Dr. Breaky Talks to the Boys—

The 16th Mich. Volunteer Infantry held its reunion at Ionia last week, and among those present was the former surgeon of the regiment, Dr. W. F. Breaky, of this city.

At the banquet Dr. Breaky was called upon to respond to a toast, and the Daily Standard says of his remarks:

"Dr. Breaky arose with an apparent full sense of the lateness of the hour and the weariness of the audience, and was resolved to 'cut it short.' But he talks so easily and reminiscences and philosophic thoughts crowded upon him so fast, that he several times caught a fresh hold, and made a longer talk than he intended. He is really a pleasant and interesting speaker, and he was readily forgiven, when he humbly asked pardon at the close. He said everybody else had taken the topic assigned as a mere point of departure to talk about almost everything else except the particular subject, and he claimed and exercised the same privilege for himself. The soldier's business is to destroy, the surgeon's is to conserve. They work to the same end by different methods. Those who thought the position of surgeon a safe 'snap' did not realize what it involved."

A SPLENDID CHARGE.

THAT JUDGE KINNE GAVE THE JURY IN THE DUNCAN-GROVES CASE.

The case of Frank Duncan against his father-in-law Wm. P. Groves, for alienating the affections of his wife, occupied much of the time of the court last week, and the verdict of the jury, "No cause for action," was considered right by the people generally.

The charge to the jury delivered by Judge Kinne in this case is so clear in reasoning, and so decided upon certain points involved, that we believe our readers will thank us for publishing it entire:

"This is a suit brought by Frank Duncan against Wm. P. Groves, his father-in-law, to recover damages for an alleged alienation of the affections of his wife, Flora Duncan. Actions of suits of this nature are quite common, where one man has enticed away the wife of another, and where for his own use and benefit, and usually for the gratification of his lust, he has estranged and alienated the affections of the wife from her husband. Now in all such cases the motive of the wrong-doer is plain and evident; his conduct is sinful and unlawful, and the law is ready to administer and enforce his punishment. The case now before you is not of that nature, but is rather a remarkable case and with somewhat unusual features. The undisputed evidence in this case shows that Mr. Duncan himself was a wrong-doer, that he repeatedly admitted the fact to his wife and his friends, that he promised his wife if she would forgive him and continue to live with him, he would reform and live a sober life; that she took him back and tried him and bore with his failings until she could endure it no longer, and that finally, in November, 1896, she filed her bill for divorce against her husband on the ground of his misconduct in the excessive use of intoxicating liquors; that in March of this year, she obtained her decree of divorce from Mr. Duncan, on the ground of his misconduct; that he made no defence to her action for divorce, and that she was granted a divorce and separation from Mr. Duncan because the laws of this state entitled her to a divorce under such circumstances. You are now asked by Mr. Duncan to find from the evidence in this cause that not he, but his father-in-law, was the cause of this separation. Observation and experience teach us all, that it is among the human frailties to often attempt to lay at the door of another, the origin and cause of our own wrong doings and misconduct. It is for you to determine from the evidence in this cause, where the real fault lies, and who is the culpable wrong-doer in this domestic misfortune.

"So far as the evidence in this case goes, this marriage, when it was celebrated, was agreeable to all parties concerned, and occurred at the residence of the defendant, Wm. P. Groves. 'Now, gentlemen, before you find that this father-in-law separated these people, it will be incumbent upon you to discover, if you can, what motive could have inspired him to the commission of this act, to separate these people. The gist of this action, that is, the theory of it, is that the plaintiff has lost the comfort, friendship, society and affection of his wife, by reason of the illegal conduct of the defendant, or his misconduct. Unless this separation can be brought home to the defendant by competent, tangible and satisfactory proof, the plaintiff cannot recover. If this separation between husband and wife was due to the habits or misconduct of Mr. Duncan, that is the end of this case and your verdict should be for the defendant.

"In order for the plaintiff to recover in this action you must be satisfied from the evidence that this change in her feelings toward her husband, and her separation and divorce from him, are due, either to the compulsion of her father, or to his active interference and solicitation; and unless the proof satisfies you that the father was guilty, either of compulsion or active interference

A SUPERVISOR CANED.

After Twenty Years Mr. Case Gets a Walking Stick.

Monday afternoon there was a full attendance at the session of the Board of Supervisors, and when a lull came in the proceedings Supervisor Sid W. Millard arose and stated that there was a gentleman who had a personal grievance against some certain member of the board, and moved that the gentleman, who proved to be Mr. Chas. A. Ward, be allowed to state the same. This was agreed to, and Mr. Ward in words well chosen and appropriate told why he was there. The main gist of the complaint will be found in this paper that he read:

To the Hon. Board of Supervisors, of the County of Washtenaw, State of Michigan.

Gentlemen: It has come to the knowledge of a considerable number of the citizens of Washtenaw County that there is one member of this board of supervisors who is charged with serving his constituents so faithfully and so well that they have re-elected him to this office for twenty consecutive years. We recognize the fact that if the people of the township which he represents persist in sending him up here, the people of the rest of the county will have to stand it. We confess we know of no way in which they can be prevented from doing so.

But it also transpires that this gentleman has been a consistent and conscientious servant of the county at large during all this time. He is charged with taking a deep interest in the economical administration of county affairs, and of bringing to the discharge of his duties a large stock of intelligence and good sound judgment.

And it is further charged that by the exercise of these faculties he has been one of the most valued and useful members of this board during all these years, and that many hundreds of dollars have been saved by his vigilance to the taxpayers of the County of Washtenaw.

Signed:
H. Lighthall, E. Eberbach, S. W. Millard, H. Krapp, A. J. Kirtson, S. S. Bibbins, J. D. Clark, D. Beach, Jas. Howlett, Wm. Donegan, E. A. Hanser, Wm. Hall, Bert Kenney, John L. Hunter, D. Ostrander, H. Wirt Newkirk, P. J. Lehman, J. F. Webb, Tracy Towner, W. N. Lister, Ed. Ball, Geo. Cook.

After presenting the gold headed cane, which was a handsome one, properly inscribed, a fine easy chair was brought out and Mr. Case was requested to take it home to his wife, as an added token of the respect in which her husband is held after twenty year's service upon the Board of Supervisors.

After the presentation was through with Mr. Case, a little nervous, arose and thanked his brother supervisors and friends for the gift, and assured them that they were received in the same spirit that prompted the givers, as tokens of friendship and esteem. He had served his township a long time, to be sure, and every spring in looking over the list of supervisors he found some new names, and some of the 'old ones to whom he had become attached dropped off. But in this way he had been enabled to extend his acquaintance, and to keep adding to his friends. As a supervisor he had always acted from a sense of what he believed to be right. He had known no favorites, friend and foe had received the same treatment. And he had at times been forced to oppose measures that were championed by his best friends because he believed them wrong. But it cheered him to feel that he had been honestly judged by his brother supervisors, and he assured his friends that he would ever treasure this gift as the dearest thing he possessed.

It is said that the Cubans are to make an effort to be annexed to the United States. Any way to gain their independence. It is very doubtful if the United States cares to annex Cuba, but if such an agitation will help her people throw off the galling yoke of Spain success to it.

