THE COUNTY FAIR.

IT IS BOOMING ALONG IN GREAT SHAPE AND WITH GOOD WEATHER.

IMMENSE LIST OF ENTRIES.

Never in the History of the Society has there been such a Rush of Exhibits.

The County Fair opened for business yesterday with brilliant prospects. There never has been a greater demand for space, and the entries are enormous in nearly all lines.

To-day the schools are in line, and the children of the country and city are having a glorious day's outing.

To-morrow will be Gov. Pingree's day. If the Governor is not lost, as the Detroit papers assert. As he never makes a promise he does not fulfill, it is believed that the Detroit reporters will be able to find the governor of Michigan at the fair to-morrow.

Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, occurs the wedding. The ladies especially are having this in mind, and the crowd attending will be very large.

Everybody is coming, too. Not only are the exhibits great, but the crowd is great also, and the farmers, though quite busy, are coming to see the show and greet old friends.

Unless all signs fail, this will be the most successful fair ever held in Ann Arbor.

Friday the stores and places of business in the city all close to give their employes an opportunity to attend.

A Profitable Occasion—

The County Teacher's Association held the first meeting of the year Saturday, at the High School building. The pupils of the Ann Arbor schools furnished music, singing several pieces in the line of the humane work.

Dr. R. C. Copeland gave a half hour on the "Care of the Eyes," and not only instructed the teachers in a matter of vital importance to those under their care but interested the children as well.

Mrs. L. M. DeWitt gave a carefully prepared paper on the "New Woman," which met the hearty approval of all.

Commissioner Lister spoke of the work of the District school teachers and noted the increasing demands of the profession and suggested means for meeting some of them through a system of County Teachers classes, to be carried on under the direction of instructors located conveniently through the county, which plan seems to meet the hearty approval of all the teachers.

Prof. Chute talked interestingly on the subject of physics, and Prof. C. A. Hoyt of the Normal College gave a short address on the application of child-study to the work of the teacher. The address was well received and was full of excellent suggestions.

The next meeting of the Association will be held in Chelsea.

Where do the Dollars Go?—

It is a mystery even to the bankers where all the silver dollars go. Inquiry into the banks shows that every year the Ann Arbor Savings Bank orders from Washington some 25,000 new shiners, the Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank order 15,000, and the State Savings 10,000. This makes $50,000 a year in silver dollars absorbed in and about Ann Arbor.

The Ashley's are After Burt—

Chas. S. Ashley as executor of the will of the late Gov. Jas. M. Ashley, has commenced suit against Wellington R. Burt, receiver of the T., A. & N. M. R'y, for the recovery of $38,000 in bonds, and real estate to the value of $35,000; also against Geo. W. Quintard et al., of New York, for the recovery of 182 shares of the preferred stock of the Ann Arbor R. R. Co. It is said that there has been a lack of harmony for some time between the Ashley's and Burt, and that ever since the latter was appointed receiver he has been acting against the Ashley interests. It is said that he did many unkind things to prevent the last settlement made with the directors. Although Burt is said to be a good fighter, he will find that when he gets the two Ashley boys after him he has got his hands full.

In regard to these suits the Toledo Blade of the 23d had this to say: It is said that a number of other suits are in preparation, and that the whole amount involved will be very large.

Mr. Charles S. Ashley was seen this morning, and requested to explain the circumstances reaching to these suits. He would say little, however, beyond the following: "I have little to say, beyond the facts stated in the petitions filed. The case simply is, as to Mr. Burt, that my father conveyed to him a considerable amount of real estate several years ago, which he subsequently deeded to the Ann Arbor Railroad Company, and received the price therefor, but but for which my father never received the least consideration. As to the $38,000 of bonds sued on in another section, I have a letter from the attorney of the reorganization committee, in which he disclaims, for the committee, any claim on these bonds, and I yet have to learn that anybody has any claim on them. These bonds were taken out of my father's private safe by W. R. Burt, at some time during the past four years, and he has retained them under his control.

"It is needless to say that I regret very much, for obvious reasons, to go into the litigation. In fact, I would have sacrificed considerable to have avoided it. Mr. Burt, however, has refused to answer even the letters which Captain Everett has written to him on the subject, and I had therefore, no alternative."

Questions Answered by Burdette—

Where, oh where has the young man gone whose graduation clothes were put on sometime along the last of May and who owned the whole world for a day? And where is the sweet girl graduate who chanted an essay dread with fate, and who started out with a giggling frown to turn the whole world upside down? And where is the last year's candidate who had things fixed up for last year's slate; who carried around as you'd believe a couple of countries in his sleeve? And where is the scribe with a vaulting will who tried a long felt want to fill, and courted shekles and renown with a minion paper in a burgeois town? The lad has divided the world up fair, and holds but his own eight-billionth share; the sweet girl graduate is a surprise and conquers the world with well-made pies; the candidate with the deathless "gall" is fixing himself for another fall; while the journalist with the haughty crest has gone the way of the day by day the world rolls on in the same old way; the balloon that is biggest round about is the flabbiest rag when the gas is out.—Robert J. Burdette.

Under the new statute, which went into effect Sept. 1, all cases of violation of the fish and game laws will be tried in the circuit court instead of police and justice courts. The penalty provided for guilt will be raised to 60 days' imprisonment instead of 30 days.

THE BRAVE BOYS IN BLUE.

Those Who Fought in Willcox's Division Had a Grand Reunion at Lansing Last Week.

Fredericksburg! Vicksburg! Williamsburg! Petersburg! Harrison's Landing! South Mountain! Hatcher's Run! Fort Sanders! Yorktown? Chantilly! Antietam! Spotsylvania! Fort Steadman! Blue Springs! Campbell's Station! Strawberry Plains! Bethesda Church! The Crater! These were some of the historic names blazoned around the walls of Representative Hall in the State Capitol, where was held this week the reunion of Willcox's Division—"the wheel-horse of the ninth corps." It is nearly thirty-seven years since Col. Orlando B. Willcox led the old First Michigan out in response to President Lincoln's call for 75,000 three-months' troops, and started upon the illustrious career which took him and his brave men of the First Division through the awful storms of shot and shell that those names recall. It is about a third of a century since they marched in the grand review; yet several hundred of them can meet together now to greet their old commander and revive the memories of the camp, the march, the fight, and sing:

The tattered flag we bore that day,
As we marched in the grand review,
Though shot and shell had found their way,
To march in the grand review.

And though our heads are turning gray,
Our guns and knapsacks laid away,
We often think of the glorious day
When we marched in the grand review.

The reunion was a splendid success, in point of attendance and of interest. The gallant old division, which buried beneath the soil of more states than almost any other, embraces the 2nd, 8th, 17th, 20th and 27th Michigan Infantry and 1st Michigan Sharpshooters, besides the 60th Ohio, 79th and 109th N. Y. and 45th Penn. The Michigan regiments were all well represented, and the others somewhat less so. The only Ann Arbor comrade I saw was Robert Campbell; but C. S. Wortley A. A. Van Cleve and Henry S. Fordy of Ypsilanti, W. H. Webb of Pittsfield, John H. McDougall of Superior, besides several from Chelsea, and other parts of Washtenaw County helped to fill the ranks.

The business meeting of the Willcox Division Association elected Gen. Willcox honorary president for life. He is retired as a Brigadier General, and has his residence for the most part in Washington, though claiming Detroit as his home. He is 74 years old, and quite grey, though well preserved. The association officers for the ensuing year are, Gen. W. H. Hammond of Jackson, president; J. T. Hammond of Jackson, sec'y. and treas., with a vice-president from each regiment. The next meeting will be at Battle Creek. Regimental meetings were also held and officers chosen as follows: 2nd Mich., pres., W. R. Morse of Flint; sec'y., Albert Dunham of Jackson. 17th Mich., pres., Wm. Winegar of Grand Rapids, sec'y., C. D. Cowles of Lansing; 20th Mich., pres., Andrew Knight of Battle Creek, sec'y., Geo. M. Knowles of Battle Creek; Sharpshooters, Pres., Robert Finch of Grand Rapids, sec'y., Fred G. Stone of Lansing. All the reunions next year will be at Battle Creek. The 17th also had a banquet at one of the churches, and the 20th had one at the Armory.

