TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

MICHIGAN is coming well up to the front with her sister states as a tramping-ground for murderers. Scarcely a week passes in which in some quiet, rural community a family, more or less numerous, is killed for booty, revenge or lust. WILLIAM A. PORUGEE, a baker of Kingston, N. Y., died recently under circumstances which left the attending physicians much in doubt as to the eause of death. A post-mortem examination was made which resulted in the discovery of a grape-seed in one of the intestines. It had become lodged there, a sac had been formed about, [and subsexuently an abcess. This had final-mined that the doctors whom her mysterious disease had puzzled should not make any post-mortem examination 'In the interest of science." Apparently he hadn't much confidence, in their honor, for on the day of her burial he erected over her grave a tent in which he has slept every night since and proposes to continue sleeping until the body has returned to dust.

TRAGEDY IN A FARM HOUSE.

Four Persons Murdered in their Beds, A tragedy was enacted in a farm house in ummit, Jackson county, in which a venerable old man, his daughter, son-in-law, and a guest of the family were murdered in their beds. The scene of the tragedy was the farm house of James D. Crouch, situated about country jall. Investigation confirmed the report, and revealed the fact that Greenwood, heds. The scene of the tragedy was the farm house of James D. Crouch, situated about seven miles southwest of Jackson. Persons going to the Crouch homestead found Mr. Crouch lying dead in an alcove leading from the sitting room of the house. In the next room the bodies of his daughter and her husband, Henry White, were found, and in still another part of the house was found the body of a stranger named Moses Polly. Long of Hillsdale, has been held for and then gave their attention to the members of Mr. Crouch's family as they made their ap-pearance when aroused by the noise made in shooting Polly. As already stated, there were no evidences of a struggle in the house, and some believe the inmates were first chloroformed before the murders were committed. Jacob D. Crouch, the owner of the homestead, was one of the oldest farmers in the county, being about 74 years of age. His daughter and White, her husband, made their home with him, and per husband, made their home with him, and rom all circumstances it is impossible to form may other theory of the startling crime than that above noted. Here, lying on the ground under the front window of the house, they found Mrs. Ruddy, her body terribly backed and bleeding profusely. After properly caring for the wounded woman and summoning additional aid, the door of Ruddy's house was forced open, when flames burst forth. An alarm of fire was sounded and the flames extinguished, when an examination of the premises led to the discovery of the dead bodies of the husband and only child (aged 18 months) of Mrs. Ruddy lying on the kitchen floor, both cut in a terrible manner and covered with bedding that had been saturated with kerosene and fired. They were so badly disfigured by the fire as to be almost unrecognizable. Horrible as were the discoveries thus far made, the horror of the neighbors was still further intensified on further search. In a bed room they found the trunk of the lifeless body of a woman. Here another attempt to obliterate traces of the critice by fire had been made, the bed clothing having been saturated with oil and piled upon the body; but the match that was applied to it had failed to ignite it, thus leaving the horror exposed. One of her lezs had been chopped off, and with the remaining leghad been bound to the body with a clothes-line. A Mr. Ford was among those who entered the house, and he at once recognized the remains as those of his wife.

The coroner was summoned and a jury impaneled, when Mrs. Ruddy was examined and

THE VERDICT-ARREST OF SAMON.

