There is a feature of our state law that should be anceaded. Chippewa county does not seem to have jurisdiction to try offenses committed on Lake Huron. In all other counties bordering on this lake the first county in which service is obtained acquires jurisdiction. All the vessels bound up to Lake Superior make their first stop here after entering Lake Huron, and offenses committed on such vessels should be tried here. If they are not tried here the criminal escapes, as was the case on the Toledo this week. The law should be amended so as to give Chippewa county jurisdiction.—Sault Ste. Marie News.

GRESHAM'S OPINIONS.

In a recent interview Postmaster-General Gresham expressed his opinions regarding two important postal questions. First, he does not approve of the suggestion that the postage on what are call d drop letters should be reduced to one cent. He thinks there are strong reasons why better postage should be uniform. An argument in favor of reducing postage within the limits of a large city to one cent would be astrong one, if used, in favor of discriminating between postage on letters transmitted fifty miles and those transmitted 1,000 miles Second, he thinks it would be wise to raise the limit of transient newspaper postage from two ounces to three ounces for one cent. Many newspapers weigh but a fraction below two ounces without wrappers. Gen. Gresham thinks that three ounces should be substituted for two ounces in the law regulating translent newspaper postage. ## WAUSEON'S TRAGEDY.

It is now regarded as almost a certainty that Wesley Johnson is the murderer of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Williams, butchered a few nights ago near Wauscon, O. A suit of clothes has been found badly stained with blood, and they show yery plainly that an effort has been made to wash out the blood stains. The clothing has been identified as that worn by Johnson on the night of the murder, and was thrown out of a car window by him on the night he went to Kendallyille. The coils seem closing around the accused, and belief in his guilt is so a strong at the present writing that lynching is strong at the present writing that lynching is freely and openly advocated. The little babe, only 6 weeks of age, of the murdered man and woman, which lay for two days and nights without food, and sucked its little fingers until blood oozed out of them, was reported dead, but is said to be still alive, and may recover. Johnson claims that he can prove an allbi, and on that will endeavor to make a stuborn defense, having engaged Ex-Prosecuting Attorney Trassler, of Henry County, as counsel.

A MAD MURDERER.

Charles Schraeder and Frank Toomey of Chicago, were on their way to the Raymond school the other morning, and were met by a man named Peterson in a vacant lot. Without saying a word Peterson picked up a limb of a tree and dealt the Schraeder boy a heavy blow on the head. Stopping only long enough to see that he had killed his victim, he strode away, thumping his chest and shouting, "I am happy! I am happy now!" The police were informed of the occurrence, and a few hours after saw a crowd gathered around a man who was standing near the Alexian Brothers' hospital. The man talked incohe rently and appeared to be insane. The officer called the pa rol wagon and had him taken to the Larrabee Street Station. Peterson is a German laborer and was born in the province of Holstein, and came to this country two years ago. He appeared dall and is evidently of unsound mind. Of the killing he would say but little and appear-n-tly had forgotten all about the occurrence. His appearance is that of a mild, inoffensive labore. He has blue eyes, light stub beard and was dressed in the garb of an outdoor worktogman. For three months past he has been in the Alexian Brothers' hospital. He was troubled with rheumatism and spinal disease, the latter being liable to affect his mind. The universal verdiet of all who have seen him is tout he is insane. try last year no less than 182,000,000 eggs.

More than that, the reports of the The steamer Holyhead came in collision with past year's importations show that this is not a spasmodic movement of commerce, but that the egg trade from abroad has been a fact for some years, and has grown so rapidly since its in-auguration that the hens of the country ought to be startled over it. In the fiscal year of 1881 the number of eggs imported was 110,000,000; in 1882 it was 140,-000,000: in the past year 182,000,000, and in the present year will probably exceed 200,000,000, with a value of $3, 000,000. Eggs are on the free list. Will not some tariff rooster, seeing that

It is a little curious too, in this country of free beer and where millions of dollars are invested in breweries and beer-making appliances, to see that the mportations of beer are $1,000,000 a year. The value of the malt liquors imported at the various ports of this country during the past year was over a million and a half of dollars. The exportations of wheat were $120,000,000 last year, and yet there was imported during that same year no less than a million dollars worth of wheat and some thousands of barrels of flour. Another curious feature of this report is the fact which it shows that there

No Whiskey!

Brown's Iron BITTERS is one of the very few tonic medicines that are not composed mostly of alcohol or whiskey, thus becoming a fruitful source of intemperance by promoting a desire for rum.