The great event of the occasion, was the general camp fire on Tuesday evening, where the committee found they had builded better than they knew, so that the state building proved inadequate. The camp fire should have been held in a ten-acre lot. More people than were ever before under one roof in Lansing were said to be there, and those who could get in listened with great delight to the exercises, which included addresses by Gen. Willcox, Gen. Wm. Humphrey of Adrian, Senator Burrows and others. Auditor General Dix, a veteran of the 2nd Mich., was master of ceremonies. In his person, by the way, I was gratified to observe at Buffalo, our state received an honorable distinction. He was detailed by Commander-in-chief Clarkson to wait upon President McKinley and official escorts, Past Commanders-in-chief Alger and Heath, and escort them to their station, a duty which assigned him a position with

Anti-Tramps Hold a Meeting—

There was not a very heavy attendance at the annual meeting of the Anti-Tramp Society, at the court house Friday evening. The annual report of the President, Rev. J. W. Bradshaw, was an interesting document, full of good suggestions. Mayor Chas. E. Hiscock, the treasurer, reported that he had received during the year $96.65, and expended $94.65, leaving a balance on hand of $2. The following officers were re-elected: President—J. W. Bradshaw, Secretary—Chas. H. Cooley, Treasurer Chas. H. Hiscock. The work will be continued along the same lines this year as last, and the success of the experiment is quite manifest. This society has certainly taken the right course to rid the community of tramps, and all they need is the cooperation of citizens, and their firm refusal to feed or give to any of that class.

A Fortunate Misfortune—

A crash and a rush of people to the Fourth ave. side of the Cook House last Thursday afternoon, at about 4:30 o'clock, was found to be caused by the caving in of a portion of the front wall of that building then under construction.

The portion of the building known as the kitchen between the new addition and the old part was being altered to conform to the new part, and the masons had reached the top of the fourth story, with the brick work. One of the workmen below noticed that the mortar in the old wall had commenced crumbling and by quick work warned all the other workmen so that when the wall tumbled out there was no one hurt. It was a close call however for the horse that did the hauling, and its master, but they all managed to escape without a scratch, which was really quite miraculous. It was the most fortunate misfortune that has happened in a long time.

The accident will cause Mr. Nowlin considerable additional expense. Not only that, but the delay just at this time will be quite bad. And yet Mr. Nowlin can be thankful that the accident was no worse.

The B. P. W. Calls a Halt—

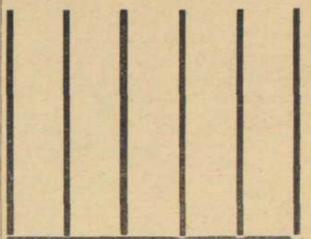

The board of public works has turned the council down now. At the last meeting of the council the board was ordered to pave a gutter on 13th st., a distance of about 1,400 feet, on both sides of the street. This the board declined to do on the ground that the street fund was already overdrawn and there was no money to pay for it with. The board also gave the council a little good advice in this resolution which it passed: "It is the sense of this board that hereafter no more buildings be allowed to be moved through the public streets of the city."

But then, a council that will deliberately ignore the Board of Fire Commissioners, and against a perfectly clear and plain provision of the city charter, give permission for wooden buildings to be constructed within the fire limits of the city, will probably pay little or no attention to such a modest request as that.

It looks very much as though the republicans in Greater New York had thrown away any possible chance for victory, but perhaps they have not.

The total amount expended for pensions during the year ending July 30 last was $141,200,551, which is an increase of $1,747,761 over the previous year. Since 1865 the payments for pensions have aggregated $2,148,156,095.

If Ann Arbor ever had an opportunity to secure the Lima Northern R. R., she has lost it, for the route has been decided upon, the contract let, and work already begun. It will run from Adrian to Dundee, thence through Trenton, to Detroit. Good bye Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti, etc.

When the banks have reduced the rate of interest on gold money from 4 to 3 per cent. our friend of the Democrat talks about a money metal that appreciates in value. What irony!

There was a little matter of $20,000 discrepancy between the books of the county treasurer and state treasurer in favor of the state. County Treasurer McLeod and Auditor Lawrence went to Lansing and soon found errors enough in the books to make the matter straight.—Wayne Review.

Isn't that a queer sort of an item? Or is it all right? The state authorities are usually pretty accurate.

Those who really have an idea that the spirit of bimetalism is dead should put an ear to the ground and listen for the echoes of the silver camp meeting which begins in Springfield, Ohio, this week. The grandest Roman of them all, Wm. J. Bryan, will be there and sound the keynote of the campaign in Ohio.—Democrat.

Yes, if the telegraph didn't lie about it—there were some 500 people there all told. The people have had their ear to the ground. They have heard about Bryan and silver before.

Judge Kilgore, familiarly known as "Buck," when in congress, and who made himself famous one night by kicking in the doors of the House of Representatives at Washington, when Speaker Reed had ordered them locked in order to count a quorum, died at Ardmore, Ind. Ter., Sept. 23. He was a Georgian by birth, and was a member of the 50th, 51st and 53d congresses from Texas, as a democrat, of course. He was appointed chief justice of Indian Ter., by President Cleveland, and made a most admirable and just judge, commanding the respect of all shades of political beliefs.

The fact that the farmers are enjoying a temporary rise in the price of their products on account of the failure of eastern harvests does not lessen the force of the argument in favor of a money whose purchasing power will not constantly appreciate. In time of peace prepare for war. In this brief period of prosperity the people should take steps to prevent the recurrence of the conditions which have prevailed for some years and which must come again when the wheat fields of Europe and India blossom forth with another bountiful harvest.—Democrat.

The constant appreciation of gold is simply talk nothing else in the world. But supposing it isn't, what of it? Would it not be better to have money that either holds its own or gets better, than to have a money that is constantly depreciating and getting less and less valuable in the hands of its owners? Do the working people of this nation want money that is continually depreciating? Hardly.

Keep Up Your Scott's Emulsion in Summer-time

What are your resources for the summer? Have you an abundance of health stowed away for the long, hot, depleting days, or does summer find you low in vitality, run down, losing flesh, and weak? Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil will give you the proper reserve force, because it builds up the system on a solid foundation. A tonic may stimulate; Scott's Emulsion not only "boosts," it sustains.

It is a wise precaution always to have at least a small bottle of Scott's Emulsion in the house. Unopened, it will keep indefinitely. Tightly corked, after using, kept in a cool place, it will remain sweet for weeks.

The government proposes to use the reindeer in Alaska to get food to the people at Dawson City. The government owns some 63 of these animals, and has ordered 49 sent to St. Michaels to make the trip from there to the Klondike. They can travel 100 miles a day easily, each one drawing 300 lbs.

The October issue of The Atlantic Monthly is the 40th anniversary number. For all these years the Atlantic has given the students and educated people of the nation the very choicest literature of the day, the cream. That it has withstood the rage for cheapness in monthly periodicals, and held its own against the storm, and kept on with its high standard, shows how firmly it is rooted in the minds of the reading and thinking public of America—particularly the latter.

