MICHIGAN MATTERS.

Hot Dead in Cold Blood.

At Rockford, Kent county, John Boyd had been murdered by B. Johnson, one of the leading merchants of that place. Boyd owned Johnson a sum of money, and had been pushed for payment, which he refused to make. Johnson then shot and killed Boyd.

A Clever Plan Frustrated.

One of the cleverest schemes to escape from prison was devised and carried out in Jackson prison a few days ago. It was hatched by Edward W. Hickey, who had been in prison for some time for burglary.

A Good Showing.

The footings of prison accounts for July, made up, show that the current expenses of the month of July were $3,743.95; the total for the month of July was $4,300.00.

MICHIGAN NEWS CONDENSED.

Win. Jones, a Lansing hackman, was slashed in the abdomen with a razor by Ben Ford of Jackson, one of the emancipated prisoners.

COOK HOUSE.

Frank, the eight-year-old son of Ed. Wilton, while robbing a chest near the Lake Shore track, was chased backwards by the police.

TIMBER REMOVAL.

The Regulations Promulgated by Commissioner Sparks.

The following rules and regulations governing the removal of timber from the public domain have been promulgated by the interior department. By virtue of the power vested in the secretary of the interior by the act of June 3, 1878, entitled "An act authorizing the removal of timber from the public domain for mining and domestic purposes," the following rules and regulations have been promulgated.

1. The act applies only to the states of Colorado, Nevada, and the territories of New Mexico, Arizona, Dakota, Idaho and Montana and other mineral districts of the United States not specially provided for.

2. The land from which timber is felled or removed under the provisions of this act, must be of a character such as to be subject to entry under existing laws of the United States except for mineral entry.

3. No person not a citizen or bona fide resident of the state, territory, or other mineral district, shall be permitted to fell or remove timber from the public domain, or to sell or dispose of timber under this act, unless he has first obtained a special delivery stamp.

4. The books, files and records of all the lands from which timber is removed, and of all the persons who have obtained special delivery stamps, shall be kept in a book and file, and the names of the persons who have obtained such stamps, and the amount of timber removed, shall be entered therein.

5. The president or persons who shall be appointed by the secretary of the interior, shall have the authority to issue special delivery stamps, and to regulate the same, and to make such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

6. The president or persons who shall be appointed by the secretary of the interior, shall have the authority to issue special delivery stamps, and to regulate the same, and to make such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

7. The president or persons who shall be appointed by the secretary of the interior, shall have the authority to issue special delivery stamps, and to regulate the same, and to make such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

8. The president or persons who shall be appointed by the secretary of the interior, shall have the authority to issue special delivery stamps, and to regulate the same, and to make such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

Leland Stanford, the millionaire California senator, spent $50,000 in perfecting apparatus for the instantaneous photographing of horses going at a high rate of speed. He attained the object aimed at and the result has been a source of great amusement to all who were made familiar with the facts. During the coming tri-state fair at Toledo, September 6-11, the process will be tried daily during the races, the horses being photographed at the very moment the wire is reached. This will probably break up the so-called "dead heats," for if one horse is the fraction of a foot ahead of another at the wire, the instantaneous process will show it.

The greenback county convention was held at the court house Saturday afternoon. W. E. Walker of this city officiated as chairman, and Jas. M. Forsyth of Ypsilanti acted as secretary. The following delegates were elected to the state convention: C. F. Bates, Lima; James M. Forsyth, Ypsilanti; Geo. A. Peters, Seio; H. Burch, Manchester; Dr. Wm. Pattison, Ypsilanti; J. Sprague, Ann Arbor. Delegates to the congressional convention: A. McNichol, Ypsilanti; N. B. Covert, Ann Arbor town; Sampson Parker, Lima; L. Alexander, Webster; W. E. Walker, Ann Arbor; Jas. M. Forsyth, Ypsilanti. C. F. Bates, for ten years chairman of the county committee, wished to be relieved and Dr. Pattison was elected in his place.

