Sulphur for Grapevines. The use of sulpfur powder for the destruction of oidion, or mildew, has come into such general use in vine-yards that little need be said concerning it seffects or the necessity of using it. It has proved itself to be the simplest and most thorough remedy for a disease that once threatened the utter destruction of the grape crop in almost every country. No vine, be it ever so young and vigorous, ought to be deprived of the benefit of a judicious application of sulphur, the disease being early transmitted into young vineyards with the cuttings. Proceedings of the State Convention at Battle Creek

Text of the Platform.

The state convention of the Union party of Michigan was held in Battle Creek, Wednesday, May 14.

The committee on organization re-ported in favor of John Russell of Deoit as permanent chairman and Prof. U. R. Evans of Adrian as permanent secretary. They also recommended that Prof. Dickie be made chairman and Walter Dufty was instantly killed by the cars on the Detroit, Bay City & Alpena Rail road at East Tawas while unloosening chains on a log train. Six loaded cars passed over his body before the train could be stopped. His body was terribly mutilated.

Prof. Dickie be made chairman and W. A. Taylor of Lansing secretary of the state central committee, and that two members from each district comprise the balance of the committees, and that ten delegates at large and and that ten delegates at large and four from each district be chosen to the national convention to be held at Pittsburg on July 23.

John Russell was received with hearty applause. He said they were here to organize for the success of a great principle, not to rail at the old parties. They had done well and great good has been accomplished by them.

"We have a great work to accomplish and believe we can best do it by a distinet organization. Let us show charity toward all, including the dramsellers. Let us be governed by principles of social and political philosophy. The number of de egates as reported by the committee on credentials by counties, was as follows: Allegan 10; Berrien, 9; Branch, 2; Barry, 8; Cass, 5; Clinton, 3; Calhoun, 20; Eaton, 10; Genesee, 3; Ingham, 11; Hillsdale, 2; Ionia, 10; Jackson, 7; Kent, 15; Kalamazoo, 11; Lapeer, 1; Livingston, 10; Lenawee, 15; Monroe, 10, Manistee, 2; Macomb, 18; Kent, 4; Newago, 5; Osceola, 4; Oakland, 1; Ottawa, 1; Oceana, 5; Shirawara, 2; Sariawara, 1; Tasado

The Senate amendments to the Indian appropriation bill were non-concurred in. The bill was passed extending until December 31, 1855, the duration of the court of commissioners of Alabama jelaims. A bill was passed to change the eastern and northern judicial districts of Texas, and to attach part of Indian territory to those districts. On motion of Mr. Cassidy, Democrat of Nevada, a bill was passed to relieve settlers on the Duck valley Indian reservation, Elk county, Nevada. A bill was also passed for the appointment of two additional associate justices of the suppreme court of Dakota. The next bill called up was fone to amend the act to divide the state of Missouri into two judicial districts, and to again divide the castern and western districts, and to prescribe times and places for holding courts therein. This created no little excitement among the members from that state, and the House adjourned pending discussion of the bill.

From the Kalamazoo Telegraph. The negotiations which have for some time been in progress for the purchase of the property belonging to the estate of the late Harrison A. Smith, on Paw Paw avenue, just west of the village, have been finally closed, and this splendid demense of 42 acres with its andsome buildings and grounds, etc., were transferred to Dr. T. C. Wilbur. The doctor with his family and household goods have arrived and are in possession. Some 25 years ago Dr. H. B. Wilbur established at Barre, Mass., the first school for feeble minded children, which from the start proved to be a success. Since that time there has been some 15 other schools in different parts of the northern states. Dr. Wilbur's name has become an honored one among the workers in the field of benevolence. Dr. T. C. Wilbur, who has now come among us, is his brother, and for many years co-operated with Dr. H.B. Wilbur (until the latter's death) since which time he has established and conducted schools of this kind successfully, and is thoroughly familiar with the system, which has received the approval of the best minds in the country interested in this class of work.

