GOOD SAYINGS .- It was Julia Ward Howe who penned those noble sentences: "If we have never bowed to crowned vice or neglected despised virture, if we have stretched out to the fallen the hand of help instead of pointug at them the finger of scorn, if we hard to go, but easy to return, whether we are remembered or forgotten, we shall depart from tlais world leaving some part of it the better and happier bear the bloody la arels of a wicked victory, but we shall have fought the good fight and our names will receive a place in the record of the veterans, who, like Napoleon's old guard, die when they must, but never surrender."

THE Smithsonian institution at Washington has recently received a comnunication from F. Minkewitch of Russia, who offers to sell to the United States government the manuscript, in Russian, of an original, ancient, eulogistic, acrostic poem on George Washington, The poem was accidently discovered in a lot of waste paper bought at a sale in that country. He asks for the original manuscript $8,000, but will take $3,500 for a copy. It has been suggested that it might be purchased, if sufficiently meritorious, and placed in an appropriate niche at the top of the Washington monument.

Almost every inventor has tormented his brain with efforts to originate a car coupler that will do business automatically and reduce the rate of mortality among railroad men. The chief obstacle in the way of a successful automatic coupler is the various height in cars. A Rockland, Me., man is said to overcome this and to have devised have a shackle which will work on all kinds of cars. It will be given a trial on one of the roads going out of Boston and if it is all that is claimed for it, the Rockland man will make his fortune. But these things are so far, sometimes, when they seem so near. An old soldier of Baltimore claims to have in his possession a letter which clearly proves that John Wilkes Booth did not assassinate President Lincoln from any political motives but to satisfy a personal revenge. It seems that Booth had a friend who was condemned to be shot as a confederate spy, and he visited Mr. Lin- lican. coln in his friend's behalf. Mr. Lincoln was cold, but after Booth bad court for assault with intent to kill and congone down on his knees and bathed Lincoln's hand in tears he relented and promised that the spy should be saved. The next day Booth learned that the man had been shot, and he became wild with rage and concocted a scheme of assassination which he afterwards fulfilled.

Beverly Snow gave testimony regarding the alleged forged insurance certificate; he said dolcomb obtained a policy on the life of Jacob Crouch, signing the latter's name, but added that he got Grouch's consent.

Snow was a disappointment to the prosecution who intimated that he had been trifled with by the defense. The prosecution intended to prove by Snow that Holcomb had secretly obtained said policy and forged Crouch's name.

Frank Mason of Warren, Macomb county was called to the stand. Mason testified to having met Holcomb on the train between Bay City and Ogemaw at the date between October 25 and Nov. 1, 1883. The witness said that Holeomb talked of various matters, and among others the cattle business in Texas, say-he had at one time been interested in that business in that state. Witness remarked that from what he had heard he would be afraid to go to Texas with much money in his possession, whereupon Holcomb produced a 38 calibre Smith & Wesson revolver saying "that guards a man," and volunteered the information that he had bought it in New Orleans that fall for $10.

1The crowd at the Holcomb murder trial was treated its first real sensation Nov. 29, the sensationalist being Mr. Frank Mason, of Warren, Macomb county. It will be remembered that there is very positive evidence that the victims of the tragedy at the Crouch homestead were killed by bullets from a 33-caliber Smith & Wesson pistol. It was also claimed that defendant Holcomb had such a pistol. This claim was combatted by the defense, and the sensational event of the 28th was that Mason swore to statements that strongly reinforce the prosecution's theory of Dan's having such a pistol. The witness's story in detail was, that about October 22 last year he had been to Bay City and other points along the road to sell cheered for Cleveland

The defense is greatly excited over what Mason had sworn to and will make efforts to assall his standing; but the prosecution say it will be impossible to hurt the young man's reputation, as they have letters vouching for him out of the company.

The lawyers spent all the forenoon wrangling over the admission of the testimony of Richard Crouch, a cousin of the late Jacob D. Crouch, and who resides on a farm which adjoins Dan Holcomb's. The witness, in company with another person, found some shells of 3S calibre in Dan Holcomb's woods the discovery being made in person, found some shells of 38 calibre in Dan Holcomb's woods, the discovery being made in pursuance of a search to discover the cause of pistol firing heard by witness, prior to the murders. All the counsel took a hand in the arguments, the prosecution making the most determined effort they have yet made to nave this class of testimony admitted, and the detense as strongly objected. Both Gov. Blair and Prosecutor Gibson made powerful speeches, and the court took till sfternoon to consider. The attorneys for the people said they could offer no further testimony to-day if this was ruled out.

If this was ruled out.

