MACK & CO.

HON. J. J. ROBISON DEAD.
THE COUNTY LOSES ONE OF ITS PIONEERS AND PROMINENT CITIZENS.

News was received in Ann Arbor yesterday, of the death of Hon. John J. Robison, at his home in Sharon township, where he had resided for several years since leaving Ann Arbor. He had been failing for some time in health, and his death was not unexpected.

Mr. Robison was an excellent citizen, and a grand man. He resided in Ann Arbor for many years, having at two different times been County Clerk for two terms each.

He was born in Ontario Co., New York, Aug. 13, 1824, consequently was 73 years of age. In 1843 he removed with his parents to this county, settling in the township of Sharon. As a young man he earned his education by teaching school in Manchester and Sharon townships. In 1847 he was united in marriage with Miss Altha E. Gilbert, who survives him. They were blessed with five children, four of whom are still living, Chas. C., the eldest, upon the farm at home, Geo. Frank Robison, ex-prosecuting attorney of Wayne Co., in Detroit; James A. Robison, the present private secretary of Mayor Maybury, in Detroit; and Mrs. Gertrude Eaman, also in Detroit. The sad death of Emmet, the youngest son, while a member of the Detroit Free Press staff, is still fresh in the minds of many of our citizens. Emmet's death was a cruel blow to his father, and he never seemed to be exactly the same man afterward.

The deceased was often called upon to serve his fellow citizens in public position, and always filled them with credit to himself, and satisfaction to the people. He was supervisor of Sharon several terms, was a member of the State legislature several terms, both in the House and Senate, four terms county clerk, twice a candidate in this district for congress, once being defeated by only a few votes, was a delegate several times to the national democratic conventions.

In 1886 Mr. Robison was elected mayor of Ann Arbor, which position he held one year, declining a renomination. He certainly made one of the best mayors this city ever had. He was liberal in his views but firm in his convictions of right and wrong and allowed no temporizing with anything he considered wrong. His death removes a man who helped make the history of this county, and a man who in his day was probably as well known and wielded as great an influence as any one person in Washtenaw County.

The family have the sympathy of hundreds of our citizens.

ALL LOVERS OF MUSIC.

WILL BE GREATLY INTERESTED IN THIS REVIEW OF THE CHORAL UNION SERIES FOR 1897-8.

The Choral Union Series has been announced and is as usual full of interest. In the musical world, this year is somewhat remarkable, as so many artists of the highest reputation have been prevented from coming to America for one reason or another. Rosenthal has been obliged to cancel all his dates; Plunkett Greene does not come; several contemplated trips by eastern orchestras have not materialized; and altogether the musical season will be entirely different from what might have been inferred from the outlook two or three months ago.

A glance at the list of attractions offered this year by the Choral Union will show that in no sense has the course suffered by reason of the changes made necessary by the facts stated above. The problem of arranging a course becomes each year a more difficult one, as the success of each May Festival makes greater effort necessary in order that the standard may be maintained. Inasmuch as the income cannot increase in proportion to the public demand, the financial side of the question becomes more and more perplexing. An example is given in the mid-winter circus.

While it is possible to give a choral concert without orchestra, it is not advisable. For a chorus in which so many changes occur as in the Choral Union, to attempt a great work at the festival without the experience gained by singing with an orchestra earlier in the season, would be to invite disaster. It becomes necessary for reasons we are not obliged to state, to import an orchestra from Chicago for this concert, doubling the expense thereby. This is given as an indication of the difficulties of the situation. That eventually the problem of securing a larger income without increasing the price of season tickets will be solved by the erection of a larger auditorium we fully believe; and in the meantime the University Musical Society propose to do every thing to extend the influence of the concerts by steadily raising the grade of performances.

The first concert, by the Chicago Orchestra, Nov. 10, needs no comment. Theodore Thomas is so well known, his name is so inseparably connected with the history of our highest musical development, that there is neither necessity of dwelling upon his achievements, nor praising his orchestra.

The second concert will be of absorbing interest, for in it Mr. and Mrs. Georg Henschel will be heard for the first time in Ann Arbor. Mr. Henschel was the first conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and for the last few years has directed a most successful series in London. His compositions in the larger orchestral forms, as well as in the line of lyrics, are full of virility and nobility, yet not lacking in poetry and grace. As a singer his reputation is world wide. He plays his own accompaniments in the most artistic manner.

Mrs. Henschel, as Lillian Bailey was easily the most popular and artistic singer in Boston, and as Mrs. Henschel she has won the commendation of the English and Continental critics. They give a rich and varied program, among which are many of Mr. Henschel's compositions.

Mr. Alberto Jonas and the Detroit Philharmonic Club make an ideal combination. Mr. Jonas is constantly extending his reputation as a concert pianist. He will play with the Boston Symphony orchestra this season, and has many other important engagements in the East and West. The Philharmonic Club has been constantly improving, and is looked upon as one of the finest organizations of its kind in the country. The combination of piano and strings makes possible some excellent ensemble numbers.

Mendelssohn's "Elijah" was performed year before last by the Choral Union with great success. This year following out the policy of the Choral Union.

THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

OF THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN —THE CONSOLIDATION BIDS FAIR TO BE A MAGNIFICENT SUCCESS.

The General Secretary at Work.

Many Schemes Being Developed to Bring the Alumni in Touch With Their Alma Mater.

A day or two since a Courier scribe sauntered into the office of General Secretary McAllaster, of the University Alumni Association, and in conversation with that enthusiastic official learned many things about the new society and what is being done to promote its interests.

Last season the idea was conceived by some of the prominent alumni of the university to amalgamate or combine all the various departmental alumni associations of the U. of M., and make one strong organization which could be used for the advancement of the university's interest, and the good of the great body of graduates.

