AROUND A GREAT STATE. Meeting of the State Agricultural Society.

The thirty-seventh annual meeting of the Michigan state agricultural society was held in Detroit recently. A full representation was present and a good deal of work accomplished. After the opening routine, Mr. Humphreys the retiring president, delivered his address. He said:

the retiring president, delivered his address. He sald:

GENTLEMEN OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE AND MEMBERS OF THE STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY: It affords me pleasure to be able to greet you at this thirty-seventh annual meeting of this society under such favorable circumstances. Our whole country has been blessed with general health, peace and plenty. Our own state has been especially favored with a bounteful harvest, and all its industries have been prospered. This society, I believe, has made some progress in its management. We seem to be gradually shaking off some of the obnoxious features which have been hitched on to the society for years past. I am clearly of the society for years past. I am clearly of the society for years past. I am clearly of the society for years past. I am clearly of the society for years past. I believe it would be wisdom on the part of the executive committee to strike from the premium list the third and fourth premiums. The third and fourth premiums are very little credit to the exhibitor; in fact I believe that most people would sooner have no premium at all. And it is plain to my mind that it is not good policy for the society to encourage the exhibition of third and fourth-rate animals and be compelled to meet the cost necessary to sustain it. In the effort made to enforce the rule to prevent the sale of spirituous liquors on the fair ground we were obliged to contend with stubborn resistance from an occupant in the rear part of the president's office building, which had been, by obliged to coutend with stubborn resistance from an occupant in the rear part of the president's office building, which had been, by our contract, reserved for the use of family living rooms. The mistake was to begin with, in allowing any reservation of a foot of ground for any purpose whatever within the inclosure of the fair ground.

Before retiring from the presidency of this society, I wish to tender to this committee my grateful acknowledgments for your kindness and assistance in the discharge of my official duties, for which please accept my most cordial thanks. Gentlemen of the committee, I now have the pleasure of presenting to you and to this chair the Hon. William Chamberlain, your president.

this chair the Hon. William Chamberlain, your president.

Mr. Chamberlain's remarks were as follows: GENTLEMEN OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY: To you have been intrusted the interests of this society for the ensuing year, and upon the result of your conclusions at this meeting depend largely its future usefulness and its inture success in the state. This society has been fortunate in having for its officers men of practical experience in the various vocations of life, who were willing to give a share of their time without compensation for its success. During the society's history it has been carried through some severe financial difficulties without aid from the state, except in the first few years of its existence, and depending upon the liberality of its patrons, has succeeded in attaining to a losition equaling that of any state organization of the kind in the country, and is a prominent and positive factor in the development of sgriculture and its kindred arts throughout in not the kind in the country, and is a prominent and positive factor in the development of agriculture and its kindred arts throughout the state.

Since its organization thirty-seven years ago, the society has held annual fairs, paying out liberal sums of money in premiums each year, stimulating a healthy spirit of competition among exhibitors, giving them every facility possible to make a display of their products, and affording visitors a line of opportunity for viewing a great variety of interesting exhibits from other states as well as our own. It is generally conceded that this society is one of the most liberal to exhibitors, of any in the country, and I trust it may continue to be so as far as practicable. The fair at Kalamazoo last year, as an industrial exhibition, was a success and all that could be desired on the part of the society.

Jan. 19—When the Senate was called to order the first business before that body was to appoint John F. Hartranft of Fennsylvania one of the managers of the national soldiers' home, vice Gen. McClellan deceased. After a heated discussion a resolution was adopted to admit Mr. Moody of Dakota to the floor of the Senate. A resolution regarding the president's recommendation for a fishery commission was recerved to the committee on foreign relations. A resolution was agreed to directing the secretary of the treasury to inform the Senate what amount of silver bullion had been purchased for coinage each year since 1865. Mr. Teller of Colotado called up the silver question and addressed the Senate upon it, presenting elaborate tables showing the coin circulation of the world, and a comparison of the various countries. In the history of all nations gold and silver had been found insuticient to carry on the business of the world, and paper currency based on these metals had been resorted to, and such being the case what reason was there for supposing that gold alone would be sufficient! When the money faculty of silver is destroyed the purchasing power of gold is increased, and the holders of bonds, mortgages, and government securit es are thus benefitted for the reason that these obligations must be paid with but one-half the money in existence that existed when the debts were contracted. The holders of these obligations wanted silver demonetized begause of the consequent enoromous increase in the purchasing power of gold. To bring this about they had raised the cry that gold will leave the country if silver coinage be not suspended, and that the Unit disa es would become the repository of all the silver in the world, that we would lose our gold, lose our national credit, and would be unable to sell our bonds. Then followed a comparison of our tinancial condition in 1s78 and now. The amount of gold in the country in 1878, when they raised such a cry aga ast the passage of the silver act, was $193,000,000,000;

minor matters were discussed and the Senate adjourned.

