For President in 1884, GEN. WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK.

THE DEMOCRAT will hereafter be issued on Friday. Our reasons for the change will be given in a future number of the paper.

Fusion works well, doesn't it?

When the people unite the bosses suffer.

The bosses were badly broken up Tuesday.

This democratic victory is the greatest in the history of the union.

If the democrats are at all wise they will elect a president in 1884.

ROBESON, the robber, will no longer disgrace the halls of congress.

What the democrats now want to do is to keep up the agitation against the bosses for the next two years.

ARABI PASHA has evidently heard of Ceteaway's tour through England. He wants to perform a similar pilgrimage and be fed up, petted and stared at.

For the first time in political history the sole anxiety about New York was by what majority the democrats would carry the state. The change of feeling there is decided and lasting.

A remarkable change has taken place in the number of democratic governors elected, only two republican nominees having been elected to fill the vacancies, these being in New Hampshire and Nebraska, while thirteen democratic governors were successful as follows: General Stoneman, in California; James B. Grant, Colorado; Thomas M. Waller, Connecticut; Chas. C. Stockley, Delaware; Geo. W. Glick, Kansas; Ben. E. Bittler, Massachusetts; Josiah W. Bogele, Michigan; Jewett W. Adams, Nevada; Grover Cleveland, New York; R. E. Pattison, Pennsylvania; H. S. Thompson, South Carolina; W. B. Tate, Tennessee; John Ireland, Texas. Previously there were democratic governors in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, New Jersey, North Carolina and West Virginia.

The voters have spoken, and once more the star of the democratic party is in the ascendancy, shedding its light from Michigan to Texas, from New York to California. Again the people have demonstrated their confidence in democracy, recognizing in the party the true supporter of the fundamental principles as embodied in the constitution. They have expressed their disapproval of the corruption and extravagance which have of late years been the chief characteristic of the republicans; they have condemned class legislation, extravagant expenditures and oppressive taxation; they have declared that the party which will in the future be supported must be free from the glaring faults they have so forcibly denounced, and of this declaration the democrats must take good heed if they wish to maintain the confidence of the masses. It has been a favorite boast of the republicans that whenever the democrats get into power they invariably make some mistake to prejudice the people against them, but upon this occasion there is not the slightest doubt but that the administration of the democracy will be characteristic of that sterling virtue which has supported it through over twenty years of adversity. Nothing will prevent the democrats from electing a president two years hence if they only use the trust imposed in them for the advancement of the people over the monopolists who have so long trampled them under foot. The democrats elected to office must be guided by a spirit of justice and economy. Much is at stake upon the legislation of the new congress, and while we have the utmost confidence in the party we wish to see its leaders to commit no act of folly or extravagance to cause the people to reverse their favorable opinion. A mistake means defeat; prudence means success.

ANOTHER UNIVERSITY RACKET. A Minister Student's Complaint Against a Professor.

Again there is trouble at the university, and in connection therewith appears the names of certain men high in authority who have usually been well to the front in almost every squabble that has arisen at this great institution for some years past. The story of the present trouble as learned by diligent inquiry is about as follows:

A week ago Saturday it began to be noised about that a professor had aroused the indignation of various students by remarks before his classes detrimental to ministers and the Christian religion. On Monday this took form by the presentation of a formal complaint made by a student named Morgan and filed with President Angell, the complaint charging Prof. Frothingham with having said things in a lecture or lectures before his class, of the nature indicated above. The exact text of his alleged remarks have not been learned by the News representative. Prof. Angell suggested to Mr. Morgan that his charges should be substantiated by other students, and there were presented several who corroborated Mr. Morgan's statements. Prof. Frothingham was duly acquainted with what had been reported, and took the matter before his class on the ground that he was not chargeable with such sentiments as had been attributed to him.

The situation has also been liberally discussed pro and con by the medical faculty, and as usual there has been a rallying of forces on both sides of the question. Dr. Maclean is understood to side with Frothingham as of yore, and Dr. Dunster is on the other side.

Mr. Morgan the complaining student, is a Congregational preacher from California, in good and regular standing among his people, and many prominent church people here have expressed their determination to stand by him and see the case carried to an issue.

As President Angell is himself a C gregational minister, his course is being watched with some interest, and there is not a little curiosity to see whether he will push the matter which now solely rests with him, or be dominated again by the influences that are alleged to have prevailed in some cases which have heretofore stirred the community beneath the shadow of the dome of the university.—Detroit News.

JACKSON FIRE CLAY CO. Manufacturers of Stone Sewer Pipe DRAIN TILE.