This school is established for the care and education of feeble-minded youth of both sexes. The institution is strictly private, and not a state or charitable institution in the strict sense of the word, though its object is benevolent. It is for the education of backward or ecsentric children, adapted for such as are precluded from ordinary schools by reason of defective nervous organizations. Teachers are to be provided who have been thoroughly trained in the work, and numerous as the needs of the pupils, who are formed in classes varjing in number from one to elight. A limited number of custodial classes will be received, such as those who are unfitted to engage in business life or mingle in society because of mental infirmities.

Special attention will be given to a careful classification of pupils, so that the different grades and classes will be separated at all times. In the public institutions usually from 10 to 40 are compelled to be associated in the dormitories and all are mingled in the diningrooms and other general assembly rooms. This will be entirely prevented in the formitation will be made as to these associations and pupils will be carefully graded and classified in every department. The sexes will be kept entirely apart from each other. The department for girls will be under the direct supervision of Mrs. Wilbur and two independent cottages will be used for the boys. The institution will be ready about the middle of this month. There are already applications for seven boys. At present the number admitted must be limited until additional cottages can be built.

Dr. Wilbur calls his place the "asvlum for the feeble-minded." A more beautiful and to the province of the feeble-minded." A more beautiful and to the province of the feeble-minded." Dr. Wilbur calls his place the "asvlum for the feeble-minded." A more beautiful and salubrious position it would be hard to find. The doctor is greatly pleased with the location and says it cannot be surpassed. The seneus of the United States for 1880 shows there were in this state feeble minded persons, young and old, 3,181, a total in the five states of Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri and Michigan, of 16,233. Of these there were in the institutions for the feeble-minded in all these five states but 355 inmats leaving 15,878 unprovided for by any special care, other than that received at their own homes, in insane hospitals, in county poorhouses, leaving 14,109 at their homes, without any special care or treatment to ameliorate their condition. So that it will be seen there is a great field for an institution in Kalamag. O.

The Evening News says the mayor of Ludington vetoed a resolution to publish the names of liquor bondsmen, and one alderman who voted to sustain the veto did it because he feared to hurt the feelings of the christian wives and families of church members whose names were upon the bonds. For "the sake of the cause of Christ" he sustained the mayor, and could not even think of the consequences of such publicity "without a shudder." He should be placed on ice.

T. Johnson. General business, Jerome Freeman, Jno. Freeman, H. Smith Jr., and J. Tibbles. Reception, Chas. Taylor, R. Johnson, Oliver Steel. On music, C. Smith, Geo. Jewett, Sol. Zeib Jr. The following gentlemen were also elected officers of the day: President, Wm. Graves; vice-presidents, R. A. Hazen, Ypsilanti, J. Davis, Lansing, R. Masburg, Toledo, and E. Q. Leathman Jr.; marshal, Steve Jacobs; assistants, Wm. N. Johnson, Ann Arbor, Chas. Hunter, Ann Arbor, Jno. Bowels, Ypsilanti. Several well known speakers have announced their intention of being present. There is no doubt that our colored fellow citizens will do all in their power to make the celebration one long to be remembered.

THE LIGHT OF ASIA.

Arrival of Forepaugh's White Elephant. "A Thing of Beauty and a Joy For Ever. From the Philadelphia News.]

on the Inman steamship City of Chester. The Light of Asia's name in Siam was Rimanmaukam, the English for which is Tiger-eater. There is nothing about him however, that suggests in any way a comsumption of tigers. The Light of Asia is the first white elephant that has ever come to America. He is not the whiteness of new-fallen snow, but he is so light in color and so strikingly in con-trast to the ordinary elephant that calling him white is no misnomer. The Light of Asia is hardly six years old and the Courier, are getting to be immensi Light of Asia is hardly six years old and stands five feet in height. He is a beauty, both in form and build. The color of his skin is light grey, or what might be described as an ashy tint, except on the ears, at the end of the trunk and under the sholders, where it is of a pink hue. His whole appearance indicated the great care which has been bestowed upon the coming attraction for young and old America. His skin is soft and and old America. His skin is soft and quite smooth. A scanty growth of stiff hair, noticeable only upon close inspec-tion, covers his ash-colored body. The tips of a tiny pair of tusks barely peep from the corners of his capacious mouth. The tail of the palid pachyderm which is minus a tuft of hair even at the end, reaches to the floor when its possessor is in a standing position. This appendage he switches in a vigorous manner when greatly pleased and also when enraged.

