Hon. Warren Miller was chosen president After routine work, the convention proeeded to nominations. Hon. Wm. M. Evarts placed the name of Col. Fred D. Grant before the convention for secretary of state, saying that Col. Grant was not only a citizen of the state, but of the United States in the broadest sense. He was known all over the commonwealth that region has also something to do and was modest, just, sensible and true. A man within himself sufficient aside from the glory that surrounds his name.

He was conspicuous beside his mother in the care of the dying soldier. The fitness of his character, his modesty, aside from his distinguished parentage, rendered him a first man for the place. No other name was presented and Col. Grant was unanimously nominated by ac-clamation.

No other name was presented and Col. Grant was unanimously nominated by ac-clamation. Judge Jesse S. Lamoreaux of Saratoga county was nominated for comptroller; James H. Carmichael of Erie for treasurer. James A Dennison of Fulton, attorney-general, O. P. H. Cornell for state engi-neer and surveyor were nominated, that completing the ticket. The platform states that two and a half years of a democratic president, who has had the co-operation of an overwhelming majority in the house of representatives. where under the constitution all revenue measures must originate, have exposed the incepacity of the democratic policy, under which so much was promised the people, but from which there has come only broken pledges, failure to promote the people's interests; no plan to reduce the people's interests; no plan to reduce the people's interests; no plan to reduce the public service; while conspicuous among the many shortcomings of the ad-ministration are numberless appointees who have proven faithless and incompe-tent; the postal service disorganized and its efficiency impaired, public business in other departments delayed and obstruct ed. It adheres firmly to the American policy, under whose operation unex ample in the tariff laws should be made by the friends of those laws, in the interest of protection of labor on our own soil and of home markets, not by or in the interest of free trade propagandists, nor for the benefit of foreign produce and for eign labor. National taxation should be so adjusted as to raise revenue sufficient for an economic and wise administration of the government for the payment of the public debt, for the development of natu-al resources and for national defense: but any reduction should be so made as not to impair the prosperity of home industries. American markets must be preserved to the products of American labor and capi-tal and protected from foreign encroach-ments. The principle of the national and state civil service reform laws has a hearty approval. The laws should be execut amation. Judge Jesse S. Lamoreaux of Saratoga

Palmer's Generosity. Early last spring Senator Palmer pur-

G. A. R. of Detroit. The liberal intention of the senator naturally created much in. terest in Grand Army circles. The project lay quiescent since that time, but the senator only held it in abeyance till he had fully made up his mind. Within the past few days he finally concluded to donate the munificent sum of $10,000 in cash to the Grand Army of the Republic in Michigan. The money is intended as a nucleus for a sum which will be adequate to buy a site in Detroit and erect thereon a G. A. state. A well-known Detroit Grand Army man says that in addition to Senator Palmer's gift a like sum of $10,000 would also be contributed by Gen. Alger. "I think that the Grand Army in this state will finally receive money gifts in this direction to the amount of $50,000," said he. "This will be sufficient to build and equip a splendid hall, with stores on the ground floor, the rent of which, after paying taxe, insurance, etc., will afford a liberal fund for charitable purposes and for the support of unfortunate members of the order. There are a number of members in the order at present who are systematically relieved by the various posts, and this expected contribution will be a valuable addition to the beneficient fund. Many an old soldier, whose health has been undermined by the hardships and privations of army life, and who has been unable to furnish the technical proof of such disability so as to secure a pen-sion, is being cared for by the Grand Army post of which he is a member. This donation will lil a long feit necessity." Senator Palmer, in his letter aunounc-ing the donation, says that as the Grand Army of the Republic in this state will in time cease to exist by the death of all the members, and that as some provision will be necessary for the reversion of the members, and that as some provision will be necessary for the reversion of the property to a public institution after that time he suggests that the Detroit museum of art might be made the successor of the Grand Army in the succession of the property.