Peters' Magazine for September comes to us with a first-class steel engraving, "Don't Be Greedy," after a picture by the celebrated German artist, Scholtze. There are also further in the issue of anti-slavery, a double size colored fashion plate; a colored design for a tidy on Java canvas; and some 50 engravings of the fashions, work-table patterns, etc., including a very interesting article, illustrated, on "Venetian Glass and Murano." The stories are exceptionally good. "The Millionaire's Daughter," grows in interest as it approaches the end. A very noticeable feature of this magazine is the Paris letter, monthly, on the fashions, written by Mrs. Lucy H. Hooper, the wife of the American vice-consul, and the highest in the world in regard to a subject. The price of this necessary lady's-book, remember, is but $2 a year, with great reductions to clubs. Specimens sent gratis to those wishing to get up clubs. Address Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Real Estate Transfers. Gilbert McIntyre, et al, to Geo. W. Healy and wife, city, $400. Edwin L. Dunn to Joseph C. Demosh, Ypsilanti city, $700. Joseph C. Demosh to Eliza H. Cordary, Ypsilanti city, $5,500. Lucy Leonard to Wm. Holchour, Dexter village, $375. Calvin Z. Chipman to Sam. W. Lockwood, city, $1,000.

That July is Bargain Month at Mack & Schmid's. Was clearly demonstrated by their grand Clearing Sale, but it has been reserved until now to eclipse all former efforts by making the Lowest Prices Ever Attempted!

It should be clear as noonday that every one's interest is to buy goods where they are sold the cheapest, and yet, surprising as it may be, there are people in Ann Arbor who can not see that they are paying more for inferior goods than for first-class goods that can be bought of MACK & SCHMID.

The Second District. Things are getting a little warm in the second congressional district. The question as to who shall be the nominee on the democratic ticket, seems to be the all important one. As the convention is to be held next Wednesday the candidates will only have a short time to wait before knowing their fate.

There will be but three tickets in the field this year—the republican, democratic and prohibition, the nationals having so thoroughly fused that some of them have acted in convention as straight democratic delegates, Hon. Chas. H. Dewey, of Cambridge, furnishing the most notable instance of this kind. The prohibitionists cannot, of course, hope to elect their man, but they will try to balance a power and can say which of the old parties shall be successful.

By the democratic cyclone and the grace of prohibition, Eldredge was elected over Allen, two years ago by a plurality of about 49 votes, which shows why the politicians say it is "nobody's battle." As for candidates, they are numerous enough to fill the cabinet of the federal county, or at least a portion of them, have been crowding the name of Capt. Charles R. Miller, of Adrian, into notice, while from Washtenaw Capt. E. P. Allen desires to be elected to the federal office, offers Gen. George Spaulding, and Hillsdale, with plenty of suitable men within his borders, declines to put forward one himself, it is said, to rest upon the laurels won by the late and lamented Henry A. Waldron, or, maybe, to slide in a dark horse at an opportune moment. Under the "dark horse" subtitle it is right to say that ex-Gov. Crosswell's name has been written in the columns of the democratic press.