A speaker in Iowa, at a recent democratic free silver pow wow, stated that it was untrue that Bryan received $500 a speech while in that state, and said that he received nothing; but that if his speeches were worth $500 a piece, he, Bryan, should be credited with $9,000 contribution to the campaign fund, for he will make 18 speeches in the state. On the strength of that statement, the free silver papers—the Detroit Tribune, for instance—have great black headlines, reading: "Bryan Put Up $9,000 for the Iowa Democratic Campaign Fund." Carrying the idea of course that Bryan was rich, for only a very rich man could give $9,000.

The democracy of Michigan will view with satisfaction the departure of John J. Enright from the Detroit postoffice. Originally a scullion in the Cleveland establishment his democracy was co-incident with his opportunity to pocket the proceeds of a fat office. When there was no longer opportunities for men of his stamp in democratic ranks, he quickly deserted to the other side.—Democrat.

That's all right. The more such men the so-called democratic party kicks out of its organization, the less brains there is to run it, and the result will be as with any other machine: when left to itself, without any brains in command, it will run away with itself, just as it did in Chicago, with Tillman at the helm.

As the result of the development of our public school system and the cheapening of the books, there has grown up a large class of men and women who seek broader education, or desire to extend their knowledge along special lines. Their duty in life, or lack of means, exclude them from the universities. The Cosmopolitan Magazine has undertaken the task of bringing liberal education, in its broadest sense, within the reach of those who have the aspiration, but are deprived of the opportunity. Doctor Andrews, late of Brown University, has undertaken the Presidency of the Cosmopolitan's educational movement. The work, thus begun, is not intended to take the place of regular university work, but to supply a gap in existing educational facilities. Those who are really in search of knowledge will find direction and aid. It can do nothing for those who have not the desire to study. An intending student sends to The Cosmopolitan, New York, his name, occupation, previous course of study, studies desired to be pursued, objects and purposes for which course is designed, and the number of hours, daily or weekly, study which can be given. No charges of any kind will be made to the students.

The G. A. R. as a Spur of Patriotism.

The simple presence of a detachment of the Grand Army is a quickener of the feeling. These days have sore need of the stimulus. Chivalry seems all but dead among us. The pursuit of business is this day's dominant impulse. Men even fear the voice of chivalry lest it may arrest some current of a commercial scheme. But the uniform and the grizzly beard of the Grand Army veteran is a reminder of an illumined period when men of similar tastes and equal commercial ambition flung them contemptuously aside for country and glory. Of hardly less value than the common school is the education in the sentiment of patriotism and obedience to its call which the Grand Army is teaching the present generation.—The Illustrated American.

SOME FAMOUS BLUNDERS.

Does it ever happen that the Democratic party chooses a "modern instance" to exemplify one or the other of its theories or whims-whims but that fate instantly makes the aforesaid "instance" exemplify something exactly to the contrary of the party's avowment? For example, during the Presidential campaign the Democratic party took Japan for its "modern instance," and bade us observe how the empire was flourishing by and because of its adoption of a silver policy. Whereupon fate instantly moved the imperial government to recur to a gold standard and to affirm that the conditions of trade made this necessary.

In the last campaign but one the unfortunate Democracy chose the tin plate as its "modern instance." It swore its experts in the open court of debate and made them give evidence that tin plate never could be manufactured with profit in the United States, and that the sole effect of the McKinley duty on imported plate would be to increase the price of all articles of tinware, and especially of "the poor man's dinner pail." Whereupon things went thus: The output of tin plates in the United States prior to the enactment of the McKinley law had been practically nothing at all; in the year 1892, when the Democratic experts were swearing that they could not be made in this country, 13,646,716 pounds of tin and terne plates were made here; next year the amount rose to 99,819,202 pounds; next year to 139,223,467; next year 193,801,073; and in 1896 to 307,228,621 pounds. And at this point even the Democratic leaders had sense enough to cease from denying the self-evident.

Nor has this magnificent development or rather creation, of an American industry been accomplished by an increase of price to the consumer. In July, 1889, the year before the imposition of a duty upon imported tin plate, the "poor man's dinner pail" sold at $6.50 per gross; in July, 1895, the price was $5.50, and in July, 1896, it was $5.40. In 1890 the price per box (108 pounds) of charcoal tin plates in New York was $6.05, and of coke tin plates $5.15; in 1895 charcoal tin plate was $5.39 per box and coke was worth $3.66. In 1889 we imported 331,311 long tons of tin plate, worth $21,726,707; in 1896 we imported 119,171 long tons, worth $6,149,161. That is to say, we kept at home rather more than $15,500,000 that we had been accustomed to send to Great Britain in payment for tin plates.

In 1892 it was the fashion for every smart Democrat, orator or writer, to speak of the Inter Ocean as "the tin plate advocate." In 1897 it may be well to refer these gentlemen to the Inter Ocean's columns of the campaign year of 1892, and to read in the light of today's achievements the predictions then made. There is provocation to say "We told you so." But it is useless to tell the Democratic party anything. When it is blundering about one thing it is blundering about another. In 1892 it blundered about tin plates, in 1896 it blundered about "16 to 1," and it looks as though it were going to blunder about government by injunction in 1900.—Inter Ocean.

Mrs. Andrew D. White Injured—

The New York Tribune of Sept. 22d had this dispatch, which will be of interest to some of our people who remember the lady: Berlin, Sept. 18.—Andrew D. White the United States Ambassador, and Mrs. White have been visiting friends in Dresden during the week. Mrs. White, while riding a bicycle in the park, was run over and injured by a man, who grossly insulted her and then escaped.

A woman's attractiveness in the eyes of man depends largely on her physical appearance. Nature, in order to preserve the race, guides mankind by the instinctive preference for a mate who is physically sound and wholesome. If intellect alone were chiefly sought, the offspring might be a generation of Solomons for wisdom, but they would perish in infancy for want of physical stamina. A weak or unhealthy woman is unfitted to fulfil her part in perpetuating the race; she is unequal to the demands of motherhood and wifehood, she is robbed of her natural womanly attractiveness. Many a woman is cheated of life's choicest gifts by a dyspeptic, bile-poisoned condition of the system, which shows itself in a pimply skin, sallow complexion, tainted breath, or thin, ungraceful form. The most perfect remedy for all the mortifying symptoms of mal-nutrition and impure blood is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Through its remarkable effect upon the liver and digestive organs it sweeps all impurities out of the circulation and creates a fresh supply of new, rich, life-giving blood. It gives clearness and bloom to the complexion; sweetens the breath; rounds out the face and form, and invigorates the entire constitution with vital energy. It restores the invincible beauty of wholesomeness and womanly capacity.

"I was a complete wreck; appetite gone, nervous system impaired, could not sleep, and was so weak that I could not stand on my feet ten minutes," writes Miss Ella Bartley, of No. 213 1/2 South Grant Avenue, Columbus, Ohio: "I only weighed 95 1/2 pounds when I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. After I had taken a half bottle I began to improve; I could sleep soundly the whole night, and would awaken with an appetite for breakfast, which was a rare thing as I never had for two years back; eaten a hearty breakfast. I now have an excellent appetite, and my friends say they never saw me looking better or in better spirits since they knew me. I tell them it is all due to Dr. Pierce's 'Discovery'."

In all cases of obstinate constipation, the "Discovery" should be supplemented with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

Security and Chance.

The instinct to lay by stores for a "rainy day" is the instinct of self-preservation and of civilization. It has led to the development of life-insurance companies and banks and savings institutions of all sorts. It leads the well-to-do to forego high rates of interest in order that the income from their wealth may be as certain and secure as possible. It is this same instinct that leads careful persons of limited means to turn to the government for their small savings.

In establishing postal savings banks a nation carries its people forward a step in civilization, inasmuch as it is giving to them an additional security against misfortune. A person who puts his savings into the post-office bank will know that when hardship and want overtake him, whether because of misfortune or declining years, his money will be forthcoming. The fact that there is such a safe place of deposit will induce many to make provision against future want who otherwise would permit themselves to become charges upon society when misfortune overtakes them or when old age finds them unprepared to earn a support by their labor.