Took His First Tumble—

Chas. Cone of Adrian, being an old newspaper man always has an eye out for an item, so he will forgive us for noting this one. When at home Charlie is a good wheelman, and boasts that he never got a fall in his life. While here some friends took him out on the Whitmore Lake cycle path, which as all know, is somewhat hilly. In coasting down one of these declines he was so much interested in the passing scenery that he neglected to watch his front wheel sufficient and the first thing he knew he was quietly reclining in a soft and grassy ditch at the side, turning a graceful somersault in getting there, and leaving his wheel headed up the hill. The only thing injured was his pride. Of course the level country about Adrian is not so difficult for wheelmen as is our rolling lands, and it was no fault of Charlie himself. He is not the first one who has taken their first tumble here in Ann Arbor.

The Richards Murder Trial—

The time of the circuit court will be occupied this week with the trial of the three men, Jones, Larkins and Lyons, charged with murdering James Richards, in Northfield, last spring. Some difficulty was experienced in drawing a jury, and not only the regular panel but an extra one was exhausted in the attempt. Finally the following men were agreed upon: A. V. Robison, Robert Campbell, Frank Vandawaker, Ann Arbor City; Wm. Henzie, George Ingraham, Manchester; Fred C. Chapin, Chas. Haras, Northfield—the town in which the murder was committed—Chas. Ellis, Henry Brooks, Ypsilanti City; Matthew Hankard, Lyndon; James Ivory, Dexter; Ed. E. Baker, Sharon. The men were put in charge of Deputies Wm. Dansingburg and Cesh Warner, and are to be kept "incommunico" until they render a verdict. Nice time they will have for a week or two. Col. John Atkinson, of Detroit, will aid Messrs. Jones and Randall, who are conducting the defense, and a trial is expected that will be a memorable one for this court. Hon. A. J. Sawyer is assisting Prosecuting Attorney Kirk.

Y. W. C. A. Notes—

With one exception the classes are now organized and work begins this week. The enrollment is unusually good and much interest is shown in all the branches to be taken up. So far, not enough have asked for dress making to secure the class. As soon as two or three others apply, the class will be organized. Plans are being made for a series of Parlor Talks on Health, First Aid to the Injured, and kindred subjects. Possibly a cooking class may be held sometime during the winter.

What the people here have been waiting for for weeks came last night—rain.

ATHENS THEATRE

Paul Cazeneuve, a young romantic actor who has achieved great success in romantic roles, will be the attraction at the Athens Theatre next Thursday, presenting Alexander Dumas' famous comedy-drama, "The Three Guardsmen." The Chicago Record says of this performance: "There is a young actor in the east of 'The Three Guardsmen' at the Lincoln Theatre this week whose light has evidently been hidden under a bushel, in this country, at least. It is only a question of time, however, before some manager of prominence discovers his real merit and gives him the recognition that rightfully belongs to him. The young actor in question is Paul Cazeneuve, who hails from the south of France. He possesses all the fire and energy of the people of his native country, has a splendid idea of comedy, and, what is so uncommon in actors, is extremely modest. He assumes the role of 'D'Artagnan' in 'The Three Guardsmen,' and while comparisons are odious, it must be said to the credit of young Cazeneuve that his portrayal of the character compares well with that of the younger Salvail. The houses yesterday were not slow in recognizing Cazeneuve's merits, and after the first act he was enthusiastically applauded."

Dr. Vaughan's Lecture—

Next Monday evening Dr. Vaughan will give an account, in the Unky Club Course, of his recent exceedingly interesting trip through Russia. Dr. Vaughan with his wife and three sons rode their bicycles from Brussels to Paris. After a short stay in the French metropolis, two of the sons set off on their wheels for Switzerland, while Dr. Vaughan, Mrs. Vaughan and one son, and Dr. Cook, left for Russia, with the primary object in view of attending the great international medical congress which was to be held in Moscow. On their way to Moscow the party visited Russia's splendid Capital, St. Petersburg. In Moscow they met a large number of the leading medical savants of Europe and the world, and had an extraordinary opportunity to see and become acquainted with that wonderful old metropolis of central Russia. From Moscow the party went on across Russia to the Volga, and visited the great fair of Nijni Novgorod, which is the most unique and famous thing of the kind in the world. Few Americans have had such an opportunity to see Russia and its people as has been afforded Dr. Vaughan the past summer. The interesting story of it all will be told next Monday night.

Fridtjof Nansen.

The Nansen Relics to be Shown—

In speaking of the forthcoming lecture of Dr. Nansen in that city the New York Tribune of Oct. 15th, says: "A part of the Stockholm collection is now in bond awaiting Mr. Heard's registration. It consists of Nansen's clothing, which he wore on his trip furthest north, and many interesting relics of the voyage, including his cooking stove, made from two iron pots and so arranged that petroleum might be used as fuel. There are two kayaks, or canoes made with bamboo poles, covered with canvas and heavily tarred. These were made by Nansen and Johannsen and used by them. There are also two sledges made of bamboo and bound with tarred rope, and a paddle made from a Norwegian snow-shoe. The mast of a kayak, with thongs, and the pole with which the explorer's tent was held up, are also parts of the collection. "A number of equally interesting relics are now on the way from Stockholm."

The Initial Entertainment—

The Kellogg Band Concert Co. gave a delightful entertainment Thursday evening, in the Y. M. C. A. Lyceum course. Much of it was novel to the people here, and Mr. Chas. D. Kellogg has certainly mastered the songs of the birds, for his imitations were nearly perfect of most of them. He can whistle too, in a manner that is wonderful.

One of the finest things of the evening was the recitation of Miss Eldridge, although it was received in silence by the audience. An inquiry after the entertainment was over, as to why such a fine effort was not appreciated, brought out the reply: "For myself, I appreciated the merit of it, but thought the selection inappropriate for an audience of the kind." The selection was about a Memphis horse race, and told how a little colored boy, as a jockey, won the race and a fat purse which it for the Colonel who owned the horse. There was nothing out of the way about it, though it might possibly have been in better taste to have chosen something else. Miss Eldridge is a good elocutionist, has a good voice and a pleasing presence. Later on, she charmed the audience with her graceful recitation of "The Three Guardsmen." With the exception of the recitation on the stage, the evening was a most successful one.

Miss Mabel Bennett as Voltaire, was the only one who responded to an encore, and she somewhat disappointed.

Mrs. Kellogg had a finely cultivated voice, and in due sub was excellent. The success of the entertainment was largely due to the electrician, J. W. Kellogg, who managed the lights, shades, shadows, etc., with artistic effect.

An Interesting Series of Sunday Lectures—

Miss Bertha Skinngr is at Ann Arbor attending the St. Thomas conservatory of music. DR. FRIDTJOF NANSEN.

His Exploit the Wonder and Admiration of the World.

On Oct. 23 there will arrive in this country a man that is acknowledged as the greatest hero of the century, one that is not only a hero but a scientist and an author of world-wide fame.

Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, whose exploits in the Arctic regions have been the talk, the wonder and the admiration of the world during the past year, will begin his lecture tour of the United States and Canada at New York city Oct. 28, and give the people of this continent an opportunity to see the man that has done and dared so much for science and to hear him tell of some of the adventures in that waste of ice and snow during the three years he remained there.

