THE OLD SHALL BE NEW.

Out of the Past Grand Opera House the Athens Theatre will be Transformed.

Ever since purchasing the Grand Opera house Louis J. Lisemer has been studying how to improve the property and make it attractive to the public. Of course the season is late to do much this year, either in improvements to the building or improvements in the entertainments, for everything has been booked for the year's business. But Manager Lisemer is making a commencement. In the first place he has changed the name of the house to the Athens Theatre. Then he has set a gang of men at work giving the building a thorough cleaning from cellar to garret. The chairs are all being renovated and redecorated in white and gold, and the entire woodwork of the auditorium will correspond. The railings in front of the boxes have been taken away and new draperies will replace the old, much to the pleasure of those who have gazed for so many years upon the old ones. Listen: A new drop curtain is to be put in! In fact two new drop curtains are to take the place of the old one! For which the people will return thanks.

On the stage the scenic capacity has been enlarged five feet on each side, making it 27 feet in the clear now, and sufficient for any company to show any of their scenery, however elaborate. The stage is 38 feet deep, and will now be equal to any in the state. There will be two star dressing rooms hereafter, one on each side the stage, and the unused rooms above them will be utilized for property rooms. The dressing and toilet rooms below have been cold heretofore, but new steam coils have been put in, so that they will be comfortable hereafter. All the dressing rooms are being carpeted and repainted and fitted up anew.

The orchestra will have enlarged and improved quarters also, a platform having been put in to raise them up out of the cellar. It might not be out of place to state that the excellent organization under the lead of Prof. R. H. Kempf, known as the Ann Arbor Orchestra, have engaged for the year with Manager Lisemer, and have changed their name to the Athens Orchestra.

The front of the opera house is to be improved also. The stores will all have plate glass fronts, be entirely fitted up anew, and made to look like modern marts of trade. The stairs at the entrance will be torn out, made easier to climb, and with a landing at about half the distance up. The unsightly "truck" over the entrance will be torn out and a handsome illuminated glass sign reading "Athens Theatre" will take its place. These are a few of the improvements that are to be made this fall. Another year Mr. Lisemer expects to add other improvements that will make the Athens Theatre one of the best in the west. There is no reason why Ann Arbor can not support one good theatre. It is the belief of Mr. Lisemer that it can, and he proposes to make the experiment. It is the duty of all play goers in Ann Arbor and vicinity to help him along in the attempt.

GLORY FOR THE Y. M. C. A.

The Court House Site Has Been Secured and a Permanent Home Will Result.

Yesterday was a happy day for the Y. M. C. A. directors and members who have been laboring so energetically and persistently for money with which to purchase a site, on which to erect a building for their purposes. The last of the money necessary to secure the prize was subscribed yesterday, and to-day the papers will be made out, and the lot on N. Fourth ave., opposite the east entrance of the court house, will become the property of the Y. M. C. A.

The lot has a frontage of 88 feet on Fourth ave., and runs back 120 feet to the alley. It commences at the feed store of Geo. W. Sweet on the north, and takes one-half of the old hotel building, now occupied by Wm. Wenger's repair shop. It is sufficiently large, so that the one fatal mistake in many association buildings, of insufficient light will be obviated.

Now that the site has been secured, (and a better one for the purposes of the association could not be obtained in the city,) the next thing in order is the building of a gymnasium. The association has a nest egg that has been accumulated for this purpose, but in order to build this fall, so that the boys may have the benefit of the same this winter, it should be raised at once. It is the intention of the directors to make their gymnasium a permanent building to be erected in connection with a general plan of the completed structure. The minute the gym. is completed and ready for occupancy, 200 young men are ready to pay $5 a year each for its privileges. So the public can see how important it is that this portion of the main building should be erected at once. The lease of their present quarters expires Jan. 1.

The work done by the hustlers, Pres. Wagner, Sec'y. Gilmore, Treas. Moore, Messrs. Hildner, Mumery, Stinson, Phillips, Richards, Stanger and others, show how much in earnest the young men are in this work. They are determined to succeed, and they will succeed, and they will not run in debt either.

Really, now, whether you are in sympathy with the grand work these boys are doing or not, do you not admire the pluck and determination they display? To raise $5,500 for a building site these times, is a grand deed, worthy of all praise.

What a Difference!

Ann Arbor speaks boastfully of the protection its "Anti-Tramp Association" affords it from the visitation of members of the Weary Willie tribe. If the residents of the metropolis of Washtenaw felt half as poor in purse as do the citizens of Chelsea this tax time they would have no need for the Association. Since paying their taxes so many of our citizens have made the air look so blue and hazy that it is said on good authority that not a member of the "Lillies of the Field" fraternity has been seen loitering within a radius of five miles of Chelsea. "Tis an ill wind that blows no one good."—Chelsea Standard.

It is so different here!

When an Ann Arbor man goes to the city treasurer's office he inquires:

"How much are my taxes, please?"

Upon being told he smiles an angelic and heavenly smile, and remarks:

"Is that all? Why, I expected to pay as much again as that. There must be some mistake."

Upon being assured that no mistake been made, he pulls out his check book, fills it out for the necessary amount, and often insists upon making the treasurer a present, he feels so good over it.

Sometimes he remarks that it is wonderful, with all the improvements here of cleaned and sprinkled streets—no dust or mud—beautifully kept up boulevards, handsome parks for public recreation, and all these charming luxuries, that taxes can be kept so low. It is simply a delight for a man to be city treasurer here in Ann Arbor and listen to the sweet songs the taxpayers sing—more especially after they find out what their sewer tax, with interest computed to date, amounts to. That's the reason—it must be, for no other one can be thought of—why Ann Arbor has "an anti-tramp protection society." People feel so grateful when they pay their taxes that they can't keep from being generous to tramps.

OUR INLAND RESORTS.

BEAUTIFUL LAKES AND DELIGHTFUL SHORES ON WHICH TO SPEND THE HOT DAYS OF SUMMER.

WHITMORE LAKE CROWDED.

While the Cottages at Base Lake, Zukey, Strawberry and Island Lakes are Filled to Overflowing.

The Huron river summer resorts of this section of the state are astonishing to people who see them for the first time. Astonishing not only for their beauty, but for their extent, and the variety of scenery that is presented to their view.

The Huron river is a tortuous stream, but almost its entire length it has a rapid current, the waters acting as if they were in haste to get away from the beautiful lakes that it flows through, or whose waters join in swelling the volume of the river. It has its source in some beautiful spring-fed lakes near Holly, in Genesee county, lakes by the way, that have been utilized by the people of that section for many years in the way of summer recreation. Then it twists and turns, always in a hurry, scurrying around among the big hills of Oakland county, winding its way through a corner of Livingston county, until it reaches the nest of lakes in Hamburg, which helps to swell it into quite a river. Then it keeps on forming a chain of lakes for itself until it reaches Dexter, after which it is content to keep within its banks until it flows into and loses itself in Lake Erie. In an early day, when the forests helped retain the moisture in the land, good sized boats sailed up as far as Ypsilanti, and the stream was known as a navigable one.

But to our inland resorts. Commencing down the stream at the first lake, which is Portage, a lake with quite a large portion cut off its west end by a peninsula which has been utilized for a roadway, being the main road between Dexter village and Pinckney. The cut-off is known as Little Portage, and has valuable fishing, but the resorts are all upon Portage proper. Here are a large number of cottages, all beautifully located and well filled with people. They are located mostly along the shore to the east of the road referred to above, and are occupied to a great extent by Ypsilanti and Dexter people. The place is easy of access from the main traveled road, and has all the delights of a lake resort.

Passing up through the river we come into

BASE LAKE.

Here the Dexter people have formed a colony. That is there are more Dexterites than from any other locality, though Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti both furnish some of its inhabitants during the summer months. When the writer was there a day or two since, the following people were occupying cottages:

Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Cook and Mr. Cook's mother, of Dexter.
James E. Harkins and family, Ann Arbor.

D. E. Quish and family, Dexter.
James Gallagher, of Dexter.
J. T. Honey and family, Dexter.
L. L. James and family, Dexter.
Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Crogan, Dexter.
Mrs. C. C. James, of Dexter, and guests.

Mrs. Seper and family, Dexter.
Geo. Phelps and family, Ann Arbor.
H. T. Phelps and family, Dexter.
W. S. Carpenter and family, Ypsilanti.
Judge H. W. Newkirk and family, Dexter.

W. H. Guerin and family, Ypsilanti.
Mr. Abbott and family, Ann Arbor.
Warren Wadhams, Ann Arbor.
Dr. H. J. Burke, Ann Arbor.

George Wahr and family, Ann Arbor. There were other cottages that were occupied by visitors for the day whose names we failed to secure. There are 18 cottages in this group, situated on the southeast shore of the lake, just under a big sandy bluff. The bottom of the lake is hard and sandy, recedes gradually, so that the children are perfectly safe. They can row and paddle around in the water for 100 feet out and be in no danger. The criticism here is that the cottages are located helterskelter, just as they happened to hit the fancy of the builder. By appropriating some of the bluff to the rear, and locating their cottages on a line or in a semi-circle, either of which is practicable, and substituting sod for marsh (as some have already done), the Base Lakers could then brag over all the other resorters on the chain, for Base Lake has no superior. Its shores are fine, and no quagmires or low marshy grounds surround it. It is delightful in every way, except perhaps the abominable country road that leads to it. One peculiar feature about the lake is the "blind" islands it contains. There will be a circle of grass out in the lake covering in some instances perhaps a half or quarter of an acre of ground. Outside the circle the land pitches down quick to the lake bottom, inside the circle is a beautiful little harbor of refuge in which the water varies from two feet deep on the outer edge, to six feet deep as you near the center. These peculiar formations are found also in Strawberry Lake, and are the wonder of all because of their peculiarity. One gentleman who was observing them remarked that these were like the oases in the Pacific ocean. Never having seen those wonders we took his word for it.