All our Drain Tiles are made of Fire Clay, are of unusual strength and light weight, which makes them the most desirable for use in any situation, and the drainage and expense of transportation.

The ditching for this class of tile is less expensive, as they do not require to be laid below frost level, but only deep enough to escape the plow.

But this is more economical, it also admits obtaining a better "fall" or grade to the drain.

A full assortment of all sizes, for sale in any quantities, or car load lots, at the FERDON LUMBER YARD.

JAS. TOLBERT, Agents. "Tile, the Great Labor-Saving Machine of the Age."

To the Editor of The Chicago Tribune.

Dwight, Ill., March 16.—One of the strongest and most convincing facts that I have yet seen with regard to the drainage is brought out in the December report of the Agricultural Department of Illinois. It is this:

Area in corn in Livingston County, 1881..... 238,507

Area in corn in Logan County, 1881..... 140,850

Livingston over Logan..... 97,657

Yield of corn in Livingston County, 1881..... 4,983,322

Yield of corn in Logan County, 1881..... 3,070,984

Livingston over Logan..... 1,912,338

In other words, Logan County has raised nearly as much corn on 140,850 acres as Livingston county has on 238,507 acres. Put it in another form, the farmers in Livingston County have been obliged to plow nearly double the acreage of land to produce as much corn as the farmers in Logan County, who only had to plow 140,850 acres. Let us see if another twist.

A farmer who has his land well tilled need only work eighty acres of land and grow just about as much corn as the man who plows 160 and takes all the risks of drought and much besides.

It is not fair, then, to conclude that the greatest labor-saving machine to-day of the age is the tile-drain. It is not fair to conclude that the greatest labor-saving machine to-day of the age is the tile-drain; for the following as regards the progress of the tile-drainage in these two counties:

Total number of feet laid in Livingston County up to 1881..... 1,140,793

Total number of feet laid in Logan County up to 1881..... 989,469

This table proves beyond all theory that owing to the free use of the tile that one county has been able to produce as much corn as the other county on 140,850 acres of land as another county has produced upon 238,500 acres, which is nearly double, and the beauty of the whole is that it was done with half the work! Mr. Editor, suppose a kind Providence should lengthen out the span of our days until we saw Illinois thoroughly tile-drained, what would be the result? I fancy that we would produce, and what would we do with our "silver dollars?" SAMUEL T. K. FAIRBANKS.

The Dedication Exercises Last Evening. Long before half-past seven Wednesday evening the Unitarian church was crowded with people, and before the exercises began hundreds were turned away, being unable to gain admission, even to the hallway.

The services were opened by an organ voluntary and anthem, followed by the invocation by Rev. J. L. Jones, of Chicago.

As we assemble here to dedicate this house of worship, it is fitting that some thought should be given to how it has come to be. Of course, time will not allow me to trace, even briefly, the causes which have led up to this completed structure.

ing out the hope and the faith into realization in money subscriptions, and church plans on paper, and finally, into the work, of course, go into details of this. As soon as we let our wants be known and proved our earnestness and faith by going forward to do what we could for ourselves, friends at a distance came forward to help us in every way possible, and through the National Unitarian Conference and the American Unitarian Association, a lot was purchased on State street, at the head of Liberty. Then, when it was found that we could get the lot which we now have, the one first bought was sold and this was obtained.

After months of study and work over plans, we finally adopted that which we now see so happily carried out. Not the least part of our good fortune was the taste and judgment, and the employment of a builder who has done his work with such fidelity and thoroughness. I said the first money raised for the new church was the result of the labor of our noble band of workers. But the citizens of the Sunday School helped also, and so did the Young People's Club, and so did nearly or quite every member of the Society, and some of them with a generosity that was beautiful and noble, and will not yet be forgotten.

It will be interesting to you to know that the first money given for the new church by any one at a distance was twenty dollars from Rev. J. H. Allen, of Cambridge, Mass., who was your minister for a year, whose memory is held in so high esteem among you all, and who has been planning for many months to be present at our dedication, but is prevented by our having to postpone beyond our expected date. If you have any will send me word, or bring him to me I will pay all expenses, and such other little matter as are usual in such cases. Ann Arbor, Nov. 14th, 1882. A. J. SAWYER.

STAY HOME—Have you seen straying around your place, apparently looking for me, a small brown horse, built narrow in front, with a small dim star in his forehead, and his tail clipped off short, not a valuable horse, but old enough to know better? If you have any will send me word, or bring him to me I will pay all expenses, and such other little matter as are usual in such cases. Ann Arbor, Nov. 14th, 1882. A. J. SAWYER.