Dr. Fridtjof Nansen is only thirty-five years old, but already he has done more in the fascinating region of Arctic exploration than any man of our own or any other time. There seems to be little doubt that Nansen was born to explore, and the circumstances which lead one to this conclusion seems also to point to the fact that the Arctic was intended as the field of his wanderings and adventures. An ancestor of Nansen's, born just three hundred years ago, was Hans Nansen, a bold navigator, who explored the White Sea coast under commission of the Czar, was stopped by the ice, spent a winter in the north, and wrote a handbook for Arctic navigators that continued in use for more than two hundred years. Possessed of great tenacity of purpose and strength of will, Hans Nansen was a fit progenitor of the Nansen of our day. On his mother's side our Nansen inherited sturdy and adventurous qualities that are not less entitled to be taken into reckoning. From her, more than from his father, Nansen got his intrepid spirit, his love of adventure, his practical mind.

Although the family appears to have been in comfortable circumstances, the early training of the boy was extremely simple, if not severe.

He always lived in the closest communion with Nature, not only on the farm of Great Froen at West Aker, which belongs to his father, Balder Fridtjof Nansen, an eminent lawyer, but as a youth whole days and nights would be spent by him in the recesses of the woods of Nordmarken, where he lived a sort of Robinson Crusoe life, subsisting on a crust of bread and the spoil of his fishing rod, while every work on travel and exploration was greedily read. After he had been two years at college the spirit of adventure ran too rampant in him to be longer restrained, so that he eagerly accepted the offer of the post of naturalist and zoologist on board a whaler bound for an Arctic cruise. On his return the appointment of Curator to the Museum of Bergen awaited him. Here he settled down for some years fairly contentedly to his microscope and prosecuting his researches so industriously as to make him quite an authority on parasitical fish-worms and general nerve structure. Then the partially successful exploration effected in Greenland by the veteran Swede Nordenskiold set his blood on fire to emulate the great traveler by crossing Greenland. This feat our hero accomplished in the summer of 1888 and spread the young Norwegian's fame and credit far and wide.

But greater things were, and are, in store for the intrepid doctor. His last great achievement is the one that places him at the head of Arctic explorers and for which the world will ever be indebted.

The general public are just beginning to realize fully the wonderful achievements of Dr. Nansen, and how much the world and science owe him. During the space of one hundred and eighty years previous to the year of 1893 the combined efforts of all the Arctic expeditions succeeded in penetrating only one hundred and fifty miles nearer the pole. Dr. Nansen in three years, pushed two hundred miles beyond the farthest point then reached, covering the last one hundred and fifty miles in the very short space of six weeks. As a scientist Dr. Nansen proposed a campaign for "attacking the Arctic fastness," the unconventional boldness of which provoked almost the universal opposition and ridicule of the scientific world. His theories were looked upon as the "wildest imaginings of a distorted brain, leading his followers to certain death," yet he has proven he was correct, and has accomplished all and more than he claimed possible, and all of this without the loss of a single life.

We do not know anything so remarkable in the annals of travel as this complete realization of a forecast. Indeed, but for the one hypothesis of a shallow polar sea. Dr. Nansen might have described his voyage by taking his paper outlining the project in 1892 and changing the future into the past tense throughout. Fortunately for him, his expedition did not return together, so no one can say that this remarkable coincidence of fact with theory was produced by falsifying the record. If it were possible to make such an allegation it is scarcely conceivable that anyone base enough to make it would be found; absolute sincerity shines in every line of his wonderful work as it shines in the honest eyes of Nansen himself.

Few modern incidents come nearer the absolutely heroic than the departure of Nansen and Johannsen from the safe and comfortable Fram at the first dawn of the Arctic day in 1895 and their march northward over the floe in the attempt to reach the pole. Nor was the failure of a cherished ambition ever more quietly recorded than Nansen's resolved to turn back when latitude 86 degrees 14 minutes N., nearly 200 miles nearer the pole than anyone had ever been before. The lonely winter on an unknown island of Franz Josef Land, in a hut that scarcely afforded room to stretch the limbs, with scarcely any food but raw walrus and bear, and no resource but sleep, is a thing that cannot soon pass from the mind of the reader.

In the teeth of expert opposition he clung firmly to his own theories and ideals, and repudiated the venerable axioms and methods of Arctic exploration. The result has been that he has triumphantly proved the soundness of his own conclusions; and it was little more than a technical miscalculation that led to the drifting of the Fram across the Polar area on a track somewhat contemplated. But Nansen has shown that the centre of the Polar sphere can be penetrated. He has solved the problem of expeditionary equipment and organization. He has upset many conclusions of the best and most valiant Arctic explorers, and he has clearly established the fact that the area around the Polar axis is not a shallow sea covered by an immovable and solid ice-mantle, but that it is surrounded by a deep sea, over the surface of which is continually drifting a vast expanse of breaking and shifting ice. The hypothesis of a Polar continent is disproved; a new light has been thrown upon currents, temperatures, atmospheric, lunar and solar phenomena; and a vast amount of entirely new scientific data has been amassed.

Of the life and duty of that little band of discoverers in their drifting home, in the Fram, Dr. Nansen draws a charming picture. They had their moods, and from Captain Sverdrup's supplementary narrative rather than from anything Dr. Nansen says, it is plain that at times the tedium of their uneventful days told on their nerves. Spirits rose and fell, and there were days when "yes" and "no" were the staple of conversation. But their gloom was easily dispelled. The health of every member of the expedition was excellent. Dr. Blessing's office was a sinecure, and in despair he took to doctoring the dogs! Food was abundant and varied. The menus which Dr. Nansen prints amply bear out his eulogy of their fare. They seized every occasion for a feast and jollification—holding on to life with both hands. When a birthday did not supply an opportunity they wisely made one. A journal, the "Fram-sjaa," gave the poets and artists of the party the means of beguiling their leisure, and afforded amusement to the rest. Meanwhile, of course, there were daily duties to be discharged, the taking of observations of many kinds at stated periods being not the least important. Sledges were made and kayaks built; a smithy was established on the floe in which the Fram was imbedded, the electric light was installed and depots established in case of accidents. It was not long, however, before they discovered that the Fram was a splendid ice-boat, and not the least interesting part of the story of the drift is the description of the frequent bouts in which the good ship engaged with the ice-masses that surrounded her on all sides.

The following paragraph is from the "Life of Fridtjof Nansen": "It was not till Sept. 26, in 77 degrees latitude that we were really stopped by ice. I continued along the edge of the ice, but we had a long dreary time with a bitter north wind. It seemed as if everything was going against us. As early as October the ice pressure was tremendous. It would often lift the vessel several feet, and let her drop back again as the ice opened. In the case of any other vessel this pressure would have been fatal, but the Fram surpassed our expectations. The ice piled itself up and crashed against her sides with a noise like the 'Crack of Doom,' but in vain. The noise of the ice crushing against her sides often rose to such a pitch that we could not hear ourselves speak in the saloon, but we felt as safe as in a fortress. The Fram was a comfortable, warm nest, where little was felt of the average cold of a polar winter. The temperature fell rapidly, and continued very low right through the winter of 1893. During many weeks the quicksilver was frozen. The lowest temperature reached was 63 degrees below zero. In spite of this, and although there was often a wind, we felt quite comfortable during our open-air excursions, thanks to our good woolen clothing. The Fram was so well protected against the cold that even in these low temperatures we had no fires in the saloon until the new year. All the men were in excellent health during the whole of the expedition and we all agreed that the polar sea is a healthy place with such a capital sanitarium as the Fram."