Some of the cottages are rather primitive, and others rather artistic. One that shows beautifully from the lake, and looks fine either day or night, is the property of Phil and Burt Schumacher, of Ann Arbor. It was occupied by Dr. Burke and Warren Wadhams, who were having an enjoyable rest, and they certainly have the right idea of this sort of life. They know how to rest and enjoy themselves at the same time.

Another fine cottage is that of L. L. James, of Dexter. It is well planned, artistic in design, and thoroughly fitted up. The same may be said of the Sill and Quish cottage.

There was but one patriotic man in camp. At least that was the conclusion arrived at from the fact that from only one cottage floated the stars and stripes. "Mark" Cook has that flag. He also has a luxury that none of the others have. He has a flowing well, and has arranged a chamber in which he puts his food in cans and dishes, and through it runs continually the water from this well which keeps everything as cool and sweet as any refrigerator that could be constructed. It is a great help to those who have in hand the important part of furnishing the meals. There is probably no more comfortable cottage on the grounds than the one Mark has. Mr. Cook's mother occupies a cottage next door. She is a lady 86 years of age, but as bright and active as many of the younger ladies, and seems to enjoy this camp life as keenly as any of them.

Judge Newkirk, who will soon be a resident of Ann Arbor, is not a permanent resorter yet. This is his first year, and he had rented a cottage merely to see how he and his family would like it. They had not been at the lake but a day or two, not long enough to get acclimated even, to say nothing of learning how to outwit the mosquitoes who take great delight in feasting off new comers. Dr. Burke is also furnishing the mosquitoes with much good blood.

UP THE LAKES.

A steamer now runs from the Ann Arbor R. R. docks at Zukey Lake, to the resorters' docks at Base Lake, and the people call making the trip "going up the lakes." It takes about 2 1/2 hours to make the round trip of some eighteen miles both ways. It is a delightful nine miles. One can enjoy every inch of the journey. The scenery is wild enough to suit the most romantic, and the river winds around in a way that puzzles the pilot to steer clear of the banks occasionally. Every now and then the river runs into a beautiful lake, and then will narrow down so that it is difficult to crowd in between the banks. The current is rapid all the time, and in miniature this little stretch of river presents to the imaginative mind a repetition of the Niagara below the falls, for if you make this journey you will have shown to you the rapids, the whirlpool, the narrows, etc., but in place of the great rocks that line the bottom of the Niagara, there

The United States coined in the year ending July 1 more than twice as many silver dollars as came from the mints during the whole existence of the country prior to "the crime of '73". There is no immediate danger that the silver dollar will become a forgotten coin.

Benjamin Franklin was a sage, and one of his sage remarks was this: "Temperance puts food in the tub, meat in the barrel, flour in the tub, money in the purse, credit in the country, contentment in the house, clothes on the back and vigor in the body."

One person were invested with enough life and were to give twelve hours a day to constant reading he would be five or six thousand years old before he got through reading the periodicals printed in the United States in one year. Over six thousand million copies are printed each year.—Newspaperman.

The Ann Arbor Courier sticks up its nose at W. J. Bryan, says he is getting luxurious, and accuses him of wearing silk and ruffled night shirts. This is intended for the purpose of injuring Mr. Bryan for national run. It is a lie, and we propose to strip the clothes off it, to the last dandruff. Mr. Bryan is too modest a man to pose in his nightshirt, and opposition papers may just as well turn over again and go to sleep.—Adrian Press.

Ex-Congressman Towne, of Minnesota, who is credited with being the selection of the silver-mine owners for their Presidential candidate in 1900, has turned his back upon most of the Anarchistic features of the Chicago platform and, it is said, is urging that free silver be made the sole issue in the campaign of this fall. This proposition is not pleasing to Mr. Bryan and his followers, who see in it a prospect of a general shifting, not only of the issues put forward in the last campaign, but also of Presidential candidates.—Cedar Springs Clipper.

There are several problems to be settled in the near future beside the tramp, among which are emigration and labor, and all must be done by the laws of this great American continent where the destiny of all races of humanity must be settled, not by the Chinaman, Italian and Scandinavians as in their native country, but by what they are in America. And by our laws must be judged all leaders of insurrections, riots, strikers and anarchists and they must depart or hang or obey our laws or not come over. Let America be a home for law abiding citizens only and then we are safe without being armed. We are going to vote to turn the rascals out and let our club revise the laws.—Grass Lake News.

Silver as a By-Product.

The fact that silver has dropped below all past records, both here and at London, has much more than a sentimental or statistical interest. It is a fact of intense practical importance to vast numbers of people—to business men of Mexico, as recent dispatches have shown, and to the entire population of silver-using countries. Prior to this week the lowest point ever touched was on March 16, 1894—namely, 27.06 pence for the British bars at London and 59 cents for American bars at New York. On Monday this record was exactly reached again on both sides of the ocean, and on Tuesday and Wednesday surpassed, the British price falling to 26.37 pence on Wednesday and the American to 57.37 cents, the one eleven-sixteenths of a penny below the record of 1894 and the other 2½ cents. The average for this month may not fall as low as that for March, 1894, which was 27.29 pence at London and 59.91 cents at New York, or that for January, 1895, which was 27.34 pence at London and 59.79 cents at New York, but there is a strong probability that the New York average for the month may fall below either record. The British may not, as the price at London was stubbornly held by manipulation until the 20th. Apparently the increasing pressure of American offers at falling prices has compelled unloading of large quantities carried by British speculators.

Immediate explanations and excuses for this fall are as plenty as blackberries—or fall service "showers." China cannot buy. India is suffering from extreme pauperism. Operations in Japan and Austria to place the monetary system on a gold basis have affected the market. Enormous new supplies of gold, instead of cheapening gold with reference to silver as many theorists have calculated, promises so great an increase of the gold supply that the need or desire of silver to use as money may be permanently diminished. The latest declaration of the president for unwavering maintenance of the gold standard has killed some foolish hopes. The adjournment of congress has put an end for some months to the possibility of another monetary wrangle in the senate and scare in this country. But the one explanation which explains is that the quantity of American silver offered is large, much larger than foreigners have expected who looked for a material decrease in output here, and larger than the world's markets are prepared to buy.

It seems hard for free coinage theorists under which silver is now produced have permanently changed its value. In the extensive list of mines given by "The Engineering and Mining Journal" and in "The Mineral Resources" there appear forty-one mines producing silver only, of which but three have paid dividends in 1897 or 1896, while there are thirty-three producing silver and lead, of which nine are paying dividends; twenty-four producing gold and silver, of which nine are paying dividends; seven producing copper, of which four very heavy producers are paying dividends, and six others producing silver in connection with two or three of the other metals, of which five are paying dividends. While it is not supposed that the list embraces all mines that have paid in recent years, and does not purport to include all mines in operation, it nevertheless gives a clear idea of the conditions under which a great proportion of the silver is now produced. The mines operated for silver only or mainly are few, and few still are profitable. The mines operated mainly for gold, copper or lead, or two or all of these metals, which also produce silver, are numerous, and turn out a vast proportion of the white metal, and a good quantity of these are profitable. They include such heavy producers as the Boston and Montana, and the Copper Queen, operated chiefly for copper; the great majority of paying lead mines in Colorado, and most of the gold and silver mines of the Comstock range in Nevada and of Utah.

It is not improbable, considering the source from which most of the silver now comes, that a quantity more than sufficient to supply the entire demand of the world is produced purely as a by-product, not because anybody is mining for silver, but because in mining for lead or copper or gold, with prospects of profit, a quantity of silver is produced, which is sold for whatever it will bring and adds so much to the profit realized. The time has gone by when the silver supply is mainly from silver mines. A large part of it comes into the market because it pays to mine for other metals and the silver is thrown in, practically costing nothing in one sense. It is just as hides are produced, not because men kill cattle for hides, but because people kill cattle for meat. The obvious result is a production of hides much in excess of ordinary demand, and proportioned not at all to the demand for hides, but to the demand for meats. Under such conditions as these it is obviously impossible to determine how low silver may sell without stopping the output from mines which are profitably producing gold or lead or copper. Until the free coinage people grasp the idea that what they want to restore to monetary supremacy has in fact become one of the world's by-products they will make little progress.

THE JOURNEY.

I think of death as some delightful journey That I shall take when all my tasks are done.

Though life has given me a heaping measure Of all best gifts, and many a cup of pleasure, Still better things await me further on.

This little earth is such a merry planet, The distances beyond it so supreme, I have no doubt that all the mighty spaces Between us and the stars are filled with faces More beautiful than any artist's dream.

I like to think that I shall yet behold them, While this waiting room my soul has soared. Earth is a wayside station, where we wander, Until from out the silent darkness yonder Death swings his lantern and cries, "All aboard!"

I think death's train sweeps through the solar system And passes suns and moons that dwarf our own, And close beside us we shall find our dearest, The spirit friends on earth we held the nearest, And the shining distance God's great throne.

Whatever disappointments may befall me In plans of pleasure in this world of doubt, I know that life at worst can but delay me, But no malicious fate has power to stay me, From the grand journey on the great Death route.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOWS

Fixed truth it is, and has been ever Since first this earth was formed; Events that are forthcoming By their shadows are forewarned.

We look far down the ages, Through Sinai's cloud of smoke, To Israel's great deliverance By the words Jehovah spoke. And through the mists of centuries Our eyes may dimly see The brightness of the vision That shone from Sinai's peak.

Thus onward through decades of years We can praise with loud acclaim The birth of Nation's victories, And dark shadowings of pain.

While in our own heart histories, How clear the sight by day; If dark the gathering clouds appear, There is light along the way.

'Tis when the shadows deepen The beaconing hand of God appears, We love the early morning, But we fear the eventide.

SOME OTHER DAY.

There are wonderful things we are going to do, Some other day. And harbors we hope to drift into, Some other day. With frozen hands the oars that trail, We watch and wait for a favorable gale To fill the folds of an idle sail Some other day.

