A History of the Project—Description of the Building—Dedicatory Exercises.

The idea of extending relief to the aged, decrepit, and disabled soldiers first took shape at the annual reunion of the soldiers and sailors, association of southwestern Michigan at St. Joseph in August, 1888. A resolution was adopted asking congress to take some steps in the premises. This idea was vigorously pushed, but.

Two bills were presented in the last legislature to relieve the soldiers in distress. One provided for $100 bounty to every Michigan soldier, sailor and marine, which was soon dropped as impracticable. The other, by Representative John Northwood of Saginaw, asked for an appropriation of Manuel Saginaw, asked for an appropriation of Manuel Saginaw, asked for an appropriation of Saginaw,

Gov elect Luce was then called upon to make a few remarks and responded as follows:

Soldiers and Fellow Citizens; Down through the ages all countries have honored their heroes. The recording hand of the historian has handed down from generation to generation the heroic deeds and valor of warriors who have led on to victory or defeat their cohorts. Both sacred and profane history tell of wars and rumors of wars until we are led to believe that war and the slaughter of men has been the chief occupation of the race, but it is only the generals, the colonels and the captains whose records appear on the pages of history. We read of the king who fought, bled and died, but nothing is said of the common soldier who gave his life for countries. bled and died, but nothing is said of the common soldier who gave his life for country and flag. We read of Alexander, o Napoleon and of Wellington, but the soldier who fought as bravely is unwept an forgotten. But our own country, while doing justice to the patriotism, courage and greatness of its generals is proclaiming to the world that republics are not always ungrateful to the common soldier.

We do honor to the man who lead armies to victory and never to defeat. We

It is therefore fitting that in this place the last honors should be neid to Logan.

His life was one of intellectual activity, as evidenced by his twenty-five years of public life and his prominence in all great measures of congress, notably his great speeches on "Impeachment," "Education," "The Army," "Thomas," "Defense of Grant," and his arraignment of Porter. He had the flower of thought and eloquence of logic. His was the sound of the trumpet waxing louder and louder, and when his noble soul left the body he was the foremost statesman of the mighty west. His was the soul of honor with contempt for everything mean, low and intriguing. He had a triple courage, physical bravery and moral heroism, and above all courage of intellect. Logan never committed treason, against his intellect. He spoke for himself and was loyal to his own conclusions. Friendship could not deter him nor enemies make him afraid, neither could a great name daunt him. He had the caution of intellectual courage and was the soul of honesty. He was untouched with suspicion, and after five years in the war and twenty-five in public life he died poor in purse but rich in good name. He leaves his only son a legacy far above rubies.

The fast train was about 50 minutes late, and was running at the rate of 60 miles an hour. Passing Republic, a small station, like a flash, they rushed along to the curve one mile west of the town, when suddenly the engineer saw the freight train under full headway, within 100 yards of him. He at once applied the brake, reversed his engine, but it did no good, and the next instant the crash came, telescoping the coaches and piling them upon each other.

The same thing occurred in the house, the diplomatic corps in full dress and secretaries Bayard, Endicett and Whitney and Attorney General Garland. The president was unable to attend, and though in better health the physicians forbade him exposing himself to the indement weather. The galleries were all filled, but not crowded. The seats reserved for the president's family were occupied by Mrs. Cleveland, Mrs. Lamout.

The procession of mourners followed and were given seats on the left front, and following the mourners came the funeral procession led by Dr. Nawman, the officiating clergyman, pastors of other churches and the honorary pall-bearers.

The services commenced by the reading of the injectenth psalm by Bishop Andrews, after which the Rev. Dr. Butler read a portion of the fifteenth chapter of Corinthians. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Dr. Tiffany, and then the sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Newman.

Dr. Newman in opening referred to the great grief and loss the nation was again called on to sustain, referring to the six mountful occasions when the senate chamber was used as the place of funeral obsequences and islaboring assistant the crash came, telescoping the coaches and piling them upon each other. The crash could be heard for a long distance, and the people living in the neighborhood were awakened by it and hastened to the scene to lend what aid they could in caring for the dead and dying By 11 o'clock 19 charred and mangled bodies had been taken from Tillin and other places, and physicians and nurses hastened to the scene of the wreck, which presented a fearful spectacle and recalled to the spectators the Ashtabula horror of 1876.