Personally the doctor is a hardy Norwegian, and he looks it, every inch of him. He is very tall—full six feet, if not an inch or two above it. He has a fine, clear complexion, fair hair and mustache. The face is that of a man of keen intelligence, of marked determination, of gentle and kindly disposition. There is a peculiarly soft and tender look in the blue eyes, and the smile is very sweet, lighting up one of the brightest faces. The mouth is very firm, indicating the strength of will and independence so often manifest in this great being and modest, yet so easy and confidence-inspiring that to be in his company is to feel one is with a friend and to feel at home. He speaks English fluently and well, and if ever a man had an interesting story to tell he assuredly has.

Dr. Nansen will probably be accompanied by his wife, Eva Sars Nansen, and their little daughter Liv. Madame Nansen's reputation as a singer is almost as great in Norway as that of her husband as an explorer, is a bright and very intelligent looking lady, who speaks English as well as many English women. She will evidently share the popularity of her husband during their visit to this country.

His lectures giving account of his expedition possess not only the greatest scientific value, but are a thrilling narrative of adventure, absorbing in interest for both young and old. His graphic picture of life, in lands of hitherto unknown by man, are startling, realistic, thrilling and appeal to all classes. The seeming almost impossible feats of physical endurance are a marvel to the entire civilized world. The situations, awe-inspiring and awfully grand, contemplating which the unanimous verdict is that he is absolutely "the hero of the century."

The Nansen lectures in this country will be under the sole management of the Redpath Lyceum Bureau and Richard Heard, the latter acting as directing manager, with Col. Kirby Chamberlain, Fairlee the business manager, and under their experienced management Dr. Nansen will repeat the tremendous success which he met with in Europe. The number of applications for time propositions for receptions and dates already booked are far in excess of any other similar tour ever arranged for in the United States.

Secy. Coon of the S. L. A. has received a cablegram from Liverpool stating that Nansen sailed from that port Monday.

Coughs, colds, pneumonia and fevers may be prevented by keeping the blood pure and the system toned up with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

If you have any rose bushes or tender plants you want to save through the winter, don't burn up your leaves. Or if you have a garden, or want some fine soil for potting plants, don't burn them, but rake them up in a pile in the corner of the garden, throw some brush or boards on them and let them rot. Or put them over your strawberry vines or around your rose bushes. They make a good covering for any sort of flower beds and keep the frosts of winter from destroying the plants and their roots.

Miserable Lives Made Happy—

If health brings misery into our lives and into the lives of others. Continued physical weakness that the family physician cannot drive away brings serious forebodings, depression and gloom. Great numbers of people live out their lives under these hard conditions because the underlying cause of all is beyond the reach of the treatment known to the ordinary practitioner. It takes a specialist like Dr. Greene to cope with these despairing cases. This distinguished physician is the most successful specialist in the world, and consultation and advice can be had, personally or by letter, absolutely free of charge, at the office of Dr. Greene's remedies, 148 State st., Chicago, Ill. His discoveries in medicine are truly wonderful. One of them is the world-famed Nervura. They are so nicely adjusted to repair the waste of the system, so potent in their general influence, and so permanent in their beneficial effect that no claim seems too broad for them. They will positively cure all of the diseases which afflict mankind, and the enthusiastic thousands who owe to Dr. Greene their present comfort, and in many cases life itself, are living evidence of his unvarying success.

A wheelman who knows, asserts that the surest way to locate a puncture in a pneumatic tire is to lather the rubber with soap. A bubble will at once appear over every puncture caused by the air pressure within.

At 10 o'clock Friday morning the thermometer registered 78 in the shade. At 12 o'clock it was 85 degrees, and at 4 p. m., 90 degrees was registered. How was that for Oct. 15?

The Ann Arbor Courier prints a good picture of Louis Liesemer of the Times, and fusts him an "octopus," because he abuses his tenacles on ten or twelve different enterprises. That's a devil of a compliment, however.—Adrian Press. The Press is devilish clever.

Doctor Schuyler C. Graves, medical and present dean of the faculty and professor of surgery and clinical surgery in the newly founded Grand Rapids Medical College, has an article in the October issue of The Physician and Surgeon on "The Abdominal Incision: How Made; How Closed."

Ann Arbor has too many houses for the number of people living in the city. The buildings keep going up though, all over the city, just the same. It is noticed, sized or small houses empty. The demand for houses just large enough for a family is greater than the supply.

The people of the Northside feel that they have made a splendid beginning with their new church edifice. They have bought a lot and had the stone foundation for the edifice laid—and paid for the whole thing. They do not propose to progress any faster than they are able to pay, and when the church is done they propose to dedicate it without a dollar due. Good for them.

It is to be hoped that Marshal Sweet will enforce the law relative to burning leaves and rubbish after 12 o'clock noon, of each day. There is a neighborhood in the heart of the city that is terribly annoyed by the burning of refuse at night that impregnates the air with a vile smell that has many times forced the residents to close their windows on hot nights to avoid nuisance.

C. R. Van Gieson, a former Washetawian, writes from Weatherford, Texas, renewing his subscription, and in the letter says: "People here are somewhat stirred up over the yellow fever reports, and some of the merchants are uneasy on account of goods being tied up by the quarantine. This part of the state, however, is too far removed from the coast, and too elevated to fear a near approach of the fever itself. Crops are fairly good though price of cotton is low. The wheat crop brought a good price."

A sparring exhibition is no credit to Ann Arbor, and ought not to be allowed. There may be no harm in it. There can certainly be no good in it, and the very name of such a thing taking place here in Ann Arbor, injures the city immeasurably in the minds of parents who have children here in our schools. Such a questionable exhibition is the natural result of displaying the various pictures of this prize fight at the opera house. Every sport in town wants to know what a scientific kacker he is. Ann Arbor can not guard her morals too well, and such spectacles of "entertainments" are not considered by people in general as respectable even.

Senator Mason, at University Hall the other night asserted that it was the duty of every young man to take hold of political questions, satisfy himself in his own mind which was right, and then make things right. The man who sees himself up as too pure or too good to go to the polls and vote was unaccountably scorned, as he ought to have been. The safety of free government lies in the hands of the intelligent people, and when they refuse to take part in it, and leave politics to be run by the demagogue, they were committing a crime against their country. It is also believed that foreigners should be compelled to remain in our country a sufficient length of time to obtain some knowledge of its laws and workings before being allowed to vote. In which Senator Mason is right. Every man born in the United States has to remain here 21 years before he is considered a sane man in whose hands to entrust the sacred ballot. But a horde of Huns, Poles, or any other lot of people who are as ignorant of this nation as is a babe at its birth, can come over here and become a legal voter in two or three years. It is not only an injustice, but a serious danger to our republic. The law should be changed.

The Worcester, Mass., Daily Spy, of Oct. 2, contains an account of the observance of the 95th birthday of Hon. John P. Marble of that place. Mr. Marble will be remembered by many of the older inhabitants of Dexter, having been the partner in business there for many years of the late Rice A. Beal, and they will be glad to learn of his prolonged life.