We know we must tell if ever we win, But we say to ourselves there's time to begin. Some other day; And so, deferring, we loiter on, Until at last we find withdrawn The strength of the hope we leaned upon Some other day.

And when we are old and our race is run, Some other day. We fret for the things that might have been done, Some other day.

We trace the path that leads us where The beckoning hand of God appears, Leads us yonder out of the here, Some other day.

"IF YOU LOVE ME LEAN HARD"

Child of my love! lean hard, And let me feel the pleasure of thy care, I know thy burden, for I fashioned it— Poured it in my own hand, and made it weight Precious that which I may best for thee. And when I placed it on thy shattering form I said, "I shall be near, and while thou leanest On my breast I will be with thee, not far." So shall I keep within my circling arms Thy child of my own love; here lay it down, Nor fear to weary Him who made, aphids, And guides the universe.

Thou art near enough. Yet closer come; Lean on me, that I may feel my love's feet, I doubt it not; then, loving me, lean hard.

When a young girl steps from womanhood, she enters a new and strange country. A land of promise and hope, yet full of hidden dangers. Whether she will find happiness or misery depends largely upon the health and condition of the delicate, special organism which is the source and centre of her womanhood.

The lives of young women are often wrecked because of a mistaken sense of modesty, which leads them to neglect the earlier symptoms of feminine weakness.

These troubles unless corrected, develop into serious chronic difficulties which become a dragging burden, ruining life's best opportunities and blighting all possibility of happy widowhood and motherhood.

Any woman suffering from these delicate complaints needs the health-giving power of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It heals and strengthens the womanly organs; stops weakness's favorite; gives vitality to the nerve-centres, and restores perfect organic soundness and constitutional energy. It is the only medicine devised for this purpose by a skilled and experienced specialist in diseases of the feminine organism.

Mrs. W. B. Duncan, of Arlington, Mo., writes: "I have used your 'Favorite Prescription' and am never tired of saying its praise. When my lady friends complain, I say 'Why don't you take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription?' I told an anxious mother, whose daughter (15 years old) had not been right for five months, about the medicine, and after the young lady had taken two-thirds of a bottle of 'Favorite Prescription' she was all right. She had been treated by two of our best doctors."

Dr. Pierce's Great Thousand-page Illustrated Book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" sent paper-bound on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only. Or, a handsome cloth-bound copy for 31 stamps. Address, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

More

Medicinal value in a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla than in any other preparation.

More skill is required, more care taken, more expense incurred in its manufacture.

It costs the proprietor and the dealer but it costs the consumer less, as he gets more doses for his money.

More curative power is secured by its peculiar combination, proportion and process, which make it peculiar to itself.

More people are employed and more space occupied in its Laboratory than any other.

More wonderful cures effected and more testimonials received than by any other.

More sales and more increase year by year are reported by druggists.

More people are taking Hood's Sarsaparilla today than any other, and more are taking it today than ever before.

Should the Cabinet Officers Have Seats in Congress?

In regard to the question of seats in congress for the cabinet officers, Speaker Reed, writing in The Illustrated American, says: It has been frequently asked, Why do we not avail ourselves of the services of the heads of departments; why do we not give them seats on the floor of the house and senate, and the right to speak and contend in debate; the right to bring in bills and propose measures? Undoubtedly, it is said, such a course would give to these gentlemen greater power and influence and the president would be able to call around him men of the highest standing, and even a seat in the senate would seem small in comparison. On the other hand, if these heads of departments were men such as have been described, they would have ample power to convince, and would add perceptibly to the grasp which both house and senate would have on public questions. This at least would be a fair contention, and if it were all that was to be said, conclusive. But even a slight examination will show that, whatever else this new creation might be, it would not be representative government, representative either of the states or of the people. Not only would the congress suffer by the proposed change, but the executive would also. There is to-day no more severely worked man than any United States head of department, except probably the secretary of war. If the department head had to spend his days in the house or senate and meet all comers and answer all questions, for the question system of England would have birth here at once, he would be utterly unable to do his department work except by the aid of a trained body of public servants, such as we do not have now and are unlikely to have until the civil service stands upon a much more satisfactory basis than it does to-day. To sum up the proposition, it could not be applied to the senate for reasons arising out of its constitution and habits. If it were applied to the house the direct control of the people, limited enough now, would be still more ineffectual. To give these officials any rights the constitution would have to be changed. To do this or to give them any privileges in the body would be to take just so much away from the representatives of the people in the only branch of the government in which they are recognized and recognized so very inadequately.

Mosquito Blessings.

"The Boston Transcript" is responsible for a new view of the mosquito, and while one strives to kill the tormentor it is well to keep in mind these four truths which it declares science has established:

First—A mosquito cannot live in air free from malarial poison. Untainted air has the same effect on him as a healthy community on a doctor—it deprives him of patients, and he must go to less favored localities to practice.

Second—The lymph, which flows through an automatic valve when it inserts its proboscis, contains a modified germ of the malarial fever, and according to the well-settled law of inoculation the introduction of the weak germ renders harmless an attack by the strong germ.

Third—The mosquito never swallows human blood. It cannot. The fact that its body becomes discolored and swells, while probing, is caused by the discoloration of the lymph in contact with the blood and the muscular effort of inserting the probe.

Fourth—A mosquito will never insert its lancet in a person not susceptible to an attack of malaria. In this respect its sense is more accurate than the most skilled and experienced pathologist. This also proves, not only its unerring instinct, but that it never wounds unnecessarily. Its thrusts are those of a skilled and human surgeon, and even more unselfish, for hope of a fee never quickens him, nor does the malediction of his patient deter him in the fulfillment of his duty.

END OF A NOTABLE CAREER.

Judge Doolittle, Who Was Opposed to Impeaching Johnson, Dead. Providence, R. I., July 28.—Judge J. R. Doolittle, of Wisconsin, is dead. The end came at 8:30 a. m. yesterday, and had been expected for several days. His affliction was Bright's disease. He was 82 years old, being a native of New York. He was the son of Reuben Doolittle, a prosperous farmer-merchant of Genesee county, and was the eldest of six children. He studied for the bar and began the practice thereof at Warsaw, N. Y., moving later to the west. He soon entered politics and was elected district attorney of Wyoming county, N. Y. Upon taking up his residence at Racine, Wis., in 1851 he ran for circuit judge and was elected, resigning in 1856 to devote himself to his private law practice.

In 1847 he introduced into the Democratic convention the famous "cornerstone" resolution, upon which and upon which Martin Van Buren made his campaign in 1848. Opposed to slavery, he left the Democratic party, becoming one of the founders of the Republican party. He was elected to the United States senate from Wisconsin Jan. 23, 1857. In 1863 he was re-elected. In 1865 he became offended at the policy of the Republicans and left the party, but retained his seat in the senate, although his constituents asked for his resignation.

In 1871 he was defeated as Democratic candidate for governor. In 1886 he ran for congress in the First district and was defeated. Of late years he had practiced law in Chicago, residing with his daughter, Mrs. Prindell, of Racine.

SUDDEN DEATH OF A TURFMAN.

Dr. McLean Passes Away at the Track After Seeing His Horse Win.

Cincinnati, July 30.—After watching his gallant filly Taluca win the Ohio stakes in the hardest kind of a drive, Dr. E. F. McLean, one of the best-known horsemen on the American turf, was attacked with heart disease and died a short time afterwards at the Oakley race track yesterday afternoon. McLean was sitting alone in the timbers' stand when he dropped over, gasping for breath. Medical aid was summoned, but despite the efforts of several physicians the turfman died just as the bugle sounded calling the horses to the post for the last race.

Price, the millionaire Baking Powder man, writes as follows: "Send me a dozen boxes of Gessler's Magic Headache Wafers. I would not be without them for all the world. They are the best cure for Headaches I have ever found and leave no head-ache you cannot afford to be without them." They are guaranteed to cure or your money refunded. A. E. Mummery, your druggist, will tell you there are none half so good. Price reduced to 25 cents per box.

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE.

Isaac N. S. Foster, of Ann Arbor Town is Dead.

The announcement of the death of Isaac N. S. Foster, at his home in Ann Arbor town, on Saturday morning last, was quite a shock to his most of friends throughout this city and county.

Mr. Foster had been a prominent citizen of this county for many years, and was universally respected for his strong character, high morals and virtuous life. He died quite suddenly Saturday morning at about 4 o'clock, from heart failure. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and interment was in the family cemetery at Geddes, near which he had lived so many years.

The following account of Mr. Foster's life is taken from the county history:

Isaac N. S. Foster was born at Royalton, Niagara Co., N. Y., Dec. 10, 1827, and is a son of Lemuel and Abbi (Fenn) Foster. His father was born in Massachusetts, March 12, 1793, a son of Lemuel and Dolly (Davis) Foster, who were the parents of 6 children, 5 sons and 1 daughter; Gustavus, who was born in 1818, and died in 1876, was a Presbyterian minister of marked ability, and once elected as Regent of the University of Michigan; Ulysses T. has been superintendent of the wagon manufacturing department of Michigan state prison at Jackson for over 35 years; Julius A., an artist, resides at Adrian, Mich.; Jones, a lawyer, resides at Lyons, Wayne Co., N. Y.; Isaac N. S., who lives on the old homestead, Palunna A., died in June, 1840, at the age of 18 years. The elder Mr. Foster came to Washtenaw county in 1836. He was married in New York, Oct. 6, 1817, to Abbi Fenn, who died in this county in October, 1855. Mr. Foster was again married in August, 1856, to Filinda Green, widow of Ebenezer Green of Salem township; both are residing with Isaac N. S., on sec. 23, this township.

Mr. Foster was highway commissioner for over 20 years, and was instrumental in locating the principal streets of Ann Arbor city. Isaac N. S., the subject of this sketch, received his education in the district schools, and a select school at Ann Arbor. Since he was of age he has had the management of his father's estate, comprising 240 acres of fertile land in Ann Arbor township. Mr. Foster has served his fellow citizens as township clerk for five years, commissioner of highways four years, and supervisor for four years. He was connected with the M. E. church of Ann Arbor in 1847, and has been a faithful member of that denomination since that period. He was married October 10, 1850, to Almira Green, daughter of Ebenezer Green, of Salem township, who came to this county in 1829. Two children have been given to this union—Ulysses T., a resident of Detroit, and George N., who resides on the farm.