Last commencement the idea took definite form, and by correspondence the members of the various associations came together with the one idea uppermost, of giving up their separate organizations and combining all in one great association.

At that time the association was organized and a board of directors chosen, consisting of Regent Levi L. Barbour, of Detroit, as president; Prof. E. F. Johnson, the present secretary of the law faculty, vice president; Prof. L. P. Jocelyn, of the Ann Arbor High School faculty, as recorder; Prof. F. C. Newcombe, of the University faculty, treasurer; and Dr. G. C. Huber, of the medical faculty.

Immediately afterwards, Prof. Jocelyn, acting as temporary general secretary, sent out about 13,000 copies of a circular descriptive of the new alumni association and its plan of work. In reply to these came many letters of inquiry, all of which Prof. Jocelyn answered.

On October 1st the board of directors met and selected Ralph C. McAllaster as the general secretary of the association.

The board of regents very kindly provided an office for the association's use by partitioning off the west end of the old chapel, and having it properly fitted up for the secretary's use.

Headquarters have been established, and it is the desire that visiting alumni or former students of any department should call at the rooms whenever in Ann Arbor. Or when they have friends coming to the university, if they will have them come to this office, an effort will be made to have all such strangers and visitors conducted about the campus and shown the buildings and grounds in a methodical and systematic way, so that their visit may prove pleasant and interesting.

The interest that is being taken in the association by the present board may be judged somewhat from the fact that so far during October they have held no less than twelve meetings.

The responses to the circulars sent out is very encouraging, there have been over 400 up to date who have forwarded the $1 membership dues. The alumni, now that a permanent organization has been formed, a definite object presented, and a set of officials chosen who are in earnest, show their confidence in the project, and are coming forward to join hands once more and encircle their alma mater, the glorious U. of M., with a strong cordon of staunch supporters.

The annual dues of $1 per year are not a condition of membership, every graduate being a member by reason of that fact. But responses are coming gladly and willingly, now that they are assured that the funds will be properly cared for and judiciously expended.

As a sample, we will be pardoned for producing one. It is from Col. John L. Burleigh, law '76, and is typical of that gentleman. Enclosing the $1 dues he says:

Louis P. JOCELYN, Esq.,
Acting Sect'y, etc.,
My Dear Sir:—With great pleasure,
Yours Ever,

FOOT BALL.

A strong prejudice exists with many against foot ball. They say it ought to be prohibited by law, or by the school and University authorities. As the game was played five years ago there were good grounds for remonstrance. The slugging and semi-professionalism made it brutal and dangerous.

The author is saw that something must be done. The game had too many good points about it, and it had too strong a hold on the college and high school boys to prohibit it, so boards of control were established for its regulation. These boards were composed of members of the faculties, who had not forgotten their younger days, and students. Rules against slugging and unfair play were adopted. No one could play on a team beyond four or five years, nor anyone who had been hired to play. If the players did not keep up their studies, they were thrown off.

This latter rule has taken away the criticism that the players neglected their studies, and it has gone far in bringing up the scholarship of many who formerly cared nothing for study. They want to be on the team, and they will even study their lessons, so as to be eligible. It gives the teachers a new hold on the scholars.

The result is there is now cleaner athletics, less disputing, no slugging and almost a total removal of objectionable features. The game is rough and hard on the bodies, but the training they undergo gives strong physiques, able to stand it. It makes stout, solid bodies which afterwards will better ward off disease than as if they had not had the training and discipline.

In these days of growing interest in out-door sports it is encouraging to see clean athletics, and games played for pure sport's sake. Students must have exercise, and the sooner school and college authorities recognize this, and go in to direct it the sooner will advance clean sport, good scholarship and healthy bodies.

The youngster who helped the Cuban girl, Senora Cisneros, from the Havana prison, did a good job, and will get full credit for it. He was sent there by a New York paper, and finished his contract in style. It is not probable that Spain will make much fuss over the matter, as, having placed the young lady in the foul prison where she was confined for many months past, they are probably glad to have the matter off their hands, considering how matters are going.

Still, not many countries would care to have their official prisons invaded in the manner this was done. But we are glad she is free, and glad it was a Yankee boy or boys who helped her out.—Charlotte Republican.

Dana's Personal Characteristics

Many who knew Charles A. Dana's prejudices have pictured him a grim, even a hard man. But this, of all things, he was not. He was sunny, light hearted, kindly mannered above most men.

His home life was beautiful. In his summer place at Glen Cove, a charming, cultivated island, he was the chiefest source of geniality and sunshine. Walking over his grounds, reading in his library, wandering among his choice orchards, driving, even at an advanced age, his spirited, blooded pair, he enjoyed life as is permitted to few to enjoy it. And, what is more, all who came within his influence enjoyed life too.

His health and vigor were remarkable.
At 70 he was as vigorous as most men of 40. His bright, youthful eye, his glowing cheeks, his lusty step, belied the snowy whiteness of his beard and hair.
But it was in his office that his real self was made known, for Mr. Dana was first of all a worker. Up to an advanced age he was always at his desk in his shabby corner room at 10 o'clock. He was often there earlier. He remained faithfully at work all day, often taking luncheon in his office. He rarely left home much before 5 o'clock.

His activity and capacity for work were a source of constant wonder to those who labored beside him in his later years, but Mr. Dana had as firm and as buoyant a step and as bright an eye as the youngest of his "young men,"
as he called his reporters.

A composite on a certain paper was asked one day if there was going to be any news in the paper that week. "Oh, yes," he responded, cheerfully; "two medicine contracts change their locals this week, and we had to get a new electrotype for another as the old one was worn out. Yes, indeed; we're getting out a whale of a good paper this week."
He forgot to say that the date was also changed.

