as attractive as possible, being hung with bright scrolls and scripture text in fancy lettering, many the work of his own hands. He said the customs of the people and their prejudices made it difficult to secure attention and everything had to be made bright and attractive, they had to sugar coat their religion as it were, to get the people to taste it, even.

It was a very difficult thing to make a Chinaman understand about one God. They had a god to preside over and take charge of everything, so how could one God do all the work of these innumerable gods? It was something they could not comprehend. Then when asked what the benefits of this new religion was, they could not understand what was meant by purifying the spirit and being made happy by right doing. They wanted some tangible results, something they could see or feel, and that is where medical science had come to aid them. When a man is sick and is made well by the medical assistance of some expert physician, then they can realize something of what has been done, and so much of the work is done through hospitals, which are very popular because of their success in curing disease.

A Chinaman's idea of sin is also very peculiar. He does not get the right conception of what sin is, for instance with him it is sin to waste even one grain of rice, so if he sees a grain of rice in the gutter, or even a filthy place, he will pick it up, wash it and put it where the birds will find and eat it. It is also a sin to destroy a bit of written or printed paper, and he religiously keeps such things from destruction. That is his idea of sin, and it is no easy task to teach him what sin really is.

The most humane work of Christians in China is done through their orphanages. In his native country it is not considered a sin to kill female children, and it is practiced to a great extent. These orphan asylums take these little babes, often when a few hours old, and never over a few months old, and bring them up. Then when they are large enough, they are taught, sent to the school which is always in connection with the orphanage, and saved for good work in the world. The native women are kept in ignorance, they are never educated, it is not necessary, for they are of no good in the world, they can not work to help support their parents in their old age, all they can do is to help about the house work in poor families, and live in idleness in rich families. So they are considered worthless, and not worth rearing not to say educating. By developing the brain of these women, as is done in all the orphanages, some of the best missionary workers are secured. Sometimes these young women marry native boys, and convert them to the religion of Jesus Christ, and in this way a foot hold is being secured for Christianity in China.

ENTERPRISING MANUFACTURERS.

Walker & Co. are Doing a Big Business in Carriage Manufacturing And in Other Lines.

Without doubt one of the most enterprising manufacturing concerns of this city is that of Walker & Co., of 7 W. Liberty and 21 and 23 Ashley streets. The firm, which has been doing business for a good many years now, is made up of Messrs. George Walker, Michael Grossmann and Christian Braun, each of whom, by great industry and excellent business management has acquired a substantial interest in a substantial business, one that has grown from a humble beginning to an industry that now employs more than a score of laboring men and does an annual business amounting to $25,000 or $30,000 a year. This is a result possible in any business only through the most honorable business methods and by putting upon the market a grad of goods which are their own recommendation. This is the way in which Walker & Co. have established their large and growing plant.

The Courier was this morning shown through Walker & Co.'s manufactory and salerooms through the courtesy of Mr. Walker. At this season of the year their stock is specially complete as the spring trade is just opening. As headquarters for carriages, surreys, phaetons, end spring and side spring buggies, road wagons, bicycles, harnesses, blankets, nets and robes there is no place in the city ahead of them. You can buy a handsome wood-finish road wagon for $25 or a made-to-order phaeton for $200. Walker & Co. are just completing a handsome phaeton for John Goetz Jr., at a cost of $200. The firm sells every year an aggregate of 600 or 700 carriages, besides doing an enormous amount of repairing. They keep on hand at all times a large stock of unfinished goods. They have 350 sets of unfinished wheels always on hand and other carriage parts in proportion. At present the firm is employing about 20 men, a number that will soon have to be increased as the trade opens. And the best thing about their industry is that they keep almost all of their men throughout the whole year. Their factory is finely equipped from top to bottom of the three stories, every room being full of stock or occupied by some branch of the work. In truth it appears that the enterprising firm will soon have to have more room for their steadily increasing business, and this despite the hard times.