Among the democrats the most powerful runner and the warmest favorite is Lieut. Lester H. Salebury, of Adrian, the successful congressman of Lenawee. He has a close second, however, in Hon. Charles R. Whitman, of Ypsilanti, a regent of university. Up to last Saturday these two gentlemen disputed the ground for the nomination, the republican movement, but on that day the doughty colonel made formal capitulation, relinquishing all rights of power and interest in the nomination, and lifting a weighty burden from the shoulders of the liberal office holders in the district. This was the most politic move the colonel has made during his entire term of political service, for the Salebury adherents had him largely ignored in this county, and it was not at all probable that he could have been nominated. Although a motion instructing the delegation to vote as a unit for Salebury was tabled in the Lenawee democratic convention, through the exertions of J. W. Helme, jr., Seth Bean, C. H. Dewey and others, the county will undoubtedly be solid for him. With the 25 votes which Lenawee can give, the hillsdale said to have ready for him, and a piece of the Monroe delegation, Lieut. Salebury may be said to be assured of the nomination. Indeed since the withdrawal of the late and lamented headed democrats hold that he will have aim at the solid vote of Lenawee, Hillsdale and Monroe; but, of course with the fallibility of ante-convention estimates this may be wrong. The republican party from the most reliable authority available it is about certain that Salebury is to be the democratic nominee and he will make a stout run. An eloquent speaker, with a brilliant literary record, fine figure and martial bearing, an unimpeachable character, temperate habits and the good will and esteem of about all who have known him, he will be a formidable opponent for the republican standard bearer. He has faithfully served four years as the representative of the people in the criminal courts of the county, and has resided in the county from boyhood.

Charles R. Whitman, the only other democrat who has a chance for the nomination, is also a lawyer, and he is, without a doubt, an eminent one to all who were made familiar with the facts. During the coming tri-state fair at Toledo, September 6-11, the process will be tried daily during the races, the horses being photographed at the very moment the wire is reached. This will probably break up the so-called "dead heats," for if one horse is the fraction of a foot ahead of another at the wire, the instantaneous process will show it.

The greenback county convention was held at the court house Saturday afternoon. W. E. Walker of this city officiated as chairman, and Jas. M. Forsyth of Ypsilanti acted as secretary. The following delegates were elected to the state convention: C. F. Bates, Lima; James M. Forsyth, Ypsilanti; Geo. A. Peters, Seio; H. Burch, Manchester; Dr. Wm. Pattison, Ypsilanti; J. Sprague, Ann Arbor. Delegates to the congressional convention: A. McNichol, Ypsilanti; N. B. Covert, Ann Arbor town; Sampson Parker, Lima; L. Alexander, Webster; W. E. Walker, Ann Arbor; Jas. M. Forsyth, Ypsilanti. C. F. Bates, for ten years chairman of the county committee, wished to be relieved and Dr. Pattison was elected in his place.

WINNING THE PRIZE.

"I shall go to the country well armed for conquest, that is certain," laughed Lou Harding, a rich young widow, tossing a pile of dainty laces into the lap of her paid companion with the injunction to "hurry up and get those laces made as soon as possible."

"I've learned that Hugh Mansfield is to spend part of the summer there, she went on, turning again to the friend who had run in to discuss with her their plans for the season, "and you know, Fannie, what a magnificent catch he is. So I warn you in time that we shall be deadly rivals, for of course you will try as hard as any of us to land the big fish."

"Oh, I yield to the inevitable at the very outset," returned Fannie Remington, bantering; "for what earthly chance will my poor beauty have against your gold?" And there was just a sufficient shade of truth in the jesting inquiry to make Mrs. Harding wince a little, for there was no denying that her friend Fannie had, by far, the advantage in the way of good looks.

"But what will Miss Weir be doing the meantime while all the rest of us are quarreling over the great prize?" she added, turning, with one of her charming smiles, to Mrs. Harding's companion.

"Oh, I shall be happy enough, never fear," said the latter, returning the smile with one equally as bright over her lapful of laces. "I shall not be burdened with society cars and conquests, you know, so when Mrs. Harding doesn't need me I shall be out gathering wild flowers and exploring nature's beauties. I dearly love the country for itself."

"Bravo!" cried Miss Remington, archly, while Mrs. Harding merely gazed her black brows and shrugged her elegant shoulders, as if she liked or disliked of her paid companion were several degrees beneath her notice.

When the "season" was fairly inaugurated it found the young widow and her party delightfully established in one of the quietest of the fashionable watering places, if there is such a thing as a place being quiet after fashion has once found it out.

