Ex-President Tappan.
The University Senate has placed upon its records an appropriate tribute to the memory of the late Dr. Tappan, and at its request President Frieze has consented to deliver a memorial address, the latter to form a part of the exercises of commencement week in June next.

We give below the action of the University Senate. In announcing the death of Dr. Tappan to this body President Frieze said:

Genius and the Sixties. Again it has become my sad and painful duty to be invited for the purpose of adopting resolutions of respect for the honored dead.

Scarcely a year ago we followed to their last resting place the remains of the honored Watson. Since then Governor Bagley, Ex-President Haven, and the venerable Prof.

Williams have passed away, one after another in quick succession, and the death of each of them has called forth from the Senate expressions of profound regret, and the due tribute of praise for his life and services.

MONDAY'S TRIAL.

The prisoner Jones, charged with attempting to kill Guitteau was examined in default of $5,000 bail.

When Guitteau was taken to court today his teeth chattered with fear, notwithstanding the guard had been greatly increased.

"I want no more Robinson in my case," said Guitteau.

Mr. Scoville reviewed Mr. Robinson's action in the case, and said he thought it was at least "uncivil."

Mr. Scoville said that he had nothing more to say, except that he had fully made up his mind that either he or Mr. Robinson must leave the case.

Justice Cox said he appreciated the prompt sacrifice made by Mr. Robinson when he was assigned to the case.

Surgeon General Barnes, Dr. Woodward and Dr. Lamb, who conducted the autopsy, testified as to the character of the wound.

At the request of Mr. Scoville the prisoner was given permission to address the jury.

Mr. Scoville then rose and said he should begin his argument, but after reaching a certain point he would ask an adjournment.

GITTEAU'S TRIAL.

Then became insane, and is now in an insane asylum. Another died insane.

Mr. Scoville detailed the history of the prisoner: how he spent his time in Freepport copying deeds; went to Ann Arbor to school; found himself unprepared; worked hard at study and reading religious books; and how the latter had a bad influence, and he finally went to the Onedia community; lived there five years; was fully impressed that their doctrine was right, and even expected to become the ruler of all these believers in the world.

Mr. Scoville continued: "Guitteau was persistent as a debt collector, and had a good business."

Guitteau interrupted, saying: "I have had a good many cases in court, and was never called a fool when a lawyer. I generally gave them as good as I got."

Guitteau interrupted, saying: "I had brains enough, but I had theology on my mind then. That's the reason I did not adhere to law. There's no money in theology, and I ran behind on that, and haven't got over it yet. I am out of the business though now."

Scoville's speech was continually interrupted by Guitteau, who denied that he ran in debt and wore poor clothes.

Scoville continued to describe Guitteau's indifference to monetary responsibilities, and his contemptuous attitude toward the law.

Scoville then spoke of Guitteau's susceptibility to woman's society, in order to show that affections influenced Guitteau.

Guitteau interrupted, charging Scoville with intercepting and suppressing his correspondence and lying about it, asserting, in loudest tones, "You are a liar."

A controversy ensued between counsel, Col. Corkhill asserting that Guitteau was acting a part.

Nothing especially new developed in the Guitteau trial to-day Wednesday.

At this point Mrs. Scoville was overcome with weeping, and many other eyes were dimmed with tears.

There was the usual crowd in the court room this morning. Guitteau was given a few minutes to address the court, and read a peculiarly constructed paper setting forth some of his ideas.

THE TWELFTH DAY.

The court room was crowded on Tuesday as usual. Scoville read the letters written by Guitteau to his father from school in Chicago detailing expenditures of money, etc.

Guitteau interrupted, saying: "I had brains enough, but I had theology on my mind then. That's the reason I did not adhere to law. There's no money in theology, and I ran behind on that, and haven't got over it yet. I am out of the business though now."