Among the passengers were Charles P. Toll and wife of Detroit, who were returning from their bridal tour. Mr. Toll gives the following account of the disaster:

"I was awakened by being thrown violently from the berth. The train consisted of the engine, baggage car, one coach and two sleepers. The train collided with an east-bound freight, which had got stalled a mile west of Republic, and eight miles east of Tillin. The two engines were wreeked. The coach telescoped into the baggage car, so completely that the two were crushed into the space of one. The two sleepers did not leave the track. The telescoped cars caught fire from the stove, and the magned and crushed passengers imprisoned in the shattered wrack shricked in agony as the flames proceded with their work of destruction. The engineer of the express, named Eastman, had a leg broken the collision. The engineer of the express, named Eastman, had a leg broken and sustained a sever wound in the shoulder. There's but a faint sobbing seaward
While the calm of the tide deepens leward
And behold, like the welcoming quiver.
Theheart pulses throbbed through the river.
There's light in the harbor at last,

The heavenly harbor at last. For the winds and the waters surcease;
Ah, few were the days of the rover
That smiled in the beauty of peacel
And distant and dim was the ocean That hinted redress or release, From the ravage of life and its riot,

What marvel I yearn for the quiet Which bides in the harbor at Tast? For the lights, with their welcoming quiver, That throb through the sanctified river, Which girdles the harbor at last, The heavenly harbor at last?"

before the door of the Widow Deery. The Headsman of Paris.

M. Heinrich, the successor of fat little Henri Sanson, as headsman of Paris in 1847 was a man six feet in higth, with a clear, cold blue eye, regular features, and the manners and carriage of a perfect gentleman, his whole bearing having the appearance of a half-pay officer. M. Heindrich always 'operated" in evening dress and a white cravat, and after each execution went to the church of St. Ambroise, where he ordered a mass to be said for the repose of the soul of the victim, which over, he took a bath and then breakfasted. Heindrich had an er met with any resistance, and it is told of him that when Verger was called and on a hundred pretexts sought to postpone the fatal mo-ment, Heindrich simply walked into the cell, looked fixedly at him, and said. "Eh bien, Verger," and the other shuddered, rose and followed. Heindrich died on the Good Friday of 1872, at the age of 70, after exercising for 50 years his profession, and was succeeded by his aide, Roch, who was his antithesis, being as jocose and bonbomme as the other was reserved and solemn. Roch was a tall, powerful man with a placid face, gray whickers, and gold earrings, looking on execution days, in his black frock coat, opened to show his cable-like watch chain, as if he were a workman in Sunday clothes. You always expected to hear him sing "Le Petit Ebenste," or some such ditty popular with his class. His bon mots were proverbial, but they were not in very to hurt you," and, when Albert proposed to address a speech to the pubc, "Bah! Roch was married and the father of eight children, whom he adored; and when he "functioned" in the provinces, his first act after the operation was to dispatch a telegram his family, telling how "affair had been conducted," and if there had been "a good attendence." He died in 1879 of apoplexy, at the age of 60. The present incumbent, M. Deibler, an ex-cab inet-maker of Dijon, entered upon his career as an amateur and from l'amour de l'art in 1885. M Deibler married a daughter of his colleague of Algeria, Mile Rasenauf, who, hav-

But his children have learned to share popular prejudices against the profession. His son preferred to enter as a clerk in one of Parisian monster stores. Deibler does not enjoy the popularity of Roch and Heindrich: he is less active, less vigorous than they who could plaquer—"flatten"—the patient on the planchette and, without moving, touch the spring. ram the Chicago Journal. A Cincinnati anarchist has been interviewed by one of the newspapers of that city. In answer to the inquiry, 'what do the anarchists want?" this exponent of the doctrine says they want all kinds of monopolies, corporaions and private property annihilated. No man should own anything in fee simple. The Presidential, judicial and all legislative offices should be abolished. He adds:

When the anarchists come into powrestimates will be made upon the mount of goods it will take to furbe divided accordingly. For instance, an estimate will be made as to how many shoes it will take to supply the demand of all the people in the naion, and then all the shoemakers will be put to work to make that many and no more. There will be no overroduction, and as we have calculated the laboring class will then only b bliged to toil two hours and half per day to supply the nation its wants. There will be no see and prof-it, each trade will work for the other nd exchange equivalents. The pants maker, and the shoemaker will pay for them with shoes, and so on through all the trades. We want this competi ive business system done away with This man states that there are at east 1,000 anarchists in Cincinnati and that they are anxious for a civil war to break out to furnish them an pportunity of fighting for their prin ples. But there is a much easier and etter way than that. Why don't these 1,000 half-brained people sell what they have, throw the proceeds into a common fund, organize a colony, go out into the unoccupied land of th great west, and proceed to found a community on the principles which they advocate? Here is a simple, feasole, practicable method of testing the value of their theories, without blood shed, disturbance or trouble of any