About Our County Poor—

The County Poor Commissioners have made out and sent in their annual report to the Secretary of State, from which we have gleaned these facts:

The whole number of paupers cared for at the county house during the year ending June 30th, 1897, was 78. Of these there were 56 males and 22 females, the average number cared for each day being 45. Of these were insane 1, idiotic 4, blind 2, mute 3. Giving as Americans all whites born in this county, no matter of what descent, the nationality is given as American 37, English 8, Irish 15, African (mulatto) 4, Italian one.

During the year there were 10 deaths and no burials, the corpses being taken to Ann Arbor. In one instance the son and daughter of an old man, who were notified that $10 would give him a decent burial, neglected to furnish the means, and his remains shared the fate of others.

Temporary relief was extended to 805 indigent persons, and 57 were permanently maintained outside the county house.

The whole amount expended by the county for alms has been $12,162.29. The cost of maintaining the county house was $3,007.81.

OUR INLAND RESORTS.

will be found here thousands upon thousands of clam shells. In fact these shells have floated down in such quantities in some places as to form great bars in the river that are a serious danger to navigation by the steamer.

In making the trip the passenger is carried through Base, Big Whitewood, Little Whitewood, a series of small lakes known as the Buttermilk Rapids, Loom or Gallagher, Strawberry and Zukey Lakes. In this group of lakes is also Big and Little Portage, Roberts, Bass, Island, and two or three lesser lakes that we failed to hear named. There are lakes and lakes in all of which fishermen claim are fish in plenty.

There are no cottages or campers after leaving Base Lake until Strawberry is reached. Then the scene becomes a lively one. It would be difficult to enumerate all the cottages on this, Zukey and Island Lakes. It is a great resort, and the scene at the Ann Arbor R. R. station as the train pulls out at night would give a stranger an impression that some big city was in close proximity. On Sundays, if the weather is pleasant, there are some 200 or 300 people who visit these lakes, coming from Toledo, Dundee, Milan and Ann Arbor. It is a wonder, sometimes, where they all find places to stay.

At Strawberry Point, on Strawberry Lake, Hon. John F. Lawrence early spied out the beauties of the location and pre-empted the wooded bluff that arises from the shores, on which he and his friends have erected a cottage, and where they spend a good portion of their time in summer. Fred Besmer has bought some 18 acres of land and water, reaching into Strawberry upon one side and Bass upon the other. He will build a cottage in the grove on the hill between the two lakes and have a magnificent view of each. These two locations are the finest on this lake.

On Zukey, the prominent clubs are the familiar ones to Ann Arbor people of the Keystone, the Sporting, Oak Grove and Pot Luck, with numerous private cottages. Ex-Mayor W. E. Walker and wife have a cottage of their own here, and have everything very handy and convenient. They entertain a great deal, and both Mr. and Mrs. Walker are charming entertainers. They have everything, even to a steam launch of their own, with which to navigate the waters of the lakes.

Zukey Lake boasts of a steamer capable of carrying 30 or 40 people, two steam and two electric launches, and a number of small sail boats.

If you miss anyone from Ann Arbor just take a run out to these lakes, and the chances are you will find them somewhere about their shores.

The Ann Arbor R. R. is very accommodating to the campers here. A rate of 75 cents for the round trip is given from Ann Arbor, and fully as favorable rates from other points, and the baggage men have their orders to take to and from Hamburg Junction, which this station is called, all boats, packages, chairs, or any camping equipage or outfit free as baggage. This has done much to add to the popularity of these lakes as a resort.

There is some talk of erecting a hotel at Zukey Lake, but the cottagers all discourage it, and are unanimous in the opinion that it would kill the popularity of the place.

A Delightful Summer Resort—

After whiling away a day or so about the delightful shores of Whitmore Lake, the writer made up his mind that there were some foolish people in the world. Many of them no doubt are foolish from a want of knowledge of the facts. The foolish people referred to are those who expend time and money in going to some place distant from the city, into a region remote and without any of the comforts of civilization, when there is a place like Whitmore Lake, where all the desirable outing effects of water, shade and pure air can be obtained and at the same time all the comforts of pure milk, good butter, fresh vegetables, ice, and all those things that go to make life comfortable are right at hand.

Whitmore Lake has long been a favorite resort for many people, but never as great a resort as it should be or deserves to be. It is a beautiful sheet of water. There are no marshes or quagmires along its shores. The banks are all steep and mostly of a sandy nature, and such a thing as malaria is never known. The air is as pure and invigorating as can be found at any place on the continent, and the surroundings all that could be desired.

All tastes can be accommodated, for if people prefer hotel life there are two first-class establishments in that line that cater to the public, and do it remarkably well. If private family board is desired, that can also be obtained. Then on the east side of the lake is a long stretch of beautiful grove where tents can be pitched and all the pleasures of a life in the woods enjoyed.

Mrs. Widenman has erected some cottages at her grove, where those who dislike camping out may be under shelter and more protected than in a tent. At this place the lake is shallow for some 200 or 300 feet from the shore, making it an ideal resort for the family that possesses children, for they can paddle about in the water to their heart's content, and there is no danger of drowning. Farmers living within a short distance supply all the vegetables, fruit, butter, milk, eggs, etc., needed, at reasonable figures, which have the important quality of being fresh and good. One can live as plain or as high as their tastes and finances will allow, and in case of sudden illness, there are doctors and remedies within reach.

Eczema ON BABY

Grew Worse under Treatment of Best Physicians. Tried

CUTICURA REMEDIES

Great Change in Five Days and To-day is Entirely Cured.

My baby had Eczema in its worst form. One of the best physicians in the city attended her, but she continued to get worse all the time. He finally admitted he was at his wits' end. I then got CUTICURA REMEDIES, and in a few days noticed a great change in her condition. She continued to improve and to-day is entirely cured, has nice head of hair, and is lively and hearty. I spent considerable money for drugs and doctor's bills, which was useless. J. B. JACOBS, 2031 Wilkins Ave., Balt., Md.

On the north end of the lake the bottom is of light sand, and it slopes so gradually that a more ideal bathing place could not have been constructed. Here bath houses have been fitted up, and the resorts have merry times in the clear, pure waters of the lake.

A road encircles the lake, which makes a delightful drive of some five miles, and it is often used by the young people on the beautiful moonlight nights. If one wants rowing there is a three mile course. If fishing is desired there is plenty of fishing. With all these advantages, what more could be asked?

WONDERFUL SIGHTS.

New Features with Barnum & Bailey This Season.

UNUSUAL as it may seem one of the most picturesque and prettiest conceits ever devised is the new exhibition given in the menagerie tents of the Barnum & Bailey Greatest Show on Earth this year.

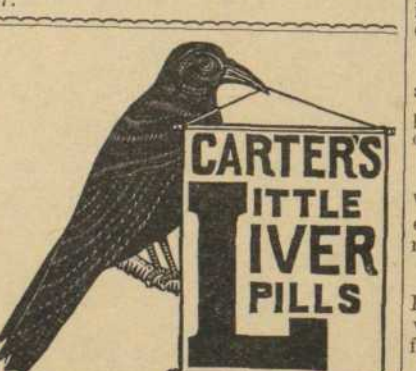

It was especially designed for those shows and originated with it, just as all the best amusement ideas have emanated from this concern during the past half century. The entertainment consists of actually 70 fine blooded horses, all of whom do almost incredible feats and tricks in one ring at one time, until finally the whole of 70 splendid animals are massed together, and, in many circles arranged in cone shape, one above the other, execute a thrilling drill, going in opposite directions within the small enclosure, when the scene presented is most imposing. In the menagerie tent magicians, jugglers, and prestidigitators flound merriment, music and mystery for all, and the curious are more than satisfied and gratified by seeing the living human curiosities such as the midget, giant and orissa twins.

In the arenas jaunty and vivacious ladies ride horses, act as clowns and ringmasters, perform on the trapeze and execute contortion feats, while the dapper, neat and agile men champions do everything a human being can do. The aerialists are wonderful, the trained animals most marvelous, the street parade an absolute novelty, while the whole affair is such that it appeals to all classes; to the refined and cultivated it serves to vividly impress upon their minds many things they may, perhaps previously have read about, and to all it is an object lesson. The regular performances of the circus are given in three rings, on three stages, and on the hippodrome track. There are, besides the two menageries, 24 elephants, the human arrow, Johanna, the greatest living gorilla, trained animals, and a myriad other most wonderful attractions. They will all be here on August 17.

James Tice, of Ann Arbor, earned $10 and the applause of about 300 spectators Monday evening, by diving from the top of Congress street bridge into the river, a distance of 50 feet. The feat was accomplished in a graceful manner.—Ypsilanti Sentinel.

The Daily Resorter, Bay View: Miss Florence H. Pomeroy and Miss Margaret S. Carhart, of Ann Arbor, arrived yesterday and will be the guests of Mrs. Hamilton Bogardus and daughters at Longden cottage, Terrace ave., for the next two weeks. Miss Carhart is the daughter of Prof. Carhart, of the U. of M., and spent the summer of '94 at Bay View.

That Cavanaugh is becoming well known as a summer resort is attested by the different cities represented by its summer residents. Its fame is not limited to the United States alone, for Japan and the Hawaiian Islands are the last to send representatives to her sands. Mrs. Carter of Honolulu and her Japanese servants having been entertained at Evert Scott's cottage for some time.—Chelsea Standard.

An Ann Arbor reporter drove over from that city Tuesday, to get an account of the James-Minor tragedy, and drove so hard to get to the depot, to wire his report, that his horse dropped in the road in front of Chris. Schmitt's house from exhaustion. He got to the telegraph office, however, in time to get his dispatch off.—Clinton Department Telemeter News. That's the kind of hustlers Ann Arbor reporters are. One horse is nothing.