A Wild Man Captured. For some time past lumbermen on the Yellow Dog river in Marquette county have caught glimpses of a strange looking creature roaming in the woods. A capture was planned. Said to be Unconstitutional. State Senator J. W. Babcock has filed with the supreme court a mandamus which involves the constitutionality of the state swamp land law passed at the recent session of the legislature. Ex-Judge the entire city turned out to witness the Marston and Col. Atkinson are associated with Senator Babcock in the important case. The abolishment of this law would result in a loss of $51,465 to Wayne coun-ty, and would also involve ten other Michigan counties in a lesser degree. Sen-ator Babcock has a letter from Judge Cooley which states that in his opinion the new law cannot affect moneys that are the proceeds of swamp lands which, under the act amended, the several coun-ties had become entitled to before the re-cent act was passed. In all such moneys, Julge Cooley thinks, the counties had ac-quired a vested right and the legislature could not divest them of it. Adjourned sine die. ANOTHER HORROR.

This Time a Railroad Disaster in England.

Twenty-four Passengers Killed. A terrible accident occured to an excursion train on the Midland railroad near Doncaster, Eng., on the 16th inst. The Midland train was standing on a crossing about a mile from Doncaster while the tickets were being collected. The Liverpool express, thinking the track clear came tearing along at a high rate of speed and before its engineer could stop his engine the express dashed into the standing train with frightful effect. The first passenger car of the Liverpool train was completely telescoped over the next suc-

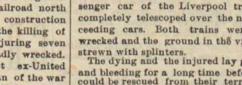

wrecked and the ground in the vicinity is strewn with splinters. The dying and the injured lay groaning and bleeding for a long time before they could be rescued from their terrible suf-ferings. Many were taken to Doncaster to hospitals while others, too badly hurt to be moved so far, were cared for near the scene of the disaster. Twenty-four victims are already reported dead and there are many of the injured who will die from their wounds.

"Partners in Crime" was the attraction at Redmond's Opera house last night. The play is a romantic comedy-drama in five acts, written by Mr. Edwin Hanford, who takes the leading role. It is a play of considerable power and abounds in sturring situations and good dialogues. Particularly striking is the third act, which opens in the Italian lodgings on water front of New York. In this scene Geo. Schetterly, of Scio, Will and Charlie, of Ypsilanti, Al J., of Toledo, O., with their wives, and Mrs. B. F. And thus thinking he rose vidual charm which only age and years of occupancy can give. Four tall Wellingtonias ception showed him his own old age, where that which he had called economy had grown to averice, where callousness had become cruelty-discontent, envy-carelessness, impiety. He saw himself, degraded, mean, despicable, bad, without affections, without tenderness, without hope, and as the horror of it swept over him with resist-less force, Clement Jenifer—the icy crust of years of life for self broken at last-fell upon his face, with the agonized cry of the apostle of old, "Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?"

When he came to himself he was in the quaint old sitting room in his new home. The fire had burned low, and only dimly illumined the room, but as looked round him for a moment, and gazed into the glowing embers a hitherto unkindled log broke into flame, and as it leaped and flickered the scroll which he had before remarked and failed to decipher caught and threw back the yellow light, and Mr. Jenifer read in letters of gold the poet's words-

> "Nor deem the irrevocable past As wholly wasted, wholly vain, If, rising on its wrecks, at last To something nobler we attain."

He sank on his knees, and there in ontrition of spirit and anguish of soul dedicated anew to his Maker the years that should be granted to him, the wealth that he had inheritednimself, body soul, and spirit, for vermore.

People said afterward that pros perity had been good for Mr. Jenifer. that it had made him softer, more compassionate, more tender. H alone knew that the vision he had seen had come only just in time to save him from that utter ruin of soul to which he was tending; and when he hought, as many a time he did, of that awful night, he bowed his head in contrite humility, and gave thanks for the warning that had been sent

Meanwhile Clement Jenifer was speeding on to London to see his lawyer. He found there was one condi-tion which he must fulfill before he could call himself master of the house and income. Mr. Dacre had only willed Waterdell Hall to him under the proviso that he should pass one night in the house entirely alone. Mr. Jenifer laughed when this clause was read to him. "That's not a very hard thing to do,"

said he. "But was Mr. Dacre's brain softening when he made his will?" "Not at all," answered the lawyer shortly. "Any one who saw Mr. Dacre in his last hour will tell you that