To the persons for whom the postal savings bank is intended the rate of interest paid on deposits is of minor importance. What such persons want above everything else is absolute security against loss. They want to eliminate from life the danger that in their declining years they may find themselves without the means of sustaining existence.

Congress should establish a system of postal savings banks for the people of the United States without further delay.—Chicago Record.

Nansen's Generalship.

Dr. Nansen does not attempt to classify all the facts collected by himself and his colleagues. Even if time had permitted, the classifications would prove too technical for the general reader. He merely indicates these epoch-making discoveries, and contents himself with a deeply absorbing and graphic account of the exciting and perilous experiences through which the men of the "Fram" passed during the period of their unbroken association, and with describing the incidents of the hazardous sledge journey performed by Johansen and himself. The zigzagging of the "Fram" across the frozen area forms a very peculiar and suggestive study; and it is also curious to note that at one time the vessel was not far from the "farthest north" point after Nansen and his lieutenant had left her. It was by means of the sledge-journey however, that the record was broken; and it is this achievement which entitles Nansen to the distinction of being ranked as the "Columbus"—or, more correctly, the "Cobot"—of the Arctic regions. A century of the Arctic exploration has yielded fewer results than Nansen's five sledge journey of three years. The modern Norsemen had, during the first part of the voyage, to battle with precisely the same difficulties as beset the earlier explorers, and when the crucial test of courage and endurance was applied, Nansen and his men were not found wanting. Not a single life was lost on this awful expedition; and every man came back from the desolate land in unimpaired vigor of body and mind. Though the narratives of the "Fram's" voyage and the sledge-journey are told with great modesty, there are great evidences of Nansen's capacity for generalship. He was the stern disciplinarian when occasion demanded, the general comrade, and the resourceful and unflinching antagonist in the hour of danger. It is, indeed, a moving narrative of heroic endeavor which Nansen tells in the simple and direct, yet eloquent, language which carries one onward with a feeling of exhilaration. Dr. Nansen talks both humorously and buoyantly, and his pathos doth ring true. With singular felicity he deals with the lighter side of the experiences encountered by the small and devoted band of explorers. Those who have a penchant for anecdote will find plenty to amuse them in the bear stories, and in the descriptions of the episodes of every day life on board the "Fram," when the dreary period of waiting for the ice-movement had fairly set in.—The Bristol Press.

A Million Dollars Destroyed.

"Every working day in the year Uncle Sam destroys a million dollars; deliberately tears up and grinds to pulp one million dollars' worth of paper money—genuine bank notes and greenbacks," writes Clifford Howard in the September Ladies' Home Journal. "A million dollars in one, two, five, ten, twenty, fifty, one-hundred, and one-thousand-dollar notes are daily punched full of holes, cut into halves and thrown into a machine that rapidly reduces them to a mass of mushy substance.

"Whenever a piece of paper money becomes soiled or torn it may be presented to the United States Treasury and redeemed. Sooner or later every note that circulates among the people becomes unfit for further service, for it is bound to become dirty or mutilated by constant handling, and the United States Government stands ready to give the holder of such a note a new note in exchange for it; or, in other words, the government will redeem it.

"The majority of the clerks employed in this important department of the government are women, many of whom are the most expert money counters and counterfeit detectors in the world. In fact, only experts can properly perform the work that is required; for not only must the soiled and mutilated money be accurately and rapidly counted, but all counterfeit notes must be detected and thrown out. When we consider that some counterfeiters can so cleverly imitate genuine money that their spurious notes will circulate through the country without detection, and are not discovered until they are finally turned into the treasury, some idea of the proficiency of these experts can be gained, especially when few bear in mind that these notes are often so worn that the imprint on them can scarcely be deciphered. It not infrequently happens that these bad notes are detected simply by the feel of them, which, in some cases, is really the only way of discovering the fraud; for while a counterfeiter may occasionally succeed in so perfectly imitating the design of a note as to mislead even an expert, it is next to impossible for him to counterfeit the paper used by the government."

Personal Magnetism in Women.

The law of compensation finds convincing testimony when one stumbles upon a woman of the plainest possible appearance who yet has that indefinable attraction which we call magnetism. The woman who can fascinate both men and women, and whose admirers are not confined to any age or condition, is the one who can penetrate cynicism and find the heart beneath it, who can allure with faint suggestions of her real self veiled in elusive caprice, who can excite curiosity, show herself capable, or surrender with the sweetness of meekness, be mocking and tender all in one breath. Her eternal interest in things outside of herself invites confidence, her sympathy encourages and her appreciation flatters. She is never tired of her kind. Each life which presents itself before her is more interesting than the latest popular work in fiction, and her interest is real and not assumed.—Hester Hoffmann in the Illustrated American.

When She Came Out!

She tripped across the shingle,
And she bathed her pretty toes;
My blood seemed all a tingle,
And I colored like a rose;
So sweet was her demeanor
That it made me want to shout—
But heavens! if you'd seen her
When she came out!

She was dainty as a posy
When she faced the curling waves;
So creamy and so rosy,
All the rifles were her slaves;
They didn't dare caress her,
As she paddled all about—
But heavens! if you'd seen her
When she came out!

The Farmer Was Fixed.

A well-to-do Georgia farmer invited a merchant friend to dine with him. The merchant was known for his crankiness and had once or twice tried to shoot people for imagined wrongs. The farmer had considerable dealings with him, and they were on the best of terms. However, the farmer always kept a wary eye on him.

Several days after the dinner at the farmer's house the merchant said to him:

"I can't account for the queer feelings and impulses I have occasionally. For instance, the other day when I was dining at your table it suddenly came into my mind to kill you, though I had nothing in the world against you. I had a pistol in my pocket at the time, and once I had my hand on it, when the strange feeling passed from me."

"Don't let that bother you," said the farmer. "I knowed all about your failings in that line, an' I wuzzent asleep when I saw your hand to your hip. My son John wuz standin' in the hallway, back of you, with a shotgun leveled at you, an' you just did save your bacon by changin' your mind. Ef you hadn't he'd er blowed daylight through you."

—Frank L. Stanton, in Atlanta Constitution.

The World as it is and Was.

The earth which we find to-day bright with varied hues, vocal with innumerable sounds, rich in fruits and fragrant with odors, lay for an almost incalculable period of time destitute, or all but destitute, of color, soundless, save for the noise of wave and tempest, and with no promise as yet of the rich profusion of vegetable and animal forms that now diversify its surface and fill it with the thrill and manifold activities of life. We often speak of a man as "the heir of all ages," but not often, probably, do we pause to realize the significance of the word. We talk of evolution, but seldom make any due efforts to grasp the plenitude and grandeur of the thought. These senses of which we have the use, and each of which brings a different world within our ken, whence are they? It seems so natural to see; it seems so natural to hear, to touch, to smell, to taste, that we forget through what slow process, by what an incalculable number of slight accretions and delicate modifications these wonderful channels of knowledge and sensation have been made for us. We go back through the ages and we come to a sightless, voiceless world. For a period probably as long as all the rest of geological time the only forms of life were protozoa. Sight was developed among the wonderful crustaceans of the Silurian period, but as yet there were no organs of hearing. The first stridulation of an insect wing was heard (if it was heard) in the Devonian age, the birth epoch of the first vertebrates, fishes; but long ages had to pass before the first bee hummed over a flower or the first butterfly fluttered its wings in the sunshine.—From Editor's Table, in Appleton's Popular Science Monthly for August.

What a Newspaper is For.

There are people who have a queer idea about the mission of a newspaper. They think that a paper is a medium through which they should be allowed to air their grievances, and "get even with their neighbors;" for some fancied or perhaps real grievance.