Mr. J. W. Pattison, who is conducting the art school here, gave an interesting lecture before the Art League, Thursday evening last, at the home of Miss Douglass, on E. Huron st. A more than usual interest is being shown in this line of advancement, and it is hoped that the Art School has come to be a permanent thing.

A lot of Germans over in Ann Arbor have organized a "skat" club, according to the Democrat. No man can be initiated who is not able to hustle a pair of cats of the ridgepole in the woods, without breaking the windows in a neighbor's residence.—Adrian Press. It is possible that the Press man has a libel suit on hand in the assertion above if he doesn't "skat" it back.

The suggestion of the Ypsilanti Sentinel that the monument to the late Ex-Gov. Felch ought to be erected before any more monuments are projected, is a wise one. New York had to import a Chicagoan to raise the money to complete the Grant monument. Perhaps Ann Arbor will have to look to Ypsilanti for a financier and hustler to raise the funds for the Felch monument. Ypsilanti has such a person and she is not a man either. But she can accomplish this object if she sets about it.

Mr. Bent the manager of Randall's gallery, has been doing some artistic work in fitting up that popular photographic establishment. The operating room has been transformed into a very pleasant apartment, while the various work rooms have been wonderfully improved. Everything is as clean, neat and artistic as one could ask for, and the waiting room has some genuine works of art upon its walls. Mr. Bent has excellent artistic taste in this line, and Capt. Pack is acknowledged one of the finest manipulators of the camera to be found in the country.

The illustrated lecture on the Philippine Islands, given by Prof. Dean C. Worcester, in the Unity Club course, was greeted by a large audience, and was remarkably interesting and entertaining. Some of the things he told of the conduct of the Spanish rulers could hardly be believed in this day and age of the world. Barbarism is a shining jewel, and even cannibalism not bad compared with what these Spanish "Christian" rulers and governors do to extort money from the poor natives of those beautiful islands. That man Weyler, the butcher of human beings in Cuba, was governor there four years, and on a salary of $50,000 a year managed to save up and deposit in the banks of Spain, over $4,000,000 during that time! A native is no better than a dog, and is even taxed for the privilege of living.

Electric Light THE BEST

Some of the Advantages of Electric Light:

	Cubic feet of air vitiated.	Cubic feet of carbonic acid produced.	Heat produced in 1 1/2 Watts raised 1° Fahrenheit.
12 c. p. Incandescent Lamp	None.	None.	13.8
12 c. p. Gas Light	345.25	3.21	278.6
12 c. p. Kerosene Lamp	376.30	3.54	232.6

Some of the Disadvantages of Gas:

- Air consumed.
- Heat.
- Freezing Pipes.
- Humidity.
- Ceilings Blackened.
- Smell thrown off.
- Alumina thrown off.
- Gas cannot be inverted to throw light down.
- Carbonic Acid thrown off.
- Unsteadiness of Light.
- Danger of Suffocation.
- Danger from use of Matches.
- Water and Air in Pipes.
- Metals and Gildings Tarnished.
- Sulphuretted Hydrogen thrown off.

None of these Disadvantages Accompany Electric Lighting.

In general the Incandescent Electric Light is much healthier and much more convenient to use than any other method of lighting, and is more economical for amount of light furnished than gas.

The Advantages of Prepared Mince Meat should be honestly considered by every housewife. It has great advantages, as one trial of will prove. You will find that it is clean—it could not be more so; that it is convenient—always ready and never spoils on the shelf; that it is economical—a 10c. package makes two large pies, fruit pudding, or delicious fruit cake. Get the genuine—take no substitute.

Barns Cost Money

to build, and will cost money to replace. Paint 'em and save 'em. Paint of the right sort, carefully used, will give good returns on the investment. The barn will last longer and look better. Lumber that has become weather beaten, is beginning to decay. Good paint closes the pores of the wood, stops decay and preserves the structure.

THE SHERWIN-WILLIAMS CREOSOTE PAINT is the best barn paint. It is made for use on coarse grained woods. It is good for barns, roofs and fences. The colors are right, the paint is right. It is economical.

If you are in doubt as to the best paints to use for bath tubs, chairs, cupboards, shelves, baseboards, buggies, boats, plows, wagons, floors, houses—for any paintable thing under the sun—send for "Paint Points." It is a booklet for the housekeeper and house owner. It tells what is good paint and how to paint, when to paint, and how to paint. It is a handy book for any one to have. It is free. DON'T STOP TOBACCO

IT'S INJURIOUS TO STOP SUD- DENLY and don't be imposed upon by buying a remedy that requires you to do so, as it is nothing more than a substitute. In the sudden stoppage of tobacco you must have some stimulant, and in most all cases, the effect of the stimulant, be it opium, morphine, or other opiates, leaves a far worse habit contracted. Ask your druggist about BACO CUBO. It is purely vegetable. You do not have to stop using tobacco with BACO-CUBO. It will notify you when to stop and your desire for tobacco will cease. Your system will be as free from nicotine as the day before you took your first chew or smoke. An iron clad written guarantee to absolutely cure the tobacco habit in all its forms, or money refunded. Price $1.00 per box or 3 boxes (30 days treatment and guaranteed cure), $2.50. For sale by all druggists or will be sent by mail upon receipt of price. SEND SIX TWO CENT STAMPS FOR SAMPLE BOX. Eureka Chemical and Mfg Co., La Crosse, Wis.
Dear Sirs—I have been a tobacco fiend for many years, and during the past two years have smoked fifteen to twenty cigars regularly every day. My whole nervous system became affected, until my physician told me I must give up the use of tobacco for the time being at least. I tried the so-called "Kely Cure," "No-To-Bac," and various other remedies, but without success, until I accidentally learned of your "Baco-Cubo." Three weeks ago to-day I commenced using your preparation, and to-day I consider myself completely cured; I am in perfect health, and the horrible craving for tobacco, which every inveterate smoker fully appreciates, has completely left me. I consider your "Baco-Cubo" completely wonderful, and can fully recommend it.
Yours truly,
C. W. HORNICK.

are neglecting to enforce said law with reference to some of said diseases.

RESOLVED. That the interest of the public health demand that said law should be enforced and all possible care be taken to prevent the spreading of dangerous communicable diseases, and we are of the opinion that neglect so to do not only makes such officers and boards liable under the law, but also subjects the municipalities they represent to liability for damages in case of death or injury arising from neglect to comply with the provisions of the statute.

Local boards of health should take warning by this action of the State Board of Health that they do not lay themselves or their municipalities liable to penalties or forfeitures under the state laws. The opinion was expressed that in case of such a disease as scarlet fever or measles reported to a city board of health, if the city health officials failed to "give public notice of infected places," as the law requires, and a death results from exposure to the disease in such an infected place which had been reported to the local health officer in accordance with law, the city is legally and properly liable for damages.

The Secretary made a plea for the vigorous continuance of the Michigan Plan for the education of the people on the modes of spreading and the best measures for the restriction and prevention of the dangerous communicable diseases by the distribution of leaflets of instruction to the neighbors of the family in which any dangerous disease exists. This places the instruction in the hands of those most interested at a time when attention will be given to the measures recommended by the Board. He mentioned that not long ago scarcely anyone would believe that diphtheria and scarlet fever were dangerous diseases; but the people have been educated by just such leaflets, and to-day nearly every child in Michigan knows the danger of going near or coming in contact with one sick with diphtheria or scarlet fever. He said the people of Michigan need, most of all, instruction on the restriction on that greatest cause of death—consumption; but, evidently, such instruction ought to result in saving many lives from measles.