The next issue of Wrinkle will be placed on sale Thursday morning. It is to be a bang-up number, containing cuts from the pen of Wagner, Campan, Kennedy, Miss Randall, Roth, Galbraith and Herdman. Arthur Smith, too, has developed the artist and will have one of the best hits of the year in this issue. The middle page will be by Campan and will depict the humorous side of the late meet. The prose and verse selections are without question the best of the year, and withal the vacation number of Wrinkle gives promise of eclipsing all previous efforts of this college publication.

Broke Up the Fight.

A prize fight at Brownsville, Ind., was stopped recently in a very sensational manner. George Boyce and Ed Smith of Dayton were to have fought to a finish in an old saw mill, in which Dougherty and Bennett fought it one some time ago. That night the fighters were on hand, also their backers, but the saw-mill was closed. The proprietor was absent, and the backers of the pugilists were obliged to wake up his wife. Being opposed to prize fighting she threw boiling water over the backers and the pugilists, and they retired in great discomfiture. The fight was then declared off.

Stabbed the Woman.

About 1 o'clock Sunday morning Kate Hardin of Higginsville, Mo., 17 years old, and Jennie Jones, wife of Elijah Jones, an ex-convict, all colored, got into a quarrel over the alleged intimacy between the Hardin girl and Jones. While thus quarreling the Jones woman jumped onto Kate Hardin, knocked her down, and then stabbed her with a small penknife, killing her almost instantly. The sharp point of the blade penetrated the girl's heart, and she died a few feet from the spot where she received the fatal blow.

A Dry-Land Fish.
The remarkable, one of the most remarkable of several species of dry-land fish catalogued by the naturalists, is a native of Mauritius. He is only four or five inches long, but has a big head, very prominent eyes and side fins which bear a strong resemblance to legs. They have the curious habit of leaving the water in the evening and spending the entire night hunting the nocturnal insects which inhabit the muddy flats near the tide water. A similar species of New Zealand are called "running fishes" by the natives.

Weather and the Mind.

The psychology of the weather is considered by Dr. T. D. Crothers as a promising subject for study. He says, in Science: "Very few persons recognize the sources of error that come directly from atmospheric conditions on experimenters and observers and others. In my own case, I have been amazed at the faulty deductions and misconceptions which were made in damp, foggy weather, or on days in which the air was charged with electricity and thunderstorms were impending. What seemed clear to me at these times appeared later to be filled with error. An actuary in a large insurance company is obliged to stop work at such times, finding that he makes so many mistakes which he is only conscious of later that this work is useless. In a large factory from 10 to 20 per cent less work is brought out on damp days and days of threatening storm. The superintendent, in receiving orders to be delivered at a certain time, takes this factor into calculation."

A Humorous Fact

About Hood's Sarsaparilla—it expels bad humor and creates good humor. A battle for blood is what Hood's Sarsaparilla vigorously fights, and it is always victorious in expelling foul taints and giving the vital fluid the quality and quantity of perfect health. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, boils and other blood diseases.

UNIVERSITY WOMAN HONORED.

Mrs. Louise Reed Stowell Appointed one of the School Trustees of the District of Columbia.

The Washington (D. C.) Times announces that Mrs. Louise Reed Stowell has been appointed one of the board of school trustees of the District of Columbia, being the first woman to occupy the position together with another woman, Mrs. Mary Church Terrill, who has also just been appointed. Mrs. Stowell graduated from the University in 1876, and was immediately employed on the faculty, enjoying the distinction of being the first woman thereon. She held the position of assistant in microscopical botany until going to Washington four years ago, when she was appointed as a specialist in the botanical division of the department of agriculture. The Washington Times says of her:

"Mrs. Stowell has been associated with a number of societies, some of them distinctively educational. She is an honorary member, and the only American woman on its rolls, of the Michigan Pharmaceutical Society; an active member, and the only American woman on its rolls, of the Royal Microscopical Society of London; a member of the society for extension of University teaching; ex-President of the National Collegiate Alumnae Association of the District.