It is doubtful, however, if Mrs. Harding would have chosen it as the favored spot wherein to display her ravishing new toilettes had it not been for Hugh Mansfield's presence there. For beneath her light jests upon the subject was a firm determined purpose to win the handsome young millionaire in the face of all possible rivalry.

And it soon began to look as if she had not made a vain boast. Lou Harding, if not a beauty, was quite pretty enough to turn a young man's head, and her black eyes, fine figure and coquettish airs were really bewildering in the array of charming tennis suits, dainty beribboned morning gowns and exquisite ball dresses, that displayed them to the best advantage.

And so Hugh Mansfield evidently thought. At least he paid her many flattering attentions, and the pretty widow's heart beat high with hope.

"Didn't I tell you I meant to win the great prize?" she retorted, with a triumphant snap in her black eyes, as Fannie, in moek indignation, bantered her upon getting the lion's share of the young millionaire's attentions.

flushed cheeks, and her book in her hand, she was pacing slowly up and down the beach; but her mind and heart were too full of excited thought to permit her to read, or even to notice the lovely scene which the sunset was painting on the still surface of the sea.

Calmly as she had borne it, that subtle, barbed thrust of Mrs. Harding's had gone straight to her mark. It had stung her to the very soul. It came home to her now for the first time, with a thrill of bitter shame, how completely Hugh Mansfield had realized her perfect ideal of manhood and how often his image had, of late been a part of her sweetest day dreams.

Several times, in the first two or three weeks following their arrival, they had met by chance—once during one of Leslie's early morning strolls, when the dew was yet glistening in the hearts of the wild flowers she was gathering and the wood was ringing with the trills of a thousand fluttering, silver throated birds.

The young man's quick, firm step, as he came striding down the woodland path, switching the dew off the grass with his light cane as he walked, startled her so that she let fall the handful of sweet June roses she had gathered, and they lay scattered on the dewy grass directly in his path.

With a graceful apology he stopped and assisted her in gathering up her fallen treasures; then, when he had seen the last velvet pink blossom safely replaced in the wide rimmed straw hat, he had gone on his way with her few modest words of thanks, uttered in a voice marvelously low and sweet, lingering pleasantly in his ears.

Leslie did not dream that a lovely picture she had made that morning in the eyes of the young millionaire—standing there in the tender light that was still half shadow under the leafy boughs, her soft white gown prettily defining a lithe and graceful form, the bare head crowned with silky coils of tawny hair that waved in rich rings over a broad, white forehead, and the wide straw hat, with its fluttering pale pink ribbons, filled to the very brim with blushing, dew wet roses.

Nor did she know that he had secretly carried one of those same roses away with him as a souvenir of his meeting with the lovely wood-nymph, as he called her in his thoughts.

Later, only a few days ago, had come a formal introduction given by Mrs. Harding, and most reluctantly, as Leslie clearly divined by the cold, hard glitter in the widow's black eyes and the slight, but scornful, emphasis with which she uttered the explanatory words "my companion," carefully added after Leslie's name.

An amused smile was Hugh Mansfield's only recognition of the little trick, and there was a light in his handsome dark eyes as he took her hand that made Leslie's heart unconsciously beat quicker.

After that, in a proud, gracefully lithe way all her own, she quietly avoided him. With all her dreams—and Leslie was something of a dreamer—she was not romantic or simple minded enough to fancy that he, the lionized millionaire, would think seriously of a girl in her position, and she was far too pure and proud to permit any attentions from such as he that might be lightly misconstrued.

And now, pacing the shingly beach, she knew, at last, that another feeling, stronger and deeper than pride alone, urged her to fly from his presence.

Mrs. Lou Harding had chanced to witness that brief interview on the beach and a startled, uneasy look flashed into her glittering black eyes.