Arrangements have been made by the city with the Green property, corner of E. Ann st. and N. Fourth ave., by which the sewer will cross a portion of the property from the end of the ally in the rear of the city buildings to Ann st., the Green property known as the Arlington House, and the five stores connected therewith, not to pay the assessment for the building of the sewer, or for making connections, either one. That makes those along the line of this sewer pay just so much more. If the city had compelled the Green property to have filled up the unsightly hole at the corner of Ann and Fifth sts., it would have done a good thing. But isn't this paying pretty dear for the whistle, anyway? Better buy the property.

A man drove into the city Friday with a hay rack loaded with wool, and sought a buyer. He finally made a bargain with Mack & Schmidt for the load, but his actions created Walter Mack's suspicions, and he informed the man that before giving him the check he must get some one to identify him. This he said he could not do, but went out of the store to try and find some one and has not been seen since, although the officers have been very desirous of finding him. The team he drove, it has since been ascertained, was taken from Walled Lake, and the wool was stolen from Milford. As he appeared here early in the morning with the wool, he must have made a rapid drive. The chances are that he has made his escape, but it was a narrow one.

Dr. and Mrs. Chas. L. Mix, who have been in Europe for the last two years, where the Dr. has been pursuing studies, are guests for the week of Mrs. Mix parents, Rev. and Mrs. W. E. Caldwell, of Church st. They will locate permanently in Chicago.

The pamphlet issued by the M. C. R. R. giving information relative to the coming G. A. R. national encampment at Buffalo, N. Y., is very neat and tasty. It is handsomely illustrated and tells people many things they want to know about, especially if they contemplate going to the encampment.

A branch of the American section of the Theosophical Society was organized here during Mrs. Besant's recent visit. Dr. M. Maywood Sears, F. T. S., is the executive officer at present. The society starts off with a membership of 13, and anyone desiring to interest themselves in this occult science should confer with Dr. Sears.

Paul G. Suekey, of this city, was connected as a chemist with a sugar beet establishment in Austria before coming to America, consequently he has considerable knowledge of the industry. He is now taking a course in chemistry at the Summer school, and the Detroit Journal has contracted for a general and extensive description of the industry from his pen.

Regular services at the Presbyterian church will be resumed next Sunday, Rev. H. W. Gelston, of Deland, Fla., occupying the pulpit in the morning, and Rev. J. W. Bradshaw of the Congregational church in the evening.

The Ann Arbor Mandolin and Guitar Club will give a social Friday evening, at the residence of Earl Ware, No. 61 Broadway. Music by the mandolin club, the gilt-edge band and vocal solos by Walter L. Taylor, I. G. Reynolds and Frank McIntyre.

Dr. Wm. Blair who has been spending the last three weeks at Bay View and the neighboring resorts returned to the city last Saturday. Mrs. Blair will remain in Bay View two weeks longer. The Dr. can be found at his office, cor. Main and Huron sts., from this time forward.

The transportation information circular for the 31st national encampment of the G. A. R. to be held at Buffalo Aug. 23-27, has been issued. From it we glean the fact that official encampment trains will pass Ann Arbor on the M. C. R. R., on Aug. 23, at 10:05 a. m., and on the Ann Arbor R. R. at 8:40 a. m.

The Daily Resorter, Bay View: Miss Grace Lord Lamb, of Erie, Penn., who has been at the Longden cottage the guest of Miss Helen M. Bogardus, during the month past, left yesterday for Ovid. Miss Lamb came fresh from graduation honors at the U. of M., and was much benefited by her sojourn in this delightful resort.

On Monday afternoon, while a little five years old son of Milton Steffy, of Northfield township, about five miles north of here, named Emery A., was playing about the yard where the threshers were at work, he was run over by the tank wagon, and instantly killed, the wheels passing over his head and crushing it.

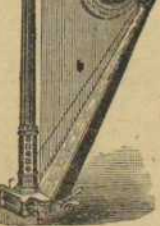

About 25 members of Welch Post G. A. R. attended the annual picnic of the Salem Soldier's Association, held at the farm home of S. C. Wheeler, Esq., on Saturday last. Speeches were made by Geo. S. Wheeler, Esq., Capt. W. K. Childs, Rev. Mr. Coffin, and Rev. Chas. P. Allen of Detroit. The occasion was a memorable one.

The diapason of a general jubilee goes up at Ann Arbor. The old cockroach den, misnamed the "opera house," has been purchased by Louis J. Lisemer, a well-known newspaper man of that city. For years the Ann Arbor opera house has been a standing guy on the university town and a reproach to the shades of Shakespeare. Its appointments are something awful, and all the powers and preformers of the empire of the immortals could not bribe the ghost of Hamlet to stay under the stage five minutes. Mr. Lisemer we do not doubt, will place matters on a different footing and preformers of the empire of the immortals could not bribe the ghost of Hamlet to stay under the stage five minutes. Mr. Lisemer we do not doubt, will place matters on a different footing and preformers of the empire of the immortals could not bribe the ghost of Hamlet to stay under the stage five minutes.

At the regular association meeting of the Y. M. C. A. last evening, the committee reported their work for the month. The excursion committee reported a net profit of $126.23 off the excursion to Detroit, on which were over 600 passengers. (The profit to the Association ought to have been more than that.) The recent lawn social com. reported a profit of about $9, and the 4th of July stand a profit of $20; all of which had been turned into the fund for furnishing the new gymnasium. A very kind offer of Mrs. Weidmann of Whitmore Lake, to give the use of her grove there free of charge, for the use of the Y. M. C. A. members if they desired to camp there for a time, was announced. The colors maroon and pink, were decided upon as the colors of the association. There was a prayer meeting in which much thankfulness was expressed for the success of the association in securing a building site for a permanent home, and a determination expressed to push the raising of $1,500 now needed to build the gymnasium.

Only Complete Menageries. It is boldly asserted by the manager of the Barnum & Bailey Show, that he possesses and exhibits the only complete menageries in the world. That neither in Europe or America can there be found one nearly as complete and that among the most valuable and rare wild beasts and split hoof species are many coveted by European zoos. Twenty-four elephants, a Niger antelope, a horned antelope, quail, eland, wart hog, several species of deer, Malay tigers, known as saddle backs, and many others are among the new additions this year, while Johanna, the giantess gorilla, the blue-nosed mandrill, giraffe, hippopotamus, rhinoceros, and the seven den of performing wild beasts are still very attractive portions of this department of the show.

Electric Light THE BEST

Some of the Advantages of Electric Light:

	Cubic feet of air vitiated.	Cubic feet of carbonic acid produced.	Heat produced in 1 lb Watt's raised 1° Fahrenheit.
12 c. p. Incandescent Lamp	None.	None.	13.8
12 c. p. Gas Light	345.25	3.21	278.6
12 c. p. Kerosene Lamp	376.30	3.54	232.6

Some of the Disadvantages of Gas:

Air consumed.	Carbonic Acid thrown off.
Heat.	Unsteadiness of Light.
Freezing Pipes.	Danger of Suffocation.
Humidity.	Danger from use of Matches.
Ceilings Blackened.	Water and Air in Pipes.
Sulphur thrown off.	Metals and Gildings Tarnished.
Ammonia thrown off.	Sulphuretted Hydrogen thrown off.
Gas cannot be inverted to throw light down.

None of these Disadvantages Accompany Electric Lighting.

In general the Incandescent Electric Light is much healthier and much more convenient to use than any other method of lighting, and is more economical for amount of light furnished than gas.

Electricity for all kinds of Power. Electricity for Heating.

Barns Cost Money

to build, and will cost money to replace. Paint 'em and save 'em. Paint of the right sort, carefully used, will give good returns on the investment. The barn will last longer and look better. Lumber that has become weather beaten, is beginning to decay. Good paint closes the pores of the wood, stops decay and preserves the structure.

THE SHERWIN-WILLIAMS CREOSOTE PAINT is the best barn paint. It is made for use on coarse grained woods. It is good for barns, roofs and fences. The colors are right, the paint is right. It is economical.

If you are in doubt as to the best paint to use for bath tubs, chairs, cupboards, shelves, baseboards, buggies, boats, plows, wagons, floors, houses—for any paintable thing under the sun—send for "Paint Points." It is a booklet for the housekeeper and house owner. It tells what is good paint and bad paint, when to paint, and how to paint. It is a handy book for any one to have. It is free. WELL FED BOILERS

The right boiler feeder saves trouble, time, fuel. The most perfectly automatic, the safest, most economical feeder made is the U.S. AUTOMATIC INJECTOR. More lasting than others. No other injector has an overflow valve which will never leak from wear. No other injector has a drip cock which enables injector to start (even if the check valve leaks) which drains the injector and prevents freezing; which prevents suction pipe from getting hot. It is easier to operate, feeds hotter water, works with lower and higher steam than any other automatic injector. If your dealer does not keep it make him order it for you, or write to

The wheels in his head are liable to make the wheel he rides wheel him into disaster.

Word has been reached at this place announcing the death of Orlin Clark on July 21. Mr. Clark went to California on the Christian Endeavor excursion about six week ago to visit his son, and had been there but a few weeks when he died.—Chelsea Herald.

Mrs. Frank Staffan has settled with Sylvan township for injuries received by being thrown from a buggy while driving over a strip of bad road between Chelsea and Cavanaugh Lake. She accepted $200. That amount, properly expended, would make a good stretch of good road.

A cyclone, high in the air, rushed rumbling like a railroad train over Dundee last week. The wicked, that is to say a majority of the people, fell on their knees in supplication, but the cloud had not been half an hour past till they were cussing around as usual.—Adrian Press.

N. H. Wells, who has been janitor of the Manchester school building for the past 17 years, has declined to serve another year. The board cuts his salary $50 because others offered to do the work for less. He receives $300 a year, and everyone who knows about it says he earns every penny he gets.