"Mrs. Stowell was a member of the International Council of Women, held in this city in 1888, representing 'the higher education of women.' She is the author of over one hundred papers on educational subjects, and was for seven years the editor of a scientific journal. She is also the author of a work entitled 'Microscopical Diagnosis,' that had a wide circulation. Her literary productions and attainments have received high commendation from the press of the country, including Harper's Bazar, the Scientific American of the Chicago Inter-Ocean, the Women of the Century, the New York Tribune, and other journals and publications.

Facts About the Baptist Church.

The annual report of the officers of the Baptist church society shows that there was an increase in membership during the year of 35, and that the present enrollment is 449. The treasurer received during the year $2,613.58, and there were $2,613.58 paid out, with bills left unpaid of $198.94.

The ladies' society of the church raised $442.19 and expended $389.43. The Home Mission circle collected $65.90, together with a quantity of supplies, valued at $48, which were forwarded to one of the church missionaries.

The Foreign Mission Circle reports $88.10 collected. The B. Y. P. U. has a membership of 130, received $63.20 during the past year, and this year they will support a missionary among the Shans, $125.20 having already been subscribed for that purpose.

There is a debt on the church of $550, which an attempt will be made to extinguish at once. The sum of $200 was subscribed for the purpose at the last annual meeting. The church rolls of the society are to be revised by the deacons, which it is thought will reduce the same by 75 names.

Children Who Suffer

from scrofulous, skin or scalp diseases, ought to be given Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, for purifying the blood. For children who are puny, pale or weak, the "Discovery" is a tonic which builds up both flesh and strength. What is said of it for children applies equally to adults. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it sets to work all the processes of indigestion and nutrition, rouses every organ into natural action, and brings back health and strength. In recovering from "grippe," or in convalescence from pneumonia, fevers, and other wasting diseases, it speedily and surely invigorates and builds up the whole system.

For all diseases caused by a torpid liver or impure blood, as Dyspepsia, Billiousness, Blisters, and Eruptions, it gives most perfect satisfaction.

THE CANNIBAL KING AND THE BIKE

An Illustrated Poem.
BY EDWIN LACY.

Tomascoing was a warrior bold
Who lived in the land of Thimungjigger,—
A cannibal island, I am told,
Which some where on the map does figger.
Now Tom was the king of this savage isle,
He ruled his subjects with main and might,
And for fear his appetite would spillo,
He roasted and ate one every night.
Not that a coon was a morsel rare,
Or a dainty preferred by Tomascoing;
But that, in lieu of a white man fair,
He was wont to declare was the next best thing.
One day there entered the king's domain,
A white man riding a bicycle bright;
The man had traveled from far-off Maine
With never a rest neither day nor night.
For his mission was one of importance great—
To circle the earth in the shortest time—
He was already more than a fortnight late,
So he 'gan at the king in pantomime.
To the east, he pointed from whence he came,
To the west, where onward his pathway lay,
As much as to say, if 'twas all the same,
He'd like to hasten upon his way.
The king was amazed at the man and bike,
He thought the wheel an enchanted thing,
And instructed his faithful henchman Mike
To both in his august presence bring.
When the man from Maine saw he'd played
His loss,—
That a king full surely would take the pot,—
He pretended as though he couldn't refuse
The invitation and minded not.
So he rode up in front of Tomascoing,
First bowing low over his handle bar,
Then circled around before the king,
And the people who'd gathered from ne and far.
A moment or two he rode, and then
He brought his wheel near the monarch's side,
And by pantomime talk he announced again,
He'd like to teach the king to ride.
Now Tomascoing was with vanity filled,—
He could ride the wheel like a steed would find;
So he mounted the thing while the soon would
By the Maine man clutching the saddle behind.
But why the story rehearse, my friends?
We've all of us seen a beginner begin;
The king soon found that a bicycle bends
The will, but he bravely resolved to win.
And at it he kept for an hour or more,
The Maine man trotting along beside;

He approached the gate, and was about to knock, when he saw a little figure flitting along the path before him. He recognized Dolores. Why was she roaming abroad alone on the roads at this hour? Was she watching for him? The young man hastened toward her, then paused at the angle of the wall to look at her.

Dolores stood in an open space of the path, waving a fan. Her shadow was projected on the ground behind her in a long, wavering line. The dog Florio sat beside her, gravely looking on.