They are sadly mistaken as to the mission of the general inland country newspaper. Its purpose is not to foment contention, or engender strife, but on the contrary to promote peace and good will.

It should be and we believe is a moral force in educating public opinion, not in punishing crime.

It is an educational force in disseminating intelligence, not in ridiculing ignorance.

It is a promoter of material prosperity by stimulating the industrious, not by abusing the indolent.

It is a stimulant to goodwill in the community by seeking the good name of the people, not by exposing their shortcomings.

It is a means to desirable ends, and he who seeks to use it otherwise mistakes himself.

Racial Geography of Europe.

In place of inflection, the Basque makes use largely of the so-called principle of agglutination. The different meanings are expressed by the compounding of several words into one, a device not unknown, to be sure, in Aryan tongues; but in the Basque this is carried much further. The verb habitually includes all pronouns, adverbs, and other allied parts of speech. The noun comprehends the prepositions and adjectives in a like manner. As an example of the terrific complexity possible as a result, Blade gives fifty forms in the third person singular of the preterit indicative of the regular verb "to give" alone. Another classical example of the effect of such agglutination occurs in the Basque word meaning "the lower field of the high hill of Azpicuelta," which runs:

Azpileneagaraycosaroyarenbetecolarrea

This simple phrase is an even match for the Cherokee word instanced by Whitney:

meaning "they will by this time have come to the end of their (favorable) declaration to you and me." It justifies also the proverb among the French peasants that the devil studied the Basque language seven years and only learned two words. The problem is not rendered easier by the fact that very little Basque literature existed in the written form; and that the pronunciation is peculiar; and that the language, being a spoken one, thereby varies from village to village. There are in the neighborhood of twenty-five distinct dialects in all. No wonder a certain traveler is said to have given up the study of it in despair, claiming that its words were all "written Solomon and pronounced Nebuchadnezzar."—Prof. W. Z. Ripley, in Appleton's Popular Science Monthly for September.

Tom Reed on Novels as Educators.

It is surprising how much there is in the modern swarm of novels, how much of study and research. They do a part in the education of the world of which the schools and colleges might well be proud. Where can you find out and live the life of the fifteenth century as you can in Charles Reed's "The Cloister and the Hearth"? Where will you find the course of adversity and prosperity in the world, and their succession, better depicted than in another of his novels, with so sentimental a title that it would be dangerous even to quote it. Who studied London life as Dickens did, and society as did Thackeray? Where can you find Scottish history and the days of chivalry as in Sir Walter? Has any historian ever been fuller enough to whiten the Duke of Marlborough since Thackeray wrote "Henry Esmond"? I am quite aware that none of these are very modern, but everybody who reads them is a better man.

A Woman's Deed.

A BENEFACTRESS WHO IS DOING INCALCULABLE GOOD.

Devotes Much of Her Time to the Benefits of Children; How She Helps Them

From the Evening News, Detroit, Mich.

Mrs. John Taney, of 130 Baker Street, Detroit, Michigan, is one of those women who always know just what to do in all trouble and sickness. One that is a mother to those in distress. To a reporter she said:

"I am the mother of ten children and have raised eight of them. Several years ago we had a serious time with my daughter, which began when she was about sixteen years old. She did not have any serious illness but seemed to gradually waste away. Having never had any consumption in our families, as we come of good old Irish and Scotch descent, we did not think it was that disease. Neither did she have a hacking cough, yet she grew thinner and paler each day. Our doctor called the disease by an odd name which, as I afterward learned, meant lack of blood.

"It is impossible to describe the feelings John and I had as we noticed our daughter slowly passing away from us. As a last result I was induced to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, made by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., which I understood contained in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. Before she had taken half a box, there was a decided change, and after three months' treatment you would scarcely have recognized her, as her health was so greatly improved. She gained in flesh rapidly and soon was in perfect health. I have always kept the pills in the house since and have recommended them to every one I could. I have told many mothers about them and they have made many wonderful cures. One of the girls had a young lady friend that came to the house almost every day, and she was a sight. Honestly, she seemed almost transparent. I did not care to have my daughters associate with her, as I was afraid she would drop dead some day when they were out on the street. I recommended and begged her to take Doctor Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and told her of their sterling qualities and how the cost was slight, being only 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, at any druggist's. Finally I induced her to try them.

"They helped her wonderfully, and undoubtedly saved her life. She now recommends them to other young women.

"Every mother in this land should keep these pills in the house, as they are good for many other ailments. I don't believe in doctoring and never spent much money in medicines, but I can recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to every mother that has a daughter just coming into womanhood."

Fallacy of Commercial Destroyers.

The implicit belief in the virtues of commerce destroying is likely to stand in the way of the development of our navy. It is the cheapest policy, and therefore makes a strong appeal to those who think themselves economists. But the end of war is to win, and no nation has yet emerged victorious from a contest in which she relied on commerce destroying to cripple her enemy. England tried it once under Charles II, and the Dutch fleet burned the shipping within sight of London. France relied on it and was beaten in every struggle. Even the successes of the Alabama, the recollection of which is the main cause for the prevalence of the delusory belief in commerce destroying, did not affect the result of the war. Whenever a nation has relied solely on commerce destroying she has been beaten. Commerce destroying as a secondary operation may be useful; but the only basis on which the policy should be put into force involves the existence of large fleet to keep the fleets of the enemy in check. As a primary operation its success is an illusion and leads down a steep place to disaster.—Capt. Joseph Bentley in The Illustrated American.

A GORED CAPE OF VELVET WITH PERSIAN LAMB TRIMMING

The short cape is too comfortable and convenient to be relegated to oblivion, but there are some radical changes in its shaping and adjustment. Although ruffles appear below the shoulder, they are much more conservative than formerly, and decoration is applied lavishly. For evening and theatre wear the cape is most satisfactory, as it can be crumpled with handsome waists that will not be crushed by its use. The gored cape illustrated is of velvet trimmed with Persian lamb. The cape reaches just to the waist. The neck is finished with a gored Meici collar lined with Persian lamb, and the graceful flutes falling below the shoulders are shallow. Rich braided silk laces are used for the capes, whether they be of cloth, velvet or corded silk. Such decoration as fur bands, handsome passementerie, lace and jet are almost indispensable if any degree of elegance is to be attained.

The Butterick pattern is cape No. 9311; 9 sizes; bust measures, 30 to 46 inches; any size, 25 cents.

The pretty wrapper shown in the illustration is pictured made of spotted cashmere, the ground being blue, and dark-blue velvet forms the yoke, which is overlaid with lace. There is becoming fulness, trim sleeves and a graceful air about the mode and its trimness is largely due to the well fitted lining. Velvet ribbon contributes a decorative touch that is simple and pleasing and for the new shades of cashmere, dannel and light weight serge the mode is highly satisfactory.

The Butterick pattern is wrapper No. 9286; 9 sizes; bust measures, 30 to 46 inches; any size, 35 cents.

DRESS ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

Jackets of box cloth for cold weather have white collars and revers made of white cloth or white cashmere over-wrought with spangled metal braids or cut beads of steel, gold and jet ingeniously combined.

A Marie Antoinette flou is to be historically accurate must be worn over a pointed bodice. Boleros and Etons should be worn above a belt or girde.

The bicycle skirt of next season, longer than heretofore but not too long, will be adopted by courageous women for shopping, marketing and for rainy days.

Silver-gray felt hats in cavalier shape with one or two long grey feathers may have a little bunch of gay velvet, a brilliant buckle or pin, or a rose to set them off.

On some heads and for a few occasions red hats are decidedly charming. A girl writing from Paris says: "My pretty new hat will satisfy you, because you will know it is red the minute you see it."