WHAT THE MINISTER SAYS.—Mr. A. Kiefer: My dear sir, I have been afflicted for the last four years with derangement of the liver, causing dyspepsia, headache, nausea, and general derangement of the whole system. I have tried a great many preparations, but found no relief until I tried one bottle of your Tassarine which has permanently cured me. I also found it to be good for the ague. I recommend it to all who suffer from derangement of the liver. Very truly yours, REV. THOMAS WHITLOCK. For sale by Eberbach & Son.

The human heart has hidden treasures, In secret kept, 'tis seldom seen; The thoughts, the hopes, the dreams the pleasures...

Whose charms were broken if revealed, And days may pass in vain confusion, And nights in restless sleep and gloom...

But there are hours of lonely musing, Such as in evening silence come, When soft and sweet a faint cooling, The heart's best feelings gather home...

And it can dwell on moonlight glimmer, On evening stars and loneliness; And while the sky is dim and dimmer, Feel no unkind and stern distress...

GRAMMAR AND GUNPOWDER.

On one point—the necessity of a turnpike road from Hackmatack to Gimlet Crossing—the independent voters of Leatherwood county were a unit...

The "ridgers" declared that any man who said that their line wasn't the shortest between the two given points was a liar according to Euclid.

"What of that?" retorted the others. "Wasn't a good time to be gained by going down as is lost on the up hill portions?"

"If it comes to that," returned the "ridgers," "you must give up the claim of shorter distance, for a crooked line doesn't get any shorter by bending up and down than if it crooked horizontally."

The ball of a bucket's just as long when it stands upright as when it lies flat on its side, you know that, don't you?"

"And so they had it. One enthusiastic Valleyman even contended that that route was not only shorter, but that it was down hill both ways."

In an unguarded hour I consented to accept the nomination of the Valley party for representative of Leatherwood in the coming legislature, by which the momentous question would be decided.

"I see through it," said Dod Croaker. "They mean to hev their man pick a quar' with our'n, an' shoot him through the borax on the eve of the election, and then run their'n in without opposition."

"Such talk, of course, wasn't encouraging," said Dod. "I know you're a bit of a pessimist—and, anyhow, it was too late to back out."

The respective committees arranged for a public discussion between the candidates—a contest, I confess, which I had little stomach for; but it couldn't be shirked without showing the white feather.

"Be mighty keenerful," admonished Dod Croaker, "if you don't want a deadly miscellany sent through your borax."

"Give him goss!" most of the others urged. "And if you do die a martyr to the good cause, the gratitude of Burdock Valley will keep your memory forever green."

"Much good that'll do me!" I could not but exclaim. "The great day is coming at last. The multitude assembled on a piece of neutral ground midway between the rival routes, where a grand stand had been erected, hung round with maps for illustration, besides which a blackboard had been brought from a neighboring school-house to meet any sudden diagnostic emergency."

"We'll wait three-quarters of an hour, the major an hour, then I another quarter in reply; order to be kept by three moderators, one taken from each side, the third being Squire Stradler, a man accustomed to walk with philosophic composure on the strifes of others from the serene elevation of the "fence."

"I was particularly careful in the opening to give my opponent no cause of offence. In fact, I never once alluded to him, but stuck closely to facts, figures and topography. The audience began to yawn long before my time was out, and the cheers of my friends when I quit I think were quite as much expressive of relief as of applause."

"Then came the major's turn. He literally 'went for' me. I'll not recite what he said. In the first place, I never was given to repeating slander, and secondly, I have no taste for low abuse. When he sat down his side fairly yelled themselves into impatient bronchitis, while I felt as I rose again, much as you may imagine the Duke of Wellington's pet crows did at the famous command: 'Up, you rascals, and fight!'"

"My back was thoroughly aching. I forgot all about my 'borax,' and turning on the doughy major, for the space of fifteen minutes I literally made the fur fly. He bore it better than I had expected. It was not till, in the close, I ridiculed his slips in grammar, that I saw his face change. That made him mad. It always does. He's a nervous, syntactically vulnerable. Dod Croaker shook his head, but too late—the mischief had been done."

A triumphant crowd from the Valley bore me off on their shoulders, chanting, as they went, to a brass-band accompaniment, a soul-stirring lyric from the pen of a rising Burdock bard, of which beheld a specimen:

"Day may say what they like, An' ole Rumbud may gabble; But dat Ginseng Ridge, 'ike Beets Jordan, 's our own."

