The next annual meeting of the grand lodge of good templars is to be held in this city. Jas. Robison of the Detroit Free Press staff, was a visitor at home Sunday and Monday.

Some 300 school children from Chelsea, visited the city and the university, Saturday. A. O. Crozier addressed an enthusiastic prohibition meeting in Saline Tuesday night.

January 24 and April 23 next, are the days for hearing claims in the Geo. S. Brush estate. Jas. Blythman has been taken to Ionia on a 90 days sentence for assault and battery on his wife.

Everybody can eat apples now as they are selling on the streets at from 15c to 30c per bushel. There has been more building in this city this season than for years. Surely the town is booming.

New time-card on the Toledo road. Regular trains are now running between Toledo and Mt. Pleasant. Jno. J. Enright of Detroit, was one of the speakers at the democratic meeting in Chelsea, last evening.

The supervisors, by a vote of 18 to 3, Friday, decided to loan the county money to the highest bidder. A portion of Delhi was sold at chancery sale Monday to satisfy a mortgage held by Rinsay & Seabolt.

Wm. Walsh has made one of the best sheriffs that this county has ever had. He should have 1,000 majority. Consent this evening by the city band at Beethoven hall, for their benefit. The boys should be well patronized.

M. G. Niethammer, who has been living at Smith Center, Kas., several months, returned to the city Tuesday last. We understand that a number of citizens will go to Ypsilanti to hear Hon. Wm. M. Bancroft to-morrow night.

Miss Armstrong's class in the 3d ward was excused from school Monday on account of the sickness of the teacher. Jno. O'Hara, jr., has 13 boys that came into his enclosure Thursday last. He advertises for an owner in to-day's paper.

The Vandepool light and power company expect to have their plant completed and in running order by the first of January next. Mrs. Calos Hill's mother on East Liberty street, who is now 84 years old, is still in good health, bright and cheerful, and a constant reader.

Mr. O'Neill's impression of the character of Edmond Dante and the Count of Monte-Cristo is a fine piece of work. Ardent in youthful love, tender and anxious in family loyalty, full of heroism and pathos in periods of suffering and grief, calm, dignified, and courageous in the episode where pride and death are in the trial.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

We are having regular fall weather. Judge Hariman was in Chelsea Tuesday.

F. L. Parker's monument still haunts passers-by. Mayor Cornwall of Ypsilanti paid the city a visit Tuesday.

Patrick Brennan has gone to Devils Lake, Dakota, to live. Mrs. Byron Green lost an envelope containing $150, last Saturday.

J. Keck & Co. make an important announcement in to-day's DEMOCRAT relative to parlor furniture, chamber furniture, and carpets and curtains. The meeting in Lodi, Monday night, was largely attended. The speakers were J. N. Bailey, who spoke in English, and Dr. C. George in German.

Some years ago a governor was elected in Massachusetts by just one majority. There are also cases on record where members of congress had just one majority. Grant Jenkins and Miss Lonie Sweeney, both of this city, were married Wednesday, by Rev. F. M. Stimson. The bride was the recipient of a number of handsome and useful presents.

The addition to the Goodrich house will cost about $1,500. In the spring it will be further enlarged by adding a block of three more stores, and the hotel proper will be raised another story. Mrs. Mary L. Eaton of Saline, died Sunday, Oct. 17. She left an estate valued at $6,000, the income of which is to be used in caring for her brother, D. O. Church, an inmate of the Pontiac asylum.

Chas. Weisinger and W. Todd, members of the Adrian bicycle club, were in the city the last of the week. They made the distance from Adrian here, some 50 miles, in five minutes less than four hours. Sunday was a great day for bishops, there being no less than seven in attendance at the service at St. Andrew's Episcopal church Sunday. Bishop Cox of New York addressed the Hobart guild in the evening on "The Institutes of Christian history."

A. A. Terry has the only exclusive last store in the city. He keeps in stock all the latest styles of shoes, and the manufacturers. Mr. T. says he has no side-show attachment, but that his principal business is selling hats. It is worth going a mile to see his hoisting machine at work. Next Monday evening there is to be a big blow out in Ypsilanti, on which occasion Prof. S. Dickie, the prohibition candidate for governor, will address the meeting. Several bars will be present to enliven things. Wiley's quartette of this city, besides many citizens, will go down to hold the meeting.