German crap are becoming so plenty in the race and upper pond that the boys catch them by the dozen and go trailing long strings of them home. What they do with them is not very well known. Authorities differ, some claiming these fish are fine eating while others say their only value is for fertilizing purposes.—Jonesville Independent.

The Times continues its "county correspondents" over the signature "Remarc." The next lot will probably be subscribed "Star." Both signatures, read backward, mean the same thing.—Ypsilanti Sentinel. This might mean—enough to make a minister mad. Read "mad" backward.—Adrian Press. This makes one think of a mad dog. Don't read "mad dog" backward.

"Stop that man!" yelled a deputy sheriff at Saline, last week, as a hobo, wanted for looting a freight car, sped along the street. A young man who heard the call, carelessly stuck out a potent Saline foot. He knew what he could do. The tramp fell over it—there was no getting around it—and was caught.—Adrian Press. A feat to be proud of.

Burdette and the Bicycle.

A report got in circulation to the effect that Bob Burdette was dead. The Burlington "Hawkeye," with which the humorist was formerly associated, denied the rumor, and Bob confirms the denial in the following letter to the editor, dated Bryan Mawr, June 14, 1897:

My Dear Waite: Like the true friend and loyal comrade you ever were, you do right to protest against my burial prior to the autopsy.

I am indeed very much alive. Not only so, I haven't been dead even a little bit. Not once. Could have been, had I wanted to be. Could be yet. But I don't want. May be I ought to be, even now. But, as we make weekly confession—"We have left undone those things which we ought to have done."

Possibly the rumor that I have gone dead grew out of the fact that I have learned to ride a bicycle. I say, "have learned." Not "am learning." Learned in one lesson. All by myself.

Went out in the moonlight last Friday night to learn, having first locked my family in the house and forbade them to look out of the windows. Led my bicycle out on the turnpike—the Bryan Mawr pikes are broader than the way to destruction, twice as smooth and much cleaner. It's a young bicycle—a colt, foaled in '97. Would give the name but for the fact that I had to pay for the wheel. Will only say, therefore, in accordance with the ethics of our profession, that it is NOT the wheel anybody says it is.

I held him by the withers right in the middle of the road, and mounted without assistance.

I dismounted in the same independent manner.

Got on again and proceeded to break him to saddle.

Did I ride the first time? Well, say!

People had told me—liars of all ages and both sexes—that I couldn't fall, if, when I felt that I was falling, I would stick out my foot.

I stuck out both feet and both hands and fell on my head.

I fell on one side of that diabolical wheel and then on the other; I fell on both sides at once; I fell on top of it and made "dogfalls" with it. I fell between the wheels. I fell behind the wheel and before the front one at the same time and don't know yet how I did it. I fell and thrust both legs through the spokes of one wheel. I met a terrified man in a buggy and drove him clear off the pike through Wheeler's hedge, and I don't think he has come back yet.

Every time I fell I slapped the palms of my raw, swollen, throbbing hands on the hard "inelastic" pike, except the time I fell on my head. I fell harder and with greater variety of landing than any man could fall unless he dropped out a balloon and lit in a load of furniture. I lost my confidence, my patience, my temper, my clamps, lamp, bell and reputation. I broke one pedal, the saddle, and the ordinance against nud, boisterous and abusive language at night. I ran into everything in sight except the middle of the road. I sat down on everything in the township except the saddle. I scorched in a circuit not fifteen feet in circumference until you could smell brimstone. I made more revolutions than a South American republic, and didn't get ten feet away from where I started. I haven't been so mauled and abraded, so thumped and beaten, so trampled upon and pounded, so bruised and scratched since I left the army. But I can ride.

I don't say that I "do." But "can."

Do I consider "biking" good for the health?

For the health of some people, I do. I don't see how a physician can bring up his family unless his children have something to eat.

But in my own case, I reserve my decision. I will wait until I know whether I am going to die or get well. And do you tell Brother Davis to keep his obituary on the standing galley until he hears from "Slug Nine." I don't believe I've got "30" yet. Although friends who have called to see me break down when they say "good-by" and walk out of the room on tiptoe. But I wouldn't mind that if I knew what became of my shoulder blades the time I ran under the hay wagon.

Cheerfully yours,
ROBERT J. BURDETTE.

CAN CURE ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER.

A Noted Physician Offers to Prove This to all Sufferers in Ann Arbor

The majority of sufferers from Asthma and kindred complaints, after trying doctors and numberless remedies advertised as positive cures without avail, have come to the conclusion that there is no cure for this most distressing disease, and these same persons will be the more in doubt and skeptical when they learn through the columns of the press that Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann, the recognized authority who has treated more cases of these diseases than any living doctor, has achieved success by perfecting a remedy which not only gives immediate relief in the worst cases, but has positively cured thousands of sufferers who were considered incurable. These were just as skeptical as some of our readers now are. Dr. Schiffmann's remedy no doubt possesses the merit which is claimed for it or he would not authorize this paper to announce that he is not only willing to give free to each person suffering from Asthma, Hay Fever or Bronchitis in this city, one liberal "free trial box" of his Cure, but urgently requests all sufferers to call at Good-year's Drug Store, Ann Arbor, within the next three days and receive a package absolutely free of charge, knowing that in making the claim he does for his Cure, a strong doubt may arise in the minds of many, and that a personal test, as he offers to all, will be more convincing, and prove its merits, than the publishing of thousands of testimonials from persons who have been permanently cured by the use of his Asthma Cure. "Dr. Schiffmann's Asthma Cure," as it is called, has been sold by druggists of this city ever since it was first introduced, although many persons may never have heard of it, and it is with a view to reaching these that he makes this offer. This is certainly a most generous and fair offer, and all who are suffering from any of the above complaints should remember the date and place where the distribution will be made, and avail themselves of the same. Persons living out of this city who desire to test the efficacy of this most wonderful remedy will receive a package free by writing to Dr. Schiffmann, 330 Rosabel street, St. Paul, Minn., providing their letter is received before Oct. 16th, as no free samples can be obtained after that date.

SHIRRED BASQUE-WAIST OF TAFFETA SILK IN EARLY ENGLISH STYLE.

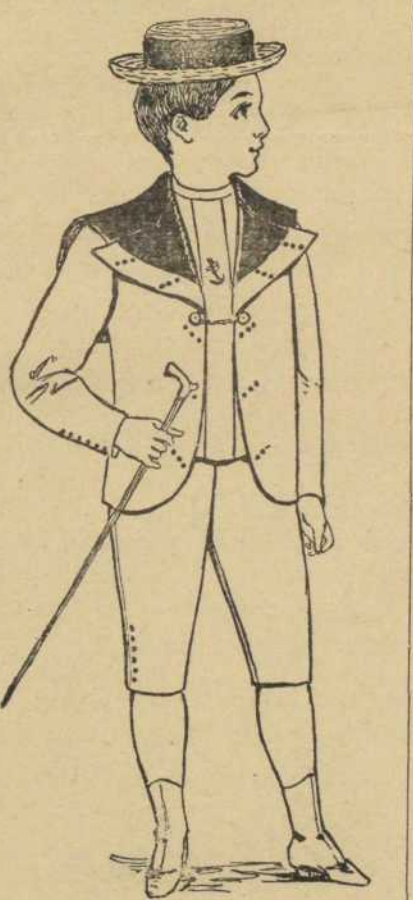

There is such a wide choice in separate waists and their practical value is so undeniable that the limit in attractive modes of this kind cannot be said to have been reached. The ridiculous and exaggerated, however, have been discarded, and we now have sensible and even fanciful modes easily made with a moderate amount of goods. The early English style illustrated is noted for its distinctive arrangement of fulness which is drawn in double rows of shirring to round yoke depth. Dainty touches are, of course, given by the bands of insertion and by a fanciful ribbon stock and belt. Mushroom puffs are at the top of the coat-shaped sleeves which have fancifully-pointed wrists and a frill of lace edging drooping over the hand. Such a waist may be worn with circular, gored or full skirts that will be trimmed or plain. A very pretty and becoming mode was copied from it in rose valing relieved by black velvet ribbon. The inexpensive taffeta, China and Liberty silks are also good selections for the waist which requires insertion or ribbon for garniture.

The Butterick pattern is basque-waist No. 9236; 8 sizes; bust measures, 30 to 44 inches; any size, 25 cents.

DRESSY SUIT OF LIGHT-BROWN MIXED CLOTH, WITH DARK BROWN SAILOR-COLLAR.

This natty suit comprises a jacket, a middie vest and short trousers and also a plain underwaist to which the trousers are buttoned. The vest has a box-plait at the center of the front on which an anchor is embroidered and it appears between the open fronts of the jacket. A large sailor-collar of dark-brown cloth is a dressy feature of the jacket and it looks well with the light-brown mixed cloth of the remainder of the suit. The dark cloth also faces lapels turned back on the fronts just below the ends of the collar. The button decoration on the jacket gives a very dressy effect and a silk cord looped over buttons connects the fronts at the lower ends of the lapels. Buttons also ornament the trousers, which are made without a fly, closing at the sides. A suit made like this of any fancy woollen outing, serge or flannel or of crash or duck will delight little boys who like to be smartly dressed and with such a suit a sailor hat with rolling or flat brim will be appropriate.

The Butterick pattern is suit No. 9176; 7 sizes; ages, 4 to 10 years; any size, 25 cents.

NEW MODES...

Strings have entirely disappeared from bonnets, though elderly women do not take kindly to the change. When bowed under the chin they conceal the lines in the throat and other marks of age, and to long, slender faces they are exceptionally becoming.

When the bride is adopted, it is preferably of inch-wide, double-faced satin or velvet ribbon, velvet being of course, the so-called fabric. Strings give a matronly air to the wearer, therefore, young women avoid them. With evening attire, for the theatre or opera, there is a dainty head-covering of soft cream lace, which is frilled over the crown and forms a narrow face frill. In front is a spread bow of two-inch black velvet ribbon with a crescent of Rhinestones at each side. At each side of the back is a fan of lace and all across the back are clustered pink roses without foliage.