Black lace over pink is again in vogue for evening wear.

Ruffles will disappear from street skirts only when heavy woollens are in use.

Fluffy appendages and accessories of attire, fichus, lace and other fancy boleros and kerchiefs of Liberty silk worn Quaker fashion, are by no means in less use because they no longer appear on verandas and at garden parties. They accompany and beautify all sorts of indoor gowns, making one do the duty of several.

Since slight women are to wear ruffles from foot to girdle, many a pretty skirt that was shaped when narrowness pleased, will be trimmed without alteration.

Smartness, hitherto the invariable ideal of the cloth gown, is now less sought than decorative effect. This is achieved by trimming, which may be lace, braid, jet or a combination of two or more of these.

Not only broadcloths but various other fabrics in vogue are thus embellished, the trimness which results from absolute simplicity being now relegated to melton, chevot, tweed and kindred goods, even these being given braid garnitures.

Real laces, such as point applique, Irish crochet, Cluny, Renaissance and Russian, are in great vogue. These are usually applied with little if any fulness, the better to display their beauty.

There is just now an unusual demand for medallions of heavy point Venise, Renaissance, Russian and other laces in leaf, floral and geometrical devices.

In a cream linen batiste lace a spray of flowers is copied, and upon an oval-shaped medallion of black chiffon are appliqued stars of Renaissance lace in two or three sizes. Many of these motifs are oval in form and are applied across the closing of bodices after the manner of frogs. Sometimes one size is used exclusively and again the ovals are of graduated sizes.—From The Delineator.

ATHENS THEATRE
Abigail Adhem (may her tribute increase)
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace
And saw within her seventh-story flat
A strange typewriter; and beside it sat
An angel, clicking on the keys of gold;
Abigail shivered and her feet grew cold.
She raised her voice; but felt her spirit
Sink—
"What wriest thou?" the vision tipped a wink.
And with slight amusement manifest.
Answered: "The names of those who dress the best."
"And am I in it?" Abby said. "Oh, no."
Replied the angel. "Abby spoke more low,
But bravely still. "Write me as one, I pray,
Who always takes her hat off at the play?"
The angel wrote, and skipped. But the next night
It came again, with manner most polite,
And showed the names of those correctly dressed,
And lo! Miss Adhem's name led all the rest.
—Judge.

Bancroft, the magician, who was to have appeared here this winter, died Sunday at Wheeling, West Va.

Remember the fact that the seats for the Y. M. C. A. course are being taken rapidly, and you should not delay too long.

Walker Whiteside, at the Athens Theatre Monday night, gave Hamlet in place of The Man in Black, by request. This change was a disappointment to many who had heard film in Hamlet before and were desirous of hearing his new play. However, the audience went away satisfied. Mr. Whiteside has improved since here before. He now pays less attention to oratorical display and more to acting—that is to say, he now tries to present to the audience the meaning of what he says by both voice, expression and movement, and depends less upon a good voice. His support was good. The king did some excellent acting at times, and Laertes and the Queen shared in the recalls which were many. Ophelia was excellent, the best that has ever been presented on this stage. The noise on the stage when the scenes were being shifted was very annoying, and at times nearly drowned the voices of the actors. It almost entirely destroyed that splendid passage where Polonius bids farewell to his son before his departure from home. Manager Liesemer would do well to have some method adopted for shifting scenes that would be less noisy.

The new farce comedy which played to the capacity at every performance last season, will be the attraction at the Athens Theatre, Thursday Sept. 30. It is Chas. E. Blaney's big extravaganza success "A Boy Wanted". The author wrote the piece for the sole purpose of producing large and copious laughs. During the action of the comedy Mr. Eddie Herron, who plays the part of "the boy", introduces his specialty. He is assisted by well known people including the clever little sourette, Nellie O'Neil. The comedy is divided into three acts, the first act showing the interior of the country newspaper office, "The Evening Keg"; the second the exterior of the Starview Hotel; the third act the interior of the Starview Hotel, which is situated on Wet Water Beach. During the action of the comedy a number of clever and unique specialty and mechanical effects, along with marches, ballets and choruses, are introduced. In the last act Miss Frances Hartley introduces her clever specialty of negro melody songs with lightning changes. Messrs. My baby broke out with a rash. He would scratch and scream. It would take two to hold him, and one to put medicine on him. We had to hold him sometimes an hour before we could get him quiet-d down. All said that they never saw such a face or body on any baby as on him. I had to tie his hands tight in a cloth, night and day, for five months. My sister had used CUTI-OURA, and I began to use it. After only one application, he lay down and slept as he had not for a month, poor little fellow. He has not a scar on him now, and is as fair and his flesh is as soft as any baby. While he had this disease I had to cut the sleeves out of his clothes, and put gauze underwear on him to keep him cool. I had to keep pieces of soft cloth around his neck. It was so wet with moisture from the sores, and I had to change the cloths sometimes ten or twelve times a day. Mrs. A. HAYNES, 1 about, N. D. A Times reader suggests that in improving S. Division street the roadbed has been so elevated above the level of the sidewalk and the lots along the street, that it will be in order for the property holders to protest against being submerged, and to demand an appropriation to raise their sidewalks up to street grade line, and also to grade up their yards and their lawns. Well, the city treasury seems to be bottomless.—Daily Times.

For getting drunk on hard cider Michael McDonough, who claimed Toledo as his home, was given three days in jail Saturday by Justice Pond.—Ann Arbor Argus. The scales of justice are lop sided. Only three days for getting drunk on cider. That's hard. Then it was a Toledo plunger, too. Has Pond no memory? Is the Toledo war forgotten? Three days in the jug for a hard cider drunk by a Toledoite! We move that Justice Pond be disenthroned, and impeached for "high" treason to the state.—Adrian Press.

If a man wants a job of work done these days, he has a difficult time to find a man to do it. The loafers on the street will not work at any price it seems. How do they live? By the work of others, or by taking that which belongs to others. They compose the element that always find fault with everything and everybody, and that work disintegration constantly. When that element becomes too numerous "government by the people, for the people and of the people" will surely perish from off that portion of the earth where they exist.

A Fine Description of Honolulu—

The following, taken from the Howell Republican, is an interview with Miss Jessie Axtell, who resides in this city on Forest ave., and who has but recently returned from a three year's stay in the Sandwich Islands. What Miss Axtell says is of peculiar interest just now, when the annexation question is being so thoroughly discussed:

What class of people predominate in the Islands?

Of the foreign population the Americans are most numerous, the Germans come next. The English language is spoken most among the foreign population. The Americans have the largest financial interests.

What about annexation?

I am thoroughly in favor of annexation, although there are many serious and grave questions connected with the problem. It would be a good thing for the States as well as for the Islands. The foreign population are nearly all in favor of it. The government voted for it unani-mously. The natives are cunning and it is a little hard to tell just what they really want.

What do you think of President Dole?

I am acquainted with both Mr. Dole and his excellent wife. Mr. Dole is an American, but was born on the Islands. He is a noble, patriotic man and is working for the good of the people.

How is the climate there?
The climate is most delightful. It is mild and tropical all the year. We live out of doors most of the time. It is so hard for me to think of a wrap when I step out of doors here. But the mosquitoes, oh, my! There are two breeds, a night kind and a day kind. The night variety are large and fat. The day kind are smaller. They are pretty little fellows with stripes like the zebra. They are active, always active. Get into a difficult spot in music, and one will light on your ear, another on your cheek and then a swarm will settle about your feet and ankles until forbearance ceases to be a virtue. There are no frosts to kill them, and the rice swamps, half covered with water, are excellent breeding grounds. I allowed a family or two of lizards, several big spiders and cockroaches to stay in my room. They all eat mosquitoes. Strange as it may appear there are no toads, frogs or snakes on the islands. The people are very careful that no snakes shall be imported, as they would multiply so fast and become so large and venomous in the mild climate.

