LAWS OF GENERAL INTEREST.

From the Lansing Republican.

Among the acts passed by the legislature at its recent session was one relating to the present rule in regard to ANIMALS RUNNING AT LARGE.

Act No. 13, section 1, provides that it shall not be lawful for any cattle, horses, sheep, or swine to run at large in any public highway.

Section 2 provides that in case the board of supervisors in any county shall pass a resolution allowing any of the classes of animals named in section 1 to run at large in such county, the said section shall be null and void.

UNCLAIMED MONIES.

Act No. 86 provides that when any administrator or executor shall have made final settlement with the probate court, it shall be the duty of the court to order said executor or administrator to deposit with the county treasurer such moneys as he may have, belonging to any non-resident or unknown heir or claimant, whose whereabouts after diligent inquiry he cannot ascertain, taking his receipt therefor; and upon filing his receipt in the probate court, he shall be entitled to an order discharging him and his bond, the same as though he had paid his money to the heir or claimant. This act further provides for the proper keeping, etc., of said money by the county treasurer.

GREEN'S TOWNSHIP LAWS.

Act No. 123 provides that the secretary of state shall, as soon as the same can be prepared, etc., supply one copy of Green's 'Treatise on townships and the powers and duties of township officers' to each of the several supervisors, township clerks, commissioners of township drain commissioners, and to each of the justices of the peace in the several townships in this state.

NON-FORFEITABLE LIFE INSURANCE.

Act No. 154 provides that no policy of insurance of life, issued after this act shall take effect, by any company organized under the laws of this state, shall become forfeited or void by the non-payment of any premium thereon, after the third, any further than as follows:

ADULTERATION OF FOOD, DRINKS, ETC.

Act No. 254 provides that no person shall mix, color, stain, or powder, or order or permit any other person to do so, with any ingredient or material, so as to render the article injurious to health, with intent that the same may be sold; and no person shall sell or offer for sale any article mixed, colored, stained or powdered, as aforesaid; nor shall any person mix, color, stain or powder any article of food, drink, or medicine, or which enters into the composition of any article of food, drink, or medicine, with any other material, whether injurious to health or not, for the purpose of gain or profit; or sell or offer the same for sale, unless its true and appropriate name, with notice that the same is mixed or impure marked or printed upon each package, roll, parcel or vessel containing the same, so as to be read and remain at all times readily visible.

There are now in the United States 285 cities, ranging in population from 8,000 to 1,200,000.

In 1764, England had over 20,000 negro slaves, and they wore collars like dog collars.

The Denver and Rio Grande R. R. employs 32,000 men. A larger body than the U. S. Army.

The food, air and water which a man receives amount in the aggregate to more than 3,000 pounds a year, that is, to one and a half tons, twenty times his own weight.

Among the Anglo-Saxons, burial ceremonies were more joyous than those of the Orient. The house in which the corpse lay until burial was a scene of feasting, dancing and singing, and every kind of riot.

The mausoleum constructed by John P. Bowman at Cuttingsville, Vt., is a copy of an Athenian temple, and is built in memory of his wife and daughter.

At the entrance is a life-size statue of Mr. Bowman, and within the dome of bronze and an inner door of granite weighing six tons, is the tomb of marble, with busts of Mr. Bowman, his wife and child. Mirrors are set in the sides and at the angles, and, by reflecting the statues, give the effect of a long vista of galleries. Its cost is nearly $75,000.

On the coast of Africa, west of the Bay of Benin, there is an extended lagoon. Directly behind the principal opening there was built years ago on the mainland a city designed especially as a hiding place and stronghold of the slave trade; and for a generation or two the very name of Lagos was a synonym of all the horrors of that infamous traffic. This is now called the 'Liverpool of Africa,' the great central emporium of the coast trade. The landmark which now guides sea-going vessels into the opening of the lagoon is the spire of a Christian church rising gracefully above the city. The yearly exports of Lagos amount to $2,000,000.

A Vermont boy burst his drum to find the 'drum cure' he heard his father speak of.

'Law sakes! what peculiar creatures men are. Talk of me bein' peculiar; why I ain't a circumstance that to Tom Lowey. He'll marry that Prissy Carroll now, if it's only to show me he don't care for my money; and with a sigh, Miss Silence went back to her lard.'