Sets of six graduated braid loops, either with ball or olive buttons or without buttons, are shown in fanciful and simple designs for waists. Six loops of this character in one braid decoration are furnished for each front of a basque, which thus acquires a military air. Three loops to match may be set upon each sleeve and a pair may be fixed upon the front of the collar—presumably in military style in such a waist.

The proper relation may be established between waist and skirt by arranging a set of three loops at each side of the side-front seams at the bottom. Very smart effects are possible with braid trimmings, while her or silk or mohair, but they must be sewed with great nicety. This is laborious work, it is true, but then the result well repays one.

The shopper's gaze is arrested at every turn by the array of exquisite fabrics for gown; destined for all sorts of social functions and for all sorts and conditions of wearers' textural marked by simplicity and textiles of rare sumptuousness.

There is a witchery about the new gaze d'chambray which few can resist and it is a fabric which all save elderly women miss with impunity. Its shimmering, gossamer quality recalls the pineapple cloth of India and it is equally dainty. It is a mixture of silk and goat's hair, the latter being responsible for its lustrous quality. Plain and in stripes may this fabric be obtained, the stripes being in light tones on white surface, to which they impart a tinge of color.—From the Indianapolis.

COSTUME OF ETAMINE AND VELVET WITH EIGHT-GORED SKIRT.

Nearly all the stylish Summer toilettes have boleros with rounding or square front edges, and in some of their various guises they are improving to both the gown and its wearer. In freshening a dress, these small accessories produce an altogether new effect, and if a pointed girde is added the appearance is still more dressy. In the costume illustrated the fronts are turned back all the way down in fancy revers and the lining is faced in vest effect with velvet. Very short, narrow bolero fronts are chic. The sleeves are finished in the style and the neck complexion is improving and dressy. The eight-gored skirt is handsomely trimmed with ribbon velvet and its shaping and adjustment is perfect.

Some good suggestions are offered in the mode which is appropriate for a wide range of dress goods and permits of moderate or lavish decoration. The new weavings of serge, camel-hair, cloth and novelty suitings may be made in this manner, with silk or velvet for the contrast.

The Butterick pattern is costume No. 9096; 11 sizes; bust measures, 30 to 44 inches; any size, 40 cents.

A JAUNTY SAILOR COSTUME OF WHITE SERGE WITH BLUE BRAID AND AN EMBROIDERED ANCHOR FOR DECORATION.

Sailor costume are so natty and comfortable not only for the seas but also for the country and general outdoor wear that one should be included in every wardrobe for the Summer outing. On the return to the city these costumes if made of flannel, mohair or serge are satisfactory for school or play frocks. The cos use as here made of white serge is dressy and cool-looking. The blouse slips on over the head and a pretty feature is a square sailor-collar with pointed ends facing a shield facing on an underwaist. The shield is ornamented with an embroidered anchor and rows of blue braid edge the sailor collar and trim. The wristbands of the full bishop sleeves. The blouse is supported by the underwaist and made with a smooth gore at the front. Braid is placed at hem depth on the skirt all round. Skirts made with a front-gore and gathered only at the back and sides please little girls; they are newer than the plain round skirts and hang very prettily, standing out well at the sides. Sailor suits for Summer are made of duck, Madras, crash and pique, the pique dresses being trimmed with insertion. On woollen braid is the popular trimming.

The Butterick pattern is costume No. 9202; 9 sizes; ages, 4 to 12 years; any size, 25 cents.

MURDER OF CASTILLO.

Details of the Killing of the Premier of Spain.

THE DEED WAS ONE OF REVENGE.

Senor Canovas del Castillo Shot Down by an Anarchist Assassin in the Presence of His Wife—He Dies with the Words "Long Live Spain" Upon His Lips—The Whole Country Shocked at the Sad Occurrence.

Madrid, Aug. 9.—The assassination of the prime minister of Spain, Senor Canovas del Castillo, who was shot and killed by an Italian anarchist, whose name is believed to be Michele Angino Gollí, at the baths of Santa Agueda, Sunday afternoon, was undoubtedly cold-bloodedly premeditated. Gollí deliberately watched for an opportunity to kill the Spanish statesman, and he only fired when he had no chance of missing. In fact, the assassin who was arrested almost immediately after the premier fell dying at the feet of his wife, has declared as much to the examining magistrate. The prime minister lingered for some time in agony and passed away with a cry of "Long Live Spain."

Further details of the assassination show that Senor Canovas del Castillo and his wife were present Sunday morning at the celebration of mass in the chapel attached to the baths. After mass the premier was reading and conversing with some reporters when the assassin approached and fired three shots at him with a revolver, hitting him in the forehead, chest and left ear. The wounded man fell to the ground crying, "Assassin! Long live Spain!"

Died at 1:30 P. M.

The premier was carried to his room and expired at 1:30 p. m., after extreme unction had been administered him by a priest of the Dominican order. The murderer, who was immediately seized by the people who were in the vicinity of the scene of the crime, was severely handled and might have been killed had it not been for the protection afforded him by a number of civil guards, who soon ran to the scene of the assassination. The prisoner, who declared he had killed the premier "in the accomplishment of a just vengeance," at first gave the name of Rinaldi, and claimed that the deed was the outcome of an extensive anarchist conspiracy. Later, however, the assassin confessed that his real name was Michele Angino Gollí; that he was 26 years of age, a native of Boggie, near Naples, and that he left Italy and came to Spain in 1896. After reaching Spain, Gollí, according to his confession, resided at Barcelona and participated in the doings of the various anarchist societies of that place and vicinity. After sojourning at Barcelona for some time Gollí visited France and Belgium and returned to Spain in July last. After his return the anarchist seemed to have completed the plans for the assassination of the prime minister. Left Madrid for Santa Agueda at the same time as Senor Canovas del Castillo and waited an opportunity to assassinate the statesman.

Gollí's General Appearance.

In appearance Gollí is of medium height, wears a full beard and spectacles, and his demeanor is that of a quiet, law-abiding citizen. He says he is satisfied with having done "his duty" and asserts that he had no personal grudge against the premier and was merely obeying orders received from his superiors in the secret society to which he belonged. He frankly professes anarchist doctrines, says he was sentenced in 1895 to eighteen months' imprisonment in the jail at Lucera, Italy, and claims that he escaped from there to Marseilles from which port he made his way to Barcelona.

Senora Canovas, wife of the premier, who was but a short distance away from her husband when the crime was committed, rushed to his side upon hearing the shots. As the premier lay dying on the ground she bitterly reproached the murderer for his crime. Gollí, in reply to the agonizing words of the distracted wife, said: "I respect you because you are an honorable lady, but I have done my duty and I am now easy in mind, for I have avenged my friends and brothers of Montjuich."

The Spanish newspapers express great indignation at Gollí's crime. Even the journals that have Republican leanings praise the services of the dead statesman. The Imparcial says:

Black Day for Spain.

"Yesterday will prove a black date for Spain. The crime will centuple the indignation of society against this would-be destroyer."

A number of newspapers appeared bordered in black. A post-mortem examination of the remains of the premier was made Monday morning prior to embalming them for transportation to this city. The funeral will be most impressive. The indignation expressed for the crime is shared by all parties in politics and it is generally believed that the members of the colonial secret societies were concerned in the outrage.

It is reported that Senor A. Pidal, president of the chamber of deputies, will be appointed president of the council of ministers in succession to the late premier at the expiration of the official nine days' mourning. The ministers for the present will meet in council daily. Gollí developed in the examination before the magistrate Monday that he succeeded in firing two shots at the people who arrested him before he was overpowered. The assassin calls himself a "revolutionary anarchist."

"RETRIBUTION," SAYS PALMA.

He Declares That Premier Canovas Deserved No Better Fate.

Turners, N. Y., Aug. 9.—Estrada Palma, who is at the head of the Cuban junta in this country, in an interview commented upon the assassination of Canovas as follows:

"While I have no sympathy with the assassin, I cannot help but feel that the act was one of retribution. Canovas, more than Weyler, has been responsible for the cruelties practiced by the Spanish troops in Cuba. It was by his orders that women and children were murdered and wronged. He deserved no better fate."

"His death will be Cuba's advantage, for it complicates political affairs in Spain. As the leader of the majority, he was sponsor for Weyler. His great rival is Silveira, the leader of the Conservative minority. It is true that Silveira recently suggested that Cuba be given autonomy, but he cannot maintain that position as a conservative leader. The Liberals under Sagasta would indeed grant us autonomy, but we will accept nothing less than absolute independence. As a man I deplore such a misfortune, but as a Cuban I cannot help but feel that I am benefited by it."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for testimonials.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Feb. 10, 1897.
Dear Sirs:—I write to assure you of my appreciation of your kindness in selling me a Ludwig Piano. No. 3, a little more than a year ago, I have had as good talent as there is in the state sit down to it, and they all say that for volume and superiority of tone it can't be beat, and I will say to you that to stand rough usage I never saw its equal. It will hold its tone without tuning under almost any circumstances. It is a very superior instrument, and I congratulate myself on being fortunate enough to have a Ludwig, and I commend you as being honest in every word you told me in regard to the instrument. I am trying to make a sale of a Ludwig here for you to one of our neighbors. I am more than satisfied that with such an instrument you can't help but be successful.
Thanking you, I am,
Yours truly,
LEE S. BROWN,
Attorney.

LETTER FROM PARIS.

What an Ann Arbor Girl who is in Paris is Seeing There.

The following is from the pen of Miss Martha D. Taylor, who is now in Paris, to her sister in this city, which we are allowed to publish through her kindness. It is very interesting:

Avenue d'Antin 33.

Paris, July 20th '97.