This was, however, not the case. The note was but a short one, and gave no reason for the testator's it that filled him with a sudden horwish, except that he had inherited Waterdell Hall under the same stipu-lation—that he had ever been thankror, and sent the blood back to his heart? All the tales of ghosts and haunting noises at which he had ful for having carried it out, and scoffed so lately recurred to his mind, hoped that though his friend Clement and yet there was nothing unearthly Jenifer was older than he himself had been when he came into the property, in the aspect of the man who was approaching him. And now they two stood face to face, and Clement Jenifer ("for," he wrote, with a touch of his ordinary humor. ally again, he may say that blue eyes take care of their friends, brown of itself in the darkness which gathered round it, hiding in the recesses of the their enemies, gray of their countries, black of their pleasures, and green of themselves. The blue is certainly the gables, drawing curtains of mist over the twisted chimneys. The silence, entire and absolute, struck almost with type with the greatest number of vaoppression on the mind of this man rieties. It is a color that illustrates preeminently the feminine qualities— tenderness, affection, a yielding to the accustomed to city noises; but even as he thought to himself, "How still it all is," there sounded in the coppice wishes of others, a sympathy with small sufferings, that measure of vanity without which no womclose behind him a long, sobbing, moaning cry, which rose and fell, and rose again, and then ceased.

Clement Jenifer was not a particularly tender-hearted or compassionpersuade a man that he is a demigod ate man, but that sudden cry filled because his wife believes it and tells him with a vague fear of some cruel him so. The color seems to begetting deed just perpetrated—some awful mystery to be brought to light; and after a moment's hesitation he turned more rare in these days. This is the blue that goes with golden hair. Blue eyes must be mated with their approin the direction whence it had seemed priate complexion. That color, so ascinating in a blonde, is no less de-ightful in a brunette; but—say the to come, and found himself on a long path, with a thick yew hedge on either side. Far ahead, in the dim twi-light, he could descry a figure walking slowly away from him; he could hear cientists-its meaning is now altered. There comes in now, coupled with the affectionate qualities, a certain tenda moaning sound, as of some one in ncy to deceive, stimulated by an ambition for conquest and leading to the gratification of admiration. There remain the light blue and the violet. The first is the eye of the Northern races—of the Swedes and the Danes, seemed to him that there was some thing familiar in the gait and bearing of the Scotch sometimes also. It sugof the Unknown. And as he thought gests constancy and truth, steadso the figure turned, and, facing him, fastness, simplicity, courage, puradvanced with slow, uncertain footpose. It is a man's eye, with its moderation and self-respect advanced with slow, didential took steps, wringing his hands as he came. What was it that struck Mr. Jenifer as so well known to him? What was matic. And then there is the violet eye, which is a woman'e eye, and of which the main characteristics are affection and purity, chivalric belief and limited or deficient intellectuality. And now comes the brown eyes. They are the eyes of the south and of the east-of the sunny races; the most passionate and the least original, and to them belong the lustrous black hair and the olive complexion of skin. With them we get jealousy and cruelty, somewhat of the feline nature in women; and in men, courage coupled with superstition, a wild recklessness of life, and a disregard for the sufferings of Then ensued a conversation-strange, unnatural-between these two, who still were one; but whether through infinite modifications; and there are brown eyes in plenty that This may be generally predicted; that when the brown is light the disposi-personal success and their accumulation. But I would like to see that broad and patriotic sentiment among them which can see beyond their peculiar personal interests, and which can recognize the advancement of the entire country as an object for which they may well strive, even sometimes to the diminution of their constantly increasing profits. Must we always look for the political opinions of our business men precisely where their immediate pecuniary advan-tage is found! I know how vain it is to hope for the eradication of a selfish motive in all the affairs of life; but I am remind ed that we celebrate to day the triumph of patriotism over selfishness. Will anyone say that the concessions of the constitution were not well made, or that we are not to-day in the full enjoy-ment of the blessings resulting from a due regard for all the conflicting interests represented by the different states which united a hundred years ago: I believe the complete benefits promised to the people by our form of government can only be secured by an exercise of the same spirit of toleration for each other's rights and interests in which it had its business men of the country cultivate po-litical thougbt; when they cease to eschew participation in political action, and when such thought and action are guided by better motives than purely selfish and ex-clusive benefit.