'Christmas gift, indeed!' she exclaimed after standing some time in deep thought; 'I think I'd see myself eating humble pie to Martha Baldwin.' But somehow or other her conscience did not feel so easy as it had felt before Tom's call.

An hour later, Tom was sitting in the roomy Baldwin's small parlor, with his arm around a very trim waist, and a very lovely golden head resting on his shoulder. It was very evident that the closest economy was necessary with the Baldwins, for the carpet was patched and worn, the muslin curtains washed and threadbare, and the furniture in sad need of varnish and new hair cloth.

'You're too good for this world, Prissy,' said Tom, with a kiss on the dimpled white chin. 'There's some one knocking, let me go,' cried Prissy, springing up and running to the door.

It was no visitors, but the hired man from Miss Silence's farm, with the spring wagon, which he had brought to convey Tom to his cousin's home, for Miss Silence had, not ten minutes after his departure, an hour previous, overturned a kettle of lard, by accident, and been terribly scalded.

'Where's my hat?' cried Tom, in great excitement, while the man was telling how he had wasted time by going to the office first and not finding him there, had hunted him up.

'Let me go with you Tom; I know I can help,' cried Prissy, as her lover was springing into the light wagon. 'Oh, Prissy, if you only would.'

'Wait till I get my bonnet and shawl, and tell Aunt Martha, I won't be gone but her arms akimbo and gazed at her young cousin, Tom Lowey, as if he was a curiosity escaped from some museum.

'Well, you are the frankest young man I ever saw,' said Miss Silence, with her head on a high and gazed at her young cousin, Tom Lowey, as if he was a curiosity escaped from some museum.

'No, Miss Silence made no remark when Prissy was in the room with Tom. She was in great pain, and was thankful to see even a member of the hated Baldwin family.

For three weeks, Prissy was chief director at the farm, and managed things so cleverly that Miss Silence had no chance to find fault. But the grim master and no words of commendation for the young girl's untiring industry.

'I calculate to pay you for what you've done,' she said one day, as she watched Prissy making bread. 'You needn't think you're working for nothing.'

'I don't want any pay, Miss Silence,' said Prissy, with trembling lips. 'I'm only too glad to do what I can because I like to be near you.'

'Because you're in love with Tom,' finished Miss Silence. 'Oh, you needn't blush; I know all about it, and if he chooses to break his head against a stone wall I am not going to stop him.'

At the end of three weeks Miss Silence was again to be about, and Prissy was to be in the kitchen. But she had not been gone three hours when the hired man came from the farm with two large baskets, which he set down on Miss Silence's kitchen floor.

'Compliments of Miss Silence, and she sent these in place of the money,' and was driving off in the spring wagon before Prissy could recover sufficiently from her astonishment to ask him any questions.

The baskets were full of good things of every sort, and there was a royal Christmas dinner for the Baldwins the next day, much to the joy of the children, who contemplated ruefully dining on mush and potatoes.

Prissy's state of thanks to Miss Silence by Tom, but she never received an answer.

Time went on, and Tom's law business improved so much that he persecuted Prissy, against her better judgment, to marry him.

Miss Silence did not grace the important occasion with her presence, and she had not time for the galvanizing effect to weddings, was her excuse when Tom reproached her for his slight.

'She is such a peculiar woman that we must not expect her to act like other people; but she has a good heart in spite of her queer ways,' said Prissy, when Tom tried to make excuses for her conduct.

'But her greatest peculiarity lies in her not liking you, Prissy,' said Tom, kissing his bride's soft cheek; 'and I can't quite forgive her lack of taste. All went well for the young couple for more than a year. They began housekeeping in a modest cottage Tom was paying for by instalments, and were so prudent that they managed to gather about them many little comforts that made their home pleasant.

But fortune seldom smiles long at a time, as we all know, and reverses will come to every one. One bitter night in December Tom's house caught fire and was burned to the ground, nothing being left except a few clothes belonging to Prissy and the baby.

ill, but in March she caught a severe cold, and pneumonia ensued. She felt she never would get well again, and the doctor did not deceive her with false hopes, but told her frankly that in all probability she would live but a few days.

'I want to see a lawyer at once if that is the case,' she said. 'I must make a new will.'

Mr. Simmons, who had managed her business for years, came as soon as he received her message, and the will was made. He had hardly left the house before Tom called.