The Board ordered the reprinting of ten thousand copies of its leaflet on the restriction of measles, and copies of other leaflets, for distribution by local health officials to the neighbors of infected places.

Secretary Baker mentioned the fact that the last monthly Bulletin of "Health in Michigan" shows that whereas in the average September in the past eleven years typhoid fever has been reported by twenty per cent. of the physicians reporting to the State Board, during September, 1897, only ten per cent. of them reported typhoid fever; and that counting together typhoid and typhoid-malaria fever, only one-third as large a proportion reported such sickness in September, 1897, as in the average September. He thought this evidence very valuable as showing that the surface drouth which was severe throughout the state, has not caused an unusual amount of typhoid fever, probably because many of our people have taken measures to guard against it, and because the heavy rains early in the year have prevented the very great lowering of the water in the wells. But the great lowering is now likely to occur, therefore, and because October is usually the month in which typhoid fever is most prevalent, Doctor Milner moved and it was voted that the State Board recommend to the people generally the practice of boiling the drinking water.

Important Meeting of the State Health Board.

LANSING, Oct. 8, 1897. The Michigan State Board of Health held its regular quarterly meeting at the State Capitol, Oct. 8. The meeting was called to order by the president, the Hon. Frank Wells of Lansing. The members present were Prof. Delos Fall of Albion, Judge Aaron V. McAlvay of Manistee, Doctor Samuel G. Milner of Grand Rapids, Doctor Frederick G. Novy of the University at Ann Arbor, Doctor Fred R. Belknap of Niles, and Secretary Henry B. Baker of Lansing. Every member of the Board was present.

Doctor Milner of Grand Rapids presented the subject of the dangers to life by drowning, imperfect sewerage, unprotected water supplies, milk supplies, and other unsanitary conditions at summer resorts. He offered resolutions to the effect that there shall be a systematic inspection of summer resorts, in order that the danger of life by drowning and from all unsanitary conditions be reduced to a minimum, and that every safeguard that is possible be placed around summer resorts. The Board voted to refer the resolutions and the subject to the committee on public health legislation, with request to consider the points suggested and report to the Board at its next regular meeting. Resolutions on the same subject offered by Doctor Belknap, were referred to the same committee.

The subject of the restriction of measles in Michigan was discussed at length. It being a disease that causes many deaths in Michigan in every year, the Board agreed that every effort shall be made to see that the laws of the state are enforced by the local boards of health.

The following preambles and resolution were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, Section 1673 Howell's Statute provides that "when the small-pox, or any other disease dangerous to public health, is found to exist in any township, the board of health shall use all possible care to prevent the spreading of the infection, and to give public notice of infected places to travelers, by such means as in their judgment shall be most effectual for the common safety," and

WHEREAS, It has come to the knowledge of this board that in some instances local health boards and officers

Prostrated.

Overcome with Heart Disease While on the Street—Mrs. Wamsley, Wife of Rev. C. E. Wamsley, Seriously Affected—Has Been in a Precarious Condition.

From the New Era, Greensburg, Ind.

Mrs. Wamsley, wife of Rev. C. E. Wamsley, who lives on West Sheridan Street, Greensburg, Ind., has recently been cured of a very serious case of neuralgia of the heart and nervous prostration. A New Era reporter recently called on Mrs. Wamsley to learn the facts regarding her experience.

"I am 43 years old, and have been quite well until about six years ago, which was the time my youngest son was born. I began to lose my health then, and until recently never entirely recovered from my sickness of that occasion. My heart became affected, and there was continually a gradual sharp pain, and frequently it was so severe that I would involuntarily give vent to my agony in screams. These pains kept getting worse and caused nervousness. For years afterward, for a considerable period at a time, I would be confined to the house, and often to my bed. I could not endure excitement as I would become painfully nervous, and this would seriously affect my heart. Sudden pains would come on at any time of the day or night. Sometimes these would come on suddenly, causing me to involuntarily scream and fall down. It made no matter where I was, at home or down town, I would become helpless when thus attacked. I could not sleep nights, and my appetite was very poor.

"I had different physicians, and my husband did everything he could for me. The doctors all said my trouble was neuralgia of the heart, resulting from nervous prostration, but none of them seemed to be able to do anything for it, except to afford temporary relief. I tried different proprietary medicines said to be good for this disease, but none of them benefited me. Finally I noticed an item in the New Era stating that Mrs. Evans, who lives in the West End, had been cured of a similar trouble by using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, so I decided to try them. My husband bought a box, and I began using them. This was last fall. I felt considerable better after taking the first box, and kept on improving with the second. So we bought six more boxes, and I used them strictly according to directions, determined to give them a fair trial. I improved gradually as I continued taking the medicine. When I had finished seven boxes I felt perfectly well, but I kept on till I used nearly all of the eighth box, when I felt that it was useless to take them any longer as the doctor said I was cured. I used the last about three months ago, and I am perfectly well and in as good health today as ever. I feel that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People relieved me of a lifetime of sickness and sorrow, and I can cheerfully recommend them."

In confirmation of this story Mrs. Wamsley furnished the following affidavit:

Subscribed to and sworn before me, a Notary Public in and for the county of Decatur, State of Indiana, this 14th day of July, 1897.

JOHN F. RUSSELL, Notary Public.

All the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves are contained in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., for 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50.

LISTEN TO THE WIND.

JOE LINCOLN.

I ain't afraid to sleep alone, no, not a single mite. And I ain't frightened of the dark when Ma puts out the light; It's kinder fun on Summer nights, when I can't see a thing in bed. To watch the moonlight shinin' on the sky-light overhead. And to have the window open so's to hear the wind and rain sing. And the bull-frogs in the meadow tunin' up like everything; But I like to go to bed when winter's once begun. 'Cause then a feller has to lay and listen to the wind.

In day time 'tis n't half so bad,—I don't care how it blows. When everything's lighted up, 'cause then a feller knows It's only wind; but when its dark and you can't get to sleep, It ain't no fun to stay awake and then hear something creep Around the corners of the house, and sorter wall and man, And rattle at the shutters, like it knowed you's all alone. And wanted to get at you,—Gee! I'd 'bout as good as laid and fagged and grinded. As lay up in our attic there and listen to the wind.

I ain't no 'fraud cat,—not a bit; I'm brave as other boys; But, my! that's just the worstest, sorry, lonesome kind of noise. And makes me think of ghosts and things that come a-movin' round. When they're buried 'em and they'd feel better under ground; And they'll come an awful screech and all the houses'll shake. And you'll think what Bridget told 'bout "banishes" at a wake. She knowed of, and a goodin' thing that how. I ain't no 'fraud cat, and I ain't no 'fraud cat. Well, then I cover up my head so's I won't hear the wind.

But 'tain't no use, 'twill holler so's I hear it all the more. And then I'll snoop somethin' hid behind the door. And then the branches on the trees'll rub and groan and sigh. And, take it all together, so a feller'll nearly get scared of the tempest when the lightning's all a flash; And you'll hear the rain comin' down where our shed roof is tinned. Like, say, I wish there wa'n't no night, or else there wa'n't no wind. L. A. W. Bulletin.