This white representative from Siam is quite an epicure in his tastes and has a keen relish for bananas, cocoanuts, and candies. There is no clap trap nor humbug concerning its purchase. There is no manufactured bill of sale from a foreign Prince, and no religious mockery. It is a veritable, rare and wonderful Siamese white elephant. All who have seen this species in their native clime pronounce Mr. Forepaugh's blonde beauty equal to any white elephant ever possessed by the King of Siam. Will exhibit at Ann Arbor May 31.

King of Cambodia's Title, "First Cousin Of the White Elephant." In ancient Burmah the king assumed the title "Lord of the Spotted Elephants." At the present day the King of Cambodia At the present day the King of Cambodia is styled "First Cousin of the White Elephant;" the Prime Minister of Siam, "General of the Elephants;" the foreign Minister of Anam, "Mandarin of Elephants;" while the Kings of Siam both enjoy the still higher appellations, "Lord of the Celestial Elephant" and "Master of Many White Elephants." In Siam, too, everything associated with majesty and rank bears the image of this holy leviathan, to whose proportions, when in viathan, to whose proportions, when in repose and when a pure albino, Mrs. Browning might have appropriately re-ferred in that paradoxical line which speaks of "thunders of white silence." As the lion in the Persian banner of the ilama in the Peruvan, so the white ele-phant floatr proudly in the banner of the Siamese. A badge of distinction is similarly created, and has become a coveted native decoration.

THE GIPSY'S CURSE.

After dinner Roland claimed his game of chess, and more pleased to do so because he knew that Sir Philip would have asked for music. Rose protested against "sticking Ilma down to chess," but Ilma said she had promised, and Roland had not the good grace to release her.

"I won't promise to be very grave over it," she said, as her cousin drew up the chess-table. "I am sure that you will beat

"Not he," remarked Janie frankly; "Roland is a very bad player."
"How do you know that Ilma is a better?" asked Roland, beginning to set the

"For shame, Rol!" said his sister .-"You might have made a pretty speech then. Remember, Ilma is city-bred and used to all that sort of thing."

And she moved away, while Roland bit his lip, wishing he had Sir Philip Darrell's golden tongue. He used to call it "confounded foreign palayering" at one time, but Cupid alters some men's estimate of the graces of life.

Roland and Ilma were left pretty well done, for Sir Philip and the rest were at the other end of the room, and there seemed to be a good deal of fun going forward. Ilma longed to join the group, but she did not like to play recklessly, and Roland was long over his moves. "Oh, Roland," she said at last, "don't take a month over a move, there's a good

"Then I wish you would, or I shall read a book while you are meditating." "Ilma, why are you so cruel?"
His tone and look startled, even frightened her; but she was too young to know how to meet such an advance. She turned pale, but her eyes flashed angrily. "Don't be foolish, Roland, or ""

"I am not foolish, Ilma," he interrupted. "I mean what I say—I do indeed."

Well, then, I am foolish, and don't know what it is that you mean, and I don't want to know. I will sweep up the men if you will not finish the game prop-"Ilma, will you let me explain another

"Yes-no-how can I stop you? Do move your queen, or I shall take her."
Roland turned very red and obeyed in silence, though he bit his lip till the blood almost came. In three more moves he was checkmated; and Ilma declared he de-