There have not been wanting experments in the line of social communism Robert Owen founded such a commu nity at New Harmony, Ind., where he bought 10,000 acres of land and dwellings for 1,000 people at his own expense. But in four years he was onvinced of the impracticability of the undertaking, and went back to England a poorer but a wiser man. The famous Brook Farm experiment at Roxbury, Mass., is familiar. It contained such splendid men as George Ripley and Nathanial Hawthorne and the brilliant Margaret Fuller lived there for awhile. The dream was of imple living, light manual labor and high moral, spiritual and intellect ual enjoyment. But the Brook Farm people soon got tired of it. In The Blithedale Romance" Hawthorne gives a fascinating picture of the idyllic but not siness life of that remarkable communi y, which failed to satisfy him, as it failed to satisfy all the rest of its members. The Bewitching Miss Stauffer. "Fay," the sprightly correspondent of the Louisville-Courier Journal, writes from Saratoga of Miss Stauffer, who bewitched Mr. Tilden out of $100,000. Having met Miss Celeste Stauffer three successive summers at Richfield, and hearing each year that Mr. Tilden had named her in his will I was not surprised when I read that he had settled upon her $100,000. Miss Stauffer crossed the ocean on the same steamer with Mr. Tilden the last time he visited Europe. It was on the return trip that the handsome girl bewitched him. He presented to her a diamond bracelet said to have cost $6,000. While Miss Stauffer was staying at Cranston's Mr. Tilden sent his yacht up, that she might use it for pleasure. She kept up a correspond-ence with Mr. Tilden, but I never neard it intimated that he had asked her to marry him. It always seemed more as if he had adopted her as his daughter and enjoyed making her hap py by gifts and favors. Miss Stauffer possesses all the requisites for a belle. Without being particular-y beautiful, she is showy and striking-looking. She has many admirers. She wears her lovely and costly toilets as though they were a part of herself. She is finely-formed and dances gracefully. She is a crack tennis player, and it is said that she omposed, as well as delivered, the rely she made to Rex when he chose her for queen during the Mardi-Gras festivities in New Orleans two years ago. It requires some nerve and all the sustaining qualities of vanity for a young woman in private life to asume the mimic robes of royalty and ride through the public streets of a large city, to be stared at by the vulgar crowd who, on such occasions lock to New Orleans. She spoke last ummer of not feeling a bit nervou when making her address. Miss Stauf fer has been in the habit of dividing er summers between Richfield, Bai Harbor and Cranston's Her parents and brother form her party. Her par ents are very plain, uninteresting-look ing people. Her tather is a prosperous hardware merchant in New Orleans though not a native of that city. She s passing this summer in Europe.

Middle Seats.

The Railway World has some prac tical information about the most de sirable seats in a car. It says, "A very common theme of conversation among travellers is the question of whether or not a car rides easier in the middle than above the trucks. One of our railroad contemporaries some time ago published an article on the subject, and took the ground that there could be no difference, unless the sills and framing of a car vielded, like the buckboard of a wagon. "There is certainly no yielding to car sills and framing, yet every old traveler avoids the seats, and esn cially the sleeping-berths, above the trucks, and old travelers generally know what they are doing. "If the party who insisted that there could be no difference in the motion in different parts of the same car had ever crossed the stormy ocean in a moderately long steamer, he might have received some enlightenment, especially it seasickness urged him to find the point of least motion. "It is well known that there is less decline and he said he could motion amidships than there is at the he'd accept.—The Rambler. stem or stern, and less motion at the bottom of the vessel than there is on deck. A car acts in a similar way.

Anything defective about the track jerks the wheels, which transmit the irregular motion to the truck, and it is, an' the other is to tell how cowld that in turn to the body of the coach." I it is. -The Rambler.

PARDEE MEDICINE CO.—GENTLEMEN:

out of shape that it was impossible to move without assistance. I was unable to straighten my limbs or to step on my fee for more than a year and my life was dispaired of. Children and friends were called in to see me die. I was treated by three good physicians, and they and my friends did all they could to relieve my suffering—but with no avail. My hips were blistered, and my limbs rubbed bathed and bandaged, but nothing they could do afforded me even temporary relief. Tongue cannot describe my suffering. I arged them to let me try Dr. Par dee's Remedy, as I had read so much about it, and of those who had been cured by its use, that it gave me confidence in it, although confess I had little or no faith in so-called patent medicines. The remedy was pro contess I and little of no faith in so-called patent medicines. The remedy was procured, and I commenced using it as direct ed, and after taking it a short time could see that it was helping me. I began to perspire freely, and as the perspiration in creased the pain decreased, but my clothing and bedding was a sight to behold, be ging nearly "as vallow as saffran." I have ing and bedding was a sight to behold, being nearly "as yellow as saffron." I had taken the remedy but a short time, when I could sleep like a child, and relish my food like one. Thank God it has cured me, and I am to day as healthy and strong as before, and can walk and have as free use of my limbs as ever. I have recommended your Remedy to very many who were afflicted, and I do not know of a case it has not cured. I am confident that it will cure not cured. I am confident that it will cure

I want to say to my friends that Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup and Plasters are the medicines that cured me. I used four plasters with the first five bottles; have used ten bottles in all and am well. If any one who reads this has any doubt as to the authenticity of my statement, it will afford me pleasure to refer them to my neighbors all about here, as they are all astonished at my recovery. It is a great family remedy.
