The Post and Tribune in commenting on the death of the president says: "The end has come. After 79 days of suffering James Abram Garfield, twentieth president of the United States, is dead."

He came in obscurity and poverty, held during his early years in the vise of indigence, he rose, by force of indomitable will superior to his adverse surroundings, and acquired education, influence and worldly honors.

He came in turn, teacher, legislator, general, congressman, senator and president of the American republic; and there he shines with a brilliant career, a record to which he was called. No higher encomium can be passed upon him. He was simple as a child, brave as a soul inspired with lofty purposes, and firm as a cliff. He was a brilliant orator, but he never spoke except to instruct. He was a calm counselor and he was by nature as he also was by the practice of his life an adversary of injustice and oppression. As he was a devoted husband he was devoted as a teacher he was a soldier he was heroic; as a president he gave promise of restoring brotherhood to the nation. Then in the first flush of the nation's hope he perished. So he passed away James Abram Garfield, the second president who has perished at the hands of an assassin within the first century of the republic.

A nation which honored him will sincerely mourn his death.

The following extract from the report of the board of officers is published for the benefit of the entire brigade. The board are pleased to note the general efficiency and zeal of both officers and men; but would recommend a more careful study and practice of details of evolution as prescribed by the tactics; particularly as to double ranks, formations, distances and intervals, duties of guides, and the great responsibilities of file closers, which do not seem to be generally understood.

By command of E. A. SUMNER, Lt. Col. and A. A. G. School Law. OFFICIAL RULINGS AND DECISIONS.

1. It is the duty of the district board to prescribe a uniform list of text-books to be used in the school, and to adopt such rules and regulations as may be necessary for the management of the school.

2. The district board cannot purchase school books for the pupils at the expense of the district, except when persons are not able to furnish the same.

3. Neither a district meeting nor a district board have a right to vote to purchase text-books for other than indigent pupils. The district board cannot therefore legally contract to pay for such books with money already raised or to be raised by taxation for such purpose.