The retirement of Justice Stephen J.
Field will mark the disappearance of one of the most remarkable families which the United States has known. The four sons of David Dudley Field, a poor cler-gyman of Massachusetts—David Dudley, Stephen J., Cyrus W. and Henry M.— were all remarkable men. Each held a high place in his particular sphere. Cyrus, the greatest of them all, had a name which was known in every country in the world. To a smaller extent the other three had an international reputation also. David and Cyrus are dead, Stephen's life work is virtually finished, and Henry, the youngest of them, who is now 75 years of age, though still connected with the New York
"Evangelist," is seldom heard of by the world. With their departure the glory of the family dies. Not one of them has a son who can transmit the luster of their name to another generation. In the Field case, as in many other instances which can be mentioned, the truth of the old saying is exemplified that "great men leave no continuance."

The editor of the Galena Republican is a philosopher. He says:
"Last week a lady—a handsome one, too—said: 'I could hug you to death when I read that roast of old Steppanoff.' We met the same lady this week and she said: 'I could kill you for assaulting my friend Awfulgood.'
We are not particular as to how we die—whether we are hugged to death or killed in the ordinary way."

recommended to me as good medicine have done me so much good that I can speak highly of them for these complaints. I am a veteran of the late war and have been in poor health since the battle of Stone River.

More Money Per Capita.

On the first day of this month the per capita circulation of the United States was 84 cents greater than it was on the corresponding date last year. That is an increase of about 4 per cent. The change is not great, but it is very instructive.

A year ago the Bryanites were filling the land with a dismal noise about the impending contraction of the currency, if the republican party were permitted to elect its ticket. They said that all the woes which had been visited upon the nation, in the form of an imaginary decrease in its circulating medium, since the mints were closed to the free coinage of silver, would be made as nothing by the awful schemes of the goldbugs if McKinley were elected. It was asserted that the greenbacks would be retired, without putting any other form of money in their place, and some of the wildest populists went about warning people that there would be no silver or silver certificates after a little while. The dollars of the money changers were going to be made so costly and scarce that one of them would ensnare any poor wretch who owed it.

around her ears which kept getting worse and spreading until they became very painful. The sores would discharge and her and we procured a bottle of Hood's it until she was entirely cured." NADIA

MICHIGAN CENTRAL

"The Niagara Falls Route."

TIME TABLE IN EFFECT JULY 4, 1871.

CENTRAL STANDARD TIME

By Lady Cook nee Tennessee Clafin
Written for the Courier.

It is somewhat singular that idleness and gentility should be popular synonyms. "The butcher, the baker, the candle-stick-maker," and other tradesmen, as well as the upper ranks of business men, generally look forward to the day—the happy day as they fondly dream—when they shall have made enough money to retire from work and can enjoy their cum dignitate. There is something natural about this. They are then self-pensioned. They have earned the right to repose. They have fought the battle of life and come off victorious in a pecuniary sense. Whether they can cast aside their old habits with ease and find enjoyment in new ones, is for their own consideration only. Anyhow, they are entitled to make the experiment. And were the matter to rest here, little or no mischief would ensue.

Unfortunately, however, the success of the parents usually begets a particular ambition in the minds of the children. The daughters desire to be ladies, the sons to be gentlemen. This, of course, would be praiseworthy if connected with some useful career. When, however, as is too often the case, it means simply to live an idle life, squatting lazily upon the hard-earned fortunes of their fathers, it becomes a calamity for all concerned. But when it also leads them to be ashamed of their origin, and of the honest methods by which their affluence had been secured, it is little short of depravity—mean, despicable, repulsive.

Such false views of life and of what is becoming, must needs lead to disaster. Because to make up for want of birth or breeding, they launch out into vulgar extravagance, endeavoring to dazzle where they cannot convince. Yachts, racers, and bounds, expensive establishments, gambling and voluptuous living, are a few of the means by which the carefully gathered wealth of successful merchants or professional men is dissipated by their heirs. Very few of these care to walk in the steps of their fathers, or to engage in the occupations which made them rich. And probably the first lessons to wild expenditure on the part of these prodigal sons were learned at our Universities, where, for a long period, generations of vain or weak-minded youth have been hopelessly corrupted.

It is sad to reflect how often the methods by which a successful man endeavors to advance the position of his children become the means of their ruin. He reflects, it may be, on his own scanty education or other disadvantages in early life, and determines that his sons shall fare better. They shall go to some great public school, or to Oxford, or Cambridge. They shall learn all that shall be learned in these homes of the Muses. They shall mix with gentlemen and noblemen, make superior acquaintances, and catch their tone. And that they may not be prejudiced by his status, he supplies them most liberally with pocket-money, and encourages them to shine in the display of wealth. After a long course, during which parental hopes have been excited, they often return to the old root with only a thin veneer of scholastic acquirements, but deeply engrossed with all the vices which, it is well known, these semi-narques are able to teach. Their ostentation while there is secretly ridiculed by their companions, their morals are ruined, and they come back with appetites whetted for profligacy, despising business, averse to useful occupation, and impatient of their family and home surroundings.

In these cases, however, where these evils have been minimized or even avoided, where they have really studied, and their habits and conduct have been fairly decent, they are still as averse as the former to the occupations of their parents, and are occasionally prompted to endeavor to distinguish themselves in fashionable society. This is often very difficult. Nevertheless youth, money and perseverance, can accomplish much in time. And if they succeed, what is the result? A more reputable mode of squandering than that of others, but a life of greater uselessness. And the mistakes of both classes arise through the fault of the parents.