Judge Gridley finally admitted the disputed testimony, which greatly pleases the prosecution as they claim the testimony will help

Thomas Courtney, the constable who resched the scene of the murder about eight o'clock and saw Judd Croucb with shells in his hand, was not sworn. Witness saw the two open bureau drawers; saw blood on the floor after he had been there about an hour. It looked like a pool and had been stepped upon. Witness heard Holcomb testify at the Jacob D. Crouch inquest that he never owned or bought a 38-caliber revolver in his life.

Witness saw two tracks near a window, another leading away from the house; the tracks were made by a rubber boot. The heel was defined in the earth. The heel was 22% by 2% inches.

Witness saw something in the nature of letters in the impression of the heel, and thought it might have been the manufacturer's stamp, but was not positive what it was. He afterwards saw Holcomb and told him that Winney wanted to see him at the Hibbard house; at the interview Holcomb was asked if he had been up north and admitted that he had in June and October. Had been up in all four times. The first was to see his brother, the next to buy horses, the last to induce his brother to move down here.

After some hesitation Holcomb admitted that he had a 38 Smith & Weson revolver; a six shooter; said he bought it at Lansing, but couldn't say where in Lansing. He lost the pistol while hunting, but did not know whether in the lake or woods.

Some discussion arose as to the admission of this testimony, and the defense asked that Harris's original report sent to the Chicago office be produced, and court adjourned.

GENERAL NEWS.

A minister of Southwest Virginia writes from Lynchburg, Va., under date of Nov. 25, as follows: "The latest advices concerning the epidemic in Wise, Lee, Dickinson and Buchanan counties are heartrending. On Guest's River, Wise county, within a radius of four miles there are thirty cases of disease. In one instance a father, mother and six children died. Many persons died for want attention. Business is suspended, all being concerned with the sick and dying. Six itersons were buried in one grave in one day. The disease is assuming a milder form to localities. Not less than 175 of the biscitizens of Wise county have died. During the last few days the disease has made its appearance in Lee county, and several deaths have occurred. More worthy people never called more loudly for relief than these. They need nurses, medicine and a committee of intelligent physicians to diagnose the disease and stop its terrible march. A CRY OF DISTRESS.

The service of Springfield, Ohio, after sending its wife to town to shop a few days ago, administered to his four children, aged from 4 to 13, a combination of aconite and chloroform, then placed cloths saturated with chloroform over their faces, and placed them dead, and the others unconscious. Assistance was summoned and every effort made to revive them. During the night two more of the children died. Maxwell revived somewhat, and was placed in jail. He refused to talk. He left letters saying he was tired of lite, and wanted the children to go with him to avoid suffering. He had recently been indicted for fibel by another physician, and this, together, with business embarrassments, is supposed to have incited him to this fearful act.

G. R. Newbold, the coacaman bigamist, whose latest matrimonial alliauce was with a daughter of C. J. Whitney of Detroit, and who has been awaiting trial in the Toledo jail for some months past, was convicted of the charge of bigamy N.v. 29, and remanded to jail for sentence. During the progress four of the gay Lothario's wives were present as witnesses. He bore the ordeal of the trial with remarkable coolness and effronter, and waited his sentence almost indifferently. He bade good-bye to his Detroit wife and children, promising at the expiration of his sentence to return and care for his children, but r fusing to recognize any of his various wives as entitled to such honor save children, but r. fusing to recognize any of his various wives as entitled to such honor save Miss Whitney. This immediately following the verdict of the jury. About 10:30 o'cleek, Sunday morning, November 30, the bigamist made a desperate effort to take his life and end the fearful suspense. He took Foxglove and them tried to beat his brains out against the sides of his cell. The jail physician pronounces his case a very critical one, the outcome of which is uncertain. He injured himself seriously in his attempts to dash his brains out, and sufters executating agony. It is believed the failure of Miss Whitney, his last wife, to call upon him at the close of the trial, led to this attempt on his life, as in his