The girl's face and arms, bathed by the moonlight, had the purity of alabaster in contrast with the luxuriant masses of her black hair, and her eyes were dreamy, as if she moved in a reverie. She talked to Florio in a low tone, and occasionally laughed. Now she advanced, mincingly, with skirts outspread, and profound curtsies, wielding the fan, with natural grace, in her right hand, as if at a presentation. Again she abandoned herself to a gliding dance measure, wreathing her arms above her head, with the glittering fan held high in the air.

The childish vanity of smile and posture were obvious. She imagined herself to be once more at a ball and in a theater.

The spectator found the mere contemplation of her light movements bewitching, but he longed to clasp her in his arms.

"Dolores!" She started, and came toward him, with an exclamation of pleasure. Florio barked sharply.

"Are you glad to see me again?" he inquired eagerly, seizing her hands.

"Oh, yes!" "Did you expect me to-night? I feared I should not be able to get off."

"I always expect you." Then there was a moment of soft silence between them, during which he twined her arm around his neck, pressed her little head against his breast, and showered kisses on her hair. Dolores drew back half troubled, half ashamed, and inspired by an instinct of coquetry, once more unfurled her fan, making of the fragile weapon a barrier between them. "Look at my new fan," she said, in coaxing accents. "The garden is too small, so I came out here to play with it in the moonlight."

"Have you met any one on the road?"

"No one. The people are all in the town at this hour."

"The fan is very fine. The grand duke sent it to you at the door of the theater."

Dolores elevated her delicately arched eyebrows in surprise. "You noticed the messenger, then?"

"Of course I saw him," warmly. "The prince broke my old fan, and he was very kind to remember the accident," innocently.

Lieut. Curzon looked at the rich toy carelessly. The moonlight shimmered on pearl, tortoise shell and feathers, with a pictured design worthy of Comte Nils, or of Rudeaux, on one side. Tiny points of silver, or steel, sown over the surface, glittered in the moon's ray, as if diamond insects hovered and escaped with every turn of the happy owner's flexible wrist. A subtle perfume emanated from the downy margin.

"I will give you a dozen fans if you wish," said the sailor, in a slightly aggrieved tone.

Yes, he was piqued and irritated to behold her cherishing the quite unwarrantable gift of another man.

Dolores smiled, with a sudden, dazzling gleam of snowy teeth between red lips, and turned her head, archly. At the same time she clasped, provokingly, the princely souvenir to her bosom.

"A dozen fans would be too many, only what happiness to take up one or another at pleasure. No! You must not touch me again."

She leaned toward him, and passed the fan, playfully, over his curling hair, with a caressing movement.

The young man stood before her in all the unconscious pride of his strength, and the moon shone on his golden beard, open brow, and straight features, which wore an expression of hauteur and vexation at the moment, while his blue eyes dwelt with fascination on her slightest gesture.

Dolores paused and contemplated him. "Ah, how good and noble you are!" she sighed.

He drew her once more close to his side. "Dolores, you are a wee bit flighty to-night, but you must be reasonable."

"I am reasonable, and not at all flighty."

"Listen to me, darling—" "I list—" "You belong to me. You are to be my wife. We will live and die together."

"Shall we ever grow old, like grandpapa?" meditatively.

"We must grow old in our own fashion," he replied evasively.

Dolores recoiled and unfurled her fan. "Let us always remain young," she insisted, with a return of fantastic gaiety.

"Dolores, give me that confounded fan!"

"No! No!" "Then you do value it more than any gift of mine?"

The girl frowned, pondered a moment, closed the fan, and placed it in his hand without uttering a word.

His strong fingers closed over the frail treasure.

"Would you mind my keeping it?" he teased.

"No," with a softness which was alluring, tempting, almost feline.

"Would you care if I broke it and cast it away?"

"No."

The muscular hand crushed feather, substance and pearl stick before he was aware of it, and then he flung the wreck on the other side of the road.

Dolores cast a bewildered glance at the broken fan, but made no attempt to recover it. A tear rolled down her cheek.