'The worse,' said Miss Silence, feebly, 'but I'm not afraid to go. Perhaps I'm peculiar in that as in other things. Deacon Bonney, and the minister, Mr. Craig, and Mr. Darby have all been here urging their several claims. I told each of them I'd consider the matter.'

'You'll be disappointed, Cousin Silence,' asked Tom. 'Poor fellow! he was in such a sore strait that he could not help a desire to have a small help from his cousin's hoard. He had hardly dared to hope that she had left him a cent, and yet he was her only relative.'

'That remains to be seen,' was the unsatisfactory reply to his question. 'But don't cherish any hopes, for I haven't left you a cent.'

'A bitter smile curled Tom's lips, but he made no reply. 'I suppose you think me peculiar in not leaving you my money, seeing you're the only kin I've got,' went on Miss Silence, 'but you've taken such precious care to convince me that you don't want it, that I've believed you, and acted accordingly.'

Tom went home, and repeated the conversation to Prissy, who shed a few tears, but tried to cheer up her husband's drooping spirits with hopes of more law business in the spring.

That night Miss Silence died, and the will was turned out to her funeral a few days later.

'I expect Wolfboro' Academy will find itself able to erect a new building when Miss Silence's will is read,' said old Mr. Craig. 'She told me she'd consider the matter, and I know she was impressed with my arguments.'

'I rather think you are mistaken,' said Squire Darby. 'For I feel morally certain she has left her money to found a library.'

The minister who stood near, smiled to himself. He had not the slightest doubt that the debt which hung over his church like a pall would now be lifted through Miss Silence's will.

Prissy went on to the reading of the will, but Prissy insisted, so they went together, neither of them looking very cheerful.

Mr. Simons made no objections to the presence of Squire Darby. Mr. Craig chuckled as Deacon Bonney entered, with a pleasant smile for Tom, who well knew what sarcastic triumph lay beneath it.

The will was dated three days previous, and every penny in the bank, and the large farm, were left unconditionally to Prissy Lowey. Her husband's name was not mentioned.

Tom's face was a study, while Prissy nearly fainted at this sudden relief to all her troubles.

The fact of the other men present were studies, too. The Deacon left the house without a word, and the Squire looked grimly at Mr. Craig.

'She was a very peculiar woman,' said the minister, wiping his brow, on which the drops of perspiration stood thickly. 'His anxiety about his church had been very great, and you know how he could afford to forget their dead cousin's peculiarities, since she had kept her vow never to leave Tom a cent, and yet had managed to make him comfortable for life. There was an immediate flitting to the comfortable farm-house; and Tom furnished a nice office in town, and drove in every morning in the spring wagon. Past troubles and cares were forgotten, and the Baldwins were made more comfortable; and considering all things, Miss Silence did more good with her money than if she had left it to found a library or lift a church debt.'

REPORTS IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS. Act No. 205 provides that within ten days after the final disposition of any criminal or other proceeding before any justice of the peace, to which the people of this state are a party, or wherein the county may be liable for any costs, it shall be the duty of the justices before whom such proceedings shall be had to make a report of the same to the prosecuting attorney of the county. The report must contain the title of the case, the date of filing the complaint, the offense charged, the plea, the names of attorneys, the date of trial, the verdict or finding, the judgment, etc.

SCREENS FOR SMOKE-STACKS. Act No. 183 declares that all vessels using wood for fuel, navigating any of the waters of this state, shall be provided with suitable fire-screens attached to the smoke-stacks of such vessels, to prevent the escape of fire. Such fire-screens shall be of the best approved kind, shown by experience to be proper and suitable for protection from fire. Neglect to comply with the requirements of this act is made a misdemeanor and punishable as such. TITLE TO REAL PROPERTY BY DESCENT. Act No. 35 provides that when any person shall die seized of any lands, or right in the same, not having lawfully devised the same, they shall descend, subject to his debts, in manner following:

1. In equal shares to his children, and to the issue of any deceased child by right of representation; and if there be no child of the intestate living at his death, his estate shall descend to all his other lineal descendants.

2. If he should have no issue, his estate shall descend to his widow during her life-time, and after her decease, to his father, and if he leave no issue or widow, his estate shall descend to his father.

