"Orange hash" is the name of a lately-invented fruit dish now popular in Charleston, S. C. "Orange hash" is made of that fruit; also bananas, lemons, apples, raisins and pineapples, cut into little bits and served with ice and cream. The owner of the new dish is popular as the "dixie Queen." A bowlful in an orange large enough to admit a spoon, and after the inside has been scraped out the orange is filled with the hash and a little champagne or other wine—just enough to fill in the chinks—and the whole is frozen.

Four of the number were machinists four were clerks, ten were conductors or drivers of cars or trucks, three were teamsters, two were blacksmiths, two were agents, one a printer,
one a butcher, one a rigger, one a watchman,
one a newsman, one a gateman, one a bookkeeper, one an undertaker, one a fireman, one
a millman, one a cutter, and one a stoker.

The student of the University of Paris numbered nearly 11,000 last year. Of these no fewer than 3,785 were studying for the legal profession, while 3,693 were attending the course in the school of medicine. Pharmacy engaged the attention of 1,707 students, letters of 928, and science of 467. The faculty of theology is very far from being flourishing as it was in the days of Abelard, only 35 young men having attended the lectures in this department in 1888. The female students numbered 107, of whom 105 were qualified for a medical career, while 51 were engaged in literary studies. There were 7 ladies, scientists and only one lady lawyer.

"Women of San Francisco are being seized with the mania of wearing men's clothes," says The Examiner of that city.
"There have been many more scandals of this character lately than have ever got into the columns of the daily press. There is something delightfully morbid about reversing one's sex. And there are few things delightfully morbid to which the women of San Francisco have not attained. Nothing, in deed, shows how fast this gay young town is becoming old in sin, like Paris, Vienna, and Berlin. The strangest thing about it all is that women invariably think they are dignified when dressed up as men."

The secretaries of the interior has affirmed the decision of the commissioner of the general land office, deciding adversely to the state the swamp land contest in the Huron City district against Martin Brand,
Frank S. Packard, Archibald Walker,
Levi Jackson, and others. The state had it not been for the heavy rain falling at the time a great many more buildings would have been lost. The fire is believed to be the work of an incendiary. Losses estimated at $10,000.

The brilliant triumph of the Orchard
Lake cadets at the national competitive drill is a cause for rejoicing to every loyal Michigan man, and has elicited the hearty applause of the community.

OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN.

He Sees About Everything and Prints About Everything He Sees.

I am asked almost every day in regard to the whereabouts of the booming committee, and what is being done toward encouraging manufacturing enterprises in the city. All such persons are respectfully referred to the proprietor of the capsule factory for information on the subject.

I notice that in many parts of the city property owners have put down new walls and repaired dilapidated ones, but the people are obliged to wade in mud ankle deep when passing the streets, and because the city has not seen fit to put down sidewalks. What is "saus" for the goose is sause for the gander," and when sidewalks are ordered down the council should see that street crossings are also put down.

I understand that Jas. Hobson, late custodian of the university museum promises something rich when the regents meet, if they will only give him a hearing. He has been of great service, he should be permitted to tell all about it, hit where it may. I take it if any one should know the ins and outs of the museum, that one is Mr. Hobson, who has been connected with the university for the past eight years.

There is just one more thing the council should do to make the improvements at the foot of Detroit street complete, and that is to purchase the triangular piece of land between Pontiac and Detroit streets as far south as the land owned by the late Michael Clancy, and convert the whole piece into a road. I think if the property could be purchased at its real value, and it would cost but little to make the improvements, there could possibly be no kicking on the part of any citizen.

It is indeed strange that the council does not take some action to keep men and small boys from walking and lying on the beautiful court yard lawn. Some persons doing business on Ann street find it most convenient when going to the town pump for water, to cross the court yard and return to the sidewalk which was built for the use of pedestrians. If there was no walk how far over the walks to intersect with pedestrianism. Wake up Aldermen and see that the trees are pruned to walk on it, and not destroy the grass.