"You are a good little girl not to scold me for such clumsiness," he said, with real, or assumed contrition for an ebullition of temper. "I did not intend to crush the thing. You shall have another to-morrow."

His arms were around her, his cheek rested against her face, his mouth sought her trembling lips in a long, ardent kiss.

For a time she yielded passively to his embrace, then she slipped away and paused a few paces from him. She trembled and grew pale, her black eyes flashed. Then she burst into passionate sobs.

"You were cruel to break it!" she exclaimed.

She fled away swiftly, closely followed by her little dog, and Lieut. Curzon heard the gate shut behind her.

He waited irresolutely for a time, then departed, tantalized yet triumphant, with the shy, half-unconscious kiss of Dolores still lingering on his lips. Love had come to him with a smile and a song. He would make all right on the morrow with the purchase and presentation of a new fan.

Little did he foresee the events of the morrow.

A cloud swept over the moon's disk, like a veil. The gate of the garden opened, a figure emerged, noiselessly, glided along the boundary wall, groped in the path for some object, and as swiftly withdrew.

The splendor of the night deepened. The white hamlets slept, as if they were the tombs of the inmates, and the sea heaved and sparkled in the track of leviathan about to rise from the depths. Bursts of maudlin song and jest were occasionally audible in the port, while the ships of the harbor dreamed above their reflections in the tranquil waters.

CHAPTER XII.
Expulsion.

COULD NOT leave the poor fan lying out there in the road," Dolores confided to her pillow when she awakened the next morning.

Then she sought the fragments beneath the same pillow, where she had placed them on the previous night before going to sleep.

The moon had become hidden by clouds at the opportune moment when she had returned in search of the treasure. There was treason to Arthur Curzon, and even defiance of him, in the act. For the first time in her young life she was required to ponder on the unreasonable and exacting character of man. The garrulous moods and prevalent crossness of grandpapa was a different matter.

Her admiration of the handsome officer, and the affectionate gratitude awakened in her heart by his geniality and generosity, were mere surface ripples of sentiment as yet in her nature.

Her slumbers had been broken by

"Oh, grandpapa!"

"A—thief! Be off with you, once for all."

"Where am I to go?" implored Dolores.

She was stupefied and incredulous of the brusque expulsion.

"Return to the convent, if you will. You shall not enter my door again. A spy! A traitor!"

The voice of the old man, piercing and sharp, rose to a sort of howl of menace with these words.

Dolores turned away, with Florio under her arm.

The morning was clear, and the sunshine dazzling, yet the sky seemed about to fall on her head. Was it true that her grandfather had banished her from the Watch Tower for ever?

A crushing blow shatters the prism of a crystal. The shock of brutal, unforeseen ejection from her home, by her nearest relative, scattered her ideas in a similar manner. Her first thought was of Arthur Curzon. Where was he? How could she find him in her humiliation and distress? Dolores lacked the nerve requisite to haunt the quay in quest of him. Or did some instinct of modest pride withhold her from displaying her shame to the world? Oddly enough, the first and rudimentary comprehension of dread of public opinion in her mind took the form of a natural shrinking from the eye of slender and grave Dr. Busatti, and his yellow, little mother.

The recollection of the ladies of the ball, and of the gentlemen who had been kind to her on that momentous occasion, did not trouble her. There remained for her only the safe refuge of the convent. The sad and monotonous routine of monastic rule was to be the end of all joy and happiness. A sob rose in her throat.

She walked slowly toward the town. No one noticed her and she passed other pedestrians as if they had been phantoms.

Near the fortifications she paused to gaze down on the harbor with a certain wistfulness. Since her childhood the ships coming and going had always inspired an indefinable longing and restlessness in her breast. Now Arthur Curzon was on board of one of the craft. He would be sorry if he could see her. Perhaps they might never meet again. Ah, how she loved him at this moment! She loved him with all her heart and soul. She realized the joy and the bitterness of the emotion.

The corvette Ladislas was steaming away in the distance, bearing the young prince to the Nile. The Italian packet, the Elettrico, was to sail at a later hour for Sicily.