For all true education begins at home. Correct habits and thoughts must not only originate there, but must there be quickened into activity and be trained to steady discipline. As the tree is, so are its fruits; and as the home is, so are its children. In an atmosphere of honor they will be honorable—surrounded by deceit they will be deceitful. Where wealth is worshipped they will bow also. Where idleness is tolerated they will despise work. It is worse than vain—it is criminal—to send youths with unformed or badly formed characters into great schools and colleges, and expect them to profit by the experience. Nothing less than deeply rooted sentiments of purity, and habits strong from daily use and correct from conviction, can enable them to escape the contamination inseparable from these establishments.

The devout Anselm said that "Idleness is the sepulture of a living man." He who does nothing is nothing; he is engulfed, swallowed up and obliterated by the tenure of his existence. He is worse off than if he had never been, for he neglects the opportunities which god and his age have given him. The old proverbs say: "Idleness and lust are sworn friends;" "Idle men are the devil's playfellow;" "Idleness is the greatest prodigality in the world." The moralists, from Solomon to Dr. Watts, have not only vented their strictures on idleness, but on sluggishness as well. To be dilatory or perfunctory is to be partially idle. To be improvident is the same. We are invited to consult Nature and imitate her foresight. And "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do," said the Preacher, "do it with thy might."

Idle and addle have the same meaning, and, with all, are derived from the same word, which signified to be sick, corrupt, void. An idle person is an ailing person, sick in body and mind, corrupt in morals, void of understanding. An idle life is an addled life, noxious, unproductive, and dead to all goodness. Yet this is the life which so many covet and others are proud to possess, and that is the individual who is allowed precedence over the industrious!

"Nature fits all her children with something to do," said the poet, and truly there is so much to be done in this world—physically, mentally, morally—that it befits none to be idle. These are Augean stables to be cleansed, ancient and mighty wrongs to be rectified, grave abuses to be redressed, and dense clouds of ignorance to be di-pealed. The world mourns for want, and misery, and crime, and "the dark places of the earth are full of cruelty." Power and injustice trample upon the weak and the innocent. Nation is arming itself against nation, and "a man's foes are they of his own household." Poverty prays in vain for its daily bread. We see the industrious idle mom compulsion, and the wicked criminal from want of knowledge. Our boasted brotherhood is a poetic dream. Each fights for his own hand, regardless of others, and the end no man can foresee.

"So many worlds, so much to do, So little done, such things to be."

Surely humanity requires the best efforts of all its members. This is no place for idlers or lovers of false gentility. There is work to be done, serious, patient and persistent work, not the service of the slave, but the cheerful labor of the free man, full of loving-kindness. The world is still young, and noble duties lie before it. As it grows wiser it will grow happier, until love supplants selfishness and becomes the universal law of its being. As Tennyson sweetly sang to the Great Worker:

Our little systems have their day;
They have their day and cease to be;
They are but broken lights of Thee,
And Thou, O Lord, art more than they.

We have but faith we cannot know;
For we are but the sum of things we see;
And yet we trust it comes from Thee.
A beam in darkness, let it glow.

Let knowledge grow from more to more,
But more of reverence in us dwell,
That mind and soul, according well,
Make one music as before.

A Happy Husband's Story.

"My wife," writes a fond husband, "looks ten years younger since she began to take Dr. Greene's Nervura. She was in a terrible condition. She began to be nervous several years ago. I did not notice it at first, but she gradually grew worse. After a little she could not sleep. She lost her appetite. Then she became irritable and morose, and from the sweetest and best tempered woman in the world she became shrewish and hysterical. Finally she began to fade away. You know there is a difference between women who grow old naturally and women who fade out from the effects of disease. I think I am as devoted and patient as any husband, but I must confess that my wife's unfortunate condition was a sore trial. I do not know what would have become of us if things had gone on as they were. The change for the better came suddenly. There was a complete transformation within a few days. Sound sleep and a hearty appetite came as nervousness and irritability went. I did not know what the matter was until she told me that she had been impressed by the sincerity and common sense of Dr. Greene's advertisements, and had been taking his Nervura. From misery and despondency she is now the happiest person in the world, with the possible exception of myself."

Dr. Greene's Nervura,

THE GREAT BLOOD AND NERVE REMEDY,

Is the great health restorer. To suffering womankind it is a priceless blessing. How sad is the sight of a fading woman! Who has not seen the sparkling eyes lose their luster, the roses and lilies fade from the cheeks, and elasticity of step and gracefulness of figure give way to repulsive haggishness! With departing beauty go sweetness of temper and charm of speech, and nothing is left of the sufferer but the ghastly contrast with her former self. The world would be gloomy indeed were there no light in this dark picture. Nature is forgiving. In Dr. Greene's Nervura she has founded a means by which women may regain their lost health and beauty, and assume their rightful positions in the spheres in which they move, as both ornaments and inspirations.

Dr. Greene's Nervura acts directly upon the nerves and blood, which are the life! Exhausting, irritability and moroseness are banished, and the circulation is strengthened and purified like a mountain stream. The office of Dr. Greene's remedies, 148 State St., Chicago, Ill., is open to you, and skilled physicians are at your service with consultation, examination and advice absolutely free, personally or by letter.

ENGLISH LAWYERS.

The Small Fees That Are Received by the London Barristers.

A barrister's fees are small, and they are always paid in advance, and the sum is recorded under the title of the brief. A friend who has a large practice showed me his book yesterday. The largest item was 38 guineas, which is less than $200. The average was about $50. Fees are regulated by the benchers of the inn according to the service performed, and no contingent fees are allowed. A barrister may accept a case for nothing or return the fee in cases of charity, but he cannot without violating his oath, directly or indirectly, accept any greater compensation for a legal service than is allowed in the regular schedule fixed by the benchers of his inn. If he does so, he is debarred from practice.