The corroner's jury rendered a verdict that Mrs. Ford, Mr. Ruddy and the latter's child came to their deaths at the hands of Thomas Samon, and the alleged murderer was arrested near Plymouth, about 22 miles from the scene of the tragedy. He did not resist arrest and was jailed at Plymouth. He denied all knowledge of the affair. Suspicion existing against Ford, the murdered woman's husband, he was also arrested and held at Legonia. A special dispatch to the Chicago News from Newark, N. J., dated Noy. 25 says: John achtman, a farmer living on the Eagle Rock road near West Orange, saw a trail of blood and traces of a severe struggle on the roadside this morning, while returning from church. He also noticed blood stains on the rocks and grass leading to the underbrush in the fields on one side of the road, and closer scrutiny showed unmistakable evidence that the grass had been trampled upon, or that a heavy body had been dragged over it. Follows the grass had been trampied upon, or that heavy body had been dragged over it. Following the blood stains about sixty feet to a clump of bushes, he found the dead body of a young and comely gir' with a frightful gash in the left side of her neck and two wounds in a young and comely gir' with a frightful gash in the left side of her neck and two wounds in her right side. He saw that the wound had been made by a very dull knife, as the cut was jagged on the edges. After the farmers of the valley and on the mountains, were aroused by Wachtman, the body was identified as that of Phobe Jane Paullin, daughter of David Paullin, a shoemaker, living at Roseland. Saturday after moon she vent to Orange to make some purchases. As she did not return home that evening her parents were not alarmed, as she had informed them if she was delayed after nightfall, she would remain at the residence of Anderson, who lived at the first mountain, a a short distance from Orange. It is believed that while on her way to Anderzon's house, after being delayed in Orange longer than she expected, she was either followed by a ruffish from Orange or else met a tramp and was seized and throttled on the road. She had apparently made a stout resistance, which made parently made a stout resistance, which mad-dened her assailant so that he stabbed her, and when she became weak from loss of blood and too exhausted to defend herself, he dragged her to a clump of bushes and assau ted her. There was no evidence that she was strong enough to struggle much at the bushes. It is thought that the rufflan, after accomplishing his purpose, seeing that she was badly wounded, resolved to kill her, so that, in case he was accessed he could not be identified. arrested, he could not be identified. It is not known thatshe had any jealous lov-er or that she had quarreled with any young man in the neighborhood. She was a respectable, quiet and virtuous girl, and was a popular belle at harvest dances and social housparties. Her parents never heard her speak o any person having annoyed her, and it is therefore thought that she was waylaid by a tramp who murdered her because she resented

"Christ's words-'So let your light hine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorfy your father which is in heaven' -have usually been interpreted as a command to Christian example," said Mr. Beecher, "but more than this, they contain a profound philosophy, which involves the very substance of Christianity. Light Nellie Batley who murdered her husband on he plains in the Indian territory, will go out a leader; an artist. How fit an emblem is a revealer; a stimulator; a chemist; of the human soul! How sneaking that man will feel when, before the heroes in the other life, he creeps in the gate on his belly, fire after him! Away with mean, vulgar, calculating Christianity. As the housewife stirs up and covers over the fire to keep for the night, so some Christians break up their piety to keep till the revival season comes round. There are dark-lantern Christians who say they pray and trust in God, yet no one ever suspects that they are Christians. Others look like a box of caudles, very regular in their pews, but not luminous; ney are a thousand times better on the Sabbath than in the week. Frederik H. Hedge in Dec A lantic. The world has no prevision of its hecoes. Nature gives no warning when a great man is born. Had any soothsayer ndertaken to point out, among the children cast upon the world in electoral Saxony on the 10th of November, 1483. the one who would shake Christendom to its centre, this peasant babe, just arrived in the cottage of Hans Luther at Eisleben, might have been the last on broker of Indianapolis, forged his father's mame for $5,000, and then started out to see the world. But he only went as far as Cincinthe world. But he only went as far as Cincinreflection finds in the birth of Luther a peculiar fitness of place and time. Fitness of place, inasmuch as Frederick the Wise, Elector of Saxony, his native prince and patrod, was probably the only one among the potentates of that day who, from sympathy and force of character, possessed the will and the ability to shield the reformer from prelatical wiles and the wrath of Rome. Fitness of time, A generation had scarcely gone by since the newly invented printing-press had issued its first Bible; and during the very year of this nativity, in 1483, Christopher Columbus was making his first appeals for royal aid in realizing his dream of a western hemisphere hidden from European ken Cyrus Jefferson, the wealthiest citizen of behind the waves of the Atlantic, where Wyoming county, N. Y., is dead, at the ripe old age of 80 years. was destined to find its most congenial soil and to yield its consumate fruit. More important than fitness of time and place is the adaption of the man to his appointed work. There is an easy, leveling theory, held by some, that men are the product of their time, great actors the necessary product of extraordinary circumstances; the Cæsar and Mohammed and Napoleon, had they not lived precisely when they did, would have plodded through life, and slipped into their graves without a record; and that on the other hand, quite ordinary men, if thrown upon the times in which those beroes lived, would have done as they did and accomplished the same results,-would nave overthrown the Roman aristocracy, abolished idolatry, and brought order ont of chaotic revolution.