Service will be held Sunday in St. Andrew's Episcopal church, as follows: At 7:30 a. m., holy communion; 10:30 a. m., morning prayer, litany and sermon; 12 m. lecture by Prof. Morris, and Sunday school. The evening service will be held, by account of the Students' Christian association meeting in university hall. Messrs. Richmond and Wheeler bid off at mortgage sale, Monday, a large portion of Delhi Mills property on which they had claimed several thousand dollars, which was given to them as endorser of notes for Frank Goodale to secure the First National bank for money advanced to him at the time the improvements were made at his mill. The wife of Dr. Stanley Woodruff died at her home in Clyde, O., Oct. 11. Dr. Woodruff graduated with the medical class of '82, and during his college course, he and his wife made their home in Ann Arbor. They have many friends in this city, who are grieved to the utmost by the sad news, and extend their sympathy to the bereaved husband. Mrs. Woodruff was but 35 years of age, and beloved by all who knew her. Springfield Republican: James O'Neill was greeted with a house packed from the foot-lights to the gods. The dramatic situations which "Monte Cristo" affords was followed with a show of delight and appreciation. The melodrama took the crowd, while the wonderful power of expression on which O'Neill's reputation is based, and his claim of the thought of the more critical. Both support and scenery are worthy of mention and the whole performance was thoroughly enjoyable.

Fall and Winter Season of 1886-1887.

Interest and excitement by consumers of Dry Goods.—The late immense spot cash purchases of Mack & Schmid have all arrived.

Our Store is Packed Full! The stock consists of the most elegant styles in imported and American dress goods, plain and fancy velvets and plushes in handsome combinations, with a tremendous stock of Trimmings, Buttons, Clasps, Ribbons and Novelties—they must be seen to be appreciated. The sight is worth seeing.

We offer extra bargains in our Cloak Department. The weather has been too warm and our stock of elegant Ladies', Misses' and Children's Garments is too large.

We have also made sweeping reductions in Woollens, Flannels, and Blankets Table Linens, Napkins, Towels, Bed Spreads and Housefurnishing Goods, in fact our whole stock is too large and must be closed out. Remember these are stern facts. Call early and secure bargains at the quick sale and small profit Dry Goods House of Mack & Schmid! Hon. Wm. P. Wells will address a democratic meeting at the opera house next Monday evening.

Col. Judson S. Farrar, the Candidate on the Fusion ticket for Auditor-General, entered the service in 1861, as captain of Co. B, Fifth Michigan Infantry. Served with his command through the first Peninsular Campaign, commanding the regiment at Malvern Hill and at Harrison's Landing. He was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel, 20th Regiment, in September, 1862, and was again promoted to the Colonelcy of the Regiment, which he commanded for nearly two years in the field.

Has been Commander of H. D. Terry Post G. A. R. since its organization. Was twice elected Mayor of Mt. Clemens, three times Register of Deeds of Macomb County, and is capable and honest. Col. Farrar should be elected. —[Macomb County Press.

Letter from Judge Hale, OF NEBRASKA, A STANCH REPUBLICAN, STRONGLY INDORSING YAPLE.

Editor Grand Rapids Democrat: I see that the Detroit Tribune assails the honor as a politician and ability as a lawyer of a former citizen of this city. Although a republican, I deem it my duty to contradict the charges, and make—charges so base and unfounded, they could have originated only in the mind of a politician driven to frenzy by the merited success of an honorable opponent.

Geo. L. Yapple's politics and theory of government when I knew him in Nebraska were the same as advocated by him to-day. He was ever candid and outspoken in his sympathy for labor and against the encroachment of capital and monopoly. While here also showed his interest in and knowledge of agriculture by devising several addresses at the several fairs of the state, which were acknowledged by all who heard them to be the finest ever delivered in the state. As a lawyer he took front rank as a bar of acknowledged ability. As a proof of the confidence in his ability and integrity as a lawyer by people here, I would say one term of the district court for this county was given to him in the court house here. Geo. L. Yapple appears as attorney in thirty-eight of them. After the people here became acquainted with him he was employed upon one side or the other of every important case. If the republican party in Michigan have been forced from the real issues between the parties and have to rely upon such base and malicious falsehoods as have noticed in the Tribune, it is time they were rebuked.

Geo. L. Yapple's friends in Nebraska (and by that I mean all who knew him here), irrespective of party, believe him the peer of any man in Michigan in ability and integrity. If he were elected governor of Michigan, that he will make an executive of whom the state may well be proud. Truly yours for the right. Beatrice, Neb., Oct. 10, 1886.