3. If he leave no issue nor widow nor father, his estate shall descend in equal shares to his brothers and sisters, and to the issue of any deceased brother or sister. If he shall leave a mother also, she shall take an equal share with his brothers and sisters.

4. If intestate leave no issue, widow, father, brother, nor sisters living at his death, his estate shall descend to his mother, to the exclusion of the issue of any of his deceased brothers and sisters.

5. If the intestate leave none of the relatives above named, his or her estate shall descend to the next of kin in equal degrees, excepting that when there are two or more collateral kindred in equal degrees but claiming through different ancestors, those who claim through the nearest ancestor shall be preferred.

6. If intestate die leaving several children, or one child and the issue of one or more children, and any such surviving child or issue of a child, not having been married, all the estate that came to the deceased child by inheritance from such deceased parent shall descend in equal shares to the other children of the same parent, and to the issue of such other children who shall have died.

7. If, at the death of such child who shall die under age, not having been married, all the other children of said parent shall also be dead, and any of them shall have left issue, the estate shall descend to the husband or wife of such intestate, as the case may be.

8. If the intestate shall leave a husband or wife and no issue nor other lineal descendants, nor father, mother, brother or sister, and there be no issue of brothers nor sisters, then the estate shall descend to the husband or wife of such intestate, as the case may be.

9. If the intestate shall leave no wife nor husband nor kindred, the estate shall escheat to the people of this state, for the use of the primary school fund.

SCHOOL LAW. DIGEST OF SUPREME-COURT DECISIONS. 1. An application to the township board to remove the moderator of a district, on the ground that he persistently refuses to countersign an order drawn by the director of the district on the assessor, involves an inquiry, in which the parties named in the order is an interested party. [Stockwell v. Township board of White Lake, 22 Mich., 341.]

2. A proceeding before the township board to remove an officer of a school district is in the nature of a judicial investigation; and when one of the board is interested in the subject of the complaint, and the presence of such member is essential to the quorum, the proceedings are void. [Ibid.]

3. When either of the members of the township board is interested in the subject for consideration he is not 'competent or able to act,' in the sense of the statute; and such incompetency will justify the calling of one of the remaining justices. [Ibid.]

4. Every special tribunal appointed by law is subject to the maxim that no person can sit in any cause in which he is a party, or in which he is interested. [Ibid.]

5. The removal of a school district assessor by the township board is reviewable on certiorari. [Merrick v. Township board, 41 Mich., 639.]

6. Costs awarded by the supreme court in a proceeding by certiorari against persons composing a township board, to review their official acts, are to be collected like township charges, and not by execution against the officers personally. [Stockwell v. Township board of White Lake, 22 Mich., 341.]

Dr Woolsey of New Haven, in an interview with a Herald reporter, insists upon the desirability of securing uniform laws on the subject of marriage and divorce throughout the country. The statistics on the subject are very meagre, and thus far chiefly go to show the great popularity of divorce as an institution. In 1878, for instance, there were more divorces granted in Massachusetts and Connecticut than in England and Wales together. Connecticut down to that year permitted divorce for 'any such misconduct as permanently destroys the happiness of the petitioner and defeats the purpose of the marriage relation,' a provision which practically made the matter one of judicial discretion; but in Massachusetts, where no such law has ever existed, and with a population of 1,783,000, six hundred divorces were granted in 1878, against eight hundred in England and Wales, with a population of 24,000,000. Dr. Woolsey thinks that divorce lawyers are the most bitter opponents of divorce-law reform, and of course they can hardly be expected to favor it; but behind them there is a laxity of public sentiment which makes permanent improvement of the law difficult.

THE CITY OF LONDON.—There are now no fewer than 60 distinct villages included in London; there are more than 500,000 different buildings and 1,100 churches, and its streets, if laid end on end, would cover an area of 2,500 miles. The population within the police districts is fully 4,000,000, and it is a fact that there are in London more Scotchmen than in Edinburgh, more Irish than in Dublin, more Jews than in Palestine, and more Roman Catholics than in Rome.

Current Topics. The taxable property this year in New York City is $40,000,000 above that of last year. The new liquor law of Maine sends a man to jail for thirty days for getting drunk, and for a second offense, tripling the term.

The Rev. Robert Collyer hunted up his old anvil in Yorkshire, and has it in his study. Carp have been successfully planted in the waters of several sections of the United States, and the reports are that they are doing finely.