"I'll have to get rid of that girl, I see that," she muttered vindictively drawing her breath hard, as she watched them from her window. "She is lovely in her old style—dangerously so; and it'll be impossible to keep her in the background any longer, now that he's insisted upon having an introduction to her. I won't mention this affair, of course, but I'll find some good excuse for discharging her before two days' have passed. I would die before I would admit that I looked upon her as a rival."

Mrs. Harding kept her word. And when, after several days had passed without a glimpse of Miss Weir, Mr. Mansfield made some inquiries concerning her, the young widow put on a pretty air of injured innocence.

"She left me very unexpectedly, and I must own that I felt rather hurt over it since I had kept her so long in my employ and had done so much for her," said she, with a charming little pout. "But she said she expected soon to be married and hinted at some old romance which had just ended all right, as an excuse for leaving me so suddenly. So I suppose I really ought not to blame her, after all."

The look that swept over Hugh's dark, handsome face and settled gloomily in the depths of his beautiful blue eyes, as he heard the startling news, convinced the pretty little schemer, that she had not sent Leslie away one moment too soon.

But the watering place suddenly lost all attractions for the young millionaire. He left at once, not caring particularly whether he went; and, by some strange fate, found himself at the end of the first day, in the very same hotel, at which Leslie Weir was stopping on her way to take a hew situation.

In the shock of the sudden meeting, Hugh blundered forth the story of his honest love, and Leslie, having heard it, threw aside her coldness and reserve, and then the whole truth came out.

"Since you have no relatives or friends to consult, my darling," pleaded the impassioned lover, "let us be married here at once, and we will return to the fashionable watering place we have just left to spend our honeymoon."

And Leslie allowed the happy fellow to plan the whole affair just to suit himself.

When Fannie Remington received their wedding cards, she smiled and nodded her sincere approval. When Mrs. Lou Harding received hers—which chanced to be at the breakfast table, in the presence of a dozen other guests—she frowned darkly.

Within a week the beautiful Mrs. Mansfield was the reigning belle and fashion; while Mrs. Harding who had lost not a moment in packing up her bewildering wardrobe and fleeing to new fields of glory, listened in bitter silence to the hated echoes of her rival's fame.

INDUSTRIAL BRIEFLIETS.

President Adams, of the Cornell university, says there is in the country more or less of dissatisfaction with the way in which the agricultural colleges have met the expectation that was formed concerning them. "While I do not think this dissatisfaction is generally well grounded, I am inclined to believe that there are certain inherent difficulties in the way of the schools of agriculture that have not thus far been fully and frankly met. In the first place, it is found that the farmer boys are not able, as a rule, to spend a sufficient time at college to enable them to gain a complete agricultural education. Then a second difficulty presents itself. If a farmer's boy takes a course of somewhat prolonged instruction he is more or less apt to acquire a taste for other pursuits, and so allows himself to be drawn off into other vocations."

A writer says that the best way to feed a flock of lambs after they have been turned to grass in the spring is to drive up ewes and lambs at evening into a yard adjoining a sheep-house to which the lambs have been attached all their lives. Across the open door set a hay-rack on blocks high enough to allow the lambs to run under but not the ewes. Around the wall on the inside have flat-bottomed troughs, the tops six inches above the ground, with the feed scattered thinly in them and very tightly sated. Let the flock go short on salt otherwise; then the lambs will swarm into the sheep house as soon as the flock swarms into the yard, and will consume the feed readily, at first for the salt, but presently for the feed itself.

Observations have been made at the Ohio agricultural experiment station on the hardness of young forest tree seedlings after severe winters. Seedlings of green and yellow locusts capped without any loss 1 per cent. of scarlet maple and of black ash was killed; 5 per cent. of red oak, 6 per cent. of white ash and wild cherry, 7 per cent. of maple sugar, 8 per cent. of catalpa, 20 per cent. of red oak, 33 per cent. of cucumber tree, 50 per cent. of blackwalnut, 55 per cent. of chestnut, and 81 per cent. of white oak seedlings were killed by severe winter. There is no doubt that these results would vary with the soil, growth, condition, and degree of ripeness of the plants, which would be controlled by external circumstances in different localities and seasons.