But man and history are not, I think, to be construed so. There is a law which adapts the man to his time. The work to be done is not laid upon a hance individual; the availing of the crisis is not left to one who happens to be on the spot; but from the foundation of the world the man was selected to stand just there, and do just that. The opportunity does not make the man, ut finds him. He is the providentialman: all the past is in him, all the future is to flow from him.

office at Ann Arbor, Mich. the white man's wrangling. The republican party furnished forty acres and a mule, gave the freedman's bank and the civil right bill-both busted.

THE republicans are very anxious that Randall shall be elected speaker. Of late it has been industriously remarked by the republican press that his only opponent, who can succeed, is a southern man. The statement that he comes from a little south of the Ohio has been democratic papers opposed to Carlisle. When the American people find in the manship, the conclusion will be speedily and receives office so he be an honest glory and progress of the country.

Ir is a pity the republican party can gentleman on whom to waste the minority vote in the election of a speaker by the house without unpleasant suggestions from republican papers. Keifer would of course like to be complimented. course as speaker. To pass him by is a marked and deliberate lack of courtesy, so pronounced as to suggest some very strong ground for it. Mere unpopularity would not explain it. We are relieved from speculation if the accusations of republican papers made when he was elected left any room for speculation. The papers of his own party intimate that if he does not voluntarially retire, inquiry will be made as to the manner of his former election. If he does retire under that threat, he confesses that he is in danger. It is a pity that our republican friends can engage in nothing that does not always after wear unpleasant odors and require cooking up or deodorization.

TRE democrats will meet to-morrow evening to nominate a candidate for speaker of the house of representatives. Of the three prominent gentlemen menwhy should Carlisle be the coming man? It is not because he is a genial good fellow, gifted with personal magnetism, not because he is a politician, capable of scheming and forming combinations for personal advancement of political ends. for he is neither of these. It is because, along with a demonstrated fairness, coolness, and readiness in the managebroad statesman of strongly knit intelthings which have been so long neglected in our narrow sectional and mere partisan wrangles. We believe he will be elected, because the times call for such a man, and all that can be known of the drift of sentiment among the members of the new house tend that way.

THE democrats enjoy one liberty which to discuss the merits of candidates for the presidency and to advocate anybody, attacks of the office holding machine, against which no republican paper will own interest. They run the machine and can best down any republican who attempts to be a rival. The republican masses have a poor opinion of Arthur, and the republican editors in general do not like him; but they have to keep praising him, and ascribing deserts to him which, if true, would make him peerless. Arthur is the head of the machine, and is organizing the sold south to nominate him, without representing a single electoral vote. Republican journals talk of the solid democratic south, but the solid south is to dicate to their party by delegations of office holders, representing no votes. Republicans must feel a strong disposition to join the democratic party in order to be able to say their souls are their own in the mat- property in Manchester, $900. ter of the presidency.

Mr. Seth M. Crane with Frank Gayler's comedy company is a great stage favorite. He made his reputation as a comedian and singer in the character of Pippo in the opera of La Mascott. The Continent.

The sun was setting over the Ganges one bright summer evening in 1871. The day had been a hot one, even for India. and it was an unspeakable r lief to every one when the scorching sun began to decline at last, and the lengththe river bank told that night was at

And now the Hinduinhabitants of the neighboring village, who had been lying motionless all the afternoon under of the vast overarching banyan trees around them, came trooping down to the water in a body.

Instantly the whole bank of the great river-so lovely and silent all through the long, burning day—became all alive with noise and bustle. Children paddled in the broad, still pools, or chased each other in and out of the tall, along the bank. Women filled their earthen pitchers from the stream, or washed their threadbare clothes. Men began to scour their brass lotahs (drinking vessels), or to kindle fires for the cooking of their evening meals; while group of young girls, wading out into the shallow water, fell to splashing each other with might and main, amid shouts of merry laughter, To any one unaccustomed to the ways of India, it would have seemed strange frayed as if by constant rubbing, and enough to see, upon the wrists and ankles of nearly all the girls, and many of their mothers likewise, heavy bangles of solid silver, which any Western lady might have been proud to wear. But Hindu peasants, to whom savings banks are utterly unknown, have no way of keeping their money safe except by carrying it about with them in this fashion—a somewhat nazardous plan, it with the most expert and daring thieves