Brown's Iron Bitters is guaranteed to be a nonintoxicating stimulant, and it will, in nearly every case, take the place of all liquor, and at the same time absolutely kill the desire for whiskey and other intoxicating beverages.

Rev. G. W. RICE, editor of the American Christian Review, says of Brown's Iron Bitters:

Cin., O., Nov. 16, 1881. Gents:—The foolish wast-ing of vital force in business, pleasure, and vicious indulgence of our people, makes your preparation a necessity; and if applied, will save hundreds who resort to saloons for temporary recuperation.

Brown's Iron Bitters has been thoroughly tested for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, weakness, debility, overwork, rheumatism, consumption, neuralgia, liver complaints, kidney troubles, &c., and it never fails to render speedy and permanent relief.

On Halloween night it is well known that some crosswalks and sidewalks were lifted, and in one instance we believe a few pickets were taken off of L. C. Risuniversity students were responsible for all that was done that night is preposterous. It is well known that high school scholars were out in force and the town boys as well. That some damage was done we will admit, that the students of the university were the cause of it, we deny, and for further proof on this point the names of the leaders, who are high school boys, are in our possession for future reference. The students did, on the evening in question, march down town several hundred strong, but they were not beligerent, and showed no disposition to behave otherwise than as gentlemen. The following perversion of facts appeared in the last issue of the Argus, and can be taken for what they are worth in this community, but strangers and others at a distance might, from a perusal of the article, infer that this was an awful town and the students

And thus the joke was repeated yeae after year, until at last Mr. Bog's casr came to be considered by all of them so thoroughly hopeless that if he had come down some morning in a pink vest and lemon-colored tights, no one would have thought it half so surprising as that he should really take Mr. Rasper's advice. Mr. Bog, indeed, at orty-five, was held by one and all to be their good graces. utterly impervious to female blandish-

Let the reader judge, therefore, for himself, with what effect this bombshell tell in the office four days after Mr. Bog was supposed to have started on one of his journeys.

The missile came by post, in the shape of a newspaper addressed to Mr. It was a provincial paper, not from Leicester, but from a city in quite another quarter. Mr. Rasper had unfolded it and looked it carelessly over-had read several items of local news, in which he took not the slightest interest, and was about to toss it into the wastebasket, when his eye caught sight of a couple of crosses evidently made for the purpose of attracting attention. But even then he did not at once hit the right column. ... Hunting fixtures for next week; what on earth do I care about them? 'Hops ten dollars a cwt, higher;' well, if they don't raise beer it doesn't matter to me. What does the old goose mean by marking these?"

At last, however, he did find it, and was struck for a moment speechless. "Well, by Jove!" he said at last. "this is something! But I don't believe it! Here's Bog gone and put a notice in the paper to make us believe he has got married. Listen, here it is:

"Same day, at St. Ambrese, in this ity, by the Rev. Edward Wheeler, rector, Mr. Thomas Frederick Bog, of Highbury, to Emily, only daughter ef the late Theodore Phillips, Esq., of Kingston, Jamaica.

"And then, as if that were not enough, here's a note appended, editorial appar-'Unusual interest attached to this vedding from the fact of the bride being married—as we are permitted to state—on her tenth birthday.

"Very fair, indeed, Mr. Bog," said Rasper, as he finished; "very creditable for a first joke-only it's a little overdone. You'll do better next time. Now, my merry men, what do you think of grave at sight of her. Not one in the office believed a word of it, of course. "Neither do I" said Rasper; "but it really is very fair for Bog. I must go and show it to Splutter. But at that moment Mr. Splutter came in, and on being tendered the newspaper waived the offer, and said:

"Ah, ah, I know all about it! Bog's wedding-that's what you want me to lock at, isn't it? Bless yon, I've known it for more than a week! And he shut himself into his own room. And, in short, that was the conclusion to which all in the office came, namely, that this editorial note was a piece of very ridiculous fooling, which Bog had purposely had inserted for their mystification, Considering which Mr. Rasper, who, so long as he had disbelieved the marriage itself, had pro-nounced the whole to be "pretty fair

Speculation exhausted itself as to the He did not often say ill-natured things; but every wit must have his butt, his anvil, on which to bammer and sharpen his darts and Mr. B. and sharpen his darts, and Mr. Bog did child from a boarding-school-having, in fact, probably run off with her for the sake of her money, and knowing any one in the office to make a joke; that he could not possibly conceal the and had not often, they said, been made fact of her being a child, had impudently determined to brazen his misdeed out in this way before them and the world.