It is a common custom in America for a lawyer to undertake a suit for the recovery of damages or a claim of any kind with a contract that he shall receive a certain percentage of the amount of money recovered. In England such an act would be considered disreputable, and any barrister found guilty would be expelled from his inn. The fees are regulated by the amount of time and labor required, and not by the amount of money involved. A barrister may receive a fee of $250 in a case involving only $500, and he may receive a fee of $35 in a case involving $1,000.

All legal business originates with solicitors. They bring to the barrister's office a case all prepared after certain forms and written in manuscript. The British courts do not permit typewriting. The solicitor requests the barrister to undertake the case, and the fee is marked plainly upon the brief. If the barrister does not care to undertake the labor for the amount of money allowed or for any other reason, he advises the solicitor to go elsewhere. If he accepts the responsibility, the solicitor leaves the amount of the fee in coin with the brief, so that the barrister has his pay in advance. This is the almost invariable custom. The only exceptions are in cases of close friendship between the solicitors and barristers and where there is a large amount of litigation in which both are involved. Then it is customary for the barrister to make up his bill at the end of the month or the end of the quarter, but the fee in each case must nevertheless be written upon the brief and recorded in the books of the court.

It is customary, also, for the solicitor to leave a fee for the barrister's clerk at the same time, which must be a certain percentage of that paid to the barrister. When you dine at a hotel or a restaurant in England, it is customary to tip the waiter an amount equal to 5 per cent of your bill for the same reason. The waiter receives no compensation from his employer, nor does the barrister's clerk. His pay comes entirely from the clients, and if his principal has no clients he gets no pay. On the other hand, if his principal has a very large and profitable practice his fees are enormous. They say that the clerk of Sir Charles Russell lives in a handsome villa down in the suburbs, is driven to and from his office in a brougham and hires a box at the opera for the season.—Chicago Record.

No More of It For Him.

He entered the shop of a fashionable bootmaker, a look of determination on his face. It was such a look as one sees on the face of a man who is firmly resolved to carry out, at all hazards, a decision which will change the whole course of his life.

"H'm!" he began as the assistant stepped forward and politely questioned him as to his requirements in feet beautifiers. "I want a pair of shoes for my wife, Mrs. Brown."

"Yes, sir, certainly," said the young man briskly. "Same style and size as last week?"

"Same style. Size, fives—wide fives," replied Brown decided.

"But—er—excuse me. Mrs. Brown only takes—that is, she usually has 8½," exclaimed the assistant, who knew the lady well.

"Are you married, young man?" queried Brown sternly, the look of determination deepening on his careworn features.

"Er—not yet, sir," answered the shopman, blushing.

"I thought not," returned Brown. "I am! I am not going to suffer half an hour's purgatory every morning, watching a woman trying to squeeze a bushel of feet into a peck of boots. I've stood it long enough, and I'm going to take her a pair that will fit."—Pearson's Weekly.

Making Things Clear.

An old Peebles worthy and an English lady were one day recently occupants of a railway carriage in an Edinburgh bound train. The train had been waiting long at a certain station, and there was no appearance of its starting, when the worthy remarked, "They're a gay taiglesome lot here."

"I beg your pardon," said the lady. "I'm saying they're an awfu' daidlin squad here," said the old fellow.

"I really beg your pardon, sir," she rejoined.

"I'm remarkin they're a vera dreich lot here the nicht," the old gentleman further ventured.

"Really, I must again beg your pardon," said the lady, with marked embarrassment, "but I do not comprehend you."

"I was just trying to say the train was late," he finally blurted.

"Indeed, sir, it is very late," agreed the lady.

And the conversation collapsed.—Dundee News.

The great frog dealer Rushton Clark of Green Oak, is now harvesting his annual crop for the benefit of science. Last Monday he delivered ten boxes to the U. of M., and has sent a large amount to Cleveland. He has already disposed of $40 worth of frogs.

Chelsea has lost one of its best families—Mr. and Mrs. George Blatchley moved to Ann Arbor, where Mr. Blatchley will open a grocery store. The people of Chelsea will miss this genial couple, but will commend them to the people of Ann Arbor.—Chelsea Standard.

Gen. Parkhurst, of Coldwater, was a pupil in 1841 of Martin Clark of this city, at Oneida Castle, N. Y. He was just an ordinary boy of the village of no great promise and no one would have anticipated, Mr. Clark says, that he could have made such a wonderful success in life.

The New State Telephone Co. is making rapid progress not only in putting up its lines in the city but in extending them throughout this country and the state. Connection will soon be had with Milan, Whitewater and Waukesha. There is nothing sleepy about this line, and when the last complete in this city it will be round a big one.

Any proposition to allow wheelmen the privilege of riding upon the sidewalks will be met with bitter opposition, whether they pay a tax for the privilege or not. Then again, if some pay for the privilege and some do not how are the privileged ones to be protected in their rights and the unprivileged barred out? By hiring a policeman for every block to watch them?

The New England Magazine for October has as a leading article Bookert T. Washington and his Tuskegee Institute for Colored People. Mr. Washington is solving the race problem for the former black slave, even as George Washington did for the oppressed colonists of America. The two Washingtons will go down in history as akin to Moses. Those three men lead their people from oppression to liberty and enlightenment.

The Y. M. C. A. boys will give a Hallie's Social at their rooms Friday night. Coffee and cake will be served freely by the Women's Auxiliary. Ice cream and cake will also be served. A musical program will be given during the evening, and the boys will do their best to give you a pleasant evening. Those who are expected to furnish music during the evening are: The Ann Arbor Mandolin and Guitar Club, Miss Lizzie Kenney, Mr. J. E. Harkins, Mr. Isaac Reynolds and a double quartette of Y. M. C. A. boys.