Darrell, a man of the world with a woman's subtlety of perception, saw that this child who turned from him and knew not how to answer him had given him more than her lips could have told him, than her own heart, half child's, half woman's, could have told herself; and back on her soul came the surge of the reaction. The daring words he had spoken should never have passed his lips. Had he said too much to draw back in honor? Nay, if she loved him, of what use to draw back? It would be too late to save her. "If?" Il- ford went out with her mind tolerably at ma was still a child in many things. And when he was gone Ilma stood quite still for a moment in the summer night, and pressed her hands over her eyes with a low quick sob that was half itter pain and half the very agony of joy. Did Philip Darrell love her? was the question that Ilma asked herself over and over again that night. Had she been a few years older, there could have been no doubt as to the answer-scarcely any need for the question; but, even when there seemed none other than one solution to what had passed that day and evening, still the torturing thought came that she was foolish and only a child. He might be fond of her in a fashion, but love her! And yet ___ Did he fear to bring sorrow on her? So only could she read what must otherwise seem like trifling with her; for his looks, words, and tones that day, his manner when he parted with her, would not agree with a man's affection for a child; that would be frank and free, quite for his. He would not seek her love; but, alas, had he not won it? She knew now in this solitary self-communing—shrink from it as she would, self-analysis was forced upon her—that he was right about the flowers; that it was because he had given them to her that she would not expect good crops of corn and potatoes if they tended them as because he had given them to her that she valued them; she knew that he was more But, even as he spoke, Darrell crossed the room; and the next moment he was on his house blight his life? FOR THE FARMER. The Poorest Gardens in the Country Are Where the Natural Advantages Are the Best.

Are Small Farms Well Tilled Profltable?--The Condition of the Stable at Milking Time. GARDENS FOR FARMERS.

Persons who have traveled extensively in the United States have not failed to notice that the best gardens are in the localities where the natural advantages are the poorest. In the New England and middle States the occupier of every considerable plat of ground in village or country has a fine vegetable garden. In some of these States the farmer depends quite as much on the products of the garden as of the fields for food for the supply of his family. The table is supplied with fine vegetables, fresh from the garden, from early in the spring till late in the fall. Large quantities of vegetables are stored in the cellar or in pits for use during the winter. There is also a liberal supply for home-made pickles, catsup, and sauces. Besides the common esculent roots, such as beets, carrots, parsnips, and turnips, many delicacies are produced in the garden. Among these are celery, cress, asparagus, egg plants, vegetable oysters, parsley, and frag-rant herbs. Peas and beans are planted As the farewells were being said, Roland | in great variety and at different times, so as to insure a succession during nearly all the growing season. Con-nected with most of these gardens are hot-beds and cold frames for starting vegetables in advance of the season. The soil in the vicinity of these gardens may be, and generally is, very poor. Not infrequently it contains many stones that are in the way of working the soil. Still the ground is rendered very productive by judicious working and the application of fertilizers. Many are at great pains to save the droppings of fowls, the wood ashes produced in stoves, and the bones taken from meat used on the table, and to apply them to this evening the soft moustache hardly the soil where vegetables are to be planted. Many have a compost heap

In the prairie regions of the west, where the farms are large and the soil uncommonly productive, the gardens are generally very small and poor. Only the more common kinds of vegetables are raised. The list is generally confined to beets, carrots, onions, and cabbage. But one variety of each is raised. As a rule, the seed for producing all of them is planted about the same time. The time for "making the gardens" is after the field crops are planted and sown. It is then too late to plant the seed of onions, beets, and other vegetables that require a long period in which to mature, and too early to sow the seeds of plants that mature quickly but need a high temperature in order to hasten their growth. The garden, or what passes for one, is treated with neglect during the entire season. It receives attention only when there is little demand for different. He did not then regard her as "only a child," but sometimes tried to labor in the fields. The weeds ordinarily get the start of the vegetables inmake her think he did- for her sake, ngt tended for use and they keep till the frost comes. The work in the garden is hard because it is done out of the they do their beets and onions. They plant the former at the proper time and keep the soil where they grow free grass and weeds. They plant the latter "when it comes handy" and cultivate them when they have nothing else to do. As a consequence the bulbs of the onions are small, while the stalks are large. The beets and turnips are tough and stringy, and the heads of the carbages are not compact. None of the vegetables are of the class the farmer sees when he goes to town. He is dissatisfied with them and often concludes that gardening does not pay. Did he treat his fields as he does his garden he would find that farming was not a renumerative business.