WHATEVER IS IS BEST.

I know as my life grows older, And mine eyes have clearer sight, That under each rank wrong somewhere There lies the root of right; That each sorrow has its purpose, But as sure as the sun brings morning, Whatever is is best.

I know that each sinfull action, As sure as the night brings shade, Is somewhere some time punished, Though the hour be long delayed. I know that the soul is aided Sometimes by the heart's arrest, But to grove means often to suffer— But whatever is is best.

I know there are no errors In the great eternal plan, And all things work together For the good of man. And I know when my soul speeds onward, In its grand eternal quest, I shall find my foot back earthward, Whatever is is best. —(Author Unknown).

Be Kind to the Loved Ones at Home.

Be kind to thy father; for when thou wert young Who loved thee so fondly as he? He caught the first accents that fell from thy tongue, And joined in thy innocent glee; Be kind to thy father, for now he is old; His locks intermingle with gray, His footsteps are feeble, once fearless and bold; Thy father is passing away.

Be kind to thy mother, for low on her brow May traces of sorrow be seen; Oh! well mayst thou cherish and comfort her now, For loving and kind hath she been, Be kind to thy mother, for now she prays As long as God giveth her breath; In accents of kindness then cheer her long 'E'en to the dark valley of death.

Be kind to thy brother; his heart will have dearth If the smile of thy joy be withdrawn; The flowers of feeling will fade at thy birth Be kind to thy brother who ever thou art; The love of a brother shall never be far An ornament purer and deeper by far Than pearls from the rictus of the sea.

Be kind to thy sister; not many may know The wealth of the ocean lies fathoms below The surface that sparkles above; Be kind to thy father, once fearless and bold; Be kind to thy mother, so near; Be kind to thy brother, nor show thy heart cold; Be kind to thy sister so dear. —(Author unknown).

J. A. Jameson, lit. '91, of Chicago, president of the U. of M. Alumni Association of that city, was in town Friday and Saturday.
The Ohio State University eleven were defeated Saturday by a score of 34 to 0. The Ohio boys had three of their best men absent.
The law students from outside the state are organizing for the purpose of downing the Michigan contingent when the class elections come on.
The Normal team came up here as guests of the University foot ball team Saturday, to witness the game with the Ohio University team.
An auditing committee has been appointed by the S. L. A. board consisting of Prof. T. C. Trueblood, D. L. Harris and Clarence W. Whitney.

The Methodist preachers of Philadelphia have denounced football as being worse than prize fighting. In this connection it might be well to call the attention of these worthy gentlemen to a fine field for missionary effort at Ann Arbor.—Detroit Free Press.
It will be remembered that two years ago Caspar Whitney in Harper's Weekly severely criticised the University of Michigan's athletics. It was rather merited, although partially misunderstood. But now he is frank to say in the last Harper's "that there has been accomplished in two years in the middle west, results which the east was about half a dozen years in attaining," and he adds that "the Universities of Chicago, Michigan, Minnesota and Illinois, are already maintaining even a more commendable attitude than are Princeton, Pennsylvania, Dartmouth and Lafayette."
Senator Wm. Mason, of Chicago, or perhaps Illinois, would be more appropriate, opened the S. L. A. course on Friday evening last, at University Hall. Senator Mason is not an orator, but he is one of the sort of men who have a faculty of telling stories in a pleasant way that keeps his audience in the best of good humor. He said some extremely good things and although he did not favor the annexation of any more territory by the United States, yet he was warm in advocating the cause of the Cubans, and thought that this nation ought to assist the Hawaiians in maintaining a republic. He didn't hit the right key in that, for the public feeling is very strong here that these Islands should be a part of this nation. The Evolution of a Nation was not followed out as many expected it would be, and yet as far as the Senator went beyond the tadpole period he did well. The audience was a large one for the opening night, and the course will no doubt be more popular than ever this year.

A Philanthropic Firm—In Business for the Good they May do—

Chicago, Oct. 16, 1897.
Editor "Ann Arbor Courier,"
Dear Sir:—We are just in receipt of a copy of the Courier of October 13th and are not a little amused by your article, "Enforce the Law or Wipe it Out." Assuming that you are, like all newspapers, willing to do the fair thing, we write for the purpose of showing that there are two sides to this question.
As to license, Callaghan & Company are willing to pay a reasonable license if it is the custom of the city to impose the same on other people who come there to do business, but when the Ann Arbor officials impose a tax of $10 a day they admit by their action that it is an attempt to drive Callaghan & Company away from Ann Arbor. You say in the article, "why not let Callaghan & Company make their bluff good?" We ask, why does not the Ann Arbor Council complete its bull-dozing scheme?
Now, Mr. Editor, the facts are that the Michigan University is building up a great law school in your city and you are without a law book house. The metropolitan schools of Boston, New York, St. Louis, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Chicago and other cities, have access to a professional law bookseller. Callaghan & Company's visit of six weeks enables the students of your law school to have access to a strictly professional law book man, and if your citizens and the faculty of the law school could see the orders of the Ann Arbor students they would appreciate the service we are doing Ann Arbor and your law school. There is not a day but what our agent either telegraphs or writes for books that we do not have in our branch there, and includes statute law of nearly all the central states, books of Practice and odd volumes of Reports; these books enhance the value of the studies and they cannot be procured in Ann Arbor, nor is there anybody there outside our agent who could give them any information whatever concerning these books they are interested in. Our agent there serves the purpose of giving your school the benefit of a metropolitan law book house.
Now, as to our motive. We could make more money by remaining away from Ann Arbor than we can by going, as we do not sell any more of our publications by being there than we would through local agents. We come in personal contact with the students and make their acquaintance, which always has a prospective value that we appreciate, and it is for this reason more than any other that we go to Ann Arbor.
Now, as to its effect on the local book trade of Ann Arbor,—it is a benefit rather than an injury. The writer of this article lived in Ann Arbor before any law book house attempted to supply the students through the medium of a branch house, and the students were always dissatisfied, feeling that they were being over-charged for their books; they were continually corresponding with outside book houses and as many books were shipped into Ann Arbor sold by correspondence, as we now sell through our agency there, and I do not think we should conclude to close our branch house there, the students would immediately form clubs and buy their books for the entire year through the medium of these clubs; as it is we only sell books there for a short time; we give all of the book sellers in Ann Arbor (with one exception) trade rates on our publications; they can supply these to the students and they have any of the books left we extend to them the privilege of returning same to us and we credit them with full amount; this insures them against carrying stock against loss of value by new editions and they make more money this way than if we remained away from Ann Arbor.
Now, as to the one exception. We come in your article that one of your booksellers is assessed for $17,000 and cannot buy a book from Callaghan & Company for his customers, and ask, "How is that for monopoly?" The bookseller referred to has always been able to buy our publications at trade rates until he accepted the exclusive agency of another publishing house who supply Ann Arbor with a great many books; now, should we sell him our publications, which we certainly shall do if we withdraw our Ann Arbor branch? This gentleman would not only have the monopoly which he now enjoys of the West Publishing Company's books, but it would enable him to monopolize the entire trade of Ann Arbor; how would your local booksellers who are punching the ribs of the Ann Arbor City Council to drive us out of town, enjoy this? How would the students and faculty of Ann Arbor enjoy it? You can see by this that the monopoly you think now exists would be a very small affair in comparison.
In conclusion, the facts are that the Ann Arbor school is supplied with law books with less friction and less profit than any school in the country.

