

This death of Grant has probably forever buried that hideous emblem under which republicans have been fighting—the bloody shirt.

A VERY nice little slice of government pap in the shape of perquisites has been chopped off from the offices of collector of customs at Port Huron and Detroit, and positions which were worth from $10,000 to $20,000 a year now give a return of but from $2,500 to $4,000 for a like period.

THE New York World says, while it is very desirable that the democracy of New York should have a single mind of democratic organization in the city instead of splitting into factions which only invite improper bargains, corruption and defeat in elections, it is satisfactory to find the factional organization, while they do exist, seeking to strengthen and improve themselves.

THERE is no city in the union whose industries are more highly protected by the tariff than those of Cleveland. And yet it is in that city that we find the greatest extremes of wealth and poverty—the marble palaces of the rich on Euclid avenue and the miserable hovels of the imported Poles in the 14th ward.

COL. QUAY, the republican candidate for state treasurer in Pennsylvania, gives a lucid explanation of John Roach's failure. Roach, he says, is an ardent republican and gave $100,000 to aid in securing Garfield's election. It was "well understood" that if Garfield won Roach was to prosper and if Garfield was defeated Roach was to be a victim.

There are two things which the wise man never tries to do. The first is to shave himself with the razor which his wife uses upon her corals, and the second is to convince her that a razor is not improved by being sharpened on a butcher's steel.

ers and will open up the world's trade to them, make the United States the world's factory, the ocean once more a highway of the United States, and the stars and stripes swept by the breeze of the seas of the world.

We copy the following from that able and influential Greenback paper, the Grand Rapids Leader: Intelligent, shrewd, vigorous political leaders we have in, and we would concede it support as loyally as we would the commander of an army.

On the Niagara Falls Route. Five times a day one may see a throng of travelers gathered within the walls of the Michigan Central passenger station, at the foot of Lake street in Chicago, as the hour approaches for one of the finely appointed express trains of this favorite line to pull out on its rapid journey to the rising sun.

The Surviving Generals.

The only two great commanders now living who faced each other in making the thrilling and crimsoned annals of the late civil war are Gen. William T. Sherman and Gen. Joseph E. Johnston.

Sherman and Johnston alone remain of the great commanders who looked horns with each other in the flame of battle. Their campaign from Chattanooga to Atlanta, and from Atlanta to the sea, was the most brilliant of the war, and they are the only two great commanders who are left to sit down and talk their battles over, as they often do in the heartiest good fellowship.

A Sensible Idea.

"Will you see that my grave's kept green, darling?" "No, my dear, I will plant violets upon it."

Wilkins' Star Proverbs.

"There is much pleasure in payin'." "Feel pleasure produce real rewards." "To make sorrow grow, sprinkle it continually with idle tears."

A Lady's Perfect Companion.

Painless Childbirth, a new book by Dr. John H. Dwyer, one of New York's most skillful physicians, shows that it is not necessary in childbirth but results from causes easily understood and overcome.

The next meeting of the pioneer society will be held at the residence of H. D. Platt in Pittsfield, Wednesday Sept. 2. An address will be delivered by Hon. Thos. D. Moore of Adrian, and others.

Work on the water works trenches has stopped and will not be resumed until a sufficient quantity of piping arrives to keep the men busy until the job is completed. The receiving basin is finished and a large number of workmen are engaged in constructing the reservoir.

The time having expired in which a number of sidewalks were ordered laid, Ald. Martin of the sidewalk committee will have them put down at the expense of the owners of the premises, and the amount of the cost will be inserted in tax roll.

Following is the committee on public reception to be given by the citizens to members of the Scientific association: W. D. Harriman, chairman, Prof. Petree, Secretary, Murray Kapp, J. F. Lawrence, Geo. H. Pond, A. F. Martin, Mrs. Geo. Ashley, Mrs. Gen. Hunt, and Miss Louise Richards.

It is a matter that we don't care much about, but, inasmuch as THE DEMOCRAT is the only Ann Arbor paper that has spoken a good word about the races, we would like to have credit for it. Hereafter the Ypsilanti should be a little more careful and not credit articles to the Argus that are published in this paper.

Citizens in the third ward complain that some street lamps that are lighted at 5 o'clock do not burn later than 8 in the evening. We hardly believe that the contractors know of it, for when their attention has been called to the negligence of lamp-lighters in other portions of the city, they have given it their personal attention.

The Maccaebes in this state are having a remarkable growth. The great record keepers report, which was submitted to the great camp on Tuesday, shows that the net income in membership during the year, in the first class, was nearly 900, and nearly 500 in the second class. The month of June showed an increase of 241. July will show over 300, and August, so far, bids fair to be still greater.

Capt. C. H. Manly of this city, president of the 1st regiment of Michigan volunteers, makes the following announcement: "There will be a re-union of the old 1st regiment of volunteer infantry at Devil's Lake, Lenawee county, August 27, at 10 o'clock a. m., to which we hope all the ex-members will be present, that they may once more see old familiar faces, that each may take by the hand his old comrades once again before the bugle shall sound for us to pass before the great Captain in the final review to whom our beloved chieftain has so lately been called to report."

"It was a finished representation of the role as rendered by Francis Labadie" is the way the Chicago Music and Drama speaks of "Nobody's Child." Tickets for sale at Boughton's post-office news depot.

Hiram Storma, while repairing a brace to the bridge near his mill, in fifth ward, lost his balance and fell into the race. The water was some eight feet deep, and but for the timely arrival of Dan Miller, who jumped into a scow near the bank, and hauled him out, Storma would have found a watery grave.