With proper skill, care and attention a garden may be made to supply a large part of the food required by the farmer's family during more than half of the year. The failure of farmers to have a good supply of vegetables is due to many causes. They are generally quite ignorant of the art of managing a garden, and they are at no pains to acquire the requisite information. A few days spent on the grounds of a successful market gardener would be productive of great benefit to them. They could well afford to give their labor for the instruction they would receive. They could improve the leisure time of winter by studying some treatise on vegetable gardening to great benefit. Peter Henderson's "Gardening for Profit" contains most of the information required for the successful management of a market or family garden. It is a practical guide prepared by a man who has devoted a life to the production of vegetables, and who has been very successful in the business. Most of the catalogues of vegetable seedmen contain much valuable information. To be of much practical use to readers they should be obtained early and studied diligently. By consulting any good work on gardening, farmers will find the requisites for success in the production of fine vegetables. will see the necessity of making the plans for a garden before they commence work. They will find that they can make the frames for hot-beds dur ing the winter. They will see cessity of systematizing the work to be done in the garden during the entire season. They will also see the necessity of collecting manure for the ground to be devoted to gardening at an early period. They will be pared to commence work as soon as the frost leaves the soil. They will make a fair start in the right direction. LITTLE FARMS WELL TILLED.

Newspapers give place from time to time to interesting and instructive items showing how far more pleasing and profitable it is to cultivate a small number of acres than to carry on a large farm. It is an essential part of these articles to show that the man who is content with a few acres, and tills them thoroughly, sets an example which should be followed by his neighbors; that he is almost sure to have better stock, better crops, and better profits generally than will he whose ambition, and whose faith in the future market for real estate, leads him to try to buy all creation. But as every hill has its vale so every story has two sides. In the neighborhood of markets the man with few acres may well be before you were married?" asked Mrs. content to confine his operations to the effort to make those acres produce the greatest possible quantity, but in the broad west it will be long before the majority of the farmers will be satisfied to "trot all day in a peck measure." Their ambition will induce them, as it always has, to invest their lord of many acres. The disposition which keeps him contented with a few acres, makes him satisfied with a small but steady profit. His cares may be as many as those of the owner of the large farm, but they are all brought within little compass, and his losses are so divided as to be small at the worst. He lives snugly, and so do his stock, and his domestic animals show that they are like their owner, contented with their lot in life. That the net income from a small farm is often considerable larger than that from greater farms cannot be denied; but there will probably always be, as there now are, men who could not succeed with small farms, and who certainly would never be satisfied to conthemselves in that way, even if fine they knew that they would make more money by so doing.

PURE AIR IN THE RARN. One of the speakers at the meeting of the Massachusetts Board of Agricult-ure urged the importance of having pure air in the barn at the time of milking, and stated that "cows ought not to be carded just before milking, and the barn swept up," giving as a reason that "it fills the air with particles of impurities and bad odors." This may be correct, and it perhaps often causes an unpleasant taste in the butter that the farmer is at a loss to account for. For, as we have said in a former article, milk absorbs bad odors more readily than most of other sub-