A SPLENDID CHARGE.

ence and solicitation, the plaintiff cannot recover.
"Now, gentlemen, this is not a matter to be determined upon mere suspicion or guess-work, or possibilities, or mere speculation; and before the father can be called upon to respond in damages to this plaintiff, there must be proof that he has been guilty of some misconduct; it must be established by the evidence that this defendant, Mr. Groves, has unjustly and maliciously persuaded and procured his daughter to lose her affection for her husband and abandon him. It must appear that the defendant has sought to prejudice his daughter against her husband and by persuasion and solicitation has tried to influence her against him. Not only must it appear that he is the cause of this alienation, but you must be satisfied from the evidence that this conduct has been inspired by malice and improper motives. Unless the defendant has been governed by ill-will towards the plaintiff, or prompted by improper motives, there can be no recovery against him.
"If you believe the story of Mrs. Duncan, that her father in no respect at any time or place, influenced her against her husband; that he was cautious and reserved in his judgment and advice to her; if you believe her story and she felt with her husband as long as she felt she safely could; that she lived with him until she was compelled to abandon all faith in him and his promises of reformation, and finally left him, solely because she was unwilling to spend the remainder of her life with a man addicted to the excessive use of intoxicating spirits; if you find these to be the facts and such to be the cause of her estrangement and separation, then this lawsuit against this defendant is but an insult added to his injuries, and the defendant is entitled to your verdict.
"When a daughter is married, the control over her by the parents ceases, and her parents have no right thereafter either to govern her or to interfere between her and her husband and thus promote domestic tranquility and discord. If the father makes this mistake and does interfere, either maliciously or from improper motives, he is liable for the consequences. If his conduct is prompted by ill-will towards her husband, or is done to subvert some selfish purpose on his part, he must be held responsible for the result; but it must be remembered that the important point of inquiry is the intent with which the defendant acted. If, through hate or ill-will, or for some selfish or improper motive, the defendant sought to render the wife of the plaintiff, he would render himself liable; but if he acted in good faith and from proper and rational motives, if he sought to assist her, if he tried to assist his daughter and rescue her from a life of sorrow, shame, and cruelty, he did nothing but what the law justifies. The law is reasonable and founded upon common sense. When a girl is married, she does not cease to be a daughter, nor thereby lose or bury her father. The father's house is always open to his children, and whether they are married or unmarried, it is still to them a refuge from evil and a consolation in distress. The affection of the father for his daughter and of the father towards his daughter may and should remain unabated. It would be a strange and unnatural father, whose interests and affection for his daughter should end at the marriage ceremony. The law recognizes no such folly or absurdity. The affection of an ordinary father and his deep interest in his daughter will naturally follow her, if dutiful, through all her journeyings in life, in adversity as well as prosperity, even to her grave. The father may therefore lawfully give honest advice to his married daughter who comes to him in trouble and distress, growing out of unhappy marital relations, and he may even shelter her in his own home as long as she voluntarily remains. The fact that he is her father does not forbid that he should do to his daughter acts of ordinary humanity. If a wife is ill used by her husband, if he has become addicted to the excessive use of intoxicating liquors, and for these reasons the wife had a good reason for separation and divorce, if she reaches the conclusion that she can no longer in peace and comfort and safety live with her husband, and wishes a divorce, she has the undoubted right to go to her father for his advice and his protection; and if he gives her his advice in good faith and according to his protection from honest motives and a sense of humanity, he is doing nothing but what good morals, the interest of humanity and the well established principles of law fully justify.
"Now, gentlemen, if from the evidence in this case you find that this father-in-law and not Mr. Duncan caused the alienation and separation of Flora Duncan from her husband, then the plaintiff is entitled to your verdict; and if he is entitled to your verdict, he is entitled to such compensation, or such damages, as will reasonably and fairly compensate him for the wrongs and injuries that he has received at the hands of the defendant. But on the other hand if the evidence in this case establishes the fact, if it satisfies you, that Mr. Duncan himself is responsible for all the misfortunes which have overtaken him, that his own failings and shortcomings caused the alienation and separation of his wife, then your verdict should be for the defendant.
"In this as in all other cases you should be governed by the evidence submitted. An attempt on the part of the plaintiff was repeatedly made, as you may remember, to call out the fact that the plaintiff was poor and had lost his property. Such testimony, gentlemen, is foreign to any issue here submitted to you. In the history of the civilization of this nation we have reached a point, where the poverty of the plaintiff or the wealth of the defendant, is to be regarded as a test of the right to recover in legal proceedings; if we have reached such a crisis in our affairs that such a fact is to control the verdict of a jury, then it is time that the walls of this court house should be thrown down, and men who are possessed of property, should find their only sure defense, in the shot gun and the bayonet. But, gentlemen of the jury, that is not the state of our society. All men, rich or poor, are equal before the law, and I believe the rights of all parties can be safely entrusted to a jury of their fellow men.

"The testimony in this cause indicates that but for this unfortunate habit of drinking, the plaintiff in this cause would be a kind husband and a kind father, a prosperous man and a good citizen. The sympathies of all good men should go out to him, and if he has been wronged, his rights should be respected and redressed, but unless you find from the evidence in this cause that the defendant Wm. P. Groves has unjustly or maliciously separated these parties and alienated the affections of Flora Duncan, under your oaths you have no more right to render a verdict against this defendant than to spoliolate the treasury of this state."

Prof. Schoeberle's Good Fortune—

In Sunday's N. Y. Tribune, under Topics in California, occurs this paragraph, which will be read with great interest by Ann Arbor people, where Prof. Schaeberle was reared and educated:
"The State University Regents this week placed Professor J. M. Schaeberle in temporary charge of Lick Observatory, and there is little doubt that at the end of the year he will be made Director." Prof. Holden's withdrawal after twenty-three years of service cannot fail to benefit the Observatory. Under his control quarrels among the astronomers were unceasing, and Messrs. Barnard, Burdham and Keeler were forced out. They had all done original work, but they declared they would not endure Professor Holden's autocratic ways. Schaeberle's specialty is the sun, and his great exploit was the proof four years ago by solar photographs taken in Chili that the sun is covered with volcanoes that belch forth molten material."

These are Days of Big Things—

One of the most astonishing bills that has been presented in a long time was filed at the probate office a few days since. Frank Dures, to whose house James Richards, who was murdered, was taken after being discovered, and where he died, presented a bill for $500 against the estate for the privilege allowing Richards to die there.

He claims to have destroyed all the bed clothing, together with 27 yards cotton, bed springs, carpets, oil cloths, zinc, window curtains, wall paper, etc., to the amount of $250. "To damage on account of the death of said Richards in the presence and hearing of small children, because said children were compelled to give up their bed in lower part of the house and be removed to the loft, a cold, chilly place, and that during the last hours of the life said Richards he was in great pain and distress, and the four small children of your petitioner were terribly frightened and became nervous and sick, causing your petitioner to employ medical services, and that particularly one of said children is still in a very nervous and precarious condition, as a result of said Richards being brought to the house of your petitioner to his damage of $250." The bill was allowed at $200.