A correspondent of The Southern Cultivator thinks he has a remedy that will cure what he calls cholera. It is his opinion that hog cholera is mostly worms, and when these are expelled the hogs get well. He uses this mixture: Five pounds of copras, twelve pounds of sulphur, four pounds of bicarbonate of soda, two pounds of blood root; powder and mix this well and then add two bushels of lime and twenty-five to thirty bushels of slack coal. This should be dumped down in a dry place where the hogs can get at it, but not scattered around. The smaller the droves of hogs the smaller the quantity of ingredients used in making this mixture.

G. S. McCann states to the Elmira, N. Y., Farmers' Club that he found the limbs of the white oak much more durable for posts than the body of the tree. He had tried setting posts erect and inverted, but could find no difference in their durability. Posts were found to last longest when set in clay soil beaten compactly about them to prevent the passage of water and to keep them in a uniform state of moisture. In gravelly soils, which permit them to become often water-soaked and again soon dry, they did not last long.

Prof. Aughey found, by careful test, that prairie soil, which has been broken up by plowing, contained, immediately after rain, nine times as much moisture as adjoining unbroken soil, and this seems to explain the extension of the rain belt westward. Let such broken-up soil become covered with shrubs and trees, and annually mulched by their falling leaves, and it will continue absorbent and retentive of moisture without losing any of its substance and its fertility.

A case is reported in the foreign papers of the death of cattle to whose coats a poisonous sheep dip had been for some purpose applied. The persistent habit of licking themselves, characteristic of cattle, should not be forgotten when it is contemplated to apply medicines externally for skin affections or the destruction of vermin.

Melons, grapes, and peaches are now receiving great attention in South Carolina as market crops. They are much more profitable than corn and tobacco. Some counties in the state expect to sell three million watermelons this year. They are sent to eastern cities by boat, and to western towns by rail. They can be raised for 2 cents each.

Prof. Long, of England, says there are in every herd cows that are mere manure makers or pickpockets. They have the same feed that the rest get, and yet they will not give one-half the milk. The cows are in the herd, yet the trouble is to pick them out. They are generally found in the fact that they are the best-looking cows of all. They give a good mess of milk for a short time and then drop almost out.

It is reported that German steamers are to be chartered to call periodically at the various ports of southern Europe, laden with German merchandise. The goods will be stored so as to be easily accessible. The saloon will be used as a pattern room. Importers will be able to make their choice and have the goods landed at once, thus doing away to a great extent with the services of the middleman.

Cocoon growing in Florida seems to be a success. In the region of Lake Worth there are about twenty thousand trees growing, and part of them are fruiting. In 1873 a vessel loaded with these nuts was wrecked on the Date coast, and floated ashore near Lake Worth, most of which were gathered and planted. The trees began to bear in about seven years from planting, and the crop averages from one hundred to two hundred nuts per tree.

DOMESTIC HINTS.

When you visit or leave New York City, say to the baggage express, and $3 carriage hire, and stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite Grand Central Depot. It is a fine room, and the best of one million dollars, $1 and upward per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best wines, stables, and elevated railroad to all depots. A man can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city.

Peculiar To itself in many important particulars, Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from and superior to any other medicine. Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said to do more with less. Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla. Peculiar in its "cure" of the worst cases of skin disease of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad. No other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time. Be sure to get

Life in the Paris Sewers is possible, for a short time, to the robust, but the majority of refined persons would prefer immediate death to such an existence in their revolting atmosphere. How much more revolting to be in one's self a living sewer. But this is actually the case in those in whom the inactivity of the liver drives the refuse matter of the body to escape through the lungs, breast, the kidneys and bladder. It is astonishing that life remains in such a dwelling. Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" restores normal purity to the system and renews the whole being.