Thus it would seem that the farmer, by the very act of trying to keep his barn sweet and clean, puts it in the very condition required to taint the milk. But the question arises, if the cow cannot be cleaned and the barn swept just before milking, is it good policy to milk the cow just before she is cleaned and the barn swept? This would certainly be very undesirable; in fact, we cannot help thinking that it would be almost impossible to milk an uncleaned cow without injuring the milk by the loose hairs falling into it, and also whatever loose particles of dirt might be on the milk bag. As a and eard his cows early enough in the morning and leave time enough before milking to air the barn, and have all the flying particles of impurities settle. There seems to be but two other ways to avoid this trouble. First, by cardise still is still the end before milking, then return them to the barn to be milked. Second, by cleaning the cows in the barn, then lowed. Baku has grown like one of leading them into a warm, clean room our own Oil Region towns, and being to be milked. The last would seem to be the best method. This is a matter for serious thought gilt-edged butter that they can sell for a pound. Abigail Adams, the president's wife, was undoubtedly the most conspicuous American woman of her day, whether position or by character. When iting to her husband she often signed herself "Portia," in accor ance with a stately, and perhaps high-flown, habit of the period, and she certainly showed qualities which would have done honor heroine of that name. In her letters any reason, from the nature of the for-we see her thoroughly revealed. While pration coolegically, why the country friends advised her to try a certain the battle of Bunker Hill was in progress, she wrote that it "was dreadful but glorious;" and in the depression of the battle of Long Island, she said: "If all America is to be ruined and undone add a cipher to its previous 500,000 means for my own restoration, wish to know it," and added, "Don't American petroleum will no longer you know me better than to think me a coward?" When, first among American women, she represented her nation at the court of St. James, she met with equal pride the contemptuous demeanor of Queen Charlotte, and when her husband was chosen president, she wrote to him, "My feelings are not those of pride or ostentation upon the occasion; they are solemnized by a sense of the obligations, the important truths and numerous duties connected with it." When, finally, after four years, he failed of re-election, she wrote to her son: "The consequence to us is personally that we retire from public life. For myself and family I have few regrets. * * * If I do not rise with dignity, I can at least fall with ease." This was Abigail Adams. In person she was distinguished and noble rather than beautiful; yet it is satisfactory to know that when she was first presented at the British court she wore a white lute-string, trimmed with white crepe, festooned with lilac ribbon and mock-point lace over a hoop of enormous extent, with a narrow train three yards long, looped up by a rib-bon. She wore treble lace ruffles a dress cap with long lace lappets and two white plumes, these last doubtless soaring straight into the air above her head in the extraordinary style familiar to us in Gillray's caricatures of that period. It was in those days no very agree able task to be the wife of the president. Mrs. Adams has left on record a graphic sketch of the White house, where she presided for three months. The change in the seat of government had been decided upon for twelve years, yet the building was still a vast unfinished barrack, with few rooms plastered, no main stairway, not a bell within, not a fence without; it was distressingly cold in winter, while the chief magistrate of the United States could not obtain for love or money a man to cut wood for him in the forest which then surrounded Washington. From Washington to Baltimore extended an almost unbroken growth of timber, varied only by some small and windowless huts. There could as yet be in Washington no such varied companionship as had given attraction to the seat of government at New York and then at Philadelphia; yet at Georgetown there was a society which called itself eminently polite, and Mrs Adams

For years past it has been, not Yankee boasting, but a simple statement of fact, to say that America supplied the world with petroleum. The output from our "Oil Region" has been so enormous and so vastly greater than that of all other countries combined, that we have been able to rule the market completely. While petroleum is known to exist very widely, there are but two prominent localities on the Eastern nent. One of these is on the Irawaddy, and from that well up through Assam; the other on the western shore of the Caspian, around Baku. Both of these have been long known, and the indications have been that their production might be rendered very great; but they remained comparatively undeveloped, the eastern region sending to market only about 50,000 barrels annually, while Baku turned out 500,000. A great and most remarkable change, however, has taken place within the while to look at it and study as well as we may briefly the probable and possible results. Baku has since the close of last summer suddenly sprung into a degree of vitality and a measure of prosperity and importance of which no one had previously any reason to dream, and all because -its subterranean wealth is pouring forth its treasures in a most unwonted fashion. We in this country have been familiar with "spouting wells" of petroleum, but there such a thing had never been known. Something over five months ago several "rich strikes," as our people term last few months, and it is worth our them, began to attract attention, and new wells were bored in numbers, and yielded astonishingly. At length one of the augers entered a cavity which was really worthy of Oil Creek in its best estate. It was a "spouter," enough, and threw its oily jet high into the air with great violence. This was followed by another and another, some throwing their torrent of petroleum to the height of fifty feet or more. Of course, this fierce outpouring, as in all rule, the farmer cannot clean his barn such cases, diminished within a few days, as the extreme tension from beneath was relieved, but the wells continued to yield at a rate new for the entire region. Additional wells were bored in great numbers, and the work is still going on and increasing, and the end is not yet by any manner of

Means of transportation are provided rapidly to every part of the Caspian and its affluents, notably the Volga. A pipe line is already planned to run the petroleum across to the Black Sea, a stretch of about five hundred miles. Once there, of course it has access to all of eastern Europe, and in fact to the markets of