That evening I received a note from the major. "You see proper to-day," he said, "to reflect on my philological character. I won't allow no man to do that with impunity, and so demand an ample apology."

"Yours, &c., R. Rumbud." I replied by declining to "apologize," "umbrily" or otherwise; and hinted that if anything of the sort was due, it was from him to one Lindley Murray.

"You can't sneak out," wrote back the implacable major, "by hugging the Murrys. I don't know the one you mention, but I do. Bob and the rest, and they're all gentlemen and good ridgers. As you refuse to apologize, nothing remains but to demand satisfaction according to the code, which I hereby preemptorially do. The bearer, Captain Drymple, will confer with any friend of yours."

There was something so absurd in this illiterate ass calling me to vindicate his "philological" honor, that I was inclined to laugh at first; but I soon became sensible that it was no laughing matter. At that time and place, I had no choice but to give the major the satisfaction of resigning my candidacy and leave the district in disgrace. Dod Croaker might turn out a true prophet, after all.

Asking Captain Drymple to wait, I sent for Tom Baillie, to whom I stated the case privately. "Of course you'll have to fight him," said Tom.

"I see nothing else for it," I answered, "though I detest duelling in my heart."

"So do I," said Tom. "Like several other things, it owes existence to the deference that men of sense often feel compelled to pay to fools; but you and I can't recreate the world. Have you any choice of weapons?"

"I have no skill in any; I leave all to you."

I introduced Tom to the captain, and the two withdrew together. "Everything's settled," he said. "The meeting's to be tomorrow morning, at seven; pistols; twelve paces. Get a good night's rest. Nothing like it to steady the nerve. I'll call for you."

SINGULAR REVIVAL SCENES.

A Brooklyn Preacher Who Claims to Work Miracles at Pleasure.

Those who believe that the age of miracles is gone might have had their faith revived if they had attended the singular scenes at the Brooklyn Tabernacle recently. Rev. F. Monk, L.L.D., F. A. S., who preached there, professes to heal the sick by the laying on of hands. He took his text from Ephesians, the words being "He is the savior of the body." The preacher elaborated the theory that the time would come when there would be no more sickness, a millennium when the body as well as the mind would attain to a state of perfection. He did not fix any particular date for this, any more than Darwin did for the time when a new species should or could be evolved from existing species, but like the great evolutionist, simply argued that the possibilities of development were in that direction.

"It is absurd," he said, "as well as unchristian to resist the plain teachings of Jesus Christ. They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." He went on to prove by philosophy, reason and Scripture that the lion, the lamb and the bear should at some distant date harmonize cordially.

At the close of his sermon he requested all who were sick and believed in the Christian to ascend the platform. Then he said those who did not believe might also go up, as the Nazarene had sometimes effected great cures upon unbelievers, through which he forced them to believe. About two dozen people went upon the platform, afflicted with rheumatism, deafness, chronic catarrh, kidney disease and dimness of sight. When the patients were ranged on the platform, Mr. Monk first conferred upon a general prayer, and then took hold of them singly in the name of Jesus Christ, making passes like those of a mesmerizer over the part or parts affected, and authoritatively commanding the disease to depart.

He took a middle-aged lady who complained of dimness of sight, to shut her eyes. He then made passes over them, and touched the lids gently with his hands, and prayed that clearness of vision might be restored to her. She then opened her eyes and declared she could see much better. A young lady who had an affection of chronic catarrh, complicated with deafness of several years' duration, was then taken in hand. The clergyman made passes over her head and face, then tazing her nose gently between his two hands, gave it a little tickle, which she received with a gasp of astonishment, and commanded the catarrh to depart. Then releasing the young lady's nasal appendage, he asked her if she breathed more freely than before. Contracting the humeral muscles, she raised her shoulders, drew a low inspiration, and answered promptly in the affirmative. She showed symptoms of being very deaf, however.

The thiamurgic proceeded to operate upon the auricular organs, first by rubbing them with his hand, and then blowing into the internal ear. He next clasped her forehead with his right hand, while the left was laid on the back of her head, shaking the head as if attempting to stir up the brains in some way that might communicate magnetic influence. Whatever may have been the cause of action, the effects of all that could be desired. The young lady claimed to be as far restored as to hear ordinary conversation, and after a few more passes and a short prayer, she could distinctly hear a low whisper.