The scenery is doubtless fine in the Islands?

Yes, it is picturesque and beautiful. There are many things of interest to be seen. Horses are used in sight seeing, as they can climb the mountains, etc. And, by the way, the ladies all ride man fashion—astride the horse. The animal can climb and keep his balance so much better, and the rider can keep her place in the saddle far better.

But, the looks!

Yes, but they look all right. With a nicely fitting habit the lady rider presents a graceful and fine appearance. I kept a nice little horse and enjoyed riding him, even over the rough and mountainous roads.

How about Queen Lili's poi?

Poi is a leading dish on the Islands. It is made from a yellow root that grows in black soil. It is dug, dried, ground and cooked. When fermentation begins it is ready to serve. The natives eat it with the finger, foreigners with a fork. There are two kinds, according to thickness—one finger poi and two finger poi. I learned to like poi even better than potatoes, and once at a native festival ate at a native table in regular native style.

Then you could learn in time to be a first-class heathen?

Doubtless.
Miss Axtell, it will be remembered, was called home a short time ago by the death of her mother.

James Frederick Avery—

A former citizen of Ann Arbor died at his home in Mt. Clemens on Wednesday last, Sept. 23, in the person of James Frederick Avery. Mr. Avery had reached the age of 75 years, and had been ill for a long time.

Before going to Mt. Clemens where he and his brother Judge Avery built the Avery house, "Fred," as every one knew him here, was the proprietor for a number of years of the Cook House, succeeding that venerable hotel pioneer Solon Cook, for whom that hostelry was named, and whose daughter he married. He ran the house before the present brick building was erected, and for a time afterward. Previous to that Mr. Avery was proprietor of the Lake House at Whitmore Lake.

While here he was popular, and considered a good landlord, and many of our old citizens will regret to hear of his death.
He leaves a wife and three children, the youngest, a son, Fred S. Avery, is at present the proprietor of the Avery House at Mt. Clemens.

Announces an educational competition. It is on a most interesting and original plan. Thirty-five prizes, amounting $1,000 (first prize $500), will be given for the best answers to 150 questions. The topics selected deal with matters of general information; they are not scholastic, but are educational. Your training at school was only mental drill; you may have forgotten all you learned there but "reading, writing and arithmetic." You will never forget the information derived from answering these questions, because every one deals with a living and useful fact. No cube-roots, no parsing, no memorizing of dates; instead the learning of things that everybody ought to know. If you make an honest attempt to win, you will learn to concentrate your mind, sharpen your wits, secure most valuable information, and stand a good chance of making $500 (perhaps $1,000; see below). If you gain first prize, the knowledge you have acquired will be worth more to you than the $500 you receive.

IN 35 PRIZES

To find the answers to these questions you must use the encyclopedic material in The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia, because these like thousands of others can best be answered by reference to this great work. If you do not already possess a set, you can easily procure one. A limited number of clubs are now being formed for the purchase of sets at the lowest wholesale price. Each person joining a club (and those who apply at once can join) secures his set at a reduction of 40 per cent, and has the further privilege of paying for it in small monthly payments. A first payment of $5.00 will bring you the work and enable you to try for the first prize of $500, as well as the supplementary prize of $500 more.

FIRST PRIZE

The 150 questions are divided into three sets of 50 each. A month is allowed to answer each set. Try them at home. They will be an intellectual recreation for you and your family; also a good test of your ability to deal with words and facts. Have your children try them; it will be a real education for them. Write to us for sample questions, to see how instructive and useful they are, or for a description of the work.

SMALL MONTHLY Payments.

$500 MORE. We offer a further prize of $500 to the competitor who, laying aside The Century, answers, and answers most successfully, 90 per cent of these questions from ten other works of reference, no matter in how many volumes each is published. This offer is made for the purpose of showing that The Century is superior not to any one other work of reference, but to any ten others.

The idea is being agitated to utilize Whitmore Lake for a two-mile course, and so inaugurate a boating crew here in the University. The cycle path has made the idea possible. If it should be done the Ann Arbor R. R. will no doubt put on a train between these two places.

The congregation of St. Andrew's Episcopal church will hold receptions Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, at Harris Hall, from 8 to 10 o'clock, to meet the new members of that church, who have moved to Ann Arbor recently, together with the students who are in the city.

The aldermen who visited the proposed city park last Friday, resolved not to make any recommendation to the council in regard to purchasing the same. There is no doubt but that the park would be a fine thing, but to get out of debt just now would be far more satisfactory to the taxpayers.

Edward A. Cadieux the State street barber, died quite suddenly Monday night, after an illness extending over a few days only. He was a member of the Maccabees, Foresters, Royal Neighbors and Modern Woodmen, and carried some $8,000 or $10,000 life insurance. He leaves a wife and one child, a daughter.

Jay Fox, one of the best students in our schools, is establishing himself as a tutor, and can be found at 901 Forest ave. Any young man or young lady who employs Mr. Fox will secure the services of an earnest, progressive, conscientious student and teacher. Any young man who will help himself to an education as Mr. Fox is doing, is deserving of great praise.

The regents have done a very wise thing in electing Dr. Kinyon of Rock Island, Ill., to the chair of Geneceology and Obstetrics in the Homeopathic department, and his acceptance is certainly fortunate for the school. He is one of the most prominent Homeopathic physicians in the United States, and his presence here in the faculty will go far toward strengthening and building it up.

The Homeopathic department, which is harmonious in its working force, has some very bright and active men in its faculty. Dr. Hinsdale, the dean, is one of the foremost, and right by his side will be found Dr. Copeland, secretary, who knows a good deal about medicine and considerable about diplomacy and statecraft as well. Then, too, the department is working in entire harmony, and the school will prosper as a consequence.

Jerome is in hard lines just now.

One evening last week, the shade on a lamp in George Amsden's home caught fire and burned entirely up while no one was in the room, and the ashes were found sometime later when an attempt was made to find the shade—of departed ashes. As there was luckily nothing on the table for the blaze to set fire to, a serious conflagration was averted.

The delay in commencing the bicycle path to Ann Arbor is caused by difficulty in securing the right of way. Several property owners on the proposed route will not consent to having the path built in front of their property, and the township board will not permit it to be built unless the consent of all property owners is obtained.—Commercial.

There was quite an exciting time on Brower st., Sunday morning at about 2 o'clock. George Brown, who lived at 308, in going down stairs, fell and the lamp smashed and oil ignited. There was but one stairway, and he called to his wife and daughter to come to the front window and come down a ladder he had secured. The ladder was short and had to be held, and Mrs. Brown fell while attempting the descent, and was badly injured. The contents were destroyed, but the house itself was saved in good part by the fire department.

THE CITY'S BENEFACTRESS GONE. The following account of the death of Mrs. Starkweather, the lady who has done so much for Ypsilanti, is taken from the Daily Times of Sept. 24:

The death of Mrs. Mary Ann Starkweather occurred this morning, a few minutes before 10 o'clock. The deceased was born Sept. 22, 1819, thus making her 78 years and 2 days of age at the time of her death. In 1839 she was married in Detroit to John Starkweather and shortly after moved to this vicinity and about 20 years ago moved into this city. Died 13 or 14 years ago Mr. Starkweather died. No children have ever been born to the union. The deceased came from the well known Newberry family of Detroit, and the Americanism is so marked in the genealogy that Mrs. Starkweather was eligible to membership and was a member of the descendants of the Mayflower, the Daughters of Governors. In the latter society she was eligible in three distinct lines.