Check. It is brazenly claimed by some that the republican party is the true laboring man's party. Where is the proof? It has fostered monopolies of every kind and but for the fortunes of the millionaires through class legislation; what has it done for the laboring men? It has been thirty years in power in Michigan, and we have four large insane asylums, three penitentiaries and three reformatories in the state, and a mammoth poor house in every county. Do these institutions indicate a healthy social condition? Who passed the Baker conspiracy act, the most infamous statute ever enrolled among Michigan laws? and who refused to repeal it when its repeal was demanded by every labor organization in the state? Who passed the tramp law which makes poverty a crime? Who approved the importation of Pinkerton thugs to enforce labor laws? and who refused to pass a law making it illegal to appoint aliens deputy sheriffs? Who runs the republican party, if not a syndicate of Detroit millionaires? Great Scotland! The laboring men's party! The republican party has stolen the birthright of laboring men and then sent them to prison because they had lost it. The mission of the republican party was the extinction of slavery. Its future is the grave—Iona Standard.

JUST AT HOME.
 W. H. H.
 Just at home! Oh, weary feet
 How sweet will be thy rest.
 Soon to press the golden strand
 Of realms forever blest.
 Just at home! Oh, tired hands,
 Hot, hot, has been the fight,
 Still thy God hath strengthened thee
 And put thy toes to flight.
 Just at home! Oh, aching heart,
 What joy to thee shall come,
 God's sweet smile shall give thee peace
 In that eternal home.
 Just at home! Oh, eyes bedimmed,
 Read thou the promise plain:
 "God shall wipe away all tears"
 And ease the sharpest pain.
 Just at home! Oh, soul redeemed,
 Through Jesus' precious blood,
 Hear the voice that soon shall call
 Thee to thy full reward. W. H. H.

HAP HAZARD.
 By Myrtle M. Koon, Lisbon, Mich.

Soon Mrs. Shumann's voice was heard, calling, "Girls, breakfast!"
 "Yes!" called Maude, sleepily, and the girls snored in chorus.
 After breakfast as the girls were having a snow ball convention in the front yard the little Hazard cuter came up, and Ted was it! Happy gave a cry of joy and ran toward him. Her pent-up feelings were strengthened when she noticed that he was pale and thin, and she held out her hand cordially. But she cooled very soon as he took her hand, saying carelessly, "How do you do, cousin," and lifted his fur cap to the girls.
 "Thought I'd come up and carry you home, you know, coz," he added, smiling.
 "It was kind of you to take the trouble to come for me. I will not detain you long," said Hap frigidly as she turned toward the house to get her wraps.
 Ted looked after her, dimly wondering what had stiffened her so in a few short weeks. "She used to be a jolly sort of girl," he thought, "hope she don't put on airs in honor of me. It don't improve her."
 The cousins were very silent as they rode home, until Ted remarked politely, "Disappointed not to see you last night. Spouse you had a nice time?"
 "Oh, yes, the girls had a little jubilee, and I couldn't miss it," said Hap carelessly.
 Ted opened his grey eyes. "Aha!" he thought, "my fair cousin thirsts for revenge; she won't get it though," and after that he was politely indifferent to Hap, while Hap, as a courtesy, ignored him until he went back to school.