And poor Mr. Bog accordingly fell not a little in the opinion of his fellow dmitted it, and by his invariable good emper.

It was quite impossible to put him man at his time of life, was unpardonfor which it would behoove them all on Mr. Bag's return to give him the cold shoulder and the cut.

"I'll be bound he'll bring her down to the office in a short frock," said Mr. In anticipation of which very re-markable advent I will, for a little while, leave Mr. Rasper and the office. II.

While his own character was thus suffering, and while his fellow clerks their finding in him on his return any small remains of honor and morality,

The reader would, indeed, have been able to infer this much had we, without explanation or comment, merely commenced this closing chapter with the following letter which Mr. Bog wrote

For it was the custom of the house to let their traveling be done by the clerks, instead of keeping travelers to do nothing else. In this way one or two of them were always out, and all of them in turn had a pleasant relief from the monotony of office life.

"Now, Bog," Mr Rasper would say, "you must really try and manage it this journey. Represent your case" evening next, but shall not come back to business until the beginning of the following week. Will you oblige me and my wife by giving us your company on the Friday evening and by inviting for me all my confreres of the office for the same evening? I hate the eeremony of carding, and calling, and sitting in state to receive visits from old friends, and so does my wife. If they will all

Yours ever. This letter, which came on Monday morning, was dealt with by Mr. Splutter in his usual prompt and business-like way. He simply turned up one corner of it, wrote on the back of that corner, in red ink,"I shall go, and hope you all will," and sent it out to Mr. Rasper to be handed round. The decision came to unanimously, in spite of the sentence of condemnation passed on poor Bog, was that they would go, all who could, if it were only for the sake of having an early sight of the bride, and giving the bridegroom one chance of reinstating himself in

When the evening came, therefore they took a couple of cabs, and all went down together-Mr. Splutter, my father, Rasper, Gibbs, and all the rest of them—they having agreed on a convenient point of meeting before they left the office.

It was Mr. Bog himself who received his company in his cozy, well-furnished drawing room up stairs, for he was a man of some little means, and had everything very comfortable about "You had better not make it war," said Mr. Splutter, "for Bog's holiday seems to have put him in rare fighting order. Better say peace.

Whereupon Bog, in his clumsy way, sparred at Rasper on the hearth-rug, as if to demonstrate with what ease he could completely double him up

"I shall think about it," said Rasper; "and, before deciding, should like to see the 'teterrima causa beli,' if that is what my old Latin grammar used to call another fair one. 'Here," said Mr. Bog, 'in good time

"Don't say, now, that you thought I had married little Rosy;" and he went off into a fit of laughter of long duration. "Rasper," he said, on getting his breath again, "you really did not think that—oh, oh. oh!"

And then went off into a longer laugh than ever, in which we all joined him. "Then what on earth," said Rasper, brought to bay—"what on earth was branches that will not bear a monkey's the meaning of that newspaper note?"

Philadelphia Press. Michigan has a board of health in every city, village and township, and a state health board besides. The value of this complete network of sanitary administration is strikingly shown in the instructions upon the work of health boards just issued by Dr. Baker, the secretary of the state board. The three great branches of sanitary science, the ollection of vital statistics, the prevention of specific diseases and the prompt attack upon all disease centers are all possible only when a competent body is always ready to act upon the instant. The precious days wasted in our Pennsylvania cities when small-pox appears, before any one knows what is to be done, is saved under the Michigan system, which keeps in every place a board engaged in systematic vaccina-tion, which has in readiness circulars of warning and instruction ready to send to physicians and householders on the first appearance of infection, and which preserves through the year a constant watchfulness. A Sea-Candle.

In these days of gas and electric lights seems very strange to hear of burnng whale-oil in lamps, or even to use petroleum, but an actual candle that rows in the sea, and is alive, too, is till more strange.

This candle is the fattest of fat little fish, and it is found in the Northern seas, the very region where it is most needed. It is quite ornamental by noonlight, and glitters like pearls in the water because of its shiny armor. The Indians of Russian America and Vancouver Island eatch the little fishwhich are about as large as smelts with immense rakes, having teeth made of bone or sharp-pointed nails, and every time the rake is swept in one fish at least, and sometimes three or four, will be found tast to each other.