They both certainly belong to the same series of hydrocarbons, yielding the same class of products by fractional distillation; but they yield them in very different proportions. The value of our Pennsylvania petroleum is greatly enhanced from the fact that so large a proportion of kerosene can be obtained from it, the kerosene being that part of the product of distillation which comes from the retort after the gravity has reached 65 degrees B., and from that until about 38 degrees; and this in our oil is very near double, and sometimes fully so, that which can be obtained from Baku petroleum. Here we have a great advantage, and it must always remain; and inasmuch as such a great amount of petroleum is demanded solely for the purposes of illumination, this point is of prime importance. It is worth mentioning that we have a striking dissimilarity in our petroleums, that of California differing more in its proportions from Pennsylvania oil than does that of > Baku but it is in a totally different line—it is the part which this outburst at Baku may possibly have on the political history of Europe. The English papers are already indicating alarm. That crowd of oil vessels on the Caspian could very easily and without warning transport Russian forces to the southeast waters of the Caspian, their progress toward the frontier of Afghanistan need not be known, and they might be within a few days' march of Herat before a suspicion of danger arose. All this may be of no moment, but it is certainly practicable; and who thing to be watched.

Postal Rules.

The question whether or not postage is required to be pre-paid on first-class matter forwarded, on which the full amount of postage has not been pre-paid, is settled by the following from the last issue of the Postal Guide

Section 32, page 432—To insure a letter being forwarded on the mails, it must have not less than two cents in can tell when such a contingency may be turned to a certainty? At all events, it has been mentioned as a matter can be forwarded in the mails after it reaches its original address, without a new pre-payment of postage, except letters which have one full rate paid thereon, namely two cents. Sec. 749, page 524-If the person addressed requests a letter to be for-warded upon which there is postage due, it will be forwarded just as it was received, without affixing a postage due stamp. From these rulings it would appear that letters having one full-rate postage, namely two cents in postage stamps, affixed, can be forwarded by request and postage due stamps affixed at office where letter reaches party in-

"Yes." said Deacon Gilpin, "the pesky rats annoy me about to death. I wish I could invent some way to keep 'em out of my cracker barrels.'' 'I'll tell yer how,'' spoke up Aminadah. "How?" "Keep your crackers in box-es." "That wont't keep the rats away from 'em.' Oh, no; but it would keep fem out of the barrels." Then the watch and the bill changed When tempted to doubt think o these

Mrs. Flirtabout has learned to take things philosphically. When she was told of a letter, full of love, that her recreaut spouse had written to a strange fair one, she said, "La! he used write just such letters to me before we were married. He doesn't care anything about her," -Boston Transcript.

A Missouri lady eighty years old re-cently cut two teeth. This don't speak very highly for Missouri. If it takes eighty years for a person to cut two teeth, how long will it take for them to cut a whole set? Too slow altogether. -Peck's Sun.

John B. Gough has been lecturing for 40 years. He still has all the fire and elequence of his early manhood. Sufferers from nervousness, early decay, tc., if you value life, avoid advertising doctors and medicines that act on kidney and liver. Be not deceived by the many ogus certificates of cures from paid o imaginary persons. If a weakness of the sexual system is the cause of your distress, Doctor Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla will strengthen the parts af ected, stop the drain, quiet the nerves roduce dreamless slumber and allow you to regain perfect health. It has cured housands, and will cure you, for, by puri ying the blood and strengthening every weak portlon of the body, it removes ev ery symptom of distress.

A mule story is told by Dr William A Hammond in the Youth's Companion While stationed at Fort Webster, in what is now Arizona, he started down the cannon on a very fiine and large mule. The beast stopped abruptly, and signified that he would not budge a step. Spurs were dug into his flanks to no purpose. There he stood as firm as a rock. Hammond pulled him round, and galloped back to the fort. The next morning it was ascertained that at a point searcely a hundred yards in advance where the mule had gained his victory some Apache Indians had ambushed the road, and but for the brute's keen nose and ears, and firmness in resisting an obstinate man, short work would have been made of both.

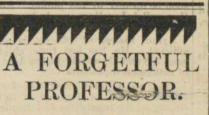

It is not understood why druggists keep in colds and consumption, when it is only necessary to keep Allen's Lung Balsam, that old, rellable remedy, which is a pare vegetable preparation, and perfectly harmless, as it contains no opium in any form. Sold everywhere.