"Mrs. Starkweather was a noble example of a generous woman. It is known that many of the generous things she has done for the city churches and Normal she has included in her will, but the exigencies of occasions allowed her and made it more welcome to the recipients to be benefited at the time she bestowed her gifts. The Starkweather fountain, the Ladies' Library building, the Starkweather Memorial Chapel at Highland Cemetery, the Baptist church organ, the Student's Christian Association building at the Normal, and the Soldiers' Monument are all lasting monuments of her public spiritedness and her generosity. Beside these public gifts she was to a very large extent a benefactor of the poor of the city and a large number of this class will miss her. It is estimated by those in a position to know that her charity during the winter season among the poor amounted to $100 a week in money and this the outside world knew nothing about. Her demise is a personal loss to every resident of Ypsilanti who will always revere her as one of the noblest characters of the city."

At a recent meeting of the Business Men's Association of Ypsilanti, the following action was taken:

Whereas, Mary Ann Starkweather has been taken from us by the hand of death and Whereas, A befitting expression of sorrow for her demise seems timely and proper, therefore be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that a generous and kindly spirit has gone from us whose memory will be revived for her goodness of spirit and for her many public and private benefactions; that the poor have lost a helper and the public their best friend.

Resolved, That the business house be closed on Monday, Sept. 27, during the hours of the funeral, 3 p. m. till 4 p. m.

It Will Continue on West— The following, from the Wayne Review, means considerable. It means that the day is not distant when Ann Arbor will be connected with Detroit by an electric line:

"The electric road is making slow progress towards Wayne from Detroit. Mr. Taylor, who is president of the Cleveland & Chagrin Falls electric road, is the principal factor but there is plenty of capital behind him if he reports favorably on the project. Mr. Taylor is a genuine promoter of such enterprises, and not a mere schemer for franchises. His method of procedure shows that he is making an earnest effort to build a road. Right of way was secured through the county farm this week, and other valuable privileges were obtained. He will encounter no opposition from St. Joseph's Retreat or any other large interests along the route; indeed, these offer all possible encouragement. The principal opposition so far developed is from small holders near this village. This, no doubt, will be easily overcome when the importance of the road is better understood."

The Liquor Business in Politics. The liquor business, says Hon. Theodore Roosevelt in the September Atlantic, does not stand on the same footing with other occupations. It always tends to produce criminality in the population at large, and law-breaking among the saloon-keepers themselves. It is absolutely necessary to supervise it rigidly, and to impose restrictions upon the traffic. In large cities the traffic cannot be stopped, but the evils can be minimized. In New York, the saloon-keepers have always stood high among professional politicians. Nearly two-thirds of the political leaders of Tammany Hall have been in the liquor business at one time or another. The saloon is the natural club and meeting place for the ward heeler and leaders, and the bar-room politician is one of the most common and best recognized factors in local government. The saloon-keepers are always hand in hand with the professional politicians, and occupy toward them such a position as is not held by any other class of men. The influence they wield in local politics has always been very great, and until our board took office no man ever dared seriously to threaten them for their flagrant violations of the law. The powerful and influential saloon-keeper was glad to see the shops of his neighbors closed, for it gave him business. On the other hand, a corrupt police-captain, or the corrupt politician who controlled him, could always extort money from a saloon-keeper by threatening to close his place and let his neighbor's remain open.

THE BRAVE BOYS IN BLUE.

The street parade here on the second day marshalled over one thousand in line. The Michigan veterans carried their own regimental colors, loaned for the purpose from the state army—the same tattered flag we bore that day.

As we marched in the grand review—more tattered and frail now than then. They could not be unfurled, but the heroes gazed upon them fondly and reverently, and not a few tearfully. The regiments so privileged were the 2nd, 8th, 17th, 20th and 27th.

But, after all, do we speak of veterans? On that very same day, in Grand Rapids, a reunion of surviving soldiers of the Mexican war was held, and 21 of them assembled. There are said to be 100 in the state, and Ypsilanti has 2, Jacob T. and David A. Wise, brothers, the former serving in a regiment of Pennsylvania volunteers, the latter in the regulars. Beside these men, who marched and fought under Gen. Scott fifty years ago, we of the later war hardly feel like taking the title of veterans; though some of us marched into Virginia under Gen. Scott in 1861.

A. P. G. Has Some Criticisms—

Speaking of the large number of medical students who have called for their credits this year, a prominent gentleman of Ann Arbor and one who is a firm friend of the University, remarked:

"It is too bad that a faculty can not selected for the medical department of this University that can work harmoniously."

"To what do you attribute the present apparent dissatisfaction among the medical students," was asked.

"To several things," was the answer! "The treatment of Dr. Campbell is one thing! He has always been very popular with the students, and they claim to have learned as much under his instruction as under any professor in the college. I believe it is a mistake on the part of the regents to allow any one member of the faculty, be he dean or not, to perform the czar act, and turn out any one he may take a dislike for. It is placing a dangerous power in the hands of one man who will care more to gratify his special likes and dislikes, than he will to work for the best interests of the University. The great penchant doctors have for disagreeing with their brother doctors, makes a disastrous failure of many a medical school, and ours has been a brilliant example in the past, with no very great hope for betterment in the future. Had a wise course been pursued in the medical department, and the members of its faculty worked together as they should have done, there would be over a thousand students in attendance upon it, instead of a few hundred. The continual quarrels disgust students, and when one leaves, it not only takes him away, but keeps others from coming.

"Another thing I think was a foolish thing to do, and that was to put a doctor upon the Board of Regents. Although Dr. Kiefer is a good man, and I like him personally, yet I do not think that he or any other physician, of any school whatever, ought to be placed upon that Board of Regents. Of course this is only my opinion, but I find in talking with other people, that I am not alone in thinking so."

This gentleman said much more, but this gives an idea of the trend of his thoughts. And what he had to say is being said by many others, with greater or less emphasis, according to the person.

W. C. T. U. Notes—

Mrs. Leavett's birthday was celebrated at the last meeting of the W. C. T. U.

The union services Sunday evening—the last of the season—were devoted to the celebration of Miss Frances E. Willard's birthday. A very characteristic sketch of her life was given by Miss Rose Wood-Allen, and a most entertaining account of her work as teacher and leader was given by Mrs. Sunderland.

Certainly Miss Willard could but feel proud of the tributes paid her in the kind words of the pastors, the union president and the speakers, as well as the close attention given by the large audience.

Owing to the Fair week and the opening of college, the customary meeting on the 5th Thursday in the month, will be omitted.

Services at the Unitarian Church—

Evening services will be resumed at the Unitarian Church next Sunday. The pastor will speak upon the subject "Is Inquiry in Religion Safe?"

The Student's Bible Class will be organized at 12 o'clock. The year will be devoted to that most living of religious questions to-day, "What is the Bible?" All persons desiring to know what answer modern knowledge has to give to this question will be welcome.

The Young People's Religious Union will resume its meetings at 6:30 p. m. As introductory to the year of Bible in the Students Class. Mr. Sunderland will preach in the morning on the question "Why Study the Bible?"

A foul breath is one of the greatest afflictions that a man or woman can have. An affliction not only to themselves, but to those with whom they come in contact. A foul breath is a great discourager of affection. It would probably be more so if people only realized just what bad breath means. Bad breath is one of the symptoms of constipation. Some of the other symptoms are sour stomach, loss of appetite, sick and bilious headache, dizziness, heartburn and distress after eating. These things mean indigestion. They lead to dyspepsia and worse things. They all start with constipation, and constipation is inexcusable because it can be cured—easily, quickly and permanently, by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They give to nature just the little help that she needs. There is no case of biliousness, constipation, indigestion, "heartburn," or any of the rest of the night-mare breeding brood, that these little "Pellets" will not cure. Send 21 cents in one-cent stamps to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. and receive Dr. Pierce's 1008 page Common Sense Medical Adviser, illustrated.