To make them into candles the women take a long wooden needle, and thread it with a piece of rush pith, which is drawn through the fish from head to When this wick is lighted the fish burns steadily in its rough candlestick only a bit of wood split at one end to hold the candle - and gives a light bright nough to read by. It is not very probaole, though, that the natives use many of them for this purpose. Large quantities of these useful little fish are turned into oil-but not to be burned in lamps. It is the favorite supply of winter food, and helps to keep out the terrible cold of those long Northern winters. When Mrs. Indian has oil-making on hand the children probably find it worse than washing-day or cleaning house, and are glad enough to take their little bows and arrows or spears and go off until things are quiet again around the lodge.

First the squaw makes five or six large round pebbles into each to be heated very hot. Four large square boxes of pine-wood are ready by each fire, and in every box she piles a layer Rachel would swat Jacob over the head of fish, which she covers with cold with the dipper of fresco material, peowater, and then puts in five or six of ple would stop on the streets to see the small talk to the young girl by the the heated stones. The Dakota Gold Excitement.

The gold craze at Lisbon, Dakota, has extended to Fargo, and many citizens of the latter place have gone to investigate the diggings. The fact that a number of Fargo's leading citizens have formed a company and filed a mining claim of 200 acres of the town site of Lisbon has served to increase the excitement at Fargo, and everyone who can leave his business there is making a pilgrimage to the scene of operations, while all corroborate the reports of the value of the find on their return. A tract of 200 acres in extent in the city limits of Lisbon and situated partly on the site of the brickyard owned by John Kinan, a well known merchant of Lisbon. was on Thursday filed as a placer claim by a company consisting mostly of Fargo men, with a capital of $500,000, and they intend to work the claim for all it s worth. The work will be prosecuted vigorously immediately on the introduction of machinery, which has already been ordered. The citizens of Lisbon coveries daily add to their delirium. A mining expert says that gold exists in paying quantities in the region adjacent to Lisbon, which he has just visited.

There is a great deal of argumen among young and old people as propriety of young people and old peo-ple making each other's acquaintance without a proper introduction, old people claiming that any acquaintance, made without an introduction, is in proper, while many young people claim that there are times when an acquaintance can be made without the aid of these forms, which is liable to be a valuable one, and lead to much happiness. But such things are looked upon as flirtations by many people. An acquaintance thus formed, is often looked upon as productive of no good. Young ople cannot be too careful about meet g strangers, though they should use me judgment and not give themselves away. They have a precedent for get-ting acquainted without the aid of out-side friends, in the case of Jacob and Rachel, the particulars of which flirtation can be found in the good book. It is not alleged that Jacob was a masher, like many of the Jakes of the present day, but according to reports, he captured Rachel quicker than wink. seems that Jake was at the well of Haran, after water, and Rachel came along with her jug, after some water. They had never met before, and yet Jacob was gone first time she aimed her eyes at him. According to scriptural authority, "It came to pass that after he had drawn water at the well of Haran for Rachel, Jacob kissed Rachel and lifted up his voice and wept." What he wept for is to be overcome with emotion in trying times. The action of Jacob towards a total stranger, in these days, would subject him and her to comment. Suppose, at one of our summer resorts, a Rachel should go down to the spring for a dose of liquid liver cure, and a young fellow should draw the water for her, and hand it to her, and then kiss her, and begin to cry. They would call a policeman, and the next day, or the day after, when the policeman got around, they would have the crying kisser fired out of the grounds, and Rachel's mother would take her up to the hotel and take her across her knee and box her ears soundly. Probably that was the way they did business in olden times, but it would be a laughable thing to see now days. Suppose a young Jacob and Rachel, strangers o each other, living in adjoining houses in Chicago, should both take tin dip pers and go out to the milk wagon for the supply of alleged milk for their respective families, and Jacob should take Rachel's dipper and have it whitewashed inside with the stuff the milklarge fires, and throws a number of man exchanges for tickets, and then the

Hasty Marriages One Cause.

Speaking of the laxity of the mariage laws, and the alarming increase n the divorce business, the Pittsburgh Dispatch says:

There is but one greater evil than the aws which permit numerous and easy divorces, and that is a condition of so ciety which renders so many married people ready to avail themselves of these facilities. It is wise to ask if there is not a deeper cause for the disgrace-ful statistics of divorce than their mere egal possibility. Perhaps a searching quiry might find it in the prevalence f hasty and ill-considered marriages By all means let us have the divorce laws made uniform, and protected against loose and unjustifiable divorces. But in recognizing this evil let us not forget that the real cause of marital troubles lies further back than the statute-books.