Yesterday afternoon I went with Mrs. Ross to visit the Gobelins the place where the tapestries are made and where many elegant ones are on exhibition. It is a government factory, but, it seems, the tapestries are never sold, given away only to kings and ambassadors, and used for the decoration of government buildings in France. The art is kept in the Gobelins family—the inventor—and carried on from father to son. About sixty men are kept employed and one man can weave only a square meter a year. Think of it. Some of the most beautiful tapestries were "Nymphs et Bacchus," a copy of a painting by Le Tabor, portrait of Le Bron, the first decorator of the factory. "Combat of Beasts," and a copy of Raphael's great fresco in the Vatican "The Expulsion of Heliodorus from the Temple." We went and came by a "boat omnibus." The Seine which is a beautiful broad river, is only two blocks from us. When we go to the Louvre, or anywhere that is near the river, it is convenient to walk down to the landing of the Pont des Invalides and take one of these boat omnibuses. They are boats that ply constantly up and down the river, and the fare is only ten centimes (2c). The other means of transport in Paris is by omnibus, fare on top, 15 centimes (3c), inside 30 centimes (6c). There are no electric cars in Paris, consequently it takes a long time to get from one place to another. Did I tell you that the grounds of the Paris exposition or a part of them are just across the street? From my window I see a big building opposite Palais d'Industrie. This was built for the Paris Exposition of 1855, and has been used for all expositions since, and every spring for the Salon. I was so sorry to miss the Salon. Now they are tearing down this big building and acres of ground are inclosed while great preparations are going on inside for the Exposition of 1900. We must come over than Grace, in'est ce pas? They are to build, Badeker says to some people, four great palaces there for the exposition, and a magnificent new bridge across to the Esplanade des Invalides.

I visited the Hotel des Invalides Tuesday and the Tomb of Napoleon. The Hotel des Invalides is a great Soldiers' Home, founded by Louis XIV in 1671. Only about two-hundred disabled veterans live there now although there is room for many more. The rest seem to be sitting around on the street corners begging, although perhaps those begging have lost their legs in other ways. There are as many beggars here as in Rome. In Germany on every door you see "Verien gizen Betteln und Hausieren." Association for the prevention of Begging and Book Agents, freely translated. But Germany is a model country in many respects. Everything is reduced to a system there, and many things are "verboten" that are permitted elsewhere.

The Hotel des Invalides contains a museum of armor which is very interesting. I visited two rooms in one of which were figures clad in the manner of warriors from the stone age to the time of Caesar. There are other rooms, continuing the story seventy-five figures in all, but I did not have time to see them. Then there is the Eglise des Invalides, a chapel in the hotel. All along the walls overhead are hung flags taken by Napoleon in his different battles. They are dirty, tattered rags, but very interesting, bearing the dragon of China and the emblems of many other peoples of the West and the East. The great dome, or cupola is connected with the church, although the door is closed and the entrance is from the front. This dome is gilded and can be seen for a great distance. Under it, in a magnificent sarcophagus lies Napoleon Bonaparte. The sarcophagus of brown onyx stands in a crypt below the surface of the paving of the chapel. Around the sides of the crypt are twelve frames of figures, representing Napoleon's twelve great battles. Between every pair of statues is a standard bearing ten flags taken by Napoleon in battles, sixty flags in all. It seems that 1500 flags taken by Napoleon were burned in 1814. From the cupola above, a dim blue light falls on the marble crypt and on the sarcophagus. The effect is very impressive. You stand against a marble railing and look down at the sarcophagus below you and up at the dome, beautifully frescoed by French artists. The chapel, or "Dome," as the entire room is called, contains a magnificent altar and crucifix of marble, tombs of two of Napoleon's great generals, and a few other tombs of soldiers. It is a beautiful spot, and very impressive when you reflect on Napoleon's victories and on his end. There seems to be a great deal of unrest and dissatisfaction in France. Many are tired of the republic and young Louis Napoleon now in Russia, is only waiting an opportunity to come back to the throne. I wonder what the history of France will be in the next fifty years? M. Faure goes to St. Petersburg very soon on some mission or other and I read in the "Figaro" that given a furlough so that he will be absent from the city at that time. The house of the President is a magnificent Palace, very near here, the Palace of Elysee. It is guarded by sentries day and night.

I saw President Faure and Madame, Wednesday. It was the 14th of July, the anniversary of the fall of the Bastille, and a national holiday. All shops were closed, but there was little enthusiasm. In the afternoon the President reviewed the troops of Paris at Longchamps, Bois de Boulogne. How I should have liked to go, for I have seen no such thing over here. But I contented myself with going with Miss Turner and sitting in a chair at the side of the Champs Elysees, and watching the soldiers as they passed by on their way to the Bois, and the gay throngs, who rode by in carriages, principally hired cabs, to witness the review. We saw Faure pass in a carriage, surrounded by mounted galloping soldiers. Those ahead carried cocked pistols and all had their revolvers ready in their pockets. There was not a bit of enthusiasm as he passed the crowds, not an "Hurrah!" It seemed so odd. Madame Faure came later in a carriage in a gorgeous violet gown. It seems that several dynamite bombs have been discovered recently in the Bois de Boulogne, Church of the Madeleine and other places. The socialists are bound to blow up some one.

It is so noisy today. No one would dream it was Sunday. All the stores, or most of them, were open this morning as I went down to church on top of a bus. A force of men were washing the windows of the great store of the Louvre. Men are tearing down the Palais de l'Industrie today and I hear carpenters in the next house. In Germany Sunday is a holiday, a day of recreation for the family. Here it seems to be a day like every other day. I went this morning (alone of course) to the church of Saint Etienne where the music is very fine. I was too late for the great opening chant, but what I heard was fine, and the priest who preached spoke beautiful French, and had one of the finest voices I ever heard. The church is beautifully frescoed and the service conducted by three priests in gorgeously embroidered gold stoles, was more impressive than any I have ever seen. The choirsters wore red skirts with lace over-dresses and broad red sashes. The little choir boys wore blue and white. It made a magnificent picture. The German Protestant church seemed almost like Catholic to me. There was so much form and they chanted the services, and intoned just as they do in the Roman Catholic church.

I have been twice this week to the museum of the Luxembourg. Every gallery is called a "museum" over here. The ancient Palace of Luxembourg is used now for the meetings of the Senate; the gallery is in a smaller building in the garden. All pictures there are by living artists. After an artist has been dead five years the pictures are generally transferred to the Louvre. There are some beautiful pieces among the statuary, especially a kneeling figure of Jeanne d'Arc by Henri Michel. In the "Galerie des Etrangers" is Watts' "Life and Love," one of the pictures that made such an impression in Chicago at the time of the World's Fair. I was interested in seeing it, but do not find it at all remarkable. A little picture there by Folts Von Uhde, the German realist, pleases me much more. I have often seen photographs of it. It represents Christ coming into the dining room of the poor man's house, as the family are about to sit down to dinner.

"Kommt Herr Jesus unser Gast Legnet und beschonigt Uns." This is the blessing at most German tables and these lines are written under the picture. I do not care for all of his paintings, but some are wonderful. I want to go to the Luxembourg again, and think of all I have to see in the Louvre! I have visited a lot of churches and there are a great many more to see. St. Sulpice contains many.

A business man is not the most patient creature in the world. He cannot wait to hear any long-drawn-out story of the cause of his ailment. He doesn't care two straws about a fine spun theory of how he should treat himself. He may be predisposed to scrofula, or consumption. "That," he will tell you "has nothing to do with the case." He wants to be well. If he can be cured write out a prescription and send in your bill. So, here's the first part of the proposition.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a microbe hunter and killer. Many persons of scrofulous blood, encourage the breaking out of unsightly sores, to prevent the disease going to the lungs. There is no need of this stage of dread and discomfort. Purify the blood. It can be done. Golden Medical Discovery will cure 98 per cent. of all consumptive cases, also of all other lingering bronchial, throat and lung diseases.

A Story About Ambassador Hay.

As Mr. Hay was walking down town one day, wondering what classic theme he should tackle next, imagine his astonishment at seeing the dead walls and board fences all plastered over with big yellow bills, announcing in huge letters that a story, "written expressly for the 'Weekly Slasher'"—it is not necessary to identify more particularly our esteemed contemporary—"by the rising young poet, John Hay, author of 'Little Breeches' and other popular ballads, will appear in this week's issue; sold at all news-stands; price ten cents per copy!" With cold chills running down his back he hastened to the "Slasher" office, where he found the editor, in his shirt sleeves, hard at work reading the proof of an advertisement which was about to be inserted in some of the great dailies, stating that the "Slasher" had "procured, at enormous expense, this great autobiographical notice of 'the brilliant young poet,' etc. Hay shot questions at the editor as fast as he could find out what he meant by this. The editor reminded him that, away back in the days before he had made any reputation, and when he was glad to turn out stories for what he could get, he had written one which, after various vicissitudes, had found its way into the "Slasher" office, been paid for, pigeon-holed and forgotten. "But my name was not signed to it," gasped Hay. "Oh, that's neither here nor there," chuckled the editor; "you wrote it, didn't you?" "I believe I did." "Well, you're a man of honor, and you won't deny its authorship. So what does it signify? We had your name on our books, because we made out a check to you. One of my assistants is a pretty shrewd fellow, and when he happened to come across that story in clearing out a desk the other day he recognized its commercial value at the present juncture, name and all." "What will you take to give it back to me and suppress your announcement?" "Money wouldn't buy it, Mr. Hay. I know an advertisement when I see one and the 'Slasher' has not had one as good as this in a dog's age. No, sir. Your story's in type, with original illustrations, and in type it stays. I'm sorry to seem unaccommodating, but business is business, and good will doesn't count in a matter of dollars and cents. Good morning, Mr. Hay." Hay delivered himself vigorously of a piece of his mind, which the editor took with the utmost serenity. As the visitor was indignantly swinging out of the sanctum the editor looked up from his proof-sheet to add one more remark: "By the way, Mr. Hay, if you care to write us another story any time we'll be glad to pay you a good deal better price for it than you got for this." Hay did not wait to answer, but his soliloquy as he descended the stairs would hardly sound well in the polished European courts where fate has landed him now.—Bour-lenne in The Illustrated American.
