ry in the Case of Dan Holcomb Say "Not Guilty."

The Closing Day.

The time of the court for the last few days in the Holcomb case has been taken up with the arguments of the counsel for the defense and prosecution, and in settling legal questions bearing upon the case.

The arguments made on both sides are said to have been very able, and well pre-ared, making a deep impression upon the jury, that made by Gov. Blair being particu-arly powerful, and pronounced by many to be the strongest ever heard in any court in Michigan.
It was about 2 o'clock on the 10th inst. that the court began his charge to the Jary. He began by referring to the charge of conspiracy, and said that it made no difference that Holcomo's brother Henry was declared as one of the conspirators. Cir. cumstant al evidence must bind the defend-ant to the case in a way that leaves no de ubt. If the jury were satisfied that Pan Hol-comb wore the rubb-r boots which made the tracks under the window it does not matter whether they were Goodyear or Boston boots. Was Holcomb's conduct natural when incorned of the murder and his coming to this only and not hurrying back? Was it the conduct of innocence? You must consider this question. The jury must consider the acts as to whether there was bloody clothing there beyond reasonable doubt. The junge concluded his charge to the

At 6 Judge Gridlev said the court would adjourn until 9, leaving orders that he was sent to be sent for if the jury sgreed before that hour. The Holcomb party went to supper at their hotel. Dan seemed quiet and reserved. Judd laughed and joked with the ladies and had less concern than any person in the room.

At 7 10 Deputy Evans poked his head into the room and said the jury had agreed, and went after the judge. Holcomb's friends and relatives with the attorneys came in. Byron sat close to Dan's side as he took his regular Clocks and Watches.

Boston Herald. The first real clock was set up in the year 1874, during the reign of Charles V. of France. The maker was one Henri de Vic, an Arab, who had been converted unto christianity. This clock was a monster machine, weighing five hundred weight. It was put up in the round tower of the royal palace (now the Palais de Justice), and attracted crowds for several months after it was erected. The maker received a pension of 100 crowns of gold for life and was ennobled. He is the first artificer upon whom this distinction was ever conferred in France. From this time the making of large locks for public edifices was extensive y carried on throughout Europe. But it was not until the beginning of the 16th century that small clocks were made for apartments. The first came from Florence in 1518 as a present from Julio de Medici to Francis I. of France The invention of watches had preced ed by a few years that of small clocks. Popular tradition ascribes the invention of watches to Peter Hele of Nuremburg, n the year 1490. But King Robert of Scotland, possessed one as far back as 1810. German watches were not intro duced into the English court until 1597 They cost fabulous sums of money, and were made in fancy forms, such as acorns, clives, walnuts and crosses, and were also worn as pendants to ladies' bracelets. Claude, wife of Francis I. of France, had one so small that it was set ed the pendulum clock, the simplest and most admirable machine. The inven-

ing watch was made at Amsterdam. Since 1656, no new developements have been made in the mechanical science of horology. But in latter days Heleses and Hugenses have discovered methods of making clocks go by electricity, without giving us the trouble of

The touch of the child's mouth thrilled the nerves of the woman with a sensation inexpressibly delightful Miss Roxbury had imagined her life to be a happy one. She now discovered that she had mistaken selfish isolation for happiness. She was beginning to be happy for the first time in fifty years Dot was too tired to be very talkative, but she leaned against Miss Roxbury with a look of quiet wonder and content in her eyes. " If I going to stay here?" she asked as the reckaway stopped at the Roxbury gate, and she surveyed the old stone house with the woodbine clambering over its gray walls. - "Yes, child."

Dot's face grew luminous. A bath, bountiful supper of bread and milk and a walk in the garden kept her joyful until twilight, but with bedtime came the

The next day Dot ran nearly wild with delight. She revelled among the daisies in the deep, soft grass, and i was pitiful to see how small an object could charm her hungry mind. God's commonest gifts were unknown to her in their bounty and purity. Sunshine, sweet air, flowers and bird songs were enough to make her happy, and when she found the brook that danced across the me low her delight was unbounded.

I made a lot of magic-lantern pictures when I had my camera, and some of them were real good. The lecturer came to our house to spend the night, and the afternoon before the lecture he went out to walk, and left the door of his room open. Tom was at my house that afternoon, and as we were going up stairs we saw a tremendous lot of magic-lantern pictures lying piled up on the lecturer's table. Most of the pictures were houses and mountains, but some of them were people, and then there were a lot of rea funny ones, such as a man falling over a pig and a big goat knocking a boy over. Tom and I had a very nice time looking at them, and we were very careful to put them back on the piles just in the same way that the lecturer had put them. Unly once in a while Tom would forget just where a picture belonged, and we had to put it in the wrong place. This was what made all the trouble, and if any one was to blame for it, Tom was the one. We didn't tell the lecturer that we had looked at his pictures, for that might have troubled him, and we ought never to give trouble to people that are older than we are. Tom and I went to the lecture, and so did almost everybody else in town, and when the lectur er began to speak you would have said that he was one of the nicest men you eves saw, he looked so pleased.

The trouble began when, after having showed us a lot of pictures, he said: 'The next picture ladies and gentlemen, is a portrait of her gracious Majesty Queen Victoria." Now it happened that the next picture was a large cat with a dozen kittens, and her back again for one hour to kneel somebody said, "Haw! haw! is that the down by her side and have her put her | queen?" The Fiddie in Church.

The Ann Arbor Courier indulges in a reminiscence concerning the first intro-duction of the ungodly fiddle into the choir of the Methodist Church at Ann Arbor in 1839 by Rev. Henry Colclazer, the first Librarian of the University of Michigan, whose death recently occurred. It says:

He was first appointed to this station in 1831, while yet but 19 years of age. In the fall of 1832 he was stationed at Detroit, and the next year sent back to Apn Arbor, where he remained until 1835, when he was made Presiding Elder of the district. As such he continued until the fall of 1838, when he was stationed at Detroit again. Rev. Pitcher, in his "History of Protestantism in Michigan," gives the scene above referred to as being in the first church erected in this city, at the dedicatory services in 1839, and as follows: The venerable Bishop Soule was invited to attend the dedicatory services. As he was on his way to the church Rev. Henry Colclazer, Presiding Elder of the district, said to him; "Bishop! Perhaps I ought to say to you that the choir have taken great pains to prepare music for the occasion, and will have one or two instruments to assist them.' As quick as the Bishop heard that he whirled on his heel, saying: "Go on. brethren, and dedicate your church. I will have nothing to do with it." This that handsome paper, postage free, is the same Biscop Soule who, a few until January 1st, 1886. The Rural is years after, could affiliate with the South on the subject of slavery, and give his influence to a division of the the cheapest farm journal in the World.

"Rev. Colclazer was a polished gentleman," says Elder Davis, who remembers him well, "a beautiful speaker, and as a fine a preacher as was ever stationed here." For his first wife he married Miss Asenath True, of this city who lived but a few years, and now lies ouried in the old cemetery. At his death he owned thirty-seven acres of valuable land coming out on Miller avenue, a portion of what was known in early days as the Gorham farm.