IN MEMORIAM. The Memorial Exercises Held in this City in Honor of the Nation's Dead Hero. Saturday, August 8, 1885, was a day that will long be remembered by the citizens of Ann Arbor, for a more general display of sympathy was never manifested on the part of our people.

Places of business, with scarcely an exception, were closed between the hours of 1 and 4 o'clock p. m., and many of them tastefully draped. At 2 o'clock the bells commencing their solemn tolling, and shortly thereafter G. A. R. the S. G. George society, and the fire department, formed on Huron street, and, preceded by the city band playing appropriate music, marched to the M. E. church, which was beautifully and appropriately decorated for the occasion.

The edifice was soon filled to overflowing, and, after the rendering of a hymn by the choir a portion of the scriptures were read by R. H. Steele, and a prayer offered by Rev. S. H. Adams (in the absence of Rev. R. B. Pope). Then an anthem was given by the choir, after which Hon. Thos. M. Cooley, as the presiding officer, delivered the introductory remarks.

Rev. Wm. H. Ryder, who had been a soldier in the army, and rose to the rank of captain, addressed the meeting, in a speech which we would very much like to publish, and which the lack of space alone prevents us from doing. His remarks were timely and well chosen, and were listened to attentively by the vast audience.

Col. Dean was next announced, and the fact that he is commander of Welch Post, and had served under Gen. Grant during the war, made his words doubly interesting. The Colonel was visibly affected during his speech and his closing sentences were delivered in a voice husky with emotion. Following in his address is full: Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen—Comrades—

I am painfully conscious of my inability to say anything worthy of this occasion. There are now living not less than 200,000 men who were with me in the U. S. Army, who saw him in sunshine and storm—on the march, in battle, and after victories had been won.

In the hearts of these are enduring and precious memories of their commander and friend. Who shall attempt to recount the record of a life which forms so large a chapter of the nation's history? and who shall say in world-wide? I know, my comrades, that many of you here present see him in memory at this moment, as we often saw him in life. He was strong, like a tower of solid rock, his face lighted by an eye which was as cold as steel to his enemies, but bright and sparkling to his friends. Unassuming in manner, yet every lineament of his features assured you of inflexible firmness and strength. If thus you see his form and features even more vividly, do you remember the qualities of his mind?

The fame of Gen. Grant as a soldier is linked forever with the history of our nation. Aye! it will stand recorded in the world's history as long as it has one. U. S. Grant entered the U. S. A. as a Lieutenant in 1845; was a Captain in 1853; a Colonel in 1861; a Brigadier-General in 1862; a Major-General in 1863; a Lieutenant-General in 1864, and a General in 1865. What he achieved I cannot illustrate better than by repeating the names: Belmont, Fort Henry, Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Vicksburg, Chattanooga, Wilderness, Spotsylvania, Cold Harbor, Petersburg, Hatcher's Run, Five Forks, Richmond and Appomattox.

His military career began in 1811, and 1865 as commander-in-chief of all the armies of the United States he numbered out the Southern Confederacy. His modesty as his own words are: "I am a soldier, and I have no other ambition. He could understand the shock and crash of battle; but he shrank from the applause of an audience. His character was as grand and as simple as a lofty chiseled granite column. Every step of his career as a soldier was marked by loyal and unhesitating obedience to law. The obedience he rendered to the rights required of those under his command.

His influence over his troops grew steadily. He won his ascendancy over them, always in his own way, not by special act of daring, but by gradually adding to them with his own indomitable spirit, until their confidence in him knew no bounds. The language applied to Wellington almost might be mistaken for a description of Gen. Grant. "He held his army in hand, keeping it with unmitigated loyalty, always in his own hands, to march or fight. Sometimes he was indebted to fortune, sometimes to his native genius, always to his untiring industry; for he was employed as a packman's man."

Lord Brougham's address to the iron Duke is applicable to him: "Mighty captain who never advanced except to cover his arms with glory. Mightier captain who never retreated except to eclipse the glory of his advance." One characteristic of General Grant stamped him a great man: He never returned injury for injury. Notwithstanding the number of opportunities which he had to meet out punishment to those who had wantedly injured him, he never did so. His generosity to enemies was as great as his ability and courage to fight them. To-day, those whom he conquered mourn with us at his grave. By generosity to vanquished foes in his final hour of defeat he well-nigh changed them from enemies to friends.

But death has taken from us a great citizen, one of the greatest soldiers, the most illustrious comrade, and given us a hero, who in history shall stand beside those who were not born to die. In the life of Gen. Grant was the target for the most illustrious comrade, and given us a hero, who in history shall stand beside those who were not born to die. In the life of Gen. Grant was the target for the most illustrious comrade, and given us a hero, who in history shall stand beside those who were not born to die.

He was a man who will compare favorably with the great men of any age or nation. It will be our pride to be his when we remember how entirely he was one of us. He was of American lineage and belonged to the plain common people. He was the greatest of our own beloved country and its institutions, unaided by any foreign civilization or training. The mighty deeds he wrought in life were not done to our pride, but he loved and served, to well might have peace.

In death his power hath not departed. Around his grave shall form those who met in mortal strife mingle their fears, and the white-winged angel of peace hover o'er them. He has gone to his rest, but his noble deeds and great achievements are a nation's rich heritage. They will be cherished in the hearts of a great people, who to-day bow in sorrow over his bier, and paying loving tribute to his honored dead. "He sleeps his life is sleep. He has fought his last battle. He is not dead, he is only sleeping. He will be resurrected, and will be with us again."