Dolores pursued her way until the walls of the convent became visible. She halted again, and shuddered, as if she had received the shock of a blow full in her heart. She trembled and shrank back. If she entered that portal, she might never be able to again escape. On one side were the blue sky, the glancing waves of the sea, the warm sunshine toward which her whole nature yearned; on the other, in the cold shadow of the cloister, was the silent and repressed lot of the nun.

The fugitive recoiled, oppressed with doubt and dread. She hid her face in her hands, weeping, and striving to conquer her own indecision. Then a swift panic of terror seized her impulsive temperament. She fled back swiftly to the Watch Tower. Fear lent wings to her agile feet.

The familiar boundary gained she leaned against the wall, panting, and closed her eyes. Her senses reeled, and a white cloud seemed to envelop and stifle her. The little dog leaped to the ground, and regarded her with anxiety, his tail drooping.

She knocked timidly.

"Grandpapa!" her voice was weak and hoarse.

There was no response. The outcasts listened intently, the girl with parted lips and dilating eyes, the dog with a sagacious little head cocked on one side, and ears pricked up. The ripple of the fountain alone was audible within the enclosure.

"Grandpapa? Open the gate for me. You will be sorry if you refuse!"

Still there was no reply vouchsafed by the obstinate old man. The appeal of Dolores, more piercing and assured this time, only served to arouse the echoes. Jacob Dealtry gave no sign of life. Did he hear the appeal? Had he shut himself up in the tower?

Fear again smote on the heart of Dolores, a chilling, indefinable dread of the coming night and darkness. She must seek the convent as a shelter, or become a beggar, a fugitive. What other refuge could Malta offer her? Terrible alternatives of poverty and friendlessness.

She wandered away from the gate, and crept into the ruined temple, where Lieut. Curzon had first found her grandfather lying insensible on the pavement. Her instinct was to hide herself from the light of day and the scrutiny of her fellow creatures. She was only conscious of a cowardly impulse to put off the fatal hour of return to the convent until evening, and when no other course should be possible to her.

She crouched in the most obscure corner of the ruin, holding Florio in her arms. The little dog whined from time to time and licked her cheek. Florio evidently realized the full peril of the miserable situation.

Her glance strayed around the rude interior of the temple with weariness and indifference. She knew the place well. She had often visited it with her grandfather and Dr. Busatti. The altar rose before her and fragments of sculptured blocks lay scattered about on the ground.

If the past appealed to her at all, it was when a sunbeam slanted in a golden shaft athwart the entrance, recalling to her the night when she had agitated dreams and feverish starts of wakefulness, when she had listened to those confused and intermittent sounds below stairs, which indicated that Jacob Dealtry was roaming about the Watch Tower.

In addition, the Cavalier of the picture seemed to stand on the threshold of her chamber and reproach her for some fault. His voice was muffled, vague and monotonous, like the rhythm of the distant sea. She could not distinguish his words. What had she done? Dolores could not understand.

She rose, made her simple toilet, and ate her frugal breakfast with a healthy, young appetite. Her grandfather had been up for hours. He did not notice her. The amenities of conversation were rare between them.

The girl took the fan in her hand, and contemplated it with sadness. She shed a few tears over the wreck. Ah, how beautiful it had been only the previous night, with the moonlight sparkling on the spangled surface! The fingers that crushed the pearl and tortoise-shell structure must have been very strong, and the anger of Arthur Curzon deep. Did she not feel some sweet, feminine docility of subjection to the muscles of this Samson?

"He was jealous," said Dolores, aloud, and a dimple deepened in her soft cheek.

She glanced at a little mirror; already she was a woman. The discovery frightened and enchanted her.

The broken fan still claimed her sorrowful tenderness and regret.

"What shall I do with it?" she demanded of the Knight of Malta, pausing before the picture.

The Knight was mute.

She went out into the garden, irresolutely. A bee from the hive in the rear of the tower settled on her wrist! She did not fear the insect. The bees made famous honey.

"What shall I do with the fan?" she repeated, obeying a childish impulse to question Fate.

