THE OLD MILL.

Here from the hill I look, Through a lattice of boughs and leaves,

On the old mill with its gambrel roof,

And how those oak rolling eaves,

I hear the clatter that jars its walls,

And the rushing water's sound,

And see the miller and his fall

As the wheel goes slowly round.

I rode there often when I was young,

With my girl on the horse before,

And I sat with my miller's girl,

As I waited my turn at the door,

And while she tossed her ringlets brown,

And I stilled and chatted so free,

The wheel might stop, or the wheel might go

It was all the same to me.

Twenty years ago last I stood

On the spot where I stand to-day,

And I saw the miller and his fall,

And the mill and I are gone,

But both, all we fall into ruin and wreck,

To our fortune 'till we are bound;

And the man goes, and the stream flows,

And the wheel moves slowly round.

—Thomas Dunn English, in Harper.

PRINGLE'S FLAT.

'You will have a beautiful day, my dear,' said Mrs. Hope, as she looked admiringly first at her son Dick, who was driving up to the door in his new buggy, then at her daughter-in-law, Mary Hope, whose honeymoon was at its full.

'I am so glad!' said the young wife,

'What lovely weather we have had ever since I came here! not at all like what some of my friends predicted when they said we ought to spend our honeymoon in the east.'

'The present moment sprang out of his buggy lightly, and gallantly extended a hand to his wife.

'Nonsense!' exclaimed Mary Hope, 'I am not such a helpless creature that I can't get in myself,' and she stepped lightly into the buggy with a merry laugh.

Mrs. Hope the elder gave an approving nod: 'It's just as well to let Dick know you can help yourself. These western men—'

'Need managing like other men,' interrupted her daughter-in-law with an other laugh.

Old Mr. Hope, coming down from the stable at that moment, eyed the horse, buggy, and harness (Dick had expended seven hundred dollars on that turn-out), then stood patting the horse's neck kindly. He was an admirer of fine horses, and his judgment was sought far and wide on all points of horse-flesh: 'There's fine mettle here,

Dick.'

'I know it,' said Dick proudly.

'Cheap at four hundred,' said Mr.

Hope. 'Have you tried her yet?'

'I think she's good for two-twenty-one without much of an effort.'

'Why, isn't that a fast horse, Dick?' asked his wife, whose curiosity was aroused.

'Just midding,' answered her husband. 'We have them out here faster than that.'

'It is fast,' said his father. 'We used to think it impossible, but we have got so far on now there's no telling what's in a horse mare. I won't take a cent less than seven hundred dollars. Why she goes like wind.'

'That reminds me, Dick; you'd best take the road round by Drake's.'

'And lose a good half-hour,' said

Dick.

'That's a long way round, father,' said the older Mrs. Hope.

'You take my horse,' said her husband. 'I mean coming back. It doesn't matter going. If it should beat perfectly quiet, drinking in the scents of the most beautiful morning

Dick Hope had ever witnessed in the west.

'There is Pringle's Flat,' said Dick suddenly, pointing ahead.

'Surely we have not come seven miles, Dick?'

'Scarcely. How far is that ahead?'

'It is a mile, Dick?'

Dick laughed loudly: 'It's nearer four.'

'I don't understand it.'

'That's what the smart hunters from the East say when they shoot and miss their game. It's the atmosphere,

Mary.'

'It's a small place,' said his wife, as she looked forward to Pringle's Flat, lying a little below them. Beyond it was a ribbon of molten gold, made by the sun's slanting rays falling upon the river. 'And that is the river.'

'We'll be there in twenty minutes,' said Dick Hope, 'when I want to introduce you to some of the nicest people in this end of the State.'

The people Dick referred to received the young couple in a manner that made Mary Hope's cheeks glow with gratification. Her husband was a man universally admired,—as fine a specimen of his kind as was ever produced west of Pringle's Flat. The bride, during the two hours that remained in the town, created a ripple of talk.

There was something about Dick and his wife that made people turn to look at them. When they drove away, a group of friends waved good wishes and tossed kisses after them.

'Now for Dan's Rock,' said Dick, as he gave his mare the rein and cast a backward glance at Pringle's Flat.

'Pretty, isn't it?'

'Pretty,' said his wife. 'Why, Dick, it's lovely! See the light on the church-windows: it looks as though it were really on fire. The houses are so pretty, too, the streets so wide, and there is such an air of peace and comfort about it! Why, it is like a town that has grown up in a night, it is so wonderfully clean and neat,—just what a painter would make if he were painting towns to please people.'

'I'm glad you like it. That reminds me, do you see that house above the church, to the left?'

'It looks charming,—the prettiest house there.'

'Glad you like it.'

'Why, Dick?'

'It's yours, I bought it before I went east for you. We'll look inside of it when we return, if we have time.'

'That was Dick Hope's way.

The drive to Dan's Rock occupied an hour. Now for a trial of your strength,' said Dick, as he tied his horse to a tree at the base of the great rock, and assisted his wife to the ground where they were to lunch.

'Must I climb up there, Dick?' said

Mrs. Hope.

'That's the programme, what we came out for to-day. You've heard so much of the view from Dan's Rock that you want to see it for yourself.

'I'll show you how to get up there to you know you remind me now of Pringle's fetching water from the spring?'

'Parthenia tamed her husband, didn't she, Dick? I'm glad your mother saved me that trouble.'

'That was a lunch Mary Hope often recalled in after years. Dick persisted in forcing all kinds of dainties upon her, 'in fashion,' as she said afterward. It was the first time she had ever had him to herself in the glad day with so curious eyes to peer on her, and she subjected her lord and master in her turn to such straits that he gladly cried quits as he put his hair out of his eyes and viewed his tormentor.

'Dick slowly mounted the massive heap called Dan's Rock. Such a view! A sweep of forty miles in one direction, east, and almost as grand a view to the west.

Dick sat down and handed his wife the glasses as he lighted a fresh cigar.

'Do you see that hill away off to the left?'

'Hasn't it a curious shape?'

'That's where the wind comes from.

They manufacture it up there.'