As spring came near Ted wrote often and as usual, and in his old frank, boyish way. The first few weeks of college life had given him a contemptuous superiority, which he had exaggerated while with Hap because she was "so stiff" as he called it.
 But the lad's genuine heart at last gained the victory, and he saw the folly of trying to be something besides himself, and not half so good. He dared not write to Hap, so he confined the correspondence to Grae, always speaking in his old affectionate way of his cousin's name. Hap, however, was not so easily satisfied, and she could not bring her pride down so far as to make her write to him. She just let it go and gave her attention to study, for Aunt Edith had sent her some of Ruskin's works in the winter.
 Ted wrote that he was keeping up pretty well, his lungs had been weak all winter but said he would be glad to get home and rest when school was out. Papa and mamma Hazard looked over his shoulder when he read this, and Hap began to fear, though she couldn't think anything would happen to Ted. When, at last, he came in, she, her fears grew, for the boy was very pale and had a cough. "Hap," she said, "I'm glad to see you, but you don't look so well. You must take care of yourself. I'll show him my new book, 'The Life of Lincoln,' and see if it does him any good."
 "That day Ted grew weaker, and the next day, kept his room. Dr. Phil said at breakfast, "Ted will grow worse all summer if he hasn't a change of climate, and no one knows what winter will bring him."
 Papa Hazard said: "I will mortgage my farm to send him, if there's no other way, for something must be done. You know how ill fortune has visited me this year. Phil, it seems as though everything conspires against us."
 "He can't go to college next year, anyway," said Dr. Phil. "He ought to go south or west, right away."
 Hap Hazard's heart beat very fast while this talk was going on, and her eyes glowed more and more when she was excited. She ate no breakfast but excused herself and went out on the south porch, where the morning glories were peeping out in their blue and blue and blue. She didn't see them; she didn't see the sunlight making golden lines and dots on the grass; she didn't hear the birds singing in the apple trees. She was thinking, and her eyes glowed more and more. Phil came out in a hurry to speak to papa Hazard, who was going to a neighboring city, about some medicines for Ted.
 Hap caught his sleeve. "Dr. Phil," she said breathlessly, "Ted Remers ought to go west."
 "Yes, that's what I said, my dear," said Uncle Phil as he hurried on, thinking that girl has some scheme in her mind, but he didn't know what it was; he's trying to guess what it is; she'll bring in on us in a day or two, and carry it out before you can say Jack Robinson. It takes these women to get their heads set on a thing, and they'll stick to it like glue."
 Hap stood on the porch in the sunlight, until grandpa came to train the morning-glories, and then she went from her reverie.
 "Grandma," she said, "I'm going to stay at home this summer to read Ruskin, and Ted is going west with uncle and auntie, and you're to be here with my nancy, and here her breath gave out and her courage faltered. She needed opposition to strengthen her. Grandma made use of the pause to put her word in edgewise and exclaimed:
 "Happy Hazard, what he you talk 'bout, or are you trying to make believe you're dead crazy?" You act crazy—what a word! You see Hap's talent for crazy is a straight line."
 "Who said things was going to be like that Heppaly?"
 "I said it," said Hap, strong enough, now that she was opposed a little. "I'm going to stay at home, and you're going to give me five hundred dollars, and I can give it to Teddie. There are no two ways about it. He will die if he stays here, and I will indeed enjoy my western trip, then won't I love him a good deal, grandma, you know how ugly I've been to him."
 As Hap paused with a choke in her throat, Grandma looked up out of her bright eyes, the color of Hap's own. There was no spectacle over her face, but there was a gleam in her eyes. They were as bright as at sixty as they had been at sixteen. So the brown eyes under the gray hair and the brown eyes under the auburn locks met in a keen, searching gaze.
 "Heppaly," said Grandma Hazard, "Happaly, you're made out of the right stuff in spite of Hanner Simpson's growls."
 Hap smiled gaily, for she knew her point was gained here, and then she went to tend her flowers with a lighter

FARM AND GARDEN.
 It is said that parsnips, salsify and scorzonera are more apt to grow forked when planted on freshly manured soil. Secure early, before fall rains or winter snows begin, a bountiful supply of dry straw to be used about and under the stock at night.
 Give the young turkeys meat three times a day, and force them in growth as much as possible, in order to secure large size by Thanksgiving.
 Cattle as well as other animals, are greatly benefited by change of food or pasture. Like people, they get tired of one kind of diet continuously.
 A mixture of several kinds of grain for feeding stock is always better than one kind alone. Variety in grain is as important as variety in bulky food.
 Why will not the owners of worthless orchards destroy them and remove a nuisance? Such orchards breed destructive insects, which scatter in all directions.
 E. M. Potter says that after having several fruit trees girdled by sheep, he has learned by experiment that it may be prevented by washing the trees with a strong solution of fresh sheep manure and water.
 Bees do not work as well in a hive exposed to the sun. In mid-day when very hot, all work on the inside, such as comb-building and storing honey, has to be suspended. Sometimes combs melt down, and the brood dies in the heat of the sun.
 Sand is not a substitute for gravel in the poultry yard. The hens usually pick up the sharpest and most irregular pieces. When oyster shells are provided they should be broken into pieces the size of grains of corn, and not ground in a fine powder.
 Pastures raised in light, rather poor soil in a sheltered or warm situation are always sweet in flavor, and such, which are raised in rich soil or in partial shade are always sour. A rank growth of foliage shades the fruit densely and interferes with the development of the saccharine principle.
 The dairyman who keeps a cow until she begins to fall on account of age loses money by doing so, because it costs more to keep such a cow than a young one and she does not make as good a return for the food eaten, her digestive and assimilative powers being less perfect. Then, too, if fed for the butcher it costs more to get her fat, and her meat is worth less.
 The fat stock of even England can be improved. An English paper, the London Live Stock Journal, says that "astonishing as have been the improvements effected in most of our breeds of live stock within recent years, it can not be denied that well bred animals are as yet a comparative rarity in many of our public markets. The little leaven has not yet sufficed to leaven the whole lump."

THE EXECUTION OF MAXIMILIAN.
 How the Emperor and Gens. Miramon and Mejia met their Fate.
 The moment had come; each of the condemned men mounted the carriage which awaited them, and they were driven to the place of execution. The general in command of the troops, Sr. Garcia de Leon, caused an order of the day to be read to the prisoners, and then gave the order for the execution. The prisoners were then given leave to address their families, and a high in the blue sky, glowing over the profound zone of the lofty mountains and bathing the valley, stood forth bare and yellow.