The council sometime ago passed a resolution instructing the aldermen of the respective wards to have the shade trees trimmed, but up to the present time they have done nothing about it. The branches on many of the trees are so low that persons carrying umbrellas are obliged to either shut them up, or turn into the street during a rain storm. I noticed Monday on Ingalls street that the branches from a number of apple trees hanging so far over the walk as to interfere with pedestrianism. Wake up Aldermen and see that the trees are pruned to walk on it, and not destroy the grass.

HOME.

Oh, what is home? that sweet companionship.

Of life the better part;

The happy smile of welcome on the lip

Uprising from the heart.

It is the eager clasp of kindly hands.

The long remembered tone,

The ready sympathy which understands

All feeling by its own.

The rose cheek of little children pressed

To ours in loving glee;

The presence of our dearest and our best,

No matter where we be.

And falling this, a prince may homeless

— Then, though palace walls are high;

And having it, a soldier shrouds give;

The joy wealth cannot buy.

Far-reaching as the earth's remotest span,

Widened as ocean foam,

One thought is sacred in the breast of man.

It is the thought of home.

That little word, his human fate shall bind

With destinies above,

For there the home of his immortal mind

Is in God's wider love.

HOW HILDA MANAGED.

BY HELEN FOREST GRAVES.

Saturday Night.

"Does Mrs. Murray live here?"

Mr. Webb knocked apologetically on the glass counter of the bakery with the handle of his whip. It seemed almost a liberty thus unceremonious to address the gaily attired young woman who was adding up the accounts behind the tall desk.

He stood near the door, keeping a sharp lookout on the barefooted boy who was holding his sleepy old horse—for had he not heard, many a time and oft, of the juvenile New York?

In reply to his respectful question, the young woman nodded her head and curtly answered:

"Up stairs."

"It's a pretty big house," said Mr. Webb, glancing about him. "The Murrays wasn't rich when they lived down our way; but Rachel never had good judgment. I should say, now, the rent of a house like this—"

"It ain't a house," said the young woman, speaking with a lead pencil between her teeth.

"Ain't a house, eh?" Martin Webb's honest, onion-colored eyes gradually expanded, until you would have thought the lids could scarcely contain them. "Not—a house?"

"No; it's a flat. Fourth story, back room. Name of Murray. Staircase just out in the hall there."

And so for the first time in his life, Mr. Webb found himself in the presence of a "flat."

He lost his way half a dozen times this gaunt, good-humored giant, with a ham in his arms, two or three strings of a country sausage over his shoulder, and a basket of red apples clasped tightly against his breast. That was a matter of course.

He walked into the kitchen of one flat, caught sight of a faintly smiling girl, and stopped, smiling at the late breakfast table of a third, where a luckless printer, who worked all night, on the early edition of a morning paper, was sleepily chipping the shells of an egg.

"Call them eggs?" said Martin, contemptuously. "If our Wolf's Corners hens can't beat that're sort of thing—but I am sure I ask pardon; I guess I've got into the wrong flat. P'raps you can tell me where a lady named Murray lives?"

And by dint of such questioning and inquiries, Mr. Webb at last got into his right room, having sauntered into a scantly furnished room looking out on a bare brick wall—a room where everything had a starved look, even down to the cat, which sat intently watching a mouse-hole in the wainscoting.

Mrs. Murray, a tall, pinched, elderly woman, was engaged, through a double pair of spectacles, in mending fine faces, but the slow motion of her needle, and the uncertain expression of her face, denoted no very brilliant success.

And seated on the window ledge opposite her, a riding habit of dark green cloth, a beaver hat with dark green mortar, and I can't live here without you. The farm is paying for itself now. I can give my wife a comfortable home; and it will be another also. Dear little Hilda, that you will be mine."

Hilda burst out into a sudden gust of tears and sobs.

"We'll have to poor," she said; "we cannot afford the expense of moving again. And there is no home to be had here now."

Mrs. Webb put her hand on her husband's shoulder.

"Martin," said she hurriedly, "if Hilda really wants to get back by the seven-thirty train, you must hitch up the horse and take her to the station. And I'll go out to the barn with you and hold the lantern."

Once out in the barn, Martin Webb looked at his wife.

"I do say you think our Reed has any sense!"

"If he hasn't got a chance now, he never will have one," said Mrs. Webb.

"Tell you what, Martin, that girl is a pearl of great price, and I always