Alderman Arthur Brown is a hustler when he gets started. A few days since he purchased the property at the corner of N. State and E. Ann sts., of President W. H. Payne, of Nashville, Tenn., turning in two lots in the Miller addition as part payment, and within three day's time had the house sold, the lot divided into four lots facing on Ann st.; sold one for cash; traded the two next to State st. to Mrs. Lum for a business lot on N. Fourth ave. Then he sold that lot to Dr. Burdett. There are few people who can make so many turns of property in so short a time.

The Times' picture of Larkin's boots last Thursday, were very good. But the heads presented in the same issue were rocky. If Sheriff Judson was not one of the best natural men in the country, he would have had an action brought against the paper before this. A lady who saw the pictures and did not notice the labels at the bottom of them, remarked: "Well, those men look like murders, anyway. That one," pointing to the Sheriff's cut, "if it looks like him, would be guilty of most any crime." When told her mistake, the lady apologized for her hasty remarks, and enjoyed the laugh on herself.

The Ann Arbor correspondent of the Northwestern Miller says: "Our county has had, for several years, half crops of wheat of varying degrees of poor quality, and milling has been anything but an enjoyable occupation. This year old Washtenaw has gotten back where she belongs to the head of the procession, with a crop of nearly 1,300,000 bu., easily distancing all other counties in the state, according to the report of the secretary of state just issued. The quality is equal to the quantity, and we believe ourselves to be 'strictly in it' this year in milling. Have orders on some grades to run us till December, and are simply making the wheels go round every hour we can. We have had fair rains in this section of late and wheat in the ground is looking better. With warm weather, which we are having, we will have a good growth for the winter. Fall crops are being secured."

The Slaton Grand Concert Co., which is to appear in the S. L. A. course on Saturday evening next, October 30, is receiving very kind notices from the press wherever they appear. Now that means something.

The press may praise a company before they appear, partly through ignorance and partly through a desire to help the local organization that brings them to the place, but when a reporter writes up a complimentary notice of a company of entertainers after he has heard them, it can be counted as a fact that they are good. So our people may expect a fine entertainment Saturday evening, at University Hall.

The fact that Max Benda is one of the troupe is a sufficient guarantee of excellence, and the other members are all artists in their line.

Y. W. C. A. Notes

A letter was received this week from a young woman whom the Y. W. C. A. befriended three years ago, and of whom they have kept track ever since. When she first came to the room she was alone, in a strange land, had lost faith in God and humanity and was becoming reckless and despairing. After she left the city, between the Y. W. C. A. in other places and her own friend across the sea, the Ann Arbor Association succeeded in keeping more or less of a hold upon her. Life brightened somewhat during this time, and now after months of silence, comes a letter full of loving messages for "the Y. W. C. A. girls," and news of a happy home, comforts and friends and that "looks very different." Only one history, but even the short record of this one Association could show other histories that mean as much. Does the Y. W. C. A. pay? Is it worth while? These girls think so. Do you deserve part of these thankful words that come occasionally from those who have been helped?

The finance and devotional departments will hold their committee meetings Friday evening at 7:30. It is urged that every member of these committees be present as there is important business to transact.

Miss Harriet Taylor, secretary for city associations, is expected to visit us soon. Watch the papers for definite announcements later on.

The Girls Branch have their business meeting Saturday afternoon at four o'clock. The 5 cent dues for October are to be paid at that time.

Subject for Sunday meetings:

Oct. 31, Our Friends. How can they help us? Ecclesiastes IV 9-12.

Nov. 7, Our Friends. How can we help them? Roman XII. 4-5.

W. C. T. U. Notes

Ann Arbor is well represented this year at the World's W. C. T. U. Convention—Mrs. Voorhees, Michigan State Treas., Miss Emma E. Bower, Dr. Mary Wood-Allen, and Miss Rose M. Wood-Allen are all in attendance. Dr. Wood-Allen filled one of the pulpits of one of the Toronto churches Sunday.

It is greatly to be regretted that the difference in opinion of Lady Henry Somerset and some other officers of the Union, should cause so much disturbance as it has. That they should differ in their methods is not strange, for we cannot all see things in the same light. Why not let each one live up to the light she may have, and not try to make every one over fit our pattern.

At the next Union meeting Thursday, Oct. 28, 3 p. m., the subject of the World's Convention will be dwelt upon.

THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

The plans of the Association are far-reaching. Primarily they desire to unite the graduates of all departments that the department lines may be forgotten after leaving college, and that all alumni of the institution may come to form one united body, in close touch and sympathy with the University, and thoroughly enthusiastic in her support. Every possible means will be used to keep in touch with the great army of U. of M. graduates. Among other things will be a journal, to be published weekly or semi-monthly by the association, which will be sent to every graduate so far as their addresses are known. This will be distinctly a university news journal, not given to long articles, but will record everything of interest happening in and about the University and so keep the campus fresh in the minds of those who have left it. News respecting the alumni will also be given, telling where they are and what they are doing, and what, if any positions of trust and responsibility they are holding. Each issue of the paper will be like a letter from former classmates, instructors and friends.

At the general secretary's office a complete geographical and alphabetical index will be compiled, and all possible items of interest procurable preserved. The secretary will be the necrologist of the association, and a complete report will be kept of all the deaths within the ranks.

In this connection it might not be out of place to note that Secretary McAllaster has already commenced the collection of the photographs of all graduates and former students who have become members of congress. These will be arranged in groups and hung upon the walls of the office for the benefit of all visitors and friends.

Many responses are being received, and one member in sending his photo inscribed upon the back of it thus: Greenville, Tenn., Oct., '97. The un-named is a member of the class of 1859, U. of M. I served in the 47th, 48th and 49th congresses, from first district of Tennessee, which is the extreme eastern district, formerly represented by Andrew Johnson, late president. Served all the time on the committee on 'Privileges and Elections,' and on other committees.

All hail Ann Arbor and the University of Michigan.