The bee was mute, and, after basking, a downy, golden body, on the extended arm for a moment, spread gossamer wings, and flew away, as if about to keep a business appointment in the kingdom of the sky.

"What shall I do with the fan?" the girl inquired of the pigeons, the flowers, the dog.

The pigeons ceased to coo, and looked at her with bright eyes; the flowers swayed on their fragile stalks, and hung their heads, languid with their own fragrance.

Florio bounded through the reeds, and again emerged, uttering a sharp bark, as if to claim her attention for the retreat which he had discovered in the middle of the clump of plants.

Dolores caught up the little animal, and bestowed her usual caress, a kiss on the nose. "The very spot!" she exclaimed. "I will bury the fan. Florio knows more than the pigeons, or the bees."

She glanced about in search of her grandfather. She had once offended him by digging at the roots of his flowers and attempting to bury a broken doll. Now she would ask him to accord her a tiny corner for the fan's grave. The gate was half open. She looked out, and beheld the old man traversing the path in the direction of the high road. He was evidently bound on some errand. She must await his return. When would he return though? Surely there could be no harm in hiding away the fan among the canes! Her life had been so meager of incident, that this one acquired importance in her estimation. Impatience overcame all scruples. She once more sought and found a broken, rusty knife, and, kneeling, thrust her arm through the barrier of stems to scoop out a little hole in the earth. The clump of canes should shelter the spot.

The task was rudely interrupted. A claw-like hand grasped her shoulder, and she was dragged back with violence.

Jacob Dealtry had entered the enclosure, and discovered her occupation. He pounced upon his grandchild in an access of fury. "You jade! You devil's imp! What are you about, now?"

The words seemed to hiss in her ear, awakening painful memories.

"I am not hurting the flowers in the very least, grandpapa," she protested, in an aggrieved tone.

She was older and stronger than when she had attempted to inter the doll, and need not fear to confront him in a fit of anger. She must learn to brave him. Nevertheless, the rage of the old man made her quail. She rose to her feet, trembling in every limb, and averted her head.

The crisis was terribly brief.

One moment a white face confronted her, with the pinched features drawn and contracted, and a pair of gleaming eyes projecting from the sockets, and the next she was thrust out of the gate, with her dog, and the bolts drawn.

"Go away!" cried Jacob Dealtry through the partition. "Let me never see your face again. A spy!"

personated the Phœnician maiden in the tableaux.

She buried her face in her hands and wept. Hunger and thirst assailed her, and then her faculties became gradually dull, coldly benumbed. Perhaps she slept.

A light and jaunty footstep aroused her, a masculine voice hummed a strain of the song, "My Pretty Brown Maid."

Captain Blake looked into the temple.

Dolores held her breath, and shrank back further into the shadow. Florio was mute in sympathy.

The girl felt overwhelmed with shame. She did not wish to be seen in her disgrace, just then. What assistance could this stranger give her? She hated him, with sudden caprice of unreasonable animosity. If he discovered her retreat, he would laugh and jest at the whole dilemma. Dolores could not endure laughter and jesting in her present plight.

"What a beastly hole!" remarked Capt. Blake, aloud, as he lighted a fresh cigar.

Then he strolled on.

The minutes passed slowly and monotonously. Dolores wished she had detained, claimed the human sympathy of the gallant soldier once he had departed. He had been kind on a former occasion. Why should she shrink from him now? Hope, expectation, thrilling anxiety of waiting, were all awaked in her breast by the incident of Capt. Blake's taking a country walk. If he thus rambled forth from the town, why not another? Ah, she watched, not for him, but for another! Surely Arthur Curzon would come before nightfall. If he loved her, he must be aware, by some unerring intuition, of her need of him. Of course, he loved her. Had he not repeatedly sworn that he loved her? She doubted this much needed tenderness no more than she feared the sunshine would be withdrawn by some cruel whim of nature from her island home.

At length her quick ear heard another footstep approaching. She rose to her feet with a bound, and Florio rushed out of the ruin with a joyful bark of welcome. Oh, swift divination of feminine coquetry! Arthur Curzon had sought the Watch Tower, with a new fan in his pocket, to atone for his misdemeanor of the previous night.