Since the close of your last session the American people in the exercise of the highest right of suffrage have chosen their chief magistrate for the four years ensuing. When it is remembered that at no period in the country's history has the long political contest which customarily precedes the day of the national election been waged with greater fervor and intensity, it is a subject of congratulation that after the controversy at the polis was over, and while the slight preponderance by which the issue had been determined was as yet unascertained, the public peace suffered no disturbance, but the people everywhere patiently and quitely awaited the result. Our foreign trade receives lengthy consideration. The problem is complex and can be solved by no single measure of innovation or reform. The countries of the American continent and the adjacent islands are for the United States the natural market of supply and demand. "Alumnus," in the Living Church, speakes of the Episcopal church of this city as follows: Having been a student at Ann Arbor for six years, I am naturally interested in the plan of the diocese of Michigan to aid the local parish in securing a prominent preacher for its pulpit. It is my belief though, that but few more students will be attracted to St. Andrew's than before, as the last rector commanded as much of the esteem of the ollege boys as any clergyman could de-ire. The reason who so very, very few f the fifteen hundred students are attracted to the church there, is because they are not made to feel at home after they get there. The pews are rented, the only distinctive ones for students being two or three near the outer door, labeled "For Medical Students," "For Law Stu-lents," "For Literary Students," etc. As hough the young men liked to be bunched together in this way! Of course, ounched together in this way! Of course, if a student happens to be well acquainted with some pew holder he is made otherwise welcome, but all such students can be counted on one's fingers. The reason why the students do not rent pews, individually, is that there are none to be reuted to speak of; and secondly the boys cannot afford the expense, as a rule. Wost of the students are unfamily.

Most of the students are unfa ar with the church services, and are a racted to the Unitarian mission—su orted by Boston—or the capacio lethodist meeting house. Each of the laces can count a standing attendan of three hundred students; the church my last year there, had twelve. What is wanted is an inviting mission chapel, ex result for students, located on the va-cant lot right opposite university hall, managed by several unmarried priests who can give their whole time to looking up students and visiting them in their rooms; a chapel where services could be held daily just when lectures in the calrooms; a chapel where services could be held daily, just when lectures in the colleges were over, and on Sunday with plenty of grand music in the service, furnished by the students themselves. Such a mission, rightly managed, would soon become, I am sure, a most important church enterprise, and largely self supporting. It is the best field for church work west of the Alleghanies. I hope something of the kind will be ventured chasoon, for I fear nothing else will do.

If your horse gets frightened at any unusual sight or noise, do not whip him, for if you do he will connect the whipping with the object that alarmed him, and be afraid of it ever after. If he merely shies at an object, give him time to examine it, which, with some encouraging word from the driver, will persuade him to pass it. You get frightened, too, sometimes, and would not like to be whipped for it.

Julian was afraid, and refused Finally a man volunteered, and, with a lantern in his hand was lowered with a rope to the bottom. At one side of the shaft he found an old door of oak, worm-eaten and scarred with time. With the exertion of all his strength the door slowly swung in, its rusty hinges creaking as if in remonstrance to the sacrilege. It was the entrance of a ghastly mausoleum. In the center of a large room, whose walls were damp and mossy, was a long table with the skeleton of an old man stretched upon it, and an open book in ancient Spanish lying close by. The discoverer fled from the room, and Mr. Torre lost no time in having the hole closed again with the paving stone .-Mexican Paper.

The Blunders of Statesmen. Contemporary Review.

Century after century statesmen

dreamed of evils of many kinds, such as preventing the reproductive use of spare capital, and "burdening the small proprietors with a multitude of perpetual services." So, too, the endeavors which in England continued through 500 years to stop forestalling, and which in France, as Arthur Young witnessed, prevented anyone from buying "more than two bushels of wheat at market," went on generation after generation increasing the miseries and mortality due to dearth; for, as everybody now knows, the wholesale dealer who was in the statute "De Pistoribus" vituperated as "an open oppressor of poor people," is simply one whose function is to equalize the supply of a commodity by checking unduly rapid consumtion. Of kindred nature was the measure which, in 1315, to diminish the pressure of famine, prescribed the prices of food, but which was hastily re-pealed after it had caused entire disappearance of various foods from the markets; and also such measures, more continuously operating, as those which settled by magisterial order "the reasonable gains" of victualers. Of like spirit and followed by allied mischiefs have been the many endeavors to fix wages, which began with the statute of laborers under Edward III., and ceased only sixty years ago; when having long galvanized in Spitalfields a decaying industry, and fostered there a miserable population, Lords and Commons finally gave up fixing silk-weavers' earnings by magisterial order. Here I imagine an impatient interruption. "We know all that; the story is stale. The mischiefs of interfering with trade have been dinned in our ears till we are weary, and no one needs to be taught the lesson afresh." My first reply is that by the great majority the who did learn it have forgotten it For just the same pleas which of old were put in for these dictations, are again put in. In the statute 36 Edward III., which aimed to keep down the price of herrings, (but was soon repealed because it raised the price,) it was complained that people "coming to the fair, " " do bargain for herring, and every one of them by malice and envy increase upon other, and, if one proffer 40s., another will proffer 10s, more, and the third 60t, and so every one surmounteth other in the bargain," and now the "higgling of the market," here condemned and ascrib-