The effects were similar in most of the other cases, number two dozen in all. That must have been a unique and beautiful sight, a few days since, off Sandy Hook, when, at the lighting of the dense fog which had prevailed for thirty-two hours, twenty-three ocean steamers took up again the homeward journey, interdicted so near its close, and were again in the harbor in discussion—an argosy of commercial wealth, international peace and glad home coming.

Checking Growth Stimulates Reproduction.

The largest species of reptiles, quadrupeds and birds are already extinct. Of those that remain, whales, elephants, lions and condors are diminishing in number. The redwoods of California are few indeed. As animals and vegetables are checked in their increase, number, animalcules and vegetable probably outnumber all others. To the taunt of an inferior animal that produced several at a litter, the lioness could only reply, "One, but a lion."

Besides, the periods of growth, maturity and gestation are generally much greater in giants than in pigmies. Few giants, but many dwarfs, is the law of nature. Cut down the oak, and you will find it to reproduce. Entire barometres fail to reproduce. Entire barometres fail to reproduce. Entire barometres fail to reproduce.

Letter to a Bridegroom.

To become a husband is as serious a matter to a man as it is to a woman to become a wife. Marriage is no child's play; it brings added care, trial, perplexity, vexation, and it requires a great deal of the happiness which legitimately springs out of it to make the happiness very in its favor. Very few live happily in marriage, and yet this is not because unhappiness is germane to the relation, but because those who enter it do not know, first, how to get married, and second how to live married happily. You have already made your choice; wisely, I am bound to believe. Those qualities of character which have attracted you to choose as you have, should make you love your groom daily while you live together.

To the second point: If you wish to live in harmonious union with your wife, start out with the avowed recognition of the fact that she is your companion and co-partner. Marriage usually makes the wife neither of these. In many instances she sees that her husband, long before he is married, has come to her, and under the stimulus of business, brings all his powers and faculties to the surface, and is developed thereby—not always symmetrically, but vigorously—not always harmoniously, but with increased vigor. Married men do not usually shrivel up nor put on a look of premature age, but women frequently do, and it is plain to me why they do.

Married women are shut up in the houses, and their chief care is for their children, and their only pleasure. Their time is taken up in meeting the physical wants of their families—cooking, washing dishes, keeping the house in order, sewing, receiving company—not one of which has in it a tendency even to culture and elevation. Married women lead a life of a mesmerizer over the part or parts affected, and authoritatively commanding the disease to depart.

He took a middle-aged lady who complained of dimness of sight, to shut her eyes. He then made passes over them, and touched the lids gently with his hands, and prayed that clearness of vision might be restored to her. She then opened her eyes and declared she could see much better. A young lady who had an affection of chronic catarrh, complicated with deafness of several years' duration, was then taken in hand. The clergyman made passes over her head and face, then tazing her nose gently between his two hands, gave it a little tickle, which she received with a gasp of astonishment, and commanded the catarrh to depart. Then releasing the young lady's nasal appendage, he asked her if she breathed more freely than before. Contracting the humeral muscles, she raised her shoulders, drew a low inspiration, and answered promptly in the affirmative. She showed symptoms of being very deaf, however.

The thiamurgic proceeded to operate upon the auricular organs, first by rubbing them with his hand, and then blowing into the internal ear. He next clasped her forehead with his right hand, while the left was laid on the back of her head, shaking the head as if attempting to stir up the brains in some way that might communicate magnetic influence. Whatever may have been the cause of action, the effects of all that could be desired. The young lady claimed to be as far restored as to hear ordinary conversation, and after a few more passes and a short prayer, she could distinctly hear a low whisper.

The effects were similar in most of the other cases, number two dozen in all. That must have been a unique and beautiful sight, a few days since, off Sandy Hook, when, at the lighting of the dense fog which had prevailed for thirty-two hours, twenty-three ocean steamers took up again the homeward journey, interdicted so near its close, and were again in the harbor in discussion—an argosy of commercial wealth, international peace and glad home coming.

Checking Growth Stimulates Reproduction.

The largest species of reptiles, quadrupeds and birds are already extinct. Of those that remain, whales, elephants, lions and condors are diminishing in number. The redwoods of California are few indeed. As animals and vegetables are checked in their increase, number, animalcules and vegetable probably outnumber all others. To the taunt of an inferior animal that produced several at a litter, the lioness could only reply, "One, but a lion."

Besides, the periods of growth, maturity and gestation are generally much greater in giants than in pigmies. Few giants, but many dwarfs, is the law of nature. Cut down the oak, and you will find it to reproduce. Entire barometres fail to reproduce. Entire barometres fail to reproduce.