A. H. PITTIBONE,
A Republican.

Besides the above the pictures of Theo. Otjen, of Milwaukee, Wis., law '84; Marriott Brosius, of Lancaster, Pa., law '68; and Horace G. Snover, Port Austin, Mich., lit. '69, law '71, have been received.

The next list to be taken up will be those who have filled the position of circuit or supreme court judge.

From time to time General Secretary McAllaster will visit local alumni associations throughout the country, and give the members a detailed history of the work being done.

The alumni are invited to use the general secretary's office freely as a means of communication with the university; to make it their headquarters when visiting Ann Arbor, having their mail forwarded in its care, and making appointments with friends there. It is also desired that any suggestions that may present themselves to any member, that would be of interest and benefit to the association, be communicated to the secretary.

The outlook is certainly promising. The board has made a wise selection in its general secretary, Mr. McAllaster being a man who is fertile in resources, has a lot of good Scotch grit, and above all is not afraid of doing a full day's work six days in every week. The University and the Alumni both, are to be congratulated upon the prospects for the future.

Special Message to Men.

When the desolating fact of impaired vigor comes home to men the force of the blow is crushing. They know themselves inferior to their fellows, and they shrink from companionship. Their ambition is gone, and hope with it. When hope vanishes despair takes its place. All this is without warrant, for these men can be cured. Dr. Greene, the famous specialist in men's diseases, has found the remedies that restore vitality in men. These remedies build up and strengthen, and thousands of men walk the earth to-day who have been permanently restored to vigorous manhood by their use. Weakness vanishes, hope and ambition return, and the patient is truly a new man. Dr. Greene's glorious discoveries are the safeguard of many thousand homes to-day. His wonderful Nervura alone has made him famous. Consultation and advice, personally or by letter, is absolutely free at the office of Dr. Greene's remedies, 148 State st., Chicago, Ill. Write about your case and there will be absolutely no charge for consultation or advice in either case, whether you call or write. The system of treatment by mail is perfect, and is absolutely confidential.

Is the Assertion True?

A citizen approached the writer a day or two since and remarked: "Why don't you newspaper men do your duty in respect to the nickel-in-the-slot gambling machines that are again running at full blast in our city?"

The scribe acknowledged his ignorance of the fact asserted.

"Well, it is true. There are dozens of those machines running here now, and they are the worst things that were ever allowed in a place. I have heard of a saloon keeper receiving $20 a week for simply allowing one of them to stand in his place. The games of chance are always enticing to the young, and this is like all others. These machines were all rooted out of town when Dr. Darling was mayor, and when Ed. Walker followed him in that office they were kept out, too. But lately they have been allowed to come back again, and it is wrong, dead wrong. The newspapers of the city ought to take up this thing and make it so hot for the officials that they will enforce the law against them."

The above is substantially what the gentleman said. The Courier knows nothing of the facts, but believes that if these machines are at work again here, their owners should be compelled to take them out.

Two Receipts—Read Them.

The Daily Times of last Thursday has the following:

"A prominent democrat has handed us the following recipe for a 'Confidence Pudding':

"For the benefit of my unemployed brothers, I will give them the following receipt: Take three gallons of confidence, one peck of international agreement, one quart of gold standard, seven tablespoonsfuls of prosperity, two quarts of sound money, one pound of protection, boil it with 12 months of no work, for an hour, and eat while hot."

A prominent gentleman, politics unknown, as an antidote to the Daily Times Democrats' 'Confidence Pudding,' hands us the following:

"For the benefit of my unemployed brothers, who hang around corners or collect in front of beer shops, I recommend the following receipt: Take a good quantity of self-respect, peel the hide off of enough grit to make it work; satiate your thirst for alcoholic beverages until it can't stand; stir up your manhood until there is no idleness and sloth left in it; and you will have enough confidence to find some honest work to do, and the people will have enough confidence in you to give you a chance to earn some pudding that will satisfy your bodily hunger. If you doubt it, try it."

The best book of etiquette is that great one, the best society. If you feel awkward or uncertain, watch those people whose manners show that they are conversant with all that is best. In imitating them you will not be apt to make mistakes. The average American girl is quick at recognizing her mistakes and seldom repeats one after she realizes her error. She is kind of heart and sympathetic, and because of her quick wit and these two virtues she will always be a gentlemanwoman in the best sense of the word.—Ladies' Home Journal.

It is almost a dangerous thing now for a stranger to offer a bicycle for sale unless he can prove the machine his own without question. A young man from Detroit named Wisner, was the last one who came to grief here in that way.

The Detroit opera house fire was a bad one for Dr. Alfred Hennequin, formerly of this city, now of Boston,

The entire time of the circuit court has been taken up the past week in the Richard's murder trial. The jury was sent to the Richard's house Monday morning and looked over the scene of the tragedy, returning at about noon. There has been no news or startling developments in the case, and it is thought that the examination of witnesses will be completed by to-morrow, at the farthest.

The lecture of Dr. V. C. Vaughan
Monday evening in the Unity course, was quite interesting. It partook of a historical character, instead of a descriptive one, which was disappointing to some of the audience.
He gave a very good description of the Kremlin at Moscow, however, and of its beautiful architecture and magnificent churches, and entertained the audience extremely well.

The lecture of Dr. Wenley, at the what he had to say on Socrates.

Next Sunday evening this same lecture will be continued. Dr. Wenley has a way of making what he has to say of great interest to his hearers.

At St. Andrew's church last Sun-young people to join in the foreign large number of people remained upon invitation of the rector and Mr.

Paddock, and steps were taken toward forming a class in the study of Missions, to meet immediately after morning service each Sunday in the church. Any person who is a believer in the Christian religion must Paint 'em and save your back. Paint will not allow the grease, water and dirt to settle into the grain of the wood. It keeps them on the surface, where you can get at them. Paint on a kitchen door will save many a tired hour's work. You can clean it quickly, easily and clean.