Suddenly one of the girls, who had ventured a little farther out into the stream than the rest, disappeared under turned and rushed back to the shore as fast as possible, screaming:

"A crocodile! a crocodile! the village women dared to approach the scene of this terrible mischance. At length one, bolder than the rest, ventured in again, and the others, seeing to follow her example. More than a week passed without any accident, and usual, when, one evening, a second girl disappeared in precisely the same man-

The terror was now universal, and all the best hunters of the viliage set themselvs with one accord to get rid of this destroying crocodiles. Baits were laid, traps set, men posted along the bank with loaded guns to keep watch for the monster; but look for him as they might, nothing was to be seen of uses alcohol, is capable of sustaining

Several days later the wife of one of the villagers was washing her white wraper on the bank of the river, when it slipped from her hands and floated slowly out into the wide, still pool formed by the bend of the stream. The woman at once waded after it, and had ust succeeded in clutching it, when she was seen by those on the bank to give a sudden start, throw her arms convulevely into the air and disappear under the water just as the other two had done

About three days after this last caastrophe, Mr. Henry Sparks, the British Commissioner for the District of Jungey wallah, was at work in his office amid a perfect mound of papers, halting every now and then to wipe his streaming face (which, despite the enormous punkah, or swinging fan, worked by his native servant outside with a cord passed through a hole in the wall, looked very much like a half melted snowball), when he was sud-denly disturbed by a knock af the door. "Come in!" cried h snappishly, expecting the entrance of some Hindu long and unintelligible as an Assyrian inscription. But at the first glimpse of the person who entered his face cleared

The visitor was a tall native, with the handsome reatures and stately bearing | Keeble had walked 456 hours and covof a Mahratta. His figure, nearly six feet in height, was so gaunt and sinewy that it seemed to be made of pin-wire, and his piercing black eyes looked out from beneath the folds of his white turban with the quick, keen, watchful glance of a practical hunter. In truth, Ismail, the Mahratta, was well used to tracking other game beside deer or tigers. Over and above his occupations as scout, hunter and government courier, he was in constant request as a detective, and, for tracking down either a wild beast or a criminal, he had no equal in Bengal.

The Englishman started, and looked fixedly at Ismail's immovable face. "That's how I heard the story told," rejoined he. "If it wasn't a crocodile what was it?" "Did the Commissioner, Sahib," inquired Ismail, "ever hear of a crocodile

Again Mr. Sparks gave a slight start, and the sparkle of his eye showed that he was beginning to guess the riddle, but he took care to make no interruption, seeing that Ismail wished to have the pleasure of telling the whole story

"I went to the village," continued Ismail, and talked with the people. Then I dived into the river (my lord knows that I can find my way through water as well as through thickets), and at the bottom I came upon a noosed

The Commissioner nodded with the air of a man who understood the whole affair perfectly, but stil he said nothing. "The Sahib understands how it was done, proceeded the Hindu. "When any woman worth robbing went into the water, the noose tangled her feet, and the robber, hidden among the bushes on the opposite bank, dragged her down and drowned her, and then plundered the corpse at his leisure." "I see," said Mr. Sparks. "Well, Ismail, you know there's a Government reward of a thousand rupees ($500) for every murderer brought to justice; see what you can make of the case. The Mahratt's black eyes flashed fire, for $500 is more to a Hindu than $5,000 to a white man, and such a chance did not come to him every day He went out without a word, but Mr. Sparks felt satisfied that there would the hole is filled up." oe news of the criminal before long.

Ismail plunged at once into the surroundingjungle and traversed it at apace ening shadows of the tall palms along which few men could have kept up over such ground and in such a climate, till he came in sight of Kamganj, but instead of entering the village he struck down a by-path to the river, swam across, went slowly up the opposite side shade of their re-thatched roofs, or till he came to two bamboo clumps close together, and groping in the water beside them, pulled up a rope.

His pext was to hunt out a big stone, upon the sharp edge of which he sawed the cord to and fro till it held only by one strand. One slash of his long, sharp knife would have done the work much quicker, but Ismail doubtless had his reasons for what he did. Then placfeathery bamboo clump that grew ing the stone in the shallow water, with the sharp side uppermost, and the rope lying right across it, he vanished into the thicket. An hour had passed since his disappearance, and night had already set in, when a dark figure came creeping up a little farther down the stream, a to the same spot, and pulled at the half

The man started, and held up the broken ends to the light of the rising mood, but finding them rough and feeling the sharp edged stone lying just underneath, he appeared satisfied that it must have been an accident, and knelt down to knot the cord together again.