Prince Bismarck has made a demand upon Russia to return the ransom money recently paid to Roumanian brigands for the release of two captive Germans. A citizen of Clinton, Iowa, who flogged a teamster for flogging his horse, has been presented by his admiring neighbors with a cane inscribed: 'To W. L. Ainsworth, for humane services, July 3, 1881.'

The experimental cargo of wheat shipped from St. Paul for Glasgow, Scotland, by way of New Orleans, reached the latter port in perfect condition. This simple fact is of vast importance to the West. The Des Moines Register says that there is a wide-spread desire over Iowa to have the grandest celebration in lieu of the last Fourth and in honor of President Garfield's recovery ever witnessed in the state when the President is well enough to stand up and make the proclamation.

A small, dilapidated box marked 'no value,' and addressed to a jewelry firm in Boston, and received by a German mail, was found to contain three cards, on one of which were fastened three diamonds, and on the others several rubies and emeralds, the lot being worth $1,500 and $2,000. Mrs. Hayes is doubtless shocked when she reads of the immense amount of wine, rum and whiskey which has been sent to the White House since the President was shot. Enough liquor has been stacked up in the mansion to stock a good sized liquor store, and if the President keeps it all he will be supplied for many years.

Having some months ago obtained permission from the board of education to begin a collection of specimens in natural history for the benefit of the public schools of Lansing, to be kept in the high-school building, Superintendent Sanford has received correspondence with several parties who have offered opportunities for rendering assistance, with a view to starting said collection. Among others he wrote to Dr. George B. Stocking, formerly pastor of the Universalist church in this city, now of Dubuque, Iowa, the center of the great lead district of Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin. Dr. Stocking received the request with delight, and promptly began to collect a small mineral cabinet. The doctor's mind had a scientific side to it, and he has found great pleasure and satisfaction in gathering together his specimens, as time and duty have offered opportunity, at times rambling over the bluffs which skirt the Mississippi river back of Dubuque, at other times diving deep into the earth by way of both mine and cave.

On his recent visit to Lansing he presented his collection of minerals to the schools, it being the first received, although others are promised and expected. This collection embraces specimens of carbonates of lime, sulphates of lead, sulphate and carbonate of zinc, calcite, siliceous, crystal quartz, shales, godes, fossiliferous rocks, etc. There is not a mediocre specimen among them; on the contrary, several are rare and merit special mention. We note as fine a specimen of sulphate of lead (galena) as we ever saw. It lies in blocks of carbonates of lime, and is a specimen of natural history, which the doctor brought it from the mine with his own hand. There are also fine specimens of calcite, of siliceous, carbonate of lime in Trenton limestone, a handsome and rare fragment of Cincinnati shale, half a dozen beautiful godes, mostly from the upper Mississippi showing quartz, crystals, carbonates of lime, calcite, carnallite, etc. Fossiliferous rocks showing brachiopods, trilobites, etc., and two stacchites, which the doctor plucked from the chambers of an immense cave. The schools have promise of further contributions from him.

Superintendent Sanford has assurance of iron and copper ores, and a cabinet of minerals from the Smithsonian institute at Washington, through Senator Ferry. It is to be hoped this may be the beginning of a fine collection of specimens of minerals, birds, mammals, etc., which may be useful and become a pride of our schools. Any one having rare minerals, or other specimens of natural history, which he would be willing to contribute to the museum of the public schools at Lansing, would place the superintendent under obligations by conferring with him.—Lansing Republican.

The other high schools of the state would do well to follow the excellent example set by Lansing.

ABORIGINAL MARRIAGES.—The newly married pair are well fed and attended to by their relatives. The bridesmaid, who must be the nearest adult unmarried relative of the bridegroom, is obliged to sleep with the bride on one side of the fire for two moons and attend her day and night. The bridegroom sleeps for the same period on the opposite side of the fire with the bride, and must attend him day and night. The newly married couple are not allowed to speak to or look at each other. The bride is during the period called a 'stook meetya' 'not look around.' She keeps her head and face covered with her opossum rug while her husband is present. He also keeps his face turned away from her, much to the amusement of the young people, who peep into their wurn and laugh at them. If they meet to speak to one another they must speak through their friends.—G. Robertson.