THE SHERWIN-WILLIAMS is made for floors and no other purpose. It is made to walk on. It is made to stand on. It stays put. We make paints for every paintable thing—special paint for cupboards, shelves, baseboards, another for tables, chairs, settees, another for barns, fences, roofs, another for houses, another for bathtubs. Our booklet "Paint Points" tells why each paint is the best for its purpose. It tells what is good paint and what is poor paint. It tells just what kind of brushes to use and how to take care of them, and all the little things you would like to know about paint. It is free for the asking.

THE TURN OF LIFE.

Owing to modern methods of living, not one woman in a thousand approaches this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying and sometimes painful symptoms.

Those dreadful hot flashes, sending the blood surging to the heart until it seems ready to burst, and the faint feeling that follows, sometimes with chills, as if the heart were going to stop for good, are symptoms of a dangerous nervous trouble. The nerves are crying out for assistance. The ery should be heeded in time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life.

Mrs. DELLA WATSON, 534 West 5th St., Cincinnati, Ohio, says:

"I have been using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some time during the change of life and it has been a saviour of life unto me. I can cheerfully recommend it to all women, and I know it will give permanent relief. I would be glad to relate my experience to any sufferer."

In some of the gatherings about the county it is amusing to hear the criticisms of people in respect to our schools and various other things.

These critics are usually growlers, and while they can tell how to tear down, but few of them can tell how to build up.

So many trains, so much transferring of freight from one branch to the other, so many goods being shipped from and to this station, makes lively times at the Jackson branch station in this village.—Enterprise. Respectfully referred to as the calamity Howler of the Ann Arbor Democrat.

These boats and bars above!

To whom I sing I adore,

And in thy mighty will to find

The joy, the freedom, of the mind,

'Twas Thus the Devilish Spake.

Upon our right There stands unseen an angel with a pen, Who writes down each good deed of ours, And then seals it with kisses in the Master's sight. Upon our left a sister angel sweet Keeps daily record of each evil act, But, great in love, folds not the mournful shawl. THI deepest midnight, when, if conscience wracked, We lift to Allah our repentant hands, She smiles and blots the record where she stands; But we seek not pardon for our sin She seals it with a tear and hands it in.

J. M. MATHEWS.

THE MAN IN THE CAB.

NIXON WATERMAN. Safe and snug in the sleeping car Are father and mother and dreaming child, The night outside, shows never a star. For the storm is thick and the wind is wild The frenzied train in its all night race Holds many a soul in its fragile walls. White up in its cab, with a smoke stained face Is the man in the greasy overalls.

Through the fire-box door the heat glows white. The steam is hissing at all the cocks; The buttons dance and the drive wheels smile The trembling rails till the whole earth rocks.

But never a searching eye could trace— Though the night is black and the speed appals—

A line of tear in the smoke-stained face Of the man in the greasy overalls.

—L. A. W. Bulletin.

A LITTLE BIRD I AM.

A little bird I am, Shun from the fields of air, And in my song I sing and sing To him who placed me there; Well pleased a prisoner to be, Because the God, it pleases Thee.

Naught have I else to do;

I sing the whole day long;

And He whom most I love to please

Doth listen to my song;

He caught and turned my wondering wing But still he loves me, he loves me.

Thou hast an ear to hear,

A heart to bear and bless;

And though my notes were so rude,

Thou wouldest not hear the less,

Because Thou knowest as they tell

That love, sweet love, inspires them all;

My cage confines me round;

Around I cannot fly;

But though my wing is closely bound,

My heart is at liberty;

My prison wall cannot control

The flight, the freedom of the soul.

On, it is good to soar

These bolts and bars above!

To whom I sing I adore,

And in thy mighty will to find

The joy, the freedom, of the mind,

(Written during a ten years' imprisonment in Bastille.)

Melted to Tears in a Minute.

"I once saw a stern man melt into pity and tears," said Eli Perkins at a Grand Army lecture. "Major Banks, a brave officer, was captured by the Confederates at Ball's Bluff and was taken to Andersonville, where he suffered untold misery. After the war was over the Major resumed his law practice. On a certain occasion he was called upon to cross-examine a witness. He was a modest fellow, but the Major handled him without gloves.

"Have you ever been in prison?" asked the judge savagely.

The witness did not answer.

"Come, now, speak up, no concealment. Have you ever been in prison, sir?"

"Yes Sir, once," answered the witness, looking modestly down at the floor.

"Where, sir?"

The witness hesitated.

"Where was it?"

"In—in—in"

"Don't stammer, sir! Out with it!" screamed the lawyer. Now, where were you in prison, sir?"

"In—in Andersonville, sir!"

There was a moment's painful pause. Then the Major put his hand to his forehead as a pistol shot had struck him, while the tears came to his eyes. Then jumping forward, he clasped his arms around the witness' neck and exclaimed, "My God! I was there myself!"—Eli Perkins.

UNIVERSITY ITEMS.

A COLLEGE TRAINING.

JOE LINCOLN.

Home from college came the stripling, calm and cool and debonair, With a weird array of raiment and a wondrous wealth of hair, With a lazy love of languor and a healthy hate of work.

And a cigarette devotion that would shame the turbaned Turk, And a pipe and another "Guv'nor," with a cheek serene and ride.

With that raging, wrathful rustle called his son a "blasted dude."

And in dark and direful language muttered threats of coming harm To the "shilly-shally" from his father's good right arm.

And the trouble reached a climax on the lawn behind the shed,

"Now, you're a slick yer, sonny," so the sturdy parent said.

And I'll knock the college nonsense from your middle, mighty quick!"