So engrossed was the villian with his treacherous work that he never lifted his head to look around him, but even had he been less preoccupied he would scarcely have heard the noiseless footmust be owned, in a country swarming fall of one who had been tracking the tiger and the antelope through their native jungles ever since he was ten years

everything was beginning to go on as A Temperance Man's Findarance Mr. Keeble, the noted temperance advocate, has become quite a lion among the temperance and church people. He recently completed in London, Eng. one of the greatest feats of physical endurance on record. Its accomplishment was undertaken for the purpose of proving to the world that the physical system of a sound man, who never greater and more protracted fatigue than is the system of an equally sound man accustomed to its use, even in moderation. Mr. Keeble had, in most of his temperance lectures, insisted on this point, and generally challenged his opponents to undertake a test with him. Being a man of fine physique, his challenges were not accepted. He then determined to exemplify in his own powers of endurance the virtues of temper ance, by a feat of endurance in walking. choosing that because he had no experience, either as a professional or amateur pedestrian, and regarding walking as the completest form of physical exer-He undertook to walk 1,000 miles within 445 hours, and to average during the entire period two and one quarter miles per hour. No person but himself believed he would ever succeed, but he said he would, because he meant to in the interest of religion and humanity. He finished his thousandth mile in the allotted time, and ended apparently fresh, and certainly in excellent spirits and health. A dispute arose at the completion of the next to the last mile, growing out of the decimal difficulty in adjusting the time in the last mile to the total distance to be covered, and farmer or peasant with a complaint as Mr. Keeble continued walking until the dispute was settled. It was referred to sporting judges, who happened to be at the time in another part of the city and before the decision, which was in ered a total of 1,025 miles, finishing in good condition. An admirer of Mr. Keeble has offered to back him against any other pedestrian in the world in an attempt to walk 2,500 miles in 1,000 hours, and make two and a quarter miles in each and every hour.

The best way to clean marble is to take one-quarter pint of soap lees, one-half gill of turpentine, and sufficient pipe clay and bullocks' gall to make a thick paste. Apply it to the marble with a soft brush, and after a day or two, when quite dry, rub it off with a soft rag. A simple and quicker method is to take two parts of soda, one of pumice stone and one of finelypowdered chalk. Rub this well over the marble, and the stains will be removed, then wash it with soap and water and a beautiful bright polish will be produced.

AROUND THE FIRESIDE. GRANDMOTHER'S WAITING

EBEN E. REXFORD. Grandmother's face is wrinkled,
And her eyes have grown so dim
That she cannot read her Bible,
Nor follow through the hymn.
And her hands are often idle,
For knitting tires them so,
But her brain is always husy But her brain is always busy
With thoughts of Heaven, I know.
Grandmother's waiting, waiting,
To hear God's waiting, To hear God's summons given, And dreaming of her dear ones Gone o'er the hills to Heaven.

It always thrills me strangely
To think of her waiting there,
At the gates of God's white city With its sun on her silver hair.
To meet her husband's kisses,
And to hear him softly say: I have waited a long time, darling For this happy, happy day!"
Graudmother's waiting, waiting,
To hear God's summons given,
And dreaming of her dear ones,
Gone o'er the hills to Heaven.

I think, sometimes, as I watch her, That she sees them, for a smile Breaks over her face, as she whispers "Yes, dear, in a little while."
Only a little more waiting
This side of Paradise, And grandmother will be young again
With her dear ones in the skies.
Grandmother's waiting, waiting,
To hear God's summons given,
And dreaming of her dear ones
Gone o'er the hills to Heaven.

Dear Sir.—Until within a recent date, I had for several years suffered greatly from gravel, called by the doctors the Brick-dust Sediment. For about a year past this sediment has not passed off in the usuai quantity, but has accumulated, causing me untold pain. Having heard of "Kennedy's Favorte Remedy," I tried it in my case, and after using about one and one-half bottles, I voided a stone from the bladder, of an oval shape, 7-18 of an inch long, and rough on its surface.