The Chief of Engineers laid before the House a communication asking for an immediate appropriation of $50,000 for the general work of survey on the Missis ppiriver. The Senate bill for the relief of fitz John Porter was reported back, the committee reporting that after carefully considering the objections noted in the veto message of President Arthur it was clearly of the opinion that they were not well founded and should not interrupt the course of justice. The bill record back authorize the president to appoint Fitz John Porter to the position of colonel in the army, and, in the executive Silscretion to place him on the retired grade without any naw of amountain the fill bill to increase the pay of widows from $5 to $12 per month was reported and referred to the committee of the whole. Luckily I came across a blacksmith's shop, but the smith was not at home. I asked the woman of the house if she would allow me to start a fire and make the shoe. She said I might if I knew how. So I started the fire and heated the shoe red-hot and turned it to fit my horse's foot, and pared the hoofs, and turned the points of the nails out cunningly, as I had seen the blacksmith do, so that, in driving into the hoof, they should not get into the quick, and I shod the horse. At the next place I went to I went straight to a smith and told him to put the shoe on properly. He looked at the horse's foot and paid me the greatest compliment I ever received in my I had not looked on and seen others do it.'

A LIVE BAROMSTER.—A writer in December St. Nicholas says: In the 5m thsonian instiution's list of animals valuable to man, the tree toad is mantioned as an excellent weather prophet, and I can testify to its power of fore-telling the change in the weather. I have in my possession a paper-weight in the form of a bronze frog supporting upon its back a glass tube with a buils at the bottom. Some months ago I was fortunate enough to catch a tree toad, and having heard of his ability as a weather prophet I put him into my glass tute and made from matches a small ladder so that he could climb up or down within the tube. I soon found that the approach of a change in the weather was always noticed by the little prisoner, who climbed toward the top whenshed is feared, as threats of personal violence are freely made.

LOST HIS GRIP.—The man who lost his grip deserves more attention than he usually receives. He is an old friend. Everybody knows him. He is a man who lives, not from choice, but from necessity, on a diet of cold shoulder. It seems impossible for a man who has completely lost his grip to regain it. He may be a seam engine in breeches, and a model of good conduct and integrity, but his energy and ability will go for nothing, it is uscless for him to assert himself and make a decided stand. The tide is against him, and he cannot successfully breast it. The fact that our unfortunate acquaintance once had a grip indicates that he at one time in his cancer pose esel some of the essentials belonging to the make-up of successful man. The explanation of his hof cless and helpless "flop" invo ves the analysis of the leading condition of success and failure.—Atlanta Constitution.

VOICES OF THE WATER. Paul had never risen from his little bed. He lay there, listening to the noises in the street, not tranquilly, not caring how the time went, but watching it watching everything about him with observing eyes.

When the sunbeams struck into his sun was high, and the broad day was clear and warm. He lay a little, looking with the rustling blinks, and clear and warm. and watching everything about him with room through the rustling blinds, and quivered on the opposite walk like golden water, he knew that evening was coming on, and that the sky was red and beautiful. As the reflection died away, and a gloom went graphing up the wall and a gloom went creeping up the wall, he watched it deepen, deepen into the night. Then he thought how the long streets were dotted with lamps, and how the peaceful stars were shinning overhead. His fancy had a strange tendency to wander to the river, which he knew was flowing, through the significant to-morrow? Is she come?"

Some one seemed to go in quest of her. Perhaps it was Susan. Paul thought he heard her telling him when he had closed his eyes again, that she would soon be back; but he did not open them to see. She kept her word—perhaps she had never been away—but the he knew was flowing through the city; and now he thought how black it was, and how deep it would look, reflecting the hosts of stars—and more than this, the hosts of stars—and more than this bed. He saw them now how steadily it rolled away to meet the

"Good-bye, my child," cried Mrs.
Pipchin, hurrying to his bed's head.
"Not good-bye?" For an instant Paul looked at her with sense again-the child could hardly tell the wistful face with which he had so whether this were in his sleeping or often gazed upon her in his corner by waking moments—of that rushing river. "Why, will it never stop, Floy?" he would sometimes ask her. "It is bearthe fire. "Ah, yes," he said placidly, "good-bye! Ex-Justice Strong. George Alfred Townsend, writing from New York, says: Ex-Justice Strong, court bench of the United States to enter actively into practice as a railroad attor-ney, lives in Washington and comes here tered to his thinking, thrilled while he occasionally. He was here last week, a gazed, as if it were in pain; and before he could reach out both his hands to or so. He is six feet tall if an inch, and squarely and massively built, without an ounce of superfluous flesh apparent. His quickly from the little bed, and went face is large, massive, smooth shaven, kindly, and not unlike the pictures extant of Henry Clay. A lawyer friend, chatting with me about the judge, said: "He made a mistake if he thought that coming off the bench would make him a successful railroad lawyer. There is no branch or practice where a man has gotto be so ready, so quick in expedients, and so active. The training of the bench does not give men those qualities. In railroad practice, too, a lawyer must always stand up for 100 cents on the dollar of his claim, and fight for it in every conceivable way. He will get little enough by entering his claims high. Now, the bench-bred lawyer feels always like arranging his case as if he were try-ing it instead of pleading it. Do you see the difference?"—New York

By the rules of the vessel those holding first cabin tickets had the first chance of being saved, the second-class tickets had second chance, and the steerage passengers third chance. As a part of the vessel's boats had been destroyed in the collision, only a part of all her passengers could be saved, and when the second-class was called the Indian boys got in the boat. Being steerage passengers the captain ordered them to get out, which they decined to do. He stepped back on the vessel and getting the boat ax, split the head of one of the Indians at a single blow and the other was thrown out and drowned.