"Good morning, Dolores," blithely.

"Good morning," falteringly.

"Were you watching for me here, little girl? Bless you! Why, this ruin old temple would serve as a good trying place."

"Yes," said Dolores, with a sigh. She grew pale, and her eyes sought the ground.

"What is amiss, Dolores?" quickly.

She flew to the young man's side, and clasped both of her hands on his arm.

"I should have soon died if you had not come!" she moaned. "Grandpapa has driven me away. He is in one of his fits of bad temper. He has them occasionally. I did nothing to offend him, except to hide the broken fan."

Arthur Curzon's features darkened, while a gleam of anger shone in his eyes.

"Did he dare to strike or beat you, Dolores? He shall answer for it to me, if he did!"

Dolores sighed.

"Oh, no! Grandpapa has never beaten me, I think. He has struck me with words often enough, though."

She held up her sweet face to him, bathed in tears, for consolation and advice.

The young officer heard all, even to the project of retiring to the convent.

"Tell me what I am to do," sobbed the girl, hiding her face on his broad breast. "Ah! I have no one in the world besides you!"

Touching assurance of helpless innocence and faith in his power of protection! Arthur Curzon was moved by it, as many another man would have been in his place.

"Why did you think of a convent?" he inquired at length. "You should have come to me, my pet."

Dolores smiled faintly.

ESTATE OF DAVID GODFREY, DECEASED.
STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Washtenaw.

At the session of the Probate Court for the county of Washtenaw, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Ann Arbor, on Tuesday, the 3rd day of April, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five.

Present, J. Willard Babbitt, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of David Godfrey, deceased.

On reading and filing the petitions, duly verified, of David S. Godfrey, praying that Maria E. Godfrey may be removed from the office of executrix of a certain instrument now on file in this court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration de bonis non with the will annexed of said estate, may be granted to himself or to some other suitable person.

Thereupon it is ordered, that Friday, the third day of May next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petitions, and that the devisees, legatees, and heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, to be holden at the Probate Office in the city of Ann Arbor, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayers of the petitioner should not be granted. And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pending of said petitions, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the ANN ARBOR COURIER, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

(A True Copy.) J. WILLARD BABBITT, Judge of Probate.

WM. G. DOTY, Probate Register.

ESTATE OF JOHN M. LETTS, INCOMPETENT.
STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Washtenaw.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Washtenaw, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Ann Arbor, on Wednesday the 27th day of April, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five.

Present, J. Willard Babbitt, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of John M. Letts, incompetent, comes into court and represents that he is now prepared to render his final account as such guardian.

Thereupon it is ordered, that Friday, the 27th day of April, inst., at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for examining and allowing such account, and that the next of kin of said ward, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Ann Arbor, in said County, and show cause, if any there be, why the said account should not be allowed. And it is further ordered, that said guardian give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pending of said account, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the ANN ARBOR COURIER, a newspaper printed in the ANN ARBOR COUNTY, two successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

"Of course."

The cloud of misgiving, and perhaps apprehension, was gathering now about the path of Arthur Curzon. Change in all relations with the sweet and bewitching creature at his side had come with an almost appalling swiftness, jarring and perplexing to the utmost degree. If the Watch Tower, with the tangled garden, had been a hidden paradise to the supine native, Dr. Busatti, because of the beautiful girl who dwelt there, how much more so was it to himself with his fiery nature of the sailor? He had not availed himself of a proposed leave of absence, because he preferred to linger at Malta and hold stolen intercourse with Dolores. He would not vacate a field in favor of Capt. Blake, or some other airy trifter. The atmosphere of reverie was roseate, even time possessed no due value spent in softest dalliance, varied by feminine caprices, fierce, little quarrels swiftly personated the Phœnician maiden in the tableaux.

She buried her face in her hands and wept. Hunger and thirst assailed her, and then her faculties became gradually dull, coldly benumbed. Perhaps she slept.

A light and jaunty footstep aroused her, a masculine voice hummed a strain of the song, "My Pretty Brown Maid."
